Mayor Shea Says Future of the City Is Bright.

MANY RECOMMENDATIONS IN INAUGURAL ADDRESS

New Adams School and New Building in Bigelow Park District of Ward Two

More Firemen and More Policemen Among the Needs

Mayor Shea gave a detailed report of the financial standing of the city in his Inaugural Address today as Mayor of Quincy for a fourth term. He also makes several recommendations and takes an optimistic view of the future of the city. He says there is need of more firemen, more policemen, two new schoolhouses, extension of the water and sewer systems, also more permanent sidewalks, supervised playgrounds, enlargement of bathhouse, widening of Hancock street, and other improvements. The address is printed in full:

Gentlemen of the City Council:—

We have assembled at this hour to have administered to us our oath of office and to enter upon the performance of our duties as the executive and legislative branches, respectively, of the City Government of Quincy for the year 1911.

I feel I should at this time express to my fellow citizens my appreciation of the honor they have conferred on me in electing me for a fourth term to the office of Mayor, and assure them that I shall endeavor to the best of my ability to prove worthy of their confidence.

It is customary for the Mayor at this time, briefly, to direct the attention of the Council to the condition of the administrative departments, with such recommendations concerning the same as he may deem necessary; and also to submit for its consideration a detailed statement of the financial condition of the city.

Close Contest Today at Organization of the New City Council

Henry O. Fairbanks Reelected City Auditor

The inauguration of the twenty-third year of the City government took place this noon promptly at 12 o'clock. The attendance at the exercises this year were considerably larger than usual, owing largely to the contest that was known to be on for the Presidency of the City Council. The gallery was reserved for the ladies and there were a number present. Several handsome bouquets of flowers adorned the desk of the President and Clerk.

The members of the Council were in their seats a few minutes before the hour for the ceremonies to commence while inside the rail, in the seats reserved for the city officials, were practically all of the heads of departments. There were also present several of the City Council of 1910 who had also been drawn to the ceremonies by the contest mentioned above.

Mayor Shea accompanied by the City Clerk, Harrison A. Keith, and the chaplain, Rev. Henry T. Grady, of St. Mary's church, entered the hall by the read stairway, City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell leading the way. The exercises opened with prayer after which City Clerk Keith administered the oath of office to Mayor-elect, William T. Shea.

He then called the roll of the City Council and requested them to rise while the oath was administered.

PRESIDENT ELECTED.

The regular routine of Inauguration day was varied at this point, when a ballot was taken for President of the new Council. As the names of the Councilmen were called they responded as follows:

MAYORS ADDRESS

Mayor Shea was introduced and delivered his inaugural address. The address was somewhat shorter this year than a year ago, and as last year His Honor did not read the several pages of figures relative to the financial condition, but said that they would be found in the local papers in full. Prolonged applause greeted the reading of the inaugural.

ORGANIZATION OF COUNCIL.

The presidency settled the Council proceeded to the election of a Clerk of Council and Committees. These officers were also filled by roll call, George T. Magee being reelected. He was sworn to the faithful performance of his duties as such by the City Clerk who then took a seat in the space reserved for city officials.

Then came the election of City Mes-

THE housewife that has her pantry well-stocked with CANNED GOODS, can take life easy for the next six months. Canned vegetables are a great help toward the elimination of kitchen drudgery. With a supply of canned vegetables on hand it isn't necessary to stop in the middle of your work to prepare the vegetables for dinner.

¶ All that is needed is to heat them up ten minutes before dinner, and they are all ready without the fuss and bother that there is in preparing your own vegetables, and they are just as good, too, and you are not all tired out.

¶ Just think this over—no waste, no drudgery and you are always prepared.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Dr. Cook has discovered that the way of the transgressor may be paved with gold.

A jury of women in San Francisco reached a verdict in twenty seconds. Number of hours of debate, however, not stated.

Mr. Ballinger considers the case against him a "closed incident." Yes, it has closed the usefulness of his career as a member of the Cabinet.

Trying to conquer the air has made long death list and leads one to ask if the 30 aviators sacrificed during 1910 have accomplished any good to humanity or the world at large. It is a heavy toll to pay and the end is not yet.

From March till December next year, the country can pull along and do busines without the disturbance which Congress in session always brings. This period of rest will also give a further opportunity for the present tariff to show its good qualities and provide suggestions for its improvement.

Lovers of nature's beauty spots, especially those personally acquainted with the charms of Crawford Notch, N. H., hope that prompt action will be taken to save it from being given over to commercialism. A lumber mill is all right and a necessity but its location should not be allowed at a sacrifice of natural scenery.

The Legislature of 1911 will convene on Wednesday at 11 A. M. Quincy will be represented by a new senator, George L. Barnes of Weymouth, but retains the same two Representatives, William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Zangelier, who will enter upon their third term. Gov.-elect Foss will deliver his address on Thursday.

Again the fatalities at New Orleans and Los Angeles remind us that the Quincy aviation meet was one of the most successful of 1910, although all the records made here have since been surpassed. But Quincy had no serious mishaps and there were no holes in the air. Perhaps next June some new worlds records may be established here.

The ladies of St. Mary's Guild say the Daily Ledger man sent to cover their play of "Carroty Nell" was "just cute," but were disappointed because they could not phase him. That they were pleased with his report is shown by the extra large sale of the Ledger at West Quincy on Saturday. It has been suggested that he be elected an honorary member of the guild.

The cartoon in today's Ledger is printed by the courtesy of the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston, whose motto is "Boost New England." It is the work of Haydon Jones, the eminent cartoonist of the Boston Herald. It shows the year 1910 just finishing and passing the standard to 1911, who stands eager to carry on the work with fresh vigor and enthusiasm, while in the background stand the "modern Pilgrims," who are just as eager in founding a new spirit and blazing new trails in the commercial life of modern New England, as were their forefathers, in the wilds about Massachusetts Bay. We think the moral is so plain that "he who runs may read," and to paraphrase an old saying, "they also serve who only stand and rest."

The new year opens with the United States at peace with all the world, but the words of Patrick Henry "Gentlemen may cry 'Peace, peace,' but there is no peace," are just as true now as they were in 1776. There is no peace in the family, no peace in the apartment house, no peace between owners of adjoining farms, and United States having extended its borders to Panama, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Guam and the Aleutian Islands, is in perpetual rasping attrition with the rest of the world. It might be better if we could [illegible] the Philippines and poachers have all the seals on the Pribilof Islands and escape quarrels by confining ourselves to antebellum boundaries, but we are in a situation of having and holding and can't let go. Therefore, it is wisdom to strengthen our hold with warships and fortifications.

Aside from two new schoolhouses, Mayor Shea does not recommend any large appropriations in his Inaugural Address this year, and there is an absence of some features which should receive early consideration from the new city government, notably grade crossings, connection of Metropolitan parkways, the newly reported basis of Metropolitan park assessments and Metropolitan assessments in general, the movement for a greater Boston, the need of a business men's association with a large membership, and an early reduction in the water rates.

The Mayor does well to take a hopeful view of the future of this city, and his prediction of an early development of Quincy's water front is no dream. The next ten years will make wonderful changes in the city, and there should be an improvement in real estate values. Increased valuation and increased population will go hand in hand, and the former should provide the revenue for city improvement without any increase in debt.

The list of loans authorized in 1910 as in the Mayor's address is a formidable one, and too long for one year. The debt statement shows the payment of over $100,000 of the municipal indebtedness, but nevertheless an increase of $30,365 in the Municipal debt. This increase was really $134,000 larger because of the loans for schoolhouses which were authorized but dated in 1911, so that really the Municipal debt was increased $164,365 in 1910.

The Mayor places the debt limit by statute at $190,531.75, but it is really $134,000.00 less because of the loans already authorized, or only $56,531.75. It is questionable if the city should ever approach any nearer the debt limit than this, so that the opportunity is not at hand to make many loans during the first six months of 1911. Should the State demand payment of the new assessment for the Charles River dam and basin it would exhaust the debt limit.

The demands on the city for improvements may appear pressing, but many of them must wait because of statute limitations. The city should also anticipate large assessments for grade crossings which are sure to be levied in two or three years, possibly in 1912. If more of the loans were for one year, the margin within the debt limit would soon be larger.

WELCOMED NEW YEAR.

The customary good cheer and hospitality reigned Saturday night at the rooms of the Granite City club. It was the night before New Years, and the club entertained many guests in addition to the members. Monk's orchestra was present during the entire evening, and played all of the popular airs, in many of which the members and guests joined in singing the choruses. In addition to this there was the usual diversion such as pool, billiards and cards, not to mention the usual Saturday night lunch.

As the clock in the First church tower tolled out the first stroke of midnight, the orchestra played "Auld Lang Syne," in which those present joined. As the last notes of the old song were sounded clear and true on the cornet, the page had been turned and the year 1911 had been entered.

Everybody shook hands and wished each other a Happy New Year, and as they emerged into the cool clear night air a bell in some church rang out its joyous welcome to the New Year.

FORESTERS' FESTIVAL.

The Christmas and New Years festival for the children of the members of John Adams court Foresters of America was held Saturday evening at Faxon hall, and was attended by upwards of two hundred, largely composed of children, and it was a grand time that they had. Near the stage were two large Christmas trees whose branches were bent with the weight of the many packages hung upon them for the children. Of course there was a Santa Claus, who having recovered from his many duties of Christmas night was on hand to see that the presents on the trees were given to those for whom they were marked. His majesty was impersonated by Lars Dolberg, and he proved an ideal Santa.

Previous to the distribution of presents from the tree there was an interesting entertainment by the children, which included recitations and singing. Refreshments were also served, and there was dancing after the distribution of presents.

The committee in charge of the festival were Lars Dahlberg, Swan Cederstrom, Neil Ludengard, Emil Peterson, Nils Dahlberg, Charles Jackson and Willaim Ericson.

LIMIT OF INDEBTEDNESS.

Our limit for general Municipal indebtedness is two and one-half per cent. on the average net valuation of the city for the last three years.

Limit of borrowing capacity for city in 1911,	762,101.00

LIMIT OF TAX LEVY.

The law allows us to assess $12 per $1,000 on the net valuation for the preceding year for the current expenses of the city for the present year.

Net valuation of the city in 1910,	$32,319,555
$12 on $1,000 (amount available for current expenses,	$387,834.00

The total city Municipal debt outside of the debts authorized by special Acts amounts to $571,570 and of that amount $120,970 falls due this year.

STREETS.

To keep the streets of the city in good condition is a difficult problem, and one requiring constant attention. Good results have been obtained by the Street department during the past year. The work of laying surface drains has been continued, and has proved very beneficial to the streets.

I believe this work should be continued this year and recommend that an appropriation be made for that purpose.

In my message of last year I made several suggestions in regard to streets. My views on these matters are the same this year, and in addition I would recommend that Hancock street between Saville and Dimmock streets be straightened and widened in accordance with a plan I sent to last year's Council.

SEWERS.

The rapid growth of the city makes necessary the expenditure of large sums of money for sewer construction. Last year four and three-fourths miles of sewer were built and 340 house connections made, and there still remains applications which if granted would call for the expenditure of at least $30,000. The matter of sewer construction is very properly carried on under the bonding method and outside the debt limit.

For this work the Legislature of 1895 authorized the issuing of bonds to the amount of $400,000, of which $398,000 has been spent; the Legislature of 1902 authorized the issuing of bonds to the amount of $200,000, of which $196,000 has been spent, and the Legislature of 1905 authorized the issuing of bonds to the amount of $200,000, all of which has been expended.

These issues are practically exhausted and I recommend that application be made to this year's Legislature for authority to issue additional bonds to carry on the work of further sewer construction.

SIDEWALKS.

During the past year three and five-eights miles of permanent sidewalks were built. I believe this work is appreciated by our citizens and a substantial appropriation should be made to continue the same during the present year.

SCHOOLS.

All the school buildings, except the Adams, are in good condition. The Adams building is old, out of date, and should be replaced by a new one. The School Committee have recommended that a new building be erected in the Bigelow Park district. This recommendation should receive your early and serious consideration.

Last year $21,000 was appropriated for the erection of a four-room school building at Houghs Neck. The building has been erected and the city, considering the amount of money expended, has, in my opinion, a very good and satisfactory building. This opinion is concurred in by men competent to judge of such matters, who, at my request, from time to time during the construction of the building, inspected the same.

Appropriations have been made for the erection of new school buildings in the Wollaston and Montclair districts. Work on these buildings will be commenced early in the year.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS AND PARKS.

Next to schools I believe properly equipped and maintained playgrounds to be of most vital importance in the development of the children of the city.

The city in 1909, having accepted the provision of chapter 513 of the Acts of 1908, it is incumbent upon it to equip and maintain at least two playgrounds under the provisions of that act. Last year a start was made along these lines in Ward Four. This year the work should be continued and in addition to the one in Ward Four, another playground should be equipped and maintained, possibly in Ward Two.

The public bathhouse in Ward Two should be enlarged, as it is wholly inadequate to meet the demands made upon it. An appropriation should be made for that purpose.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

This department is fast becoming one of the most important in the city.

GAS RATE REDUCED

And Another Promised When Revenue Warrants

By advertisement today the Citizen's Gas Company announces a reduction in the price of gas in Quincy, from $1.50 per 1000 cubic feet to $1.40. True the reduction is not large, but it is a beginning, and the management assures the Daily Ledger that other reductions will follow as rapidly as the receipts will warrant. To have reduced the price to $1.25 or $1.00 per 1000 would have jeopardized the dividends, and perhaps wiped them out for a year or two.

But the consumption of gas is increasing rapidly in Quincy, and the company proposes to make several miles of extensions each year, so that it will be larger and larger each year. But for increased consumption the revenue of the company would be decreased $6,000 this year by the reduction announced in rates, but if the revenue increases from a larger consumption there will be further reduction in the rates, possible in 1911.

The company is entitled to thanks and encouragement for its enterprise since reorganization. The rapid extension of mains into many sections which scarcely dreamed that they would ever be supplied with gas, has been a boon to housekeepers generally, and gas for cooking is appreciated more and more as introduced. It is surprising the large number of gas ranges now installed in the city, and they are being used in the winter months as well as the summer.

Much of the popularity of gas in Quincy is due to the efforts of Manager Nichols to give the best of service. The company is always ready to inspect all gas fixtures installed, to prevent leakage; and to get the best results.

Each financial report of the Gas Company of late has been more and more encouraging and a dividend of five per cent was paid in 1910. The Daily Ledger predicts a large increase in customers and in consumption of gas, and another reduction in the price in six months.

DEDICATION OF THE HOUGHS NECK SCHOOL

Mayor Shea Receives Key and Turns It Over to Chairman Miller of School Board

Flag Presented and Several Speeches Follow

All Houghs Neck, and no inconsiderable number of citizens from the rest of Quincy, were assembled at the Atherton Hough school Saturday afternoon for the dedication service of this most recent addition to the educational institutions of the city. Early in the afternoon the people began to arrive to inspect the building before the ceremony was started.

At 3 o'clock, James D. Wall, president-elect of the Houghs Neck Associates, acting as master of ceremonies, called the assembled throng outside to witness the unfurling of the flag which was presented to the school by the children. Margaret Maloney, the little daughter of Daniel J. Maloney of Houghs Neck, made the presentation speech in a very self possessed and able manner. Mayor William T. Shea accepted the flag on behalf of the city. After the singing of The Star Spangled Banner the people filed in again for the dedicatory exercises.

Randolph Bainbridge, commissioner of public works, was the first speaker. After a few remarks, he handed the school over to Mayor Shea. The Mayor found it too much of a burden and handed it in turn to John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee.

Mr. Miller, being a granite man, was perfectly able to hold it and he did not volunteer to pass the good thing along as his predecessors had done.

Both the Mayor and the chairman of the School Committee remarked upon the delay and the later pointed out at least one advantage coming from it. The money which had been appropriated for janitor service for the last three months of the year was saved and there was a balance of $155.00 to the credit of the committee.

A letter from Mrs. Ellen A. Markham was read, after the school reached its final reesting place in Mr. Miller's hands. In the letter she asked the school to accept in memory of her husband an engraving of the birth of the flag in a beautifully finished oak frame which was made by her husband.

Superintendent Barbour accepted the picture in behalf of the school, and then spoke briefly on the responsibility of the parents. "The children are in school," he said, "about one seventh of the time, and the parents have a great responsibility to see that the training they get the other six-sevenths is such that it will make for the upbuilding of their characters and enable them to grasp the reason for which they are sent to school."

John D. Mackay of the School Board, was the next speaker, and then came James F. Burke also of the School Committee. He had been looking into the history of the schools of Quincy and enlightened the audience with regard to the location of the first school in Quincy, which was no other place than Houghs Neck.

Councilman Joseph Whiton was introduced as a man who loved every inch of Houghs Neck. He spoke briefly on the subject of cooperation between parents and teachers and between teachers and scholars.

Captain Fosdick, the father of Houghs Neck, based his remarks upon the quotation from Longfellow, "Something attempted something done."

Daniel J. Maloney, who worked hard to have the school built, was very well satisfied with it, but regretted that it was not larger. He also expressed the opinion that a playground for the children was a necessity.

John R. S. Ross, the councilman elect, Councilman John J. McDevitt, Councilman Ericson and Leo Noonan completed the list of speakers. After the exercises were completed, everyone was invited to go down stairs where refreshments were served.

The school building will be occupied by the children in the near future, and all of the parents will have reason to congratulate themselves in that the children will not have to take the long ride to Quincy with all its attendant possibilities of harm. The arrangement of the four rooms of the building is the best possible, and everything about the building is calculated to make the children comfortable.

The flag presented by the schoolchildren is 15 by 24 feet in size. It was unfurled from the top of a mast of the best Oregon pine, which is planted in the centre of the plot of ground in front of the school. In the spring when the grass begins to grow and the shrubbery is set out, the grounds will be among the prettiest in the city. From the second story of building one can command a view which is unequalled by that obtainable from any other schoolhouse in the city, and in general it may safely be said that the location could not be improved upon.

The delay in fulfilling the contract has been long, but now that the work is finished and the long awaited time of housing the children in their own school is at hand, the contractor will be forgiven and it is believed that the people whom the erection of this new building will affect directly are generally satisfied with its appearance and mode of construction.

AVE MARIE COUNCIL

Instituted by the Knights of Columbus

Ave Marie council, No. 1535, Knights of Columbus, the new West Quincy council, was instituted Sunday afternoon at Greenleaf hall, and called together a very large number of Knights from Quincy and surrounding towns and cities.

Charles J. Brady of Boston the district deputy, presided, and the institution ceremony consisted of the working of the first and second degree upon a class of 25 candidates. It is estimated that the attendance was upwards of 250, and the hall was crowded to suffocation. The first degree was worked by the officers of Quincy lodge and the second degree by the officers of James E. Hayes council of Boston. The work of both degrees was finely rendered.

After the institution refreshments were served. The third degree will be exemplified Jan. 10, at Town Hall, Braintree, and will be the occasion of a large gathering. The list of officers of the new Council has already been published, and they will be installed soon after the third degree is worked.

CITY OFFICIAL LOSES.

The dedication of the new school building at Houghs Neck proved to be an expensive one for Commissioner Bainbridge, for he is something over $100 poorer . Commissioner Bainbridge had his roll in his pants pocket and knows it was there when he started for the dedication. He does not remember being in a jam either on the street cars or at the building. He did did not think to look at his roll Saturday night, but Sunday morning when he pushed his hand in his pocket there was a vacant place where his roll had been. Commissioner Bainbridge does not have the least idea how or when he lost his money, but believes it was taken by some professional pickpocket. The police have practically no clew upon which to work.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

Everything about the final rehearsal of the Creation music points to a splendid rendering of the oratorio on Tuesday evening. If the fifty guarantors who have stood back of the society since its beginning three years ago could have heard the singing on Sunday afternoon it would have been a convincing proof that their interest has not been misplaced and that their backing has made it possible to develop an organization of great value to Quincy singers.

In spite of unfavorable weather and necessarily small attendance at a number of meetings, the singers have thoroughly learned their music in eleven rehearsals which shows beyond any doubt the value of their training in the two previous years and promises much

WATCH MEETINGS AT CHURCHES

Special New Year's Services on Sunday

FIRST PRESYTERIAN.

The pastor spoke in the morning from the text Ex. 12:2. "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months, it shall be the first month of the year to you."

The Christmas music was repeated at this service.

A communion service was held in the evening. Seven new members united with the church by letter and confession of faith.

The pastor spoke briefly on "The Last Supper." He spoke of the power of song in connection with the passage "They sang a hymn and then went out." The speaker believed song brought with it three things, first joy, then encouragement and third strength for the future.

The Ladies' Missionary society will meet at the Manse this evening for their regular monthly meeting.

On Thursday evening, the young people's prayer service will be held at 7 o'clock and the regular church prayer meeting will follow.

Owing to the repairs which are going on in the church, the special week of prayer services will have to be postponed until the rebuilding is completed.

WOLLASTON M. E.

"A New Years resolution" was the subject of Rev. Wesley Wiggin at the Wollaston M. E. church Sunday morning. At the close of the sermon there was a communion service.

The subject at the Epworth League meeting was "Whence our life derives its character," with Mrs. Wiggin as leader.

The usual praise and gospel service was held at 7 o'clock.

This afternoon the Womans missionary meeting was held with Mrs. Sanders, 292 Beale street.

A business meeting and social of the Epworth League will be held with Mrs. Cassidy of 71 Winthrop avenue on Thursday evening.

Among the New Years resolutions should be one to attend regularly the Friday night prayer meeting. A board meeting will be held the same night at 8.45.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The pastor preached a New Year's sermon in the morning using as his topic. "The Open Door." The doors of faith and hope and salvation are open, and after these are entered there are still other doors of opportunity and service.

Four members were taken into the church.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was led by William Renze. One new members was taken into the society.

The evening service was also addressed by the pastor. He chose as his subject for the evening: "Being ready." He urged the people to be prepared to live and to die, to serve and to sacrifice.

The Bible Study class will meet at the home of William Esterbrook, School street.

The Thursday evening prayer meeting will have for its topic: "Passion for Souls."

The ladies of the church will meet with Mrs. Davis Friday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a Ladies' Mission Circle.

The Red and Blue banquet will be held Friday evening instead of this evening as was previously announced.

SWEDISH METHODIST.

Following the usual custom New Year's eve was used for a celebration in the church. The Epworth league had a business meeting and social from 9 o'clock until 10.30. Then the Watch meeting services were started. Songs, prayer and a short sermon by the pastor held the people until the New Year was ushered in.

The Sunday morning service was omitted but the Sunday school session was held as usual at 12 o'clock. William Gelotte who was elected superintendent for the 18th year, had charge of the service.

The Epworth league meeting was held at 6.30, Joel Kjellander leading.

The evening service was very well attended. The pastor spoke from the 133rd Psalm, ninth verse.

The Stewards and Leaders' meeting will be held this evening in the church.

Beginning Wednesday at 7.30 services will be held every evening under the leadership of evangelist, Henry Gondket. Mr. Con[illegible] was here four years and carried on a very successful campaign. FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Ellery C. Butler preached Sunday morning at the First church, his sermon being in the nature of a general talk on the New Year.

Communion was held directly after the morning service and largely attended by the old and young of the church, several young people participating in the service for the first time.

The regular Sunday school session was preceded by a fifteen-minute New Year's service, which included brief remarks by Supt. Johnson and the singing of New Years carols.

In the evening at 7 o'clock the Young People's Religious Union held a New Years meeting, at which Rev. Charles B. Ames spoke of the New Year and its possibilities. Music during the service was furnished by the young people's choir.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach, pastor of the Hall Place M. E. church spoke on a text of two words, "Dwell deep," from the book of Jeremiah 49-8. Taking them away from their original meaning, he urged his hearers, in the coming year to live closer to God, to "dwell deep" with Him by being firmly rooted and fixed in Jesus Christ. The Sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed at this service.

The session of the Sunday school was held at the close of the morning service with a good attendance. Some new scholars were added to the roll.

Junior League was held at 3 P. M. in charge of the pastor. Miss Lillian Johnstone led the Epworth League devotional service at 6.15.

The subject on which the pastor based his thoughts at the evening service was "Words from the wise," taking as his text, Proverbs 27-1, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." The pastor dwelt for a few minutes on the time honored customs of making New Years' resolutions which we hope to keep during the coming year, but spoke of the possibility of being cut off in these endeavors by death overtaking us even before the "tomorrow" comes, and closed by inviting and urging all present to settle the question of being prepared for "tomorrow" by accepting Jesus Christ today. At the close of the regular service a short after service of prayer was held in the vestry.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The 15th anniversary of the church was celebrated Saturday evening by a special service from 7.30 to 9.30. Reports, music and speeches constituted the gist of the meeting. The music was furnished by the mixed choir, the male chorus and the string band.

Delegates were present from several other churches.

This meeting was followed by an old fashioned supper served by the men. This lasted until about 11.15 when the Watch meeting began. About 300 people were present during the entire evening. From 11.15 to 11.45 there was a praise and prayer service and then the pastor made an appeal for conversions. This was followed by short prayers by members of the congregation and another service of song. It was after 1 o'clock when the people started for home.

The Sunday services began at 9.30 in the morning and were five in number. The Sunday school and pastor's bible class met at 9.30. The bible class composed of young people between the ages of 12 and 20 had an attendance of 26 which is the total membership. At 10.45 the regular morning service was held. The pastor delivered the sermon. A communion service was held at 4 in the afternoon. Dr. W. A. Groenlund preached a very eloquent sermon. Five new members were taken into the church.

The Christian Endeavor society met at 5.30 with an attendance of over 200. Mr. Lillback, the pastor spoke on the subject: "What New Years means to Young People."

The regular evening service began at 7.30 and did not finish until after 11 o'clock. The pastor preached a powerful sermon from the text Luke 13:6-11. When an appeal was made for conversions one whole family, father, mother and children and four other individuals went forward and many others asked for prayers. The week of prayer will be observed by the church this week.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

As is customary with the Swedish people a Watch meeting service was held on New Years eve. Preceding it, the Young Peoples society held its annual meeting. The following officers were elected: President—J. Hellstrom, Vice President—Augusta Hendrickson, Secretary—Clarence Lundin, Treasurer—Alfred Hanson. At 9.30 a short praise and prayer service was held lasting until 10 o'clock. This was followed by a social during which refreshments were served. The watch meeting began at 11.30. Singing, testi-by the pastor was the order of things in the meeting.

The Sunday morning preaching service was addressed by the pastor on the subject: "The Fatherhood of God."

The Young peoples society met at 6 o'clock with an unusually large attendance. For the evening service the pastor chose as his text Isa. 48:17-18. "The Lord is our deliverer."

The week of prayer services will begin this evening at 7.30 and will be held every evening.

The Ladies Aid society will hold its annual meeting Thursday afternoon at 2.30.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

The morning service was addressed by the pastor. An excellent New Year's sermon was delivered to a large audience. The Christmas decorations remained in the church and a large 1911 in white was placed directly over the pulpit chair. The celebration of the Lord's Supper took place at 11.30. Five new members were taken into the church.

The Norwegian service was held in the chapel at 4 o'clock. Rev. Olof Jonsvold delivered a fine sermon to a large number of his countrymen.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was held at 6.15 Miss Jessie Pratt was the leader of the meeting. Topic: "Untrodden Ways,"

The evening church service was largely musical. The Christmas music including selections by the boys choir, the church choir and solos and a trio, was repeated. The pastor gave a short address on the topic: "What is Man."

The Unity Circle of Kings Daughters will meet this evening at 7.30.

The Mothers meeting will take place Wednesday at 3. Mrs. Ellen Richards of Massachusetts Institute of Technology will speak on 'Foods for Schoolchildren." All women in Quincy are urged to attend.

The Friday evening prayer meeting will be held at 7.45. Topic "Our Home Makers and their responsibilities."

The second stereopticon address on the "Life of Christ" will be given next Sunday evening. Views from paintings by William Hole, the eminent artist will be shown on the screen.

SWEDISH .CONGREGATIONAL.

The continuance of the annual church meeting was held New Year's eve at 8 o'clock. Following this there was a social with refreshments until 10.30, when the watch meeting began.

The male choir was present to lead the singing of hymns and to render several selections. Testimonials, prayers, songs and a brief address by the pastor were the principal elements of the meeting. A large body of men and women participated in the service.

The Sunday school session was omitted but the morning preaching service was held as usual at 10.45. The pastor spoke upon the theme "The Name Jesus."

A communion service was held at 5.45 in the afternoon. Two new members were taken into the church.

At 7.30 the regular evening service was held. The pastor spoke upon the subject, "If this year is our last."

The week of prayer services will begin this evening at 7.30. Meetings will be held every evening at the above hour. On Thursday Dr. W. A. Grovenlund, the Finnish physician, a former missionary to China, will speak on 'Missions."—Dr. Grovenlund speaks the Swedish language very fluently and is an exceptionally interesting and powerful speaker.

The Young People's society will meet at 6.30 Thursday evening.

CATHOLIC FEDERATION

Dedication of New Hall of St. Johns School

The new hall in the St. John's parochial school was opened to the public for the first time Sunday evening for a meeting of the Catholic federation of St. John's church. It was also, in a way, a dedication of the new hall, as well as a public inspection of the school building. The meeting was very largely attended, and many words of praise were heard of the new hall and school.

The meeting was held at 8 o'clock On the platform were: Rev. John J. Coan, Rev. Fr. Scannell and Rev. F. Brennan of St. John's church; James F. Burke, president of the Norfolk County Catholic federation; and the presiding officers of the Catholic organizations connected with St. John's church.

Rev. Fr. Coan presided at the meeting which opened with the singing of the Coronation by the choir of St. John's church. Fr. Coan spoke briefly on the work of the federation, and introduced as the first speaker James F. Burke, president of the Norfolk County branch of the Catholic federation.

Collector Loeb summoned Parr to his office and in the presence of several custom officials formally presented the voucher for $80,000 to Parr. Parr was manifestly pleased.

MOISANT AND HOXSEY KILLED

Premier American Aviators Meet Death on Same Day

TREACHEROUS AIR CURRENTS

Each Had Been Advised Against Going Un In Air "Full of Holes," but Laughed at Fears of Others—Moisant's Neck Broken at New Orleans, While Hoxsey Dives to Earth at Los Angeles Before Large Crowd

New York, Jan. 2.—On the last day of the year that had witnessed their rapid rise from comparative obscurity to the zenith of fame in the most absorbing sport of the centuries, two leading American aviators were dashed to death while endeavoring to better world's records.

Moisant met his death attempting to alight in a field a few miles from New Orleans. Hoxsey, who went into the air at Los Angeles, Cal., fell a crushed, lifeless mass in view of the thousands who were watching the aviation tournament.

Thus the last day of 1910, in bringing the total number of deaths of aviators to twenty-nine, capped the list with two of the most illustrous of those air men who have been writing the history of aviation in the sky of two continents.

Moisant Laughed at Warnings

Moisant, a Chicagoan by birth, after an adventurous life in Central America, became interested in aviation in France less than a year ago.

After soaring into public recognition by his plucky flight from Paris across the English channel to London with a passenger, Moisant's fearlessness and resourcefulness was exhibited frequently.

Finding himself without a machine, he purchased one from a friend for $10,000 and within ten minutes started on his flight from Belmont park, New York, around the Statue of Liberty, winning a prize of $10,000.

On Saturday a sudden puff of wind caught him within 100 feet of the earth, turned his machine over and a broken neck terminated his career.

Moisant's machine was a Bleriot monoplane, and in addition to the heavy engine in front of the main planes, he had fastened to it a tank holding thirty-five gallons of gasolene. Aviation experts believe a sudden puff of wind stopped his machine dead in the air and the heavy weight ahead dragged the light framework behind it, flipping the then useless elevator towards the zenith.

From his position, partly back of the main planes, Moisant was flipped out, clear of the machine and struck the ground on his head, breaking his neck.

A fifteen-mile wind, with gusty intervals, caused hangar attendants to shake their heads at Moisant, but he laughed at them and sailed up for a try at the long distance sustained flight record and the Michelin cup with its attendant $4000 prize. Death was the victor in the long contest it has fought with the daring Chicagoan.

The Death of Hoxsey

Arch Hoxsey, after a year of uniform success with the Wright aeroplane, had gained a name for daring and competence in the air. Only within the week he had set a new world's altitude record of 11,474 feet and then, to show his contempt for the earth, had sailed motionless

Saturday he ran afoul of a boiling, treacherous wind when some 500 feet from the earth, and a minute later a horrified crowd witnessed the fatal descent.

He met death in almost the same manner as Moisant. Each machine was headed for the earth and suddenly seemed to stop, hover in the air, then "turn over onto its nose" and dive headlong to the earth—and to destruction.

Hoxsey, like Moisant, was returning from a journey into the clouds. He was about 500 feet above the earth, and cheers were going up to meet the conquerer of the higher air, when his machine seemed to stop, shudder and whirl over and over to the ground.

As in the Moisant tragedy, the rear elevator, rendered useless when the momentum was gone, flipped around helpless to aid the fated machine. Hoxsey struggled to right his craft by warping the main planes and by use of the rudder.

Vain attempts these, for before sufficient momentum was gained the frail structure crumpled upon the earth, the heavy engine being torn loose.

Hoxsey's end came before the horrified gaze of thousands who had gone out to watch the birdmen darting through the air. The day's pleasure ended when an announcer, sadly lifting his megaphone, droned out the message:

"Arch Hoxsey has been killed. There will be no more flying today."

Mrs. C. M. Hoxsey of Pasadena, Cal., missed by a mere accident seeing her son meet his death. She had arranged to attend the tournament and to take her first aeroplane ride with her son. Some detail of importance in her household kept her at home, and word of the accident was taken to her by two members of the Wright exhibition company.

When Walter Brookins and Hoxsey, who, with Parmalee, alone were left of the Wright exhibiting team, wheeled their machines out, warnings were offered by a half score of flyers, each of whom bore a record for daring in the air.

JOHN B. MOISANT

"It's too full of holes up there today," they all agreed. "It's just like a Swiss cheese; better stay on the ground."

Hoxsey, smiling as he had on the day when, in a similar wind, he had gone far up into the blue to a new world's record for height, again took the air.

His barograph, still running when the crowds reached the heap of humanity and canvas and broken sticks, showed the fatal drop started when the aviator had come down to within 563 feet of the ground.

SPREADERS OF DISEASE

Whisk Brooms May Be Eliminated In Pullman Parlor Cars

New York, Jan. 2.—J. E. Merrill, the eastern superintendent of the Pullman company, says that he will eliminate the use of whisk brooms in parlor cars and assist the city health department in preventing the spread of disease by the porters if a way can be found to remove the dust from passengers' clothes by any other means.

Officials of the health department say that cholera, typhoid fever and pneumonia are spread by the dusting process. Germs that remain on outer garments are less deadly than when sent floating in the air that passengers breathe.

COOLNESS OF MINISTER

Prevents Panic In Congregation When Fire Destroys Church

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 2.—In the midst of the service at the Merrimack Street Baptist church a fire broke out that practically destroyed the structure, but the congregation that crowded the building filed out in safety without the slightest sign of a panic.

Rev. N. L. Colbie was delivering his sermon when great columns of smoke poured up through the registers and the crackle of flames was heard. The pastor, without any trace of excitement in his voice, dismissed the congregation, telling the people to file out as quickly as possible.

Following the pastor's example of coolness the porishioners left the church without any signs of excitement. Hardly had the last person filed out when the flames burst up through the floors and in a short time the structure was ruined. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

OTHERS ARE BLAMED IN THE ROBIN CRASH

High Officials of Banks Likely to Be Indicted

New York, Jan. 2.—Joseph G. Robin is not the only man, it is said, who will have to answer criminal charges in connection with the closing of the Northern bank and its branches, the Washington Savings bank, in this city.

Evidence in the hands of the district attorney, it is said, indicates clearly the culpability of certain high officers of the two banks, as well as officials of some of the other companies controlled by Robin. Indictments against these men and additional ones against Robin are expected soon after the January grand jury begins work tomorrow.

Robin, it is reported at Bellevue hospital, will in all probability have recovered from the effects of the poison he swallowed sufficiently to be arraigned on Tuesday on the charge of stealing $80,000 from the Washington Savings bank.

Democrat Takes Oath as Governor of the Empire State

Albany, Jan. 2.—Surrounded only by his intimate relatives, John Alden Dix took the constitutional oath of office as governor of the state, at his home here. At midnight Saturday the reins of the government of New York state passed into the hands of a new administration with a Democratic governor at its head for the first time in eighteen years.

As Jan. 1 fell on Sunday, it was necessary for the governor-elect to take the oath Saturday night, although the formal public inaugural ceremonies took place in the assembly chamber at noon today. The oath was administered by Secretary of State Koenig.

BARE SPOT IN WHISKERS

President Harrison's Face Defective In Counterfeit $5 Bill

Washington, Jan. 2.—A mangy spot in President Benjamin Harrison's whiskers—in a portrait of him on a $5 bill—has betrayed a gang of counterfeiters.

Secret service men picked up the new bogus note. It is a counterfeit on the Citizens' National bank of Waterbury, Conn. It was made by a photo-mechanical process upon a fair quality of paper, but has none of the little tell-tale silk threads.

President Harrison's portrait on the left hand of the note is very poor—in fact, the bare spot in his whiskers first brought the counterfeit to attention.

MAYOR'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

factory it was abandoned. The work is now being done by the city.

Some delay was necessarily experienced by the department in securing its equipment and in arranging details incidental to its assuming this work. It is now, however, being carried on by the department in a satisfactory manner, and I believe that the results this year will justify the change from the former method of doing the same.

In the spring of last year a tuberculosis camp was established in Quincy. Arrangements were made with the parties interested in the same whereby several of the city's patients were cared for in the camp at an expense less than it has heretofore cost the city to care for them elsewhere.

Although the hospital can only accommodate nine permanent patients it has proved of great assistance to the Board of Health, as well as a public safeguard against the spread of tuberculosis, and its work should be be appreciated by our citizens.

I hope the city will some day in the near future see the wisdom of maintaining a hospital for contagious diseases, one which will accommodate more patients than the present camp is capable of accommodating.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

Large demands are made on this department each year owing to the number of buildings being erected in the city. Notwithstanding the department has met these demands as promptly as the means at its disposal would allow, a large number of applications for water are on file in the water office, and I trust an appropriation will be made early in the year to carry on the work of this department.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

While this department is in good condition its efficiency will be greatly improved by the addition of the auto fire truck the purchase of which was recently authorized by the Council of 1910.

This department could be further improved by the addition of more permanent men.

POLICE.

This department has done good work during the past year.

The new combination ambulance and patrol automobile has added greatly to the efficiency of the department. The work of the department, however, is made hard owing to the small number of men at its command.

I believe the number of regular patrolmen should be increased and recommend that action to that effect be taken.

POOR DEPARTMENT.

Unfortunately the demands on this department are constantly increasing, the Overseer, however, has relieved the wants of needy applicants as far as the funds at his disposal would allow.

WIRES AND SHADE TREES.

In my inaugurals for the past three years I have called the attention of the Council to the necessity of establishing a department to have charge of and exercise supervision over the public wires and shade trees of the city. Each year I am more strongly convinced of the necessity of such a department, and trust that it will be established during the present year.

WATER FRONT.

Quincy's position in Boston harbor is unexcelled by any city as to its opportunities for future developments, and I have endeavored to keep in touch with all matters pertaining to a healthy business growth on our water front. With the immense tract of land owned by the Railroad Company at Atlantic needing only the completion of a track connecting Mattapan, Hyde Park, Dedham and Framingham to give our water front freight connection with the centre of our state, with the United States Government survey of the last link of the Intra Coastal Canal from Narragansett bay to Boston harbor practically finished, with our improved channel, our great shipbuilding plant at Fore river, our world famous granite, we have right here in our city the greatest incentive to still further improve our water front of any city in New England. We have commenced to buy locations for public landings and expect in the near future to have all sections of the city provided for. I am investigating the matter of a public dock and firmly believe that our granite industry demands the building of such a dock with improved facilities for loading and unloading, and that such an improvement would be of great benefit to our granite business.

I recommend the appropriation of at least three hundred dollars ($300.00) for the use of the Water Front Commissioner to be spent with the approval and consent of the Mayor, in studying and advancing the water front of Quincy and the city's interests in any waterway matter.

CITY HALL.

Last year I called the attention of the Council to the necessity of providing more room at City Hall. My views on the subject are the same and I believe the necessity to be still greater.

Again I recommend that the Council take action in the matter.

NO LICENSE.

Our citizens have again by a large majority expressed themselves in favor of No License. The law has been enforced during the past year, and it will continue to be during the present year.

BACK TAXES.

I am giving careful consideration to the matter of back taxes, one which has been the subject of much discussion in recent years. These taxes have been accumulated during many years, and I believe it unwise to continue carrying so much of them as are clearly uncollectible as a city asset, and believe that they should be abated.

Gentlemen: We have been elected the representatives of the citizens of Quincy and entrusted by them with the duty of administering their affairs.

In discharging those duties we should be guided solely by our oath of office, and no ulterior consideration of any kind should influence our actions.

However much we may differ as to method and questions of immediate policy, we should unite in one common cause,—the permanent welfare of our city.

We are here to legislate for the benefit of the whole city and all its citizens, and not for sectional or political advantage.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS A THIEF

Arrest of Veteran Banking Official Creates Surprise

SHORTAGE OF NEARLY $60,000

Treasurer Crowson of Westfield Savings Bank Charged With Making False Returns to Bank Commissioner—His Stealings Carried on Previous to 1899, Being Successfully Covered Up Until the Present

Westfield, Mass., Jan. 2.—Following the discovery of a shortage of nearly $60,000 in the funds of the Westfield Savings bank, the treasurer of the institution, Velenus W. Crowson, was placed under arrest. According to a statement issued by State Bank Examiner Chapin, he has confessed.

Crowson was arraigned before Judge Kellogg in the local district court, charged with making false returns to the bank commissioner, on seven counts. He pleaded not guilty and was held for a hearing on Jan. 14 in $1500 bonds on each count, a total of $10,500. He secured bail and was released. An hour previous to his arraignment in court Crowson resigned as treasurer of the bank.

Crowson was charged with making false returns rather than with larceny, because, it is declared, no money has been taken from the bank since 1899, the misappropriations extending over a period of twenty-four years previous to that time.

The shortage will not result in the closing of the bank, according to Commissioner Chapin.

A statement of the condition of the bank at the close of business Dec. 27, after the shortage had been adjusted, showed total assets of $3,119,928.84; deposits, $2,881,666.86; guarantee fund, $140,839.22. The president of the bank is L. F. Thayer.

Crowson entered the employ of the Westfield Savings bank as a clerk. Three years later, when but 20 years of age, he was made treasurer of the institution, which position he held until the time of his resignation, a period of forty-nine years.

When he assumed the duties of the office of treasurer, Crowson had the distinction of being the youngest treasurer of a similar institution in Massachusetts. Only three treasurers of the 189 savings banks in the state have had a longer record for continuous service.

Crowson, who is married, has been prominent in town affairs and in the Masonic bodies, at the present time holding the position of town auditor and being treasurer of Mt. Moriah lodge of Masons and of the Royal Arch chapter connected with it. He has one daughter, who is married.

The few who learned of the shortage in the bank funds here Saturday night were greatly surprised, for no suspicion of what had been discovered had leaked out, and those who knew of the daily presence in the banking room of an accountant thought it to indicate nothing but the periodical auditing of the accounts of the institution.

It was after 5 o'clock Saturday night before application was made to the local court for a warrant, the complaint being signed by Commissioner Chapin. Just before 6 o'clock a meeting of the trustees was held in the banking rooms, at which Crowson's resignation was accepted and he was immediately placed under arrest by State Officer Flynn, who had been at the bank most of the afternoon. Judge Kellogg was awaiting the arrival of the officer and his prisoner at the courthouse and the arraignment followed immediately upon their arrival. Crowson had been at the bank daily as usual during the time that the examination was in progress.

Crowson laid his downfall to the financial aid which he gave to his aged parents beginning in 1875. They were poverty-stricken and in danger of going to the poorhouse.

Their one desire was to return to their native place in England, so that they might be buried there when they died. They appealed to their son. At that time he was getting but $600 per year.

He promised to help them and to do so he stole funds that belonged to the bank. This first peculation, Crowson said, was the starting point. After his parents reached England they were supported by him. To do this, he had to take money from the bank's coffers, from time to time. One of his parents died in 1888 and the other in 1893.

BABY PARTY AT CLUB HOUSE

Given by Young Women's Club New Years Eve

The Young Womens Club held a "Baby Party" at the Women's Club House on New Years eve. The girls came dressed as children, representing both boys and girls. After a short business session the meeting was turned over to the chairman of the social committee. A play entitled "The Children's Conspiracy" was given with the following cast:

"Taffy," Albert Beach.
"Red Riding Hood "Dorothy Russell.
"Bo peep," Doris Sampson.
"Boy blue," Eleanor Bates.
"Little Miss Muffett," Evelyn Schluze
"Jack Horner" Allan Gragg.
"Tommy Tucker," Lawrence Blake.
"Old Woman in a Shoe" Esther Wetherell.
"Santa Claus" Charles Sampson.
"Fairies" Lillian Blake, Virginia Weber, Mabel Richards, and Annie Acker.

After the play the chairs were cleared away and the members took seats on the floor. Santa Claus distributed gifts from a heavily laden Christmas tree. Much merriment was caused by the antics of Santa Claus and the nature of the gifts. During the evening a candy sale was held in the tea room in aid of Mt. Pleasant camp. The evening was a very enjoyable one and the members of the committee acquitted themselves splendidly in preparing such a pleasing entertainment. The committee was as follows: Chairman, Mabel E. Lovejoy, Ouida Keay, Edith Fox, Aljuline Keene, Grace Fisher and Bertha Herne.

The trophy was won back last season by the Harpoon sailed by ex-Commodore Charles Francis Adams, 2d, so the races of 1911 will be held off Houghs Neck.

BASKET BALL AT Y. M. C. A.

All the Local Teams Make a Good Showing

The last day of the year concluded a week of unusual activity along athletic lines at the Y. M. C. A. In the afternoon there were three games of basketball and two more were added to that number in the evening.

TEAM 4 WINS.

The final contest in the basketball league championship was won by Team 4 by a victory over Team 6. For the winners, Jenkins shot two baskets, Daniels and Matheson one each. Drew the centre on the losing team, got the lone basket for his side. Matheson got the goal from foul on his side, and the third point for the losers was awarded by the referee for interference. Final score 9 to 3.

MIDGETS LOSE.

The Quincy Midgets and the Malden Juniors played a hard-fought and interesting game, which finally resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 20 to 18. Ralph Prout was the star performer with 5 baskets to his credit. Sidelinger of Quincy played for the visitors in the absence of one of their guards, and shot two baskets which enabled the team to win the victory.

INTERMEDIATES WIN.

The big game of the afternoon was between the Quincy Intermediates and the Melrose Intermediates. It was on the whole the least exciting of the afternoon games, and Quincy had no difficulty in winning with the score 33 to 5. Findley of Quincy was the star of the contest. It was his first game as a forward and he proved his fitness for the position by shooting 8 baskets. Trask, who played only in the first half, got four. Wilson, captain of the Melrose team, shot the only baskets obtained by his team and played a good game in general. The rest of the players were much smaller than the Quincy men, and did not have much show against them.

QUINCY 2D WINS.

The evening games in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium were the scrappiest and most interesting of the season. All four teams played well and the defeats although they came hard were no disgrace for the losers. Quincy 2d defeated Boston 2d by a score of 41 to 33. Every man on the Quincy team shared in the scoring, and all but one of the Boston men contributed toward the 33 points they were able to run up. Beaton of the visiting team was the star of the game, with a total of seven baskets to his credit. Gourlie of Quincy with six, and Trask and Rich with 4 each, were not far behind. Cunn and Healy of Boston were also good point-getters. The game was fast and interesting, and owing to the fact that there was more scoring done was possibly more spectacular than the game between the first teams.

The summary of the game is as follows:

QUINCY 2nd	BOSTON 2nd.
Gourlie, rf	lb. Weis
Trask, lf	rh, Weir
Miller, c	c, Healy
Dineen, lb	rf, Gunn
Rich, rh	lf, Beaton

Score—Quincy 41; Boston 33. Goals from floor—Beaton 7, Gourlie 6, Trask 5, Rich 5, Gunn 4, Healy 3, Dineen 3, Weir 1, Miller 1. Goals from fouls—Healy 3, Gourlie 1. Time—20 minute halves. Referee—Atcheson.

BOSTONS WIN.

The Quincy first team were unable to equal the record of the seconds, and went down in defeat by the score of 17 to 28. The visitors outplayed the home team in every department of the game, but Morris and his men fought gamely and kept their opponents up to their best throughout the contest. The passing of the visitors was the cleverest seen of the floor this season, and Quincy could well draw some lessons from the game. Benson was the star of the evening. Although he played guard he managed to corral the ball in the basket 6 times, and was a tower of strength on the defense. Benson will be remembered as captain of the football team which gave the Wollaston A. A. the best game of the season at Merrymount Park. "Rus" Bates, who played against Benson was the best man on the Quincy team. He shot four baskets, two of them difficult one-handed shots. Dackers and Cherry had it out in great shape, and Dave is to be complimented for preventing such a formidable antagonist from scoring. "Stan" Bates appeared in the Quincy lineup for the first time this year, and conducted himself well. Jenkins and Benson had a very amusing encounter in the second half. The referee had to toss up the ball five consecutive times before it could be gotten away from the two. Early in the second half, Cherry and Foster of the Boston team collided, and had visions of other than basketball stars for a few moments. The game was fiercely contested all the way through, and although the visiting team had the better of the argument, there were times when Quincy looked decidedly dangerous.

The summary:

BOSTON 1st.	QUINCY, 1st.
Foster, lb	rf, Morris
Benson, rb	lf, R. Bates
Ziegler, c	c, Jenkins
Cherry, rf	lb.Dackers
Clark, lf	rb, S. Bates

Score—Boston 28; Quincy 17. Goals from floor—Benson 6, R. Bates 4, Ziegler 3, Clark 3, Jenkins 2, Foster 1, Morris 1, S. Bates 1. Goals from foul—Ziegler, Cherry, Morris. Time—20 minute halves. Referee—Atcheson.

BABY PARTY AT CLUB HOUSE

Given by Young Women's Club New Years Eve

The Young Womens Club held a "Baby Party" at the Women's Club House on New Years eve. The girls came dressed as children, representing both boys and girls. After a short business session the meeting was turned over to the chairman of the social committee. A play entitled "The Children's Conspiracy" was given with the following cast:

"Taffy," Albert Beach.
"Red Riding Hood "Dorothy Russell.
"Bo peep," Doris Sampson.
"Boy blue," Eleanor Bates.
'Little Miss Muffett," Evelyn Schluze
"Jack Horner" Allan Gragg.
"Tommy Tucker," Lawrence Blake.
'Old Woman in a Shoe" Esther Wetherell.
"Santa Claus" Charles Sampson.
"Fairies" Lillian Blake, Virginia Weber, Mabel Richards, and Annie Acker.

After the play the chairs were cleared away and the members took seats on the floor. Santa Claus distributed gifts from a heavily laden Christmas tree. Much merriment was caused by the antics of Santa Claus and the nature of the gifts. During the evening a candy sale was held in the tea room in aid of Mt. Pleasant camp. The evening was a very enjoyable one and the members of the committee acquitted themselves splendidly in preparing such a pleasing entertainment. The committee was as follows: Chairman, Mabel E. Lovejoy, Ouida Keay, Edith Fox, Aljuline Keene, Grace Fisher and Bertha Herne.

BASKET BALL AT Y. M. C. A.

All the Local Teams Make a Good Showing

The last day of the year concluded a week of unusual activity along athletic lines at the Y. M. C. A. In the afternoon there were three games of basketball and two more were added to that number in the evening.

TEAM 4 WINS.

The final contest in the basketball league championship was won by Team 4 by a victory over Team 6. For the winners, Jenkins shot two baskets, Daniels and Matheson one each. Drew the centre on the losing team, got the lone basket for his side. Matheson got the goal from foul on his side, and the third point for the losers was awarded by the referee for interference. Final score 9 to 3.

MIDGETS LOSE.

The Quincy Midgets and the Malden Juniors played a hard-fought and interesting game, which finally resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 20 to 18. Ralph Prout was the star performer with 5 baskets to his credit. Sidelinger of Quincy played for the visitors in the absence of one of their guards, and shot two baskets which enabled the team to win the victory.

INTERMEDIATES WIN.

The big game of the afternoon was between the Quincy Intermediates and the Melrose Intermediates. It was on the whole the least exciting of the afternoon games, and Quincy had no difficulty in winning with the score 33 to 5. Findley of Quincy was the star of the contest. It was his first game as a forward and he proved his fitness for the position by shooting 8 baskets. Trask, who played only in the first half, got four. Wilson, captain of the Melrose team, shot the only baskets obtained by his team and played a good game in general. The rest of the players were much smaller than the Quincy men, and did not have much show against them.

QUINCY 2D WINS.

The evening games in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium were the scrappiest and most interesting of the season. All four teams played well and the defeats although they came hard were no disgrace for the losers. Quincy 2d defeated Boston 2d by a score of 41 to 33. Every man on the Quincy team shared in the scoring, and all but one of the Boston men contributed toward the 33 points they were able to run up. Beaton of the visiting team was the star of the game, with a total of seven baskets to his credit. Gourlie of Quincy with six, and Trask and Rich with 4 each, were not far behind. Gunn and Healy of Boston were also good pointgeters. The game was fast and interesting, and owing to the fact that there was more scoring done was possibly more spectacular than the game between the first teams.

The summary of the game is as follows:

QUINCY 2nd	BOSTON 2nd.
Gourlie, rf	lb, Weis
Trask, lf	rb, Weir
Miller, c	c, Healy
Dineen, lb	rf, Gunn
Rich, rb	lf, Beaton

Score—Quincy 41; Boston 33. Goals from floor—Beaton 7, Gourlie 6, Trask 5, Rich 5, Gunn 4, Healy 3, Dineen 3, Weir 1, Miller 1. Goals from fouls—Healy 3, Gourlie 1. Time—20 minute halves. Referee—Atcheson.

BOSTONS WIN.

The Quincy first team were unable to equal the record of the seconds, and went down in defeat by the score of 17 to 28. The visitors outplayed the home team in every department of the game, but Morris and his men fought gamely and kept their opponents up to their best throughout the contest. The passing of the visitors was the cleverest seen of the floor this season, and Quincy could well draw some lessons from the game. Benson was the star of the evening. Although he played guard he managed to corral the ball in the basket 6 times, and was a tower of strength on the defense. Benson will be remembered as captain of the football team which gave the Wollaston A. A. the best game of the season at Merrymount Park. "Rus" Bates, who played against Benson was the best man on the Quincy team. He shot four baskets, two of them difficult one-handed shots. Dackers and Cherry had it out in great shape, and Dave is to be complimented for preventing such a formidable antagonist from scoring. "Stan" Bates appeared in the Quincy lineup for the first time this year, and conducted himself well. Jenkins and Benson had a very amusing encounter in the second half. The referee had to toss up the ball five consecutive times before it could be gotten away from the two. Early in the second half, Cherry and Foster of the Boston team collided, and had visions of other than basketball stars for a few moments. The game was fiercely contested all the way through, and although the visiting team had the better of the argument, there were times when Quincy looked decidedly dangerous.

The summary:

BOSTON 1st.	QUINCY, 1st.
Foster, lb	rf, Morris
Benson, rb	lf, R. Bates
Ziegler, c	c, Jenkins
Cherry, rf	lb,Dackers
Clark, lf	rb, S. Bates

Score—Boston 28; Quincy 17. Goals from floor—Benson 6, R. Bates 4, Ziegler 3, Clark 3, Jenkins 2, Foster 1, Morris 1, S. Bates 1. Goals from foul—Ziegler, Cherry, Morris. Time—20 minute halves. Referee—Atcheson.

LOVE FEAST ON INAUGURATION DAY

Past and Present City Councils and City Officials Dine at Boston Hotel

Many Knocks But All Taken Good Naturedly

A pronounced success, should be held every year; were remarks made by the seventy-five who attended the Inauguration banquet Monday night. It has been a long time since a similar occasion was held, but so successful was the affair of Monday evening that they will doubtless become a regular feature on Inauguration day.

Young's hotel, Boston, was the scene of the banquet the party having a large private dining room. From 6 to 6.30 o'clock there was an informal reception in the parlors, where the new and old members of the City Council, as well as city officials representing all departments, had an opportunity to meet and exchange greetings.

Dinner was announced as ready at 6.30, and promptly at that hour a line was formed for the banquet room. Ex-Councilman John Moir, chairman of the committee of arrangements, led the way, with Mayor Shea. Then came President Bryant and ex-President Hobbs, Councilman Smith and City Solicitor McAnarney, City Messenger Tirrell and City Auditor Fairbanks, Clerk of Council Magee, ex-Councilmen Whiton, Carey, Cantfill, Loud and Principal Assessor Adams. These occupied seats at the head table, the balance of the party being seated at the three other tables.

Monk's orchestra furnished music during the banquet and as the party marched in, played "See the conquering heroes come." As the party were about to be seated President Bryant presented Chairman Moir with a gavel or knocker, which was a piece of natural wood that came from Katahdin, Me., and once did duty as a knocker to the door of a summer camp. "Gentlemen be seated" was the command and no second invitation was needed. A few minutes later all were busy discussing the menu which was as follows:

Cape Oysters
Mock Turtle Consomme Princesse
Celery Radishes Olives
Fried Scallops, Tartar Sauce
Potato Croquettes
Filet of Beef Larded, Bearnaise Sauce
Roast Stuffed Goose
Eminee of Turkey with Fresh Mushrooms
Vanilla Fritters, Sabayon Sauce
Frozen Pudding Ice Cream
Sherbet Assorted Cake
Roquefort Cheese Coffee

The dinner was an excellent one, well cooked and served. It was not hurried as most dinners of this kind are, but in accordance with the orders given the head waiter time enough was given to fully enjoy each course.

During the dinner the orchestra furnished almost continuous music, playing all of the popular airs, in many of which the party joined in singing. One of the airs that seemed to be the favorite had a verse that ran as follows:

"Put on your old gray bonnet,
With a fourth ribbon on it,
And we'll hitch City Hall to "Billy Shea";
Through the fields of promise,
We'll drive into office,
On Inauguration day."

"Put on your old gray bonnet,
With Bryant's picture on it,
And we'll hitch Jimmy Nowland to the Shay,
We'll put Jack Richards,
With the rest of the kickers,
On Inauguration day."

INNING FOR KNOCKERS.

The banquet over, Councilman Smith in his usual inimitable manner, introduced ex-Councilman Moir as chairman of the after-dinner exercises. Mr. Moir was at his best. At times he was exceedingly witty, and his remarks while savoring of good natured sarcasm, were taken in the spirit in which they were used, and everybody kept good natured. He said that he had now completed his brilliant career. He had served his ward faithfully, and was now likened unto a dead one. He felt something as did Andrew Carnegie, who when asked to lead a meeting in prayer got the meeting to kneel in silent prayer during which he sneaked out.

The slogan of one of the candidates at the recent election was "Paving blocks from Atlantic by the sea," and he would therefore introduce as the first speaker ex-President Hobbs.

Mr. Hobbs said that he was glad someone had set the ball rolling, to get together the present and past Councils, because an occasion of this kind brings us together after our little difficulties, and we can touch elbows for the best interest of our city. He then spoke of a few of the reminiscences of the recent campaign, in which he had figured. He could say, as he had said at the last meeting of the Council, that it was something to be proud of that no one of the City officials in Quincy had ever gone wrong. His experience had been that after inauguration day party lines were eliminated in the City Council, and it was well for the city that it was so. He hoped that the present Council would treat the present presiding officer with the same consideration it had treated him, and he felt sure that it would.

TELEGRAMS READ.

At this point the chairman read several telegrams, he said he had received.

Ex-Councilman Whiton, the father of the steamer, was the next speaker, and he spoke briefly of his admiration for the Mayor and of his experience as a Councilman. He hoped that the present City Council would forget that there was any such things as parties, and work for the best interest of the city.

Councilman Smith, when introduced, said he had frequently been referred to during the past campaign as the man who piloted the Democratic party. We Democrats in the Council are going to act in a sensible and law-abiding manner. He had made many warm friends during his career as a Councilman. Perhaps in 1912 the Republicans might see the error of their ways and be with them.

THE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee, said there were times when people were said to be off their base, and perhaps the School Committee might have been that way a year ago when they elected him as chairman. He was surprised to see how the Council of 1910 had taken him up as a child, and granted him two new school buildings, thus establishing a record of being the only Council that ever created two new school houses in one year. He then spoke of the deplorable condition of the Adams school, and hoped that the Council this year would wipe out this, the only old wooden school building of the city.

HOT FROM THE BAT.

City Solicitor McAnarney told of some of the perplexing duties that often fell his way, when he was called upon on the spur of the moment by councilmen to render decisions hot from the bat. In all of his rulings he had ruled as he understood the law, and oftentimes he had ruled a certain way when he would have liked to have ruled otherwise. When a question was put up to him he was acting under his sense of duty, and he gave the best of his ability. He did not recall a decision that he would now recall or modify.

Councilman Nowland, when called upon, said he had no notice that he was to speak, and therefore had not had the opportunity that others had to prepare himself. He therefore begged to be excused.

STUDY THE CHARTER.

President Bryant told of his long service in the City Council both on the floor and as presiding officer. I want the City Council of 1911 to have as much forbearance toward the president as possible. The position as presiding officer is a peculiar one. He must be familiar with the City Charter. He has got to decide on the spur of the moment. He would suggest to the new members that they familiarize themselves with the City Charter, and commit certain important parts of it to memory, so that they would not have

ENTERTAINED BY RECTOR

Men's Club of St. Chrysostom's Have Jolly Evening

The spirit of good fellowship reigned at the smoker of the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish on Monday evening, when its members enjoyed the hospitality of Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra at the rectory. The large number who attended the meeting pronounced it the jolliest they had had this season.

At the business meeting four new members were admitted. These with the 69 names already on the books gives the club a total membership of 73, the largest in its history.

Following the usual report by secretary Hamilton, chairman Holland of the entertainment committee gave a detailed report of the entertainment to be given under the auspices of the club in Wollaston hall at an early date. This will consist of an illustrated lecture on "Ancient and modern Ireland," augmented by George A. Smalley in illustrated songs, Miss Harding soloist, and Miss Ward reader. A quartet of club members will also sing.

Plans were also discussed and arrangements made for going en masse to Sailors Haven, Charlestown, on February 20, when the club will provide an entertainment for the sailors there. It is proposed to charter special cars for the occasion, and invite all persons interested to accompany the club. Those intending to go are requested to notify the special transportation committee consisting of J. A. Severance, Archie Briggs and Theodore Parker.

Votes of thanks were tendered Mrs. Steenstra for having her house "all smoked up," and to Rev. Mr. Steenstra for the courtesy of his invitation. The remainder of the evening was taken up in pleasant conversation and sociable discussion between the members over refreshments of doughnuts, cheese and coffee. On account of the entertainment it was voted to omit the mid month meeting of the club.

C. E. CABINET MEETING.

The East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union held its regular bi-monthly cabinet meeting Monday evening at the Wollaston Baptist church. Before the meeting a lunch was served to the delegates. After a short business session, Rev. James A. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church gave a short address on "Prayer," and W. A. Harvey of Braintree told of the formation of a prayer circle in the Braintree Baptist church. An effort is being made to form these circles in all the societies of the union, in preparation for the big evangelistic meeting which will be held on Feb. 5,

Rev. Joseph A. Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church also spoke briefly on the subject of the meeting. Carle R. Hayward, the county secretary, spoke of the proposed work of J. Spencer Voorhees, the new field secretary for the state, in Norfolk county. The East Norfolk Union will be given two days during the first week in March. The meeting closed in a series of brief prayers in which practically everyone participated. Delegates were present from Holbrook, Braintree, East Milton, Atlantic, Wollaston and Quincy.

WILLIAM ANTHONY SPINNEY.

Prof. William Anthony Spinney of Boston who was stricken with a paralytic shock while lecturing at Amesbury died on Sunday. He was giving a series of six talks and was in the midst of his fifth one when stricken. He formerly lived at Amesbury and later was a teacher and superintendent of schools in Newton Centre, where he married Miss Mary P. Sylvester formerly of Quincy. After his marriage he gave up teaching and moved to Boston where both he and Mrs. Spinney became interested in mental science, having classes and lecturing. Mr. Spinney's book has been widely read and favorably reviewed. He was well known in club circles being in demand as a lecturer. Mrs. Spinney has the sympathy of Quincy friends in her sudden and sad bereavement.

MAKING A WATCH

Men's Club Told How By an Expert

The Men's club of Christ church pent a most enjoyable evening at their meeting Monday night. A stereopticon lecture entitled "Making a watch" was given by H. E. Duncan of the Waltham Watch Co. Mr. Sundin acted as operator.

The lecture was perfectly clear and comprehensive, so that one who had never seen a watch could feel well acquainted with the movement at the conclusion of the lecture. Views of the different parts were thrown upon the screen, and explained in the minutest detail. The works of a watch were held before the lime-light also, and the relation of the parts was carefully explained. Mr. Duncan presented the subject so clearly that a knowledge of the English language and a good eyesight were the only necessary qualifications for a complete understanding.

After the lecture was completed the Cornish Carol singers were introduced. A company of 25 or 30 singers and instrumentalists rendered in a very pleasing manner four old English Christmas carols. These were followed by comic selections by eight of the company.

The carol singers were as follows:

Treble—William Martin, J. Roberts, A. Tremayne, H. Collins, J. Fay, J. Rashleigh, O. Parsons, J. Roberts, A. Roberts, F. Keast, P. Pascoe, B. Van Duren.

Tenor—F. Warmington, W. Warmington, J. Charles.

Alto—J. Andrews, W. Martin, Jr., W. Rendle, A. Rendle.

Bass—T. Beale, A. Peterson, A. Reid, S. Rowe, J. Grant, E. Richards, T. Keast, N. Spiller, M. Williams.

Instrumental—H. J. Rendle, baritone; horn, N. Williams, H. Williams, Jr., flutes, A. Newcomb, alto horn, William Kessell tenor flute, T. Newcombe, bass euphonium.

At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served.

The 70 to 80 men present agreed that the evening was one of the most pleasurable and profitable ever spent by the club.

A FALSE REPORT.

Charles R. Brown and family of Fayette street, Wollaston, have been put to considerable inconvenience by the report that there was scarlet fever in the family. There was no foundation whatever, for such a report, as the family are all well. They have been out of town during the epidemic, and were surprised at the report on reaching home.

GLEE CLUB CONCERT.

The second of the series of entertainments and dances arranged by the Young People's Religious Union of the First church will be held in the chapel Friday evening. The Arlington Glee club assisted by Miss Kate M. Thomas, violinist, will furnish the entertainment. The first of the series was a very successful dance held in Alpha hall Dec. 2. The entertainments alternating with dances in the course have been arranged so that those interested in the Y. P. R. U. who do not enjoy dancing, can find material enjoyment in helping them along in their efforts to make the year a successful one.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS.

An unusually large number of floral pieces ornamented the desk of the President at the inauguration ceremonies Monday, all of which were sent by admiring friends of Mayor Shea. The flowers included a large bouquet of roses, from Mr. and Mrs. William J. Shields of Boston; bouquets of pinks and roses, from the clerk and heads of departments at City Hall; a basket of roses from ex-Councilman William F. Powers; a bouquet from Miss Wainwright of the West Quincy branch of the Public Library, and a bouquet of violets from Mrs. John Birmingham.

ASSOCIATES BANQUET

Improvement of Houghs Neck the General Topic

The annual New Year's supper and installation of officers of the Houghs Neck Associates was held Monday evening at Associates hall, and was largely attended. As most of the city officials were in attendance at the Inauguration banquet the usual quartette of spellbinders from Quincy were not present. The local orators held forth however and there were many speeches along the line of improvements needed to make this section of the city a more desirable place of residence.

The first thing on the program was the installation of the newly elected officers, which was performed by the retiring president Daniel J. Maloney.

President Wall thanked the Associates for his election, and promised to use his best endeavors for things needed.

There were a number of guests present, and before the evening was over 21 of these signified their intention of becoming members.

Late in the evening a fine supper was served, after which their was music and speaking until the hour of midnight, when the party adjourned.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

"Apparently the press of the country seems to think that the president's message was as broad as it was long." Like the man, that is.

The governors of Louisiana and California have now reached the "writing to the editor" stage in the exposition controversy.

"The ship subsidy might as well wait a little longer and then another while," remarks the Providence News. Then some more, and forever, let it be hoped.

The board of registration in medicine reports 7900 doctors in the State. This is one for every 426 inhabitants, and would give Quincy 76. Guess Quincy has less than the average.

It sounds a good deal more cheering to hear Postmaster General Hitchcock talk about inserting the entering wedge for parcels post service than it did to hear him predicting 1-cent letter postage.

A Chicago woman in suing for divorce says that her husband's stenographer looked at him "longingly, lovingly, sweetly and invitingly," which is no way for a stenographer to behave.

Now that the Gas Company has set the example by reducing the rate for gas, the city should also reduce the price for water. The introduction of meters has shown that the average family does not use $16 worth of water per year, even at 23 cents per 100 cubic feet. The rate for a fully plumbed house should be reduced to $16, with extra for hose. The minimum rate for water by meter should also be reduced. When a family uses only $10 or $12 worth of water it should not be compelled to pay $16 as now. When a bill is rendered for $8 for six months it is safe to say that less than $8 worth of water went through the meter.

With the close of the holiday season there is a renewal of activity in the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government in Washington. Barely two months of the life of the present Congress remains, for at the hour of 12 M. on the 4th of March the 61st Congress will expire by limitation. Then nearly twelve months must elapse before the Congress elected last November can assemble and begin the work for which it was elected. This is an exceedingly clumsy arrangement, for it not only puts off till tomorrow what ought to be done today, but multiplies the delay by nearly four hundred days. However, let the heathen rage because inasmuch as the remedy must be through legislation, it is almost impossible of attainment.

DRIFT OF OPINION

That alert and progressive communities here and there should already be offering inducements to those engaged, or about to become engaged, in the manufacture of aeroplanes is not surprising; and yet it might well involve some surprise, considering that no such industry had existence five years ago. We cannot, if we would, and we should not, if we could, regard everything that occurs as something that we have long expected. We must be careful to avoid that condition of thought which the French, in their incisive way, call blase.

True, we have come to accept the steam engine, the telegraph, the telephone, the phonograph , the trolley car, the sewing machine, the typewriter, the automatic piano, the moving picture, the automobile—the thousand things that sprang into existence since yesterday—as if the world had always known them, always employed them. It is not, in the very nature of the case, as easy for us to be surprised as it was for our grandfathers and grandmothers; but we should not be altogether passive, cold, indifferent. We may well feel some stir of interest, at least, when we read, as we are likely to read in the near future, that "Saugus, Mass., is one of the many important aeroplane manufacturing towns of New England," that "a firm in Dayton, O., turned out 7832 flying machines last year ,and yet was unable to fill its orders," and that "Smith & Brown are erecting a factory in Detroit the capacity of which will be 1,000,000 biplanes annually."

There is nothing unreasonable or improbable about this. Quite the contrary. "A factory for the manufacture of aeroplanes is just the thing that Saugus needs," said a prominent real estate dealer of that town on last Thursday night, addressing a meeting of the local board of trade. He was advocating the granting of inducements to an aeroplane company which proposes to erect a factory that will turn out at least fifty aeroplanes the first year, and he was right in taking this position. To form a proper estimate of the probable growth of the aeroplane industry, it is only necessary to consider how other industries less promising at the beginning, have developed and expanded.

As time goes on we shall cease to be surprised by ocurrences and events in the field of air navigation, except to the extent, perhaps, that we are now moved by some new feat of theMauretania or some other monarch of the ocean realm. Pending the arrival of that time we can afford to regard the crowding evidences of growth in the aeroplane industry as something out of the common.—Christian Science Monitor.

SOCIAL DANCE.

It was a merry party of dancers who gathered at Odd Fellows' hall, South Braintree, last Saturday evening. The occasion was the dancing party under the auspices of the Pond Street Social and Athletic Association, an organization of considerable prominence in South Braintree and of especial importance to the people of Pond street. The hours of dancing were from 8 until 12 and there was a jolly company present of upwards of fifty couples. Delightful music was furnished by the club orchestra and at intermission refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. The floor was in charge of Alex. McGibbon, assistant floor director, William Lawry, and the following aids: Guy E. Wood, Urban T. Landry, Fred E. Hayden.

This is probably only the first of several dances to be given this winter by the club as it is understood that the members are planning to raise money to build a club house so that they may have a suitable meeting place.

NEW YEAR'S DANCE.

The members of the Cochato club and friends, about 150 couples, watched the old year out and the new year in at the club. Dancing was enjoyed the music being rendered by Mullaly's orchestra of six pieces. The committee in charge consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Patch, Miss Lora Emerson and Mr. H. E. Curtis. Mrs. George E. Williams, Mrs. W. E. Dow and Mrs. L. O. Crocker were the matrons. Very pretty dresses were worn by the ladies. Those who did not care for dancing played bridge whist. A special car was run to Quincy at 12.15.

ART OF ADVERTISING.

Although many men are earning tens of thousands of dollars because of their gifts for writing good advertising, the main principles of the art can be applied by any intelligent merchant.

The great essential is to appeal to some fundamental motive in the heart of the consuming public. There are three such motives that are pre-eminently influential. These are cheapness, durability, style.

No argument is needed if you merely suggest the existence of these qualities or one of them.

An ad. that does not appeal to one of these motives is not likely to be a winner. Not too many words, for in the multitude of modern appeals presented to the buying public, verbiage is dead wood before which the mind draws back too tired to penetrate. A few crisp, pungent, vivid details proving one or more of these three things, and your goods are more than half sold.—Beverely Times.

LIGHT ON COAL CONTRACT

Chairman Miller Ably Defends His Position

Editor of Daily Ledger:

I have had my attention called to an article in Thursday night's Ledger headed "School Coal to cost more." While many of the statements are true, yet they are wholly misleading, either by accident or intent. You say the one bidder received the contract at his own price. Did you ever know a contract for school coal to be let otherwise? Our local dealers have got many contracts in the past at their own prices. The School Committee have never tried to beat any one down in their tendered price.

The plain facts are that the School Committee advertised for bids to furnish the different school buildings with coal for the next six months. There was only one bid received which was from the Neponset River Coal Co. The time expired to open the bids. The sub-committee that had that in charge met and opened the bid, and under all rules of contracts there was only one of two things to do, either to award the contract to that bidder or reject the bid and readvertise for new bids.

They did neither, but referred the whole question back to the full committee, and instructed the Superintendent of schools in the meantime to communicate with the local dealers and ascertain the reason why they did not bid. One said he did not care for only three buildings that were near his plant, and he gave a little lower price. The other local dealer gave a price over the telephone that amounted to $87.00 more than the bona fide bid we had.

We never heard of any local dealer being "obliged to submit prices," as you say. A motion was made to award the contract to the Neponset River Coal Co. You say, "It is reported that the vote was a tie and the chairman settled the tie by voting for the out of town firm." Bless your stars, you need not depend on reports. Every member of the committee was present. The vote stood 4 to 4 on the motion as stated above, and I as chairman had to decide it, and it took me about two seconds to vote to give it to the lowest bidder, and save the city $87.00. There was no other course left for me in honor. I had no right to take the people's money and pay bonuses to anyone, and as long as I have any responsibility for our city I will never vote to do it. The people's money should be made to do the most that is possible, and not to make presents to anyone. I would only be too glad to give it to the local dealer if they will put themselves in line to get it at the same prices.

Now Mr. Editor, if you have any fault to find with the present chairman of the School Committee, come right out square and let him have it. I don't blame you, for it is a business proposition with you. The local men advertise in your papers, and you would not be human if you did not have a semblance of helping them, but the citizens of Quincy, I believe, like a square deal on both sides, and I consider I have taken the only just and square course. When a party advertises for bids, that makes it public competition, and it presupposes that each bidder will get a fair deal, and any honest man or committee will give it. It is the other course that leads to so much grafting in so many cities, which about all papers condemn.

It was on my deciding vote that the contract in June last was awarded. It was used against me in the last election, but the voters gave me a larger majority than ever before, and I being sick at home could not, and would not if I could influence a single voter, so I have no fear for what the great majority of the voters think on taking their money to pay bonuses, and in all fairness to the local dealer I don't believe they really want such pap.

To show how anxious our committee was to buy of a home firm, they had an unexpended balance of $400.00 left over, and as one local dealer was lower on nearby schools, the Committee voted to buy that amount of coal from him, thereby saving the City a little more, making a total of over $100.00.

KROL PLEADS GUILTY

Plates For Making Counterfeit Money Turned Over to Government

Boston, Jan. 3.—In the United States district court, Antone Krol of New Bedford pleaded guilty to four counts in an indictment returned against him for counterfeiting $2 bills. Sentence was deferred. The defendant had previously pleaded not guilty. Through his counsel Krol turned over the plate used in making the bills to Secret Service Agent Ahern.

The recovery of the plate is of great satisfaction to the secret service agents, as no further bills will be printed from it. Krol was captured by Deputy Marshals Waters and Ruhl on the same day that five others were taken in different parts of New England in connection with the case. Most of the cases are awaiting disposition of the Krol prosecution. With the exception of one, they were all relatives of the leader. The money was made at a farm near New Bedford, occupied by Krol.

FRAUD IN CHEAP SHOES

Chemist Wiley Wants Congress to Consider "Loading" of Leather

Washington, Jan. 3.—Fraudulent "loading" of leather by the use of glucose and other materials is being practised to an immense extent, to the great detriment of the lower quality of shoes, according to information laid before congress by Dr. Wiley, the chemist of the department of agriculture. Wiley has gathered a collection of samples of this loaded leather, and has pronounced the work "a simple fraud."

"Especially is sole leather loaded, which ought not to be," said Wiley. "Glucose adds to the weight of the leather and, of course, when you go out into the wet and snow, the glucose, which is soluble, runs out and the water runs into its place. There ought to be some law to prevent the practice."

SOCIALIST RAILS AT CHRISTIANITY

Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury at Hands of Crowd

Boston, Jan. 3.—The declaration made by Frank Urbansky, a street corner Socialist and agnostic, when he asked his 2500 listeners to "throw Jesus Christ into the muck heap and let some sunlight into Christianity," was the signal for the crowd to hurl itself on the man, and but for the aid of a few of his friends and the police he would have been seriously injured.

The statement came after the crowd had listened to a violent protest against Christianity, the government, the flag and all that represents civilization. His hearers were not at all in sympathy with him.

Urbansky was thrown from his box into the mud, where he was stamped upon, kicked and beaten until he was a mass of muck, tatters and bruises.

The police locked themselves in the cellar of a nearby drug store with Urbansky and more officers were summoned. In about half an hour, when the mob had become somewhat pacified, the man was led out in the midst of the squad of officers into the Scollay square subway entrance. He was hooted at as he was led forth, but there was no violence offered.

Candidates Arrive at Albany to Look After Their Interests

Albany, Jan. 3.—The contest for the election of a successor to United States Senator Depew is expected to be waged with increased activity following the public inauguration of Governor John A. Dix, and the organization of both houses of the legislature Wednesday. At present it appears to be an open fight.

W. F. Sheehan, E. M. Shepard, Supreme Court Justice Gerard, J. S. Cram, D. F. Cohalan and H. E. Bissell, who have been mentioned for the office, are here.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, has given no intimation as to whom he favors for the senatorship.

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 3.—Charged with manslaughter, Burt Poyner, 26 years old, and Frank B. Dye, 27, soldiers stationed at Fort Banks, were held by Judge Bosson in $2500 and $500 bail respectively.

Twenty-Nine Billions For "Peace"

Paris, Jan. 3.—Edmond Thery, the French economist, figures that the maintenance of Europe's armed peace footing in the last twenty-five years cost approximately $29,000,000,000, which involved an increase in the public debt of the European states of from $25,000,000,000 to $30,000,000,000, and constantly excluded from productive industry 195,000 officers and 3,800,000 men.

NEW FACTIONS IN THE SENATE

Bitterest Kind of Struggle Predicted Over Lorimer Case

BORAH WILL LEAD THE FIGHT

Will Move to Declare Seat Vacant If Minority Report Declaring Against Whitewash Is Not Forthcoming—Opponents of Illinois Man Say Seven of His Votes Were Tainted—Inquisitors In Uncomfortable Position

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senator Lorimer of Illinois will have to fight to hold his seat in the senate. For many weeks it has been known that Senator Beveridge of Indiana, a retiring insurgent and a member of the committee on privileges and elections, has carefully and with doubtful approval been scrutinizing Lorimer's right to his seat.

It now develops that if Beveridge as a committee member does not bring in a minority report declaring against Lorimer, Senator Borah of Idaho will bring in a resolution declaring the seat vacant. In this Borah will receive support from many quarters. It is stated that Senator Root is also studying the testimony as Borah has done.

Mr. Borah has reached the conclusion that there is no warrant for the findings of the sub-committee that the title of Lorimer "has not been shown to be invalid by the use or employment of corrupt methods or practices." He has determined that if no minority report is made he will introduce such a resolution himself and head the fight against Lorimer on the floor of the senate.

The resolution will precipitate the bitterest kind of a struggle, and will mark a division in the senate that will follow no political lines or leaders. Senator Burrows, a Republican, and Senator Bailey, a Democrat, share the responsibility for the committee's report, but neither can command anything like the full strength of his party on a vote on its acceptance by the senate.

The statement by Borah, who is perhaps as good a lawyer as can be found in the senate, that the report of the committee is not borne out by the testimony which the committee is presumed to have read, places the senate inquisitors in a somewhat uncomfortable position.

Senator Beveridge declared in the senate that, although a member of the committee, he had been given less than two days to read the testimony, which he had found an impossible task. The testimony covers 748 pages, and the other members of the committee had no more time to read it than had Beveridge. If they read it at all they will still have the task of defending their report against Borah and the other insurgent or Democratic lawyers of the senate.

Senator Borah spent a week on the testimony, working every day, and made his position known after conferences with several other senators, who have been similarly employed during the holidays. The line-up against Lorimer will be a strong one. Counting Beveridge, it is believed to include Cummins, La Follette, Burton, Bristow, Warner, and, perhaps, Root.

Senator Borah's declaration that he will challenge the report of the committee is the first definite statement that has been made that there will be a fight against Lorimer in the senate. The only hope the Lorimer forces had that a discussion of the case could be stifled lay in a unanimous report by the investigating committee. The senate now must say whether the committee's findings agree with the facts.

The opponents of Lorimer will take the ground that at least seven of the votes that were cast for him were tainted with corruption and should be thrown out, four being the votes of those members who confessed that they accepted bribes in consideration for their votes, and the three other members whose names came out in the testimony in connection with offers to bribe.

MUNICIPAL BOND ISSUES

New Law Which Went Into Effect this Month

Editors Quincy Ledger:

An interesting article in January's Munsey on Municipal Bonds prompts me to make some observations upon this subject, in which I have had some practical experience.

There has never been any question in regard to the security behind a Massachusetts town or city bond, because "in the New England states it is held that a judgment obtained against a town may be levied upon and made out of the property of any inhabitant of the town." Rees vs. City of Watertown 19 Wall. 107.

That is, all the property is liable to levy if the obligation is not paid.

The danger line has always been that the treasurers attend personally and alone to all matters connected with the loans. The Selectmen in towns, theoretically, are supposed to have a hand in the matter, but in reality take no active part. Nearly all irregularities have been in anticipation of taxes notes, which pass as freely, almost, as money and are seldom subjected to legal examination, as the form and execution are practically the same in each case.

A law which went into effect Jan. 1, 1911, and deals with this class of loans and other short term notes, should have a good effect in rendering them practically immune from crookedness. This class of securities were taken up first by the Legislature as an experiment, and later all classes will be subject to State scrutiny, no doubt.

The sole object is to have the genuineness of the obligation ensured, and the legal steps properly taken. The security never worries anyone. The sensible and practical solution would seem to be to enact, a general law whereby the legality and genuineness of each issue should be certified to by some State department, whereupon the obligation should be declared a valid obligation of the municipality which issues it, and not subject to any legal defense by the municipality. A suitable fee could be charged by the State. For certifying the genuineness of the signatures alone the banks now charge a larger fee than the State need to charge for examining and certifying to all the essentials.

If the issues were made in small denominations, such as $100 each, and certified to be a valid obligation by the State, they would soon become a general public investment.

The manner in which the legal steps are taken in small (and large) communities would often surpass belief. It is the exception when the issue is attended to by an attorney, except in the cities which have a regular legal department. When the volume of these loans is considered, and the fact that they are held by all the institutions practically. Any method which would render them incontestible after issuance, exactly as a real estate title can now be made by the State, would be a great achievement.

Yours truly,
James L. Edwards.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

An audience which taxed to the limit the seating capacity of the assembly hall at All Souls' church, Braintree, was the tribute to the able speaker at the meeting of the People's Forum Sunday afternoon. The meeeting was addressed by Rabbi Charles Fleischer of the Temple Israel of Boston ,his subject being "Progressive Religion."

The Rabbi first read an abstract of his lecture and then explained the separate phases of his discourse to the great edification of his audience. He spoke of man as eternally seeking the nature of the Trinity—God, nature, man— and also touched upon the thought that just as surely as the theology of past centuries is the mythology of the present day, just so surely will the theology of the present day be the mythology of future ages. He stands for a religion greater and broader than anything that is yet commonly accepted and stated that he must give up his pulpit simply because he was a poor general and was so far ahead of his army that he had lost the step. He referred to himself rather humorously as the wandering Jew. At the conclusion of the meeting the usual questions were allowed and the speaker was tendered a rising vote of thanks. At the forum next Sunday afternoon the speaker will be John Spargo, the famous socialist who will address the people on a phase of the great topic, socialism.

LOVE FEAST

to call upon the City Solicitor to rule on certain parts of it that they should be familiar with. You are elected to represent the citizens of Quincy. You are the only body that can appropriate money.

When a matter comes up, he would advise that they follow it through the several committees and go and see for themselves what was proposed to be done. In this way they would be able to vote intelligently on all matters. Every night when I retire I can say to myself I have been honest and true to myself and to my constituents.

NO POLITICS.

The last speaker was Mayor Shea. He said that he was a Democrat, but that there had been no politics in his administration. No department was allowed to play politics. When any of the members of the Council attempt to play politics they are making a mistake. You are there to legislate for the best interest of the city of Quincy. He trusted during the present year there would be no call to take party issues. That we would forget that we are Democrats or Republicans and work for the best interest of the city. I am going to the Legislature this year and ask that party designations may be eliminated at city elections. If you find anything going wrong in any department I want you to come to me and tell me, and I will do my best to rectify it. He hoped that the legislative and executive branches would get along harmoniously. My office is always open, and I am ready at all times to listen to any complaint or suggestion. Bear this in mind and the record this year will be one to be proud of.

AN EXCELLENT CHOIR.

Editor Daily Ledger:

As a visitor to Quincy during the past week end, I attended the evening service, last Sunday, at Christ church, and was much impressed by the high standard of the singing by the choir boys there. I have attended several churches in Boston, and think that the boys' choir at Christ church could hold its own against any of its size, and many of more pretentious numbers.

Being rather at the rear of the church, I was unable to observe which of the boys it was who sang the solo in the anthem, neither do I know his name, but I must say, I consider he sang splendidly in every way, and deserving of great commendation. Perhaps if we were to take a little greater interest in our choirs, the membership of our churches would be represented more in attendance rather than in subscriptions alone.

PRES. BOWLES OUT FOR LODGE

Endorses His Reelection to the Senate

Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, who resigned from the navy while chief of the department on construction to become president of the Fore River Ship Building Company, feels very strongly that Senator Lodge should be re-elected. Speaking from the point of view of a Massachusetts citizen, Admiral Bowles is reported by the Herald as follows:

"It was Massachusetts which, through Adams, Cabot and Crowninshield, took the lead in fulfilling the recommendations of Washington and creating the superb little fleet of sloops and frigates that won imperishable glory in the ocean duels of 1812.

"The men of Salem, Boston, Marblehead, New Bedford and other New England towns formed the crews of the privateers whose immense destruction of British commerce secured for us the freedom of the sea and the real independence of the United States.

"In the civil war Massachusetts sent 30,000 volunteers into the federal navy, and there are more men from our state now serving afloat in the steel battleships and cruisers than come from any like community in the United States. Massachusetts has always believed in the navy most earnestly and sustained it most liberally by her votes in Congress and by the courage and devotion of her sailor sons.

"Twenty-eight years' service in the navy, a continued active interest in its welfare and a fairly intimate acquaintance with public men associated with naval affairs for 30 years past, seem to make it incumbent on me, now free from the restrictions of the naval regulations, to express as a citizen my conviction that no American stateman of our own time has been a more effective or more consistent champion of the American navy than Senator Lodge and that in this he has been signally loyal to the traditions and the welfare of the commonwealth.

"Senator Lodge is a critical student of naval history. He went to Washington well equipped to represent Massachusetts on this vital phase of national defence. As a member of the House committee on naval affairs he was one of the sub-committee which prepared the bill authorizing the construction of those three pioneers of our modern battleship fleet—the Massachusetts, Indiana and Oregon—destined to form three-fourths of our heavy battle line in the war with Spain. Looking backward, the whole country can now see that the building of those formidable ships was providential.

"Later, in the Senate, Mr. Lodge always gave his voice to the advocacy of a progressive naval policy, insisting always on the sound principle which really had its birth in Massachusetts, that the American navy, though not the largest in the world, should always be the most efficient in the quality of its ships and guns, and above all of its officers and seamen. When the recent cruise of the battleship fleet around the world was projected Senator Lodge, out of his intimate knowledge of theservice, was enabled to explain and justify to the country an undertaking much opposed at first, but now acknowledged to have been of the utmost value to the navy and the nation.

"Senator Lodge has spoken with authority and power for the navy as it xists today, because he has spoken out of exact and abundant information. His address, 'A Fighting Frigate,' at the Old South, in 1897, on the occasion of the return of the Constitution to the Charlestown Navy Yard, and the naval chapters of his important work. 'The War with Spain,' published in 1899, like his many speeches in Congress on the question, show a firm grasp of the principles of the naval art and of the essential details of naval history. I know that Senator Lodge is profoundly admired by the sea officers of the United States for his masterly attainments in this direction.

"As a student of naval affairs Mr. Lodge has realized the importance of a large, thoroughly equipped, permanent building and repair station like the Charlestown Navy Yard. His influence in the Senate has kept this yard in the forefront of development. Viewed as a manufacturing establishment it is one of the greatest in the commonwealth, and it is now one of the very best yards which the United States possesses. For the rescue of the Charlestown yard from neglect and decay, for the construction of its great dry dock and the modernizing and increase of all its facilities, Boston and Massachusetts owe Senator Lodge honor and gratitude.

"So far as the navy, the strong right arm of our national defence, is concerned no other public man of our state could for a long time begin to hold the place of power which Senator Lodge occupies at Washington. Massachusetts, believing intensely in the navy as the best bulwark of the nation and the surest guarantee of peace, can perform no greater service to our splendid fleet and its officers and men than to re-elect Mr. Lodge to the Senate."

WORK FOR NAVY YARD.

The battleships Virginia and Georgia, whose "home" is the Charlestown navy yard, are among the ships designated for general overhauling and modernizing this year says the Globe. The changes recommended are for the batteries, ammunition hoists, turret turning gear and cooling device for the magazines. The Missouri and New Jersey of practically the same class are now in reserve at the local navy yard undergoing similar modernizing and the Illinois is at the yard, out of commission, being entirely modernized. If the work on the Georgia and Virginia is assigned to the Boston yard, as is hoped, it will insure steady work for a good-sized force for several months.

The workmen are greatly interested in the proposed tests with the ram Katahdin. The plan now considered is to make the ram a permanent target base at the naval proving grounds. With the increase in size and power of naval ordnance and the increased power of ammunition, the navy has had difficulty in securing ranges of proper size and facilities for the work, and it is said much of such work on land under limited conditions is only theoretical.

To have such tests under absolute accurate and sea conditions, the Katahdin is designed as target carrier, to be equipped as each test requires with a section of the armor plate being tested and to have the old monitor Tallahassee equipped with the guns being used each time, thus securing the ranges, service conditions and everything required for thorough tests.

JOINT INSTALLATION.

The joint installation of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer Post 87 G. A. R. of Braintree and Woman's Relief Corps No. 94 was held in G. A. R. hall, South Braintree, Monday evening. The officers of the post were first installed and the work was done in a highly creditable manner by past commander Henry A. Monk, who is one of the most active members. Affairs proceeded very smoothly and in due time came the installation of the members of the corps. The duty was performed most excellently by Mrs. Lou Stuart Wadsworth of Boston, a past department commander of the corps and at present department patriotic instructor for Massachusetts.

At the conclusion of her duties she was presented by Mrs. Sarah Mellen, president of the corps, in behalf of the members, with a beautiful bouquet of carnations. Mrs. Wadsworth accepted the gift with many thanks in a very graceful little speech.

Remarks were listened to from Commander Gage, Past Commander Monk, Commander Hayden of the S. of V., and others. It was very warm and close in the hall and the delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were much appreciated. After a social hour the gathering broke up and the officers are now ready for another year's work.

A CONTAGIOUS IDEA.

A teller who was detailed to the woman's window in a bank was asked by a portly German hausfrau for a new envelope for her bank book. The lady behind her, noting that her own envelope was a trifle dingy, asked also for a fresh envelope.

No. 3 said "Me, too," or words to the same effect, and so it went down the line.

When his patience and his stock of envelopes threatened to give out the teller determined to call a halt. A fastidiously dressed lady appeared at the window holding out a perfectly gloved hand.

"I should like one too, please," she said.

"One what, madam?" asked the teller.

The lady flushed and began to look comical.

"Why," she stammered, "what the other ladies had."—Argonaut.

No, we've got one." "No, you ain't sir; he's just bin run over in Cheapside." Boy was engaged.—London Answers

CEMENT HIGHWAY FOR THE NATION

Coloradoan Evolves Good Roads Plan Costing $50,000,000.

GOVERNMENT PAYS ONE-HALF

States to Pay Remainder and Denver to Be Radius With Roads to Great Lakes, Gulf of Mexico and Pacific Ocean—Reduction of Railroad Rates One Benefit.

A system of national highways radiating from Denver to the ports on the great lakes, the gulf of Mexico and the Pacific seaports of San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle is the plan outlined by J. Brisben Walker, president of the Transcontinental Highway association, before the Colorado conservation commission recently.

By the building of such a system of highways, says Mr. Walker, the cost of freight and passenger transportation on existing railway systems would be cut in two through competition.

The conservation commission unanimously indorsed Mr. Walker's plan and passed a resolution urging the national legislature to take favorable action upon it.

The highways are to be built of cement, asphalt or other durable material, one-half of the cost to be borne by the government because of the value of the highways for military purposes and one-half to be borne by the states traversed by the highways. These states include Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona and Utah.

Five Thousand Miles For $50,000,000.

As to cost, Mr. Walker figures that 5,000 miles of highway could be built for $50,000,000. This is for the first strip twenty feet wide. With the government paying half this would leave $25,000,000 to be divided among sixteen states, an average of $1,500,000 each. Paid for in thirty year 5 per cent bonds this would be no burden, Mr. Walker says. Eventually the first strip would be widened until separate thoroughfares were provided for freight and passenger traffic.

To show how passenger fares would be cut Mr. Walker takes as a basis a ninety mile highway between New York and Philadelphia on which twenty passenger touring cars are operated. In this connection he says:

Those familiar with automobile building would place the cost of a six cylinder twenty passenger car, if sold in large numbers, at $2,000. It would be a very reasonable estimate to place the life of the car, making a round trip daily, at one and one-half years, 547 round trips, or 1,094 single trips, which would bring the cost of car to $1.82 per trip. For so short a life repairs need not be estimated at over $182 per year, or 50 cents a day. This would give the following:

Gasoline	$2.40
Oil	.20
Chauffeur	1.50
Rental of garage, lights, heating, etc.	.25
Cleaning	.20
Cost of car	1.82
Repairs	.50
Total	$6.92

One Passenger, 34 Cents.

For twenty passengers the cost would amount to 34 cents each per trip, or, allowing for the average six vacant seats each trip, the cost for the fourteen passengers would be 49.4 cents, or less than one-fourth the lowest fare of the Pennsylvania railway for the same trip. This would permit owners of automobile cars to charge 100 per cent profit and even then cut the lowest price of the railway in half.

For fifty tons of freight, handled by two engineers for sixteen hours, a fifty horsepower traction engine at four miles per hour the figures would be:

Cost of fifty horsepower traction engine, $2,400; life of same, calculated at three years' service, amounting to, per diem	$2.20
Cost of wagons capable of moving fifty tons, $2,200; four years' life, per diem	1.61
Wages of two engineers, working eight hours each, at $3	6.00
Fuel, oil, etc., for 16 hours	4.50
Repairs on engine, estimated at $219 per annum	.60
Total for sixteen hours	$14.94

Ages of Development

FOR nearly three hundred years the people of New England have been manufacturing goods. Cut off from an older civilization, and with all the complex needs of life to be supplied, almost the first necessity and duty of the Pilgrims was to learn to make things. For the first hundred years their best thought and energy were devoted to supplying from their own resources and with their own labor the varied necessities of life.

Another hundred years were devoted to the selection of the fittest — of those lines of manufacture for which the natural resources of the country and the genius and environment of the people best fitted them—and to the elimination of those activities which might more successfully and profitably be conducted elsewhere.

And now we are nearing the close of the third hundred years — a century devoted to specialization. This period has seen the genius of a people turned to detail; to the invention of wonderful labor-saving devices; to the discovery and utilization of by-products; to the detection and elimination of every item of waste; and so finally to a rare perfection in the manufacture and quality of its goods.

Thus today New England offers to the world an infinite variety of goods that are the perfect fruition of three centuries of development. These goods find their way into every corner of the world, and answer every need and necessity of mankind.

You will find "New England Made" stamped upon huge shovels in Panama that are biting a way through the backbone of a continent; upon the sextant and chronometer that after so many years have guided the weary foot of man over frozen wastes to the apex of the world; upon the diamond drill which bores down and down even into the eternal heat of the earth; and upon the great reflector whose giant eye searches the mysteries of unmeasured space and etches out the canals on Mars.

LOEB ESTABLISHES WONDERFUL RECORD

Fraud Receipts Are $2,691,276 In Twenty-Two Months

New York, Jan. 2.—The pursuit of smugglers and successful cornering of other forms of customs frauds during the last twenty-two months has given Uncle Sam nearly three times as much cash as was received from these sources in all the preceding fifteen years.

A statement was issued by the custom house showing that from March, 1909, when Mr. Loeb became collector of the port of New York, to Dec. 29, 1910, fines, penalties and forfeitures amounting to $2,691,276 were received. In the fifteen years preceding there was collected from similar sources $926,162.

The statement further shows that the recovery of fraud money within the last twenty-two months was as much as was collected in a period of forty-three years preceding 1909.

A wizened little man charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half, or in this case better two-thirds, was a big, square jawed woman with a determined eye. The judge listened to the plaintiff's recital of wrongs with interest.

"Well, judge," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to glare defiantly at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."—Argonaut.

GO TO GRAVE IN WEDDING GARB

Miss Elosser and Twigg Victims of a Murder Plot

POLICE ARE STILL BAFFLED

Couple Sat on Sofa, Holding Hands and Looking Into Each Other's Eyes When Stricken by Deadly Poison, Supposed to Have Been Concealed In Chewing Gum—Kiss Proved the Messenger of Death

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 3.—On what was to have been their wedding day, Miss Grace Elosser and Charles E. Twigg, both wearing their bridal garments, were placed in their graves.

Each, the police say, was murdered by poison. Detectives now are trailing a clew that points directly to a jealous woman, jilted by Twigg many months ago.

This woman is suspected of placing cyanide of potassium in some gum. Miss Elosser gave her fiance a piece. He, after he had begun to chew it, kissed her. That innocent kiss, it is believed, killed the girl as Twigg died. The pair were found sitting hand in hand on a sofa by the girl's mother.

So swift, so instantaneous had been the action of the poison upon them that the dead couple when found sat as if in life. The girl's mother going into the room, wondering only at the very long silence that she had noted between the couple, saw her daughter and the young man sitting in apparently the most natural fashion. They were holding hands and looking into each other's eyes.

Then the mother suddenly gasped and stepped back. There was something uncanny, she saw, in the intentness of the gaze the young man and woman had fixed upon each other. There was that which gave a silent, vague alarm in the fixedness of their pose. She spoke to them. They did not answer. She went over to them. She spoke again and received no reply. Then she put a hand on her daughter's and spoke again.

"Grace—Grace," she said. And there was still no reply, so she gently shook her daughter by the shoulder. The mother screamed then and ran from the room, for the girl's head had lolled to one side and the older woman had seen that the girl's jaw was dropped and her eyes were fixed in the piteous gaping of death.

Then when others came it was found that the man, too, was dead; that both had been suddenly and absolutely stricken. Cyanide of potassium had been the medium. This was established by the autopsy of the coroner's physician. The man had more of the poison in his system than the girl.

In the holiday season there had been several boxes of candy in the house. But the medical examination showed conclusively that neither Miss Elosser or her fiance had eaten candy. He had, however, in his mouth a stick of chewing gum. He had taken scarcely more than two or three bites on it. It had not been masticated into a pulp. In Miss Elosser's mouth was no chewing gum.

The strange likelihood is being considered by the authorities that the stick of chewing gum contained the deadly cyanide; that the young man with the gum in his mouth had leaned forward to kiss his sweetheart, and that the kiss communicated the poison to her lips—a kiss offered in love that was deadly—a kiss of whose tragic character the ardent bestower was in all ignorance.

The tips of the tongues of both Twigg and the girl who was to have been his bride were red and inflamed; quite as if they had been burned or bitten. Cyanide, of course, takes immediate action. The mere touching of a grain of it to the tip of the tongue will cause death instantly.

Rev. W. W. Van Aarsdale, rector of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, who was to have presided at the marriage ceremony, officiated at the funeral service for Miss Elosser yesterday. Twigg was buried at his home in Keyser, W. Va., twenty-three miles away.

Radley Narrowly Misses Serious Upset at Los Angeles Meet

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 3.—James Radley, the English aviator, began the last day of the Los Angeles aviation meet with a narrow escape from death. Although the day was calm and there was no wind about the starting point, drifting gusts caught the Englishman's Blerlot monoplane, and for a second or two it danced and wabbled in a manner that startled the spectators.

Radley was unprepared for the gust, but regained control of the machine and immediately landed. A few minutes later he accepted an offer from a purchaser to buy his machine. He said he would fly at the San Francisco meet, but after that he might abandon the sport.

Glen Curtiss ascended in one of his racers shortly after Radley, encountered the same dangerous air currents, and was forced down.

TELLS CAUSE FOR BELIEF

Astronomer See Thinks Venus Is Inhabited by Intelligent Beings

Montgomery, Mo., Jan. 3.—In a letter to relatives, T. J. J. See, astronomer in charge of the United States naval observatory at Mare island, Cal., says the planet Venus probably is inhabited. He says:

"Just as the earth never rotated very rapidly and has not been appreciably retarded by the effects of tidal friction, so also Venus likewise has escaped a corresponding retardation of axial rotation and still rotates in twenty-three hours, twenty-one minutes, as has been held by observers since the day of Cassini, 1667.

"The planet Venus, therefore, is habitable and probably is inhabited by some kind of intelligent beings."

WHITNEY SWITCHES TO LODGE FORCES

Leader of Conservative Democrats Creates Sensation

Boston, Jan. 3.—The Lodge situation took its most surprising turn when Henry M. Whitney, political and business ally of Governor-elect Foss, declared himself in favor of Senator Lodge's re-election. To say that the Whitney statement created a sensation would be putting it mildly.

Whitney has been a Democratic candidate for governor and for lieutenant governor and is one of the leaders of the conservative wing of the Democratic party. He was the first president of the committee of one hundred on reciprocal trade with Canada. It was this committee that inaugurated the fight against Lodge which really led up to the senior senator's present predicament. Foss served as vice president of this committee while Whitney was president.

This committee was formed to push the Hay-Bond treaty and other measures calculated to help towards reciprocity with Canada. Foss recently accused Lodge of playing a leading part in the defeat of the Hay-Bond treaty.

Mr. Whitney says he would have been pleased to see William A. Gaston elected senator, but with Gaston out of the race his choice is Lodge.

Governor-elect Foss, in a statement issued last night, charged that Whitney had been "coerced by the privileged financial interestes" to declare himself in favor of Lodge.

Young Man Dares Widowed Aunt to Wed Him and She Accepts

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Jan. 3.—"Any one who will take a dare is a coward," said Mrs. Mary P. Batchelor, 25, a handsome widow, to her late husband's nephew, Walter R. Batchelor, 23. They were standing in front of the courthouse at the time.

"I'll dare you to marry me," replied the nephew, with a good deal of feeling. Something in his eyes made his aunt realize he was in earnest.

"Why, why, how can I do that?" she asked.

"I want you. We want to keep you in the family. And it's a dare," he answered. Twenty minutes later they were married.

AN ATTACK BY LAND AND SEA

Puerto Cortez May Be Scene of Great Conflict

GUNBOAT HORNET IS SIGHTED

Many Americans With Bonilla's Revolutionary Forces, Who Are Armed With Modern Rifles, Two Field Pieces, and Have Plenty of Ammunition—Grave Doubt as to Loyalty of Government Troops

Puerto Cortez, Honduras, via New Orleans, Jan. 3.—The long expected revolt of the adherents of Manuel Bonilla against the Davila government in Honduras has broken out and a decisive battle is expected to be waged in the streets of this city within the next few days. The revolutionary gunboat Hornet has been sighted off this port. That preparations are being made for an attack upon Puerto Cortez by land and sea is believed certain.

Accurate information says there are about 300 Bonilla soldiers, well armed, on the Mantagua bar in the disputed territory between Honduras and Guatemala.

Further south, along the Guatemalan border, it is reported that about 500 revolutionists, including many Americans, armed with modern rifles, two field pieces and a plentiful supply of ammunition, are preparing for a march through Santa Barbara to Tegucigalpa.

Another body of revolutionists is reported in the vicinity of Las Quebragas, where a small engagement is said to have taken place yesterday. These soldiers, it is believed, are to be used in the attack upon Puerto Cortez.

There is a marked feeling of suspense in this city. From all indications the government intends to make a strong fight here. The garrison has been increased in the last few days by the arrival of 500 government troops and a small battery of machine guns, but there is grave doubt as to the loyalty of the soldiers.

It is believed that the mere presence here of Bonilla or General Christmas will result in a general "turn over" and cause an alliance of government troops with the revolutionists.

Captain Davis of the United States cruiser Tacoma, which lies far out in the harbor, has stated that immediately upon the outbreak of hostilities, he will land a sufficient number of blue-jackets to protect the lives of Americans.

All Americans and foreigners, however, have been advised to keep within the territory bounded by the United Fruit company and the Old Lottery House grounds.

TO RAISE THE PURITAN

Wreckers Begin Work on Monitor Sunk In Tests of Explosives

Norfolk, Jan. 3.—The Merritt & Chapman Derrick and Wrecking company has begun the work of raising the monitor Puritan, which was sunk on the Newport News middle ground, following explosive tests to which she was subjected for experimental purposes. Three divers will be used in patching the holes which have been found in the Puritan's bottom and it is hoped that resort to cofferdams will not be necessary.

The wrecking company's contract is to raise and deliver to the Puritan afloat at the Norfolk navy yard, for which the government agrees to pay $23,000.

Portland, Me., Jan. 3.—Reaching up and taking hold of a broken telephone wire which dangled close to the ground near where he was engaged in picking coal from an ash heap, 13-year-old Thomas F. Healey fell instantly dead from an electric shock.

The broken wire had been crossed by an electric light wire and was heavily charged with electricity. The boy's hand was burned almost to a crisp. He was the only son of Mrs. Mary McCarthy, his father being dead.

GEORGE H. MOSES

Minister to Greece Asked to Report to Washington In Person

MOSES MAY LOSE HIS JOB

Minister to Greece May Be Succeeded by Former Senator Cockrell

Washington, Jan. 3.—George H. Moses of Concord, N. H., United States minister to Greece, who was recently asked to report to Washington in person, may in time be displaced by ex-Senator Cockrell of Missouri, formerly of the interstate commerce commission, if intimations said to have been received by Missouri members of congress are correct.

Mr. Cockrell was retired from the commission because of age, but his friends have given assurance that the duties of the Greek mission would be such as he could perform easily for several years. His daughter is married to the former Greek minister to the United States, who is now minister of finance at Athens.

ORGANIZED UNDER LAWS OF DELAWARE

California Corporation Has a Capital of $200,000,000

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 3.—The United Properties company of California has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $200,000,000. It is authorized to equip, construct and operate railroads, steamship lines, electric light, power and traction lines, water for domestic purposes and irrigation, to build and operate wharves, docks and warehouses.

The new corporation is the largest concern ever organized under the Delaware incorporation laws. C. B. Zabriskie of New York, who secured the charter, was obliged to pay the state a fee of $10,100.

The company was chartered for the purpose of effecting a merger of all the public utilities companies of Oakland and Berkeley, Cal., including the ferry line that connects those places with San Francisco.

ANTI-JURY PLEA DENIED

Women's Services Appreciated In the State of Washington

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 3.—Governor Hay denied the petition of the women of Sunnyside that he recommend to the legislature a bill exempting women from jury duty. He said:

"Ladies who recently served on a jury here, the first since suffrage took effect, are earnest and sincere in their belief that women should serve on juries. The trial judge of the case praised their services highly, and urged that women jurors be generally called upon. I have been advised that prominent women of the state generally favor service on juries, and I shall make no recommendation otherwise."

PORTUGAL AND FEATURES

Political Events In United States, England and Mexico Also Cut Important Figure.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

WHEN compared to its predecessor 1910 was only one of the common or garden variety of years. It did not discover the north pole, it did not have a cluster of centenaries, and it did not drive Abdul Hamid from his throne. Yet it saw the advent of the Portuguese republic, gave the house of lords a solar plexus blow in England and put the standpatters to sleep in America. These events and others entitle it to our loving regard.

It also flew high in aviation—something over 10,000 feet, to be exact. It was an industrious year that did not aspire to be a big noise and yet got quite a little done. To put it in classical language, it was not much on dress parade, but was "a good booger to work."

Deposing of King Manuel.

In the political world the big event was, of course, the driving of King Manuel out of Portugal and the establishment of a republic. Compared to the magnitude of the event this transformation was accompanied by a little bloodshed. The affair had its spice of scandal, as do most royal performances. It appears that a Parisian dancer of the name of Gaby Deslys took the youthful monarch's eye, with the result that Manuel spent much time in Paris and Gaby sojourned not infrequently in Lisbon. Ordinarily this might not have excited comment, being quite the usual thing among kings, but inasmuch as Portugal was tired of monarchy anyway the gossip played its part. As a result Mlle. Gaby will go down to history as the highest kicker on record, having kicked off a king's crown.

The year beheld the accession of George V. in England, an event that had no influence politically and but little in any other way. Of far greater importance were the two British parliamentary elections, both resulting in Liberal coalition victories by practically the same majorities. The first of these forced through the house of lords the single tax budget, and the second practically sealed the fate of the peers and decreed some form of Irish home rule. Taken together these two victories constitute the most signal triumph for the progressive side witnessed in England since the adoption of the reform bill.

China Also Awakened.

Perhaps the third event in importance in foreign politics was the meeting of the Chinese senate, definitely marking the beginning of parliamentary government in the Celestial Kingdom, the last great nation that had held out against the rising tide of democracy. When China has a parliament and quits wearing pigtails the millennium will be waiting just around the corner.

Other notable political happenings abroad were the establishment of the bandbox kingdom of Montenegro, the fight to separate church and state in Spain, the Mexican uprising and the swallowing of Korea by Japan. The Land of the Morning Calm is being given such a touch of high life by the Japs that she is now the Land of the Morning After.

We have also had some politics at home. It is almost brutal to write about the elections of 1910, but it is impossible to give a full blown review of the year without them. Democratic and progressive victories were generally the result. The progressives practically doubled their representation in both houses and elected governors in California, Kansas, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Tennessee, Wisconsin and Wyoming, although in the last named state the progressive Republican candidate ran on the Democratic ticket.

The Democrats carried the national house by about sixty, made such gains in the senate that the progressives will have the balance of power and elected governors not only in the southern states, with the exception of Tennessee, but in Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma and Oregon. This was the first time the Democrats had won such a victory in nearly twenty years.

American Politics Likely.

Political events during the year leading up to the election were the Ballinger investigation, resulting in a divided report; the dismissal of Pinchot; the forcing through of the Taft program in congress, the two chief items being the railroad bill and postal savings banks; the insurgent revolt in congress, resulting in removing the speaker from the committee on rules, enlarging that committee and making it elective by the house; the return of Roosevelt from Africa amid loud acclaims and his subsequent disastrous venture into the campaign, the trip of the president to Panama and the practical reorganization of the United States supreme court due to two deaths and one resignation.

The year has been the most notable in the history of aviation. It witnessed the first flight over the Alps and has broken altitude and speed records so often that the fragments are scattered all over two continents. Flights across the English channel have become so common that they call for only a four line item in the newspapers. Some comparison between 1910 and 1909 may be made on the basis that the highest flight last year was something like 1,600 feet, while this year the record is 10,498 feet. As for speed, Bellanger, a French aeronaut, flew 100 miles at a rate of eighty-six miles an hour.

Aviators' Great Achievements.

Cross country flights between cities have been the feature of 1910. These were led off by Paulhan going from London to Manchester. Then Curtiss flew from Albany to New York, and Hamilton sped from New York to Philadelphia and returned in one day.

Later Brookins covered the distance from Chicago to Springfield. The ambitious efforts to conduct a race from Chicago to New York and from St. Louis to New York were abandoned, although large purses were offered.

Neither did Walter Wellman fly across the Atlantic in a dirigible. That was another case of too much wind, although Wellman himself blamed it on the equilibrator. His balloon America started from Atlantic City in a fog, beat it up the coast to the neighborhood of Nantucket, then got to going south, and after traveling about 870 miles and being aloft seventy-two hours the crew was picked up or, rather, picked down to the north of Bermuda. Another notable balloon voyage was that of the America II. in a flight from St. Louis to northern Quebec, a distance of 1,355 miles, breaking all records.

Considering the widespread activity in aviation the death list was small, yet at least four famous bird men gave their lives to the sport. These were Delagrange, Johnstone, Rolls and Chavez, the last named being dashed to death just after his thrilling feat of crossing the Alps.

Many Sporting Records Upset.

In the world of sports the Philadelphia Athletics won from the Chicago Cubs in the world's baseball championship. Barney Oldfield broke the world's automobile speed record, going a mile in 27.33 seconds. Two boxing championships were settled. One of these was for the lightweight belt, in which event Wolgast defeated Battling Nelson, and the other was the dashing of the hopes of the white race when the mighty Jeffries could not come back.

The advent of Halley's comet was not exactly a sporting event. In fact, this eighty year visitor was anything but a sport, since it lamentably failed to live up to its opportunities. If it had been on the job it might have knocked the earth halfway across the solar system and so have prevented the Democratic victory. Yet there are scientists who say that a comet's head is as gaseous as a political platform promise, while its tail is as thin as the average campaign speech.

A twin performance to Mr. Halley's false alarm was Dr. Cook's confession. Either the flower garlanded doctor was tired of hiding or he needed the money for which, it is said, he sold this latest of his literary masterpieces. At any rate, he is not now certain whether he reached the north pole, but wants the world to forgive him the purple snows story, the wreath of roses and the good American dollars showered on him during his lecture tour.

Cook Controversy Renewed.

In this connection it is worthy of note that Professor Parker returned from his Mount McKinley expedition without having climbed the mountain, but bringing back photographs of the peak twenty miles away that Cook scaled and on which he took his famous pictures of the "top of the continent."

Other notable miscellaneous happenings of the year were Carnegie's ten million dollar gift to peace, followed by an American war scare the next day; the census which showed that we have nearly 92,000,000 people in the United States proper and over 100,000,000 including the outlying possessions, the pan-American congress, the conservation congress addressed by Taft and Roosevelt and the labor strikes in Philadelphia and New York.

There were the usual number of fires, storms, eruptions, explosions, wrecks and other horrors. Among the most important disasters were the flooding of Paris and Tokyo, the twenty million dollar fire in the "White City" at the Brussels exposition, the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times and the frightful forest fires in the northwestern part of the United States.

The death roll of illustrious men and women is a long one. The most celebrated of the list were Mark Twain of America, Tolstoy of Russia and King Edward of England. Two members of our supreme court, Chief Justice Fuller and Justice Brewer; four United States senators, McEnery of Louisiana, Daniel of Virginia, Dolliver of Iowa and Clay of Georgia, and one senator elect, Broward of Florida, were among those taken. Of men formerly prominent in our public life Thomas C. Platt, David B. Hill and John G. Carlisle were the most noted of the year's dead.

Famous Women Die.

Two famous American women, each about ninety years of age, were claimed in the persons of Julia Ward Howe and Mary Baker G. Eddy. Other well known Americans who passed away were Louis James, the actor; John La Farge, the artist; O. Henry, the short story writer; Solicitor General Bowers and Octavo Chanute, the man who instructed the Wright brothers in aviation.

Besides Edward VII., two foreign rulers that died were President Montt of Chile, who had just finished a visit to this country, and King Chulalongkorn of Siam. Two other foreigners famous in fields of learning were Goldwin Smith of Canada and Dr. Robert Koch of Berlin.

Even with this extended list the natural deaths hardly kept pace with the political fatalities. As a solace, however, we have in place of the fallen a cluster of brand new or freshly elected governors, among the number being Woodrow Wilson, John A. Dix, Simeon E. Baldwin, Eugene N. Foss, Frederick W. Plaisted, Judson Harmon, Chase S. Osborn, Walter Roscoe Stubbs and Hiram W. Johnson. Who knows but that some of these may be names to conjure with in coming years?

HACKETT'S PROGRAM

Will Run in the Big English Marathon

William J. Hackett of Quincy, the Brookline Gymnasium Association long-distance runner who won the Brockton Fair Marathons in 1909 and 1910, is to compete in the big English Marathon to be held on Queen Victoria's birthday, May 24, at London. Hackett will leave this country about April 1 and will finish his preparatory work on the roads over which the event is to be held.

It was originally planned that he run in the Boston Athletic Association run before going, but as it is figured that the Back Bay club's event would interfere with the English event he has decided to abandon this idea.

There is no runner, says the Herald, better qualified to represent this country in the English event than the Quincy runner, who has brought the winged emblem to the front in many a hard-fought long-distance event. He is one of the few runners in this country who has ever repeated in Marathons in two successive years. The manner in which he won the Brockton fair run last October was remarkable. He came from behind and in the last five miles showed as wonderful a burst of speed as ever marked the finish of such a contest.

The English event will at the regulation British Marathon distance and over the same course of the Olympic event in 1908. Hackett has started training for the race, and announces that he will do very little, if any, indoor running this winter. While on the other side he will wear the colors of the Brookline organization.

In 1909, when an unknown, Hackett surprised the followers of amateur long distance running by winning the Brockton fair Marathon run from a fairly fast field in 2 hours 37 minutes 26 1-5 seconds. Last October, under deplorable conditions, Hackett showed himself to be a game runner, for, after being almost a mile in the rear four miles from the finish, he kept on plugging until he gained the lead less than a mile from the finish. His time was 2 hours 24 minutes 50 seconds, an improvement of almost 13 minutes over his 1909 race. The time for the distance, which was a half-mile longer, was 2 hours 27 minutes 9 seconds.

MAYOR FITZGERALD TO SPEAK.

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston has been secured as one of the speakers at the banquet of the Ward Four Improvement Association to be held Thursday evening, Jan. 26. The association still hopes that it may eventually secure the Willard school hall for its meetings.

DID MRS. LOWELL PARDON HIM

"Simplicity" is a relative term when applied to one's manner of living. There are those to whom it means dinners of not more than four courses, and to others it may signify a bowl of bread and milk on the kitchen table.

An amusing story of James Russell Lowell and an English earl, which is reprinted in the Louisville Times, is apropos of this reflection.

One day Lowell met in Boston an English peer, who had been a great friend of his in London, and he invited the peer out to Cambridge to dinner.

About this he had some misgivings, for he lived very simply, keeping only one servant. He even went so far as to say, as the horse-car jangled Cambridgeward:

"You know, Lord Blank, we are very simple people, Mrs. Lowell and I,"

"Oh," said the earl, "I love simplicity."

This remark fortified and comforted Lowell. It kept up his fortitude even when Mrs. Lowell informed him, when he got home, that there was nothing for dinner but creamed fish.

But his spirits must have sunk a little when, at table, he essayed to help the simplicity-loving peer to the only dish, and the latter said, politely:

"If Mrs. Lowell will pardon me, I think I will omit the fish course."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The Wollaston club will not meet this week, owing to the scarlet fever epidemic.

HOT SCOTCH.

The young wife dipped the ladle into the porridge and smiled inquiringly at the overnight guest.

"Will you have some hot Scotch, Mr. Dash?" she asked.

Dash laughed.

"Hot Scotch? Where is it?" said he.

"Why, here, of course," said the young wife in a perplexed tone. "Didn't you know tha t oatmeal is called hot Scotch?"

"Er—I"—Dash stammered, and then the young husband caught his eye, and he was silent.

"I didn't know it myself till last year," she explained. "I heard George inviting his cousin over the telephone to meet him at the office and have a hot Scotch. I didn't know what hot Scotch was till you told me, did I, George?"

George, very red, answered huskily: "No, my dear."

Laughing at her own ignorance, the lady proceeded to serve the thick, pale hot Scotch.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE LONGEVITY OF BIRDS.

An instance was recorded in a German paper recently of the shooting of a crow with a ring on its leg bearing a date of over a hundred years ago. In the same week a resident in one of the English counties wrote to the ornithological press putting on record the coming of age of his skylark.

That letter brought to light the fact that if twenty-one years is not exactly a common age for a lark it is by no means a unique one. The writer has owned canaries that exceeded the twenty-one years of the skylark, and one bullfinch he possessed reached the age of 16 years. Exhibition or "fancy" bred birds on the other hand are comparatively short lived, and the variety known as the "Scotch Fancy," the canary with the half moon shaped body, is decrepit when two or three years old and is becoming extinct.

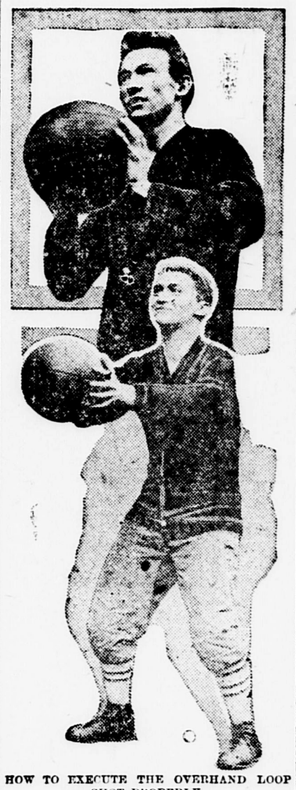
POINTERS TO BASKETBALLERS

Some Timely Advice on How to Guard Your Man.

OFFENSE AND DEFENSE PLAYS.

Importance of Covering Your Opponent—Hints to Forwards—How Many Tricks and Signals Can Be Utilized. Self Confidence Necessary.

The majority of basketball novices who wish to play a guard's position act with the mistaken idea that a thorough knowledge of the way in which to play the position is required before one may be able to play at all. Undoubtedly such knowledge is essential to the star player, but self confidence in a beginner will greatly aid ignorance of the fine points of the game. It may be said without fear of contradiction that self confidence is half the battle when playing guard.



HOW TO EXECUTE THE OVERHAND LOOP SHOT PROPERLY.

[Lower illustration shows how ball should be received when attempting an overhand loop; upper, correct position for start of overland loop shot.]

It is best for a guard to stand in front of his man. But when the center of the opposing team is taller than his own center and more likely to stop the ball the guard should so place himself as to be able in the twinkling of an eye to reach the ball before the opposing forward. Until this rapidity is acquired it will be well for the guard to incessantly bear in mind the sentence, "Stick to your man," for the opposing forward will attempt to get the ball, and the guard, following and tackling him, will prevent him from so doing. By playing in fast company the guard will in a short time learn to follow the ball while tackling his man. At this period he should teach his eyes to measure distance, for the undeveloped eye acts under all sorts of delusions, while the well trained eye sees everything at a glance and can tell just where the ball is going to fall, thus facilitating matters in regard to one's placing.

It is customary for a tricky forward to run around the field before the ball is in play and try in this way to get the guard to tire himself by running after him. In nine cases out of ten the guard will fall into this trap. Then when the game starts he is so utterly exhausted that he is completely in the hands of the forward. He should therefore let the forward dance around as much as he pleases before the ball is in play and stand watching his center men to see just when the ball is to be slapped. Then he should act as the occasion requires. If one of the opposing players receives the ball the guard should quickly find his man and "cover him up"—that is, tackle him—so that if the ball should be thrown to him he will not be able to touch it.

If by a signal the guard should be called into a trick play he should act quickly, so that if the play fails and the ball goes to the other side he can cover his man immediately. The other guard should be prepared in such a case for any slip and cover two men if necessary.

Trick plays whereby his weight and strength can be best utilized depend upon the signals of the team. If the team has no signals he can do his share of the work satisfactorily by reposing confidence in himself, by remembering not to fear his man, by continually keeping him covered up and by taking advantage of every opportunity afforded him to help in winning the game.

TO WAR ON BIRDS.

Declaring that the new year of 1911 is to mark the fiercest struggle in recent years to save American bird life from its human enemies, officers of the National Association of Audubon Societies are perfecting plans to combat the commercial interests that are plotting to break down protective laws in many of the legislatures of forty states. Men and money are to be used without limit by powerful groups of milliners and market supply men to rob their feathered prey of the scant legal protection that has been given them, according to advices that are being received from all over the country. Unless sportsmen, farmers and bird overs rally against this well-organized force of bird butchers, it is predicted, incalculable harm will be done in depleting the nation's game birds as well as the flocks of insect-eaters that protect the crops from pests.

In states where spring shooting laws now save migratory flocks from slaughter at the hands of professional pot hunters, the men who stock the market are reported to be determined to work the repeal of these statutes that were made to shield the breeding birds. Already the game dealers, whose army of spring shooters out on Long Island almost drove to extinction the ducks that flew north along the eastern coast, are known to be plotting the death of the law that checked their activities. In Massachusetts and many other states similar license to raid the resources of game birds is to be sought. For the benefit of the palates of wealthy epicures all laws restricting the storage and sale of game are to be attacked by the market interests, the Audubon officials have been informed.

Most powerful of all the moneyed interests to war on the welfare of the nation's birds the milliners are today known to be organizing a campaign to break down laws that protect the wild flocks that they formerly butchered for their plumage. Since a ban was put upon their traffic in aigrettes and the plumage of useful wild birds in New York State last year, it is acknowledged that he sales of these trophies of wholesale bird butchery have been cut down to a quarter of their former volume. To lay hands once more upon the mother heron and the birds that guard the country's crops, it is said the feather dealers are ready to expend a vast amount of effort and money.

Calling upon the farmers, sportsmen, orchardists, planters and ranchmen of the whole country to take the part of the birds that save their fields and forests from destruction by insect pests, the National Association of Audubon Societies is today preparing to meet the commercial bird killers before every legislature in the land. Special funds are being raised to send ornithological experts to answer the lawyers hired to break down bird protective laws in many states. Organizations of sportsmen as well as bird lovers throughout country are already offering active co-operation in this campaign.

"The birds of America never needed the help of everyone interested in them for economic or sentimental reasons more than they do this year," says T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies. "The moneyed interests that fatten on bird slaughter are alive to their opportunities to shake off the legal restrictions that have been put upon their greed. We are also alive to the emergency, and with the support of the people will fight to the last ditch for American bird life."

DUPLICITY EXPOSED.

A cook who had burned up a piece ofveal weighing four pounds threw it away, and afterwards explained to her mistress, that the cat had eaten the meat.

"Very well," said the lady, 'we will see that directly."

So saying, she took the cat, put it on the scales, and found that it weighed exactly four pounds.

"There, Fredericka," she said, "are the four pounds of meat—but where is the cat?"—Koeiner Tageblatt.

EXCEPTIONS OVERRULED

Street Railway Unable to Get Clear Title of Flats

The full bench of the supreme court overruled on Tuesday, says the Herald, the exceptions of the old Colony Street Railway Company on its petition to register absolute title to flats in Town river, Quincy Point, adjoining its power plant. The land court decided that the railway was entitled to registration of title, subject to an easement of a right of passageway in favor of Hiram W. Phillips, a submarine diver, owner of land on Washington street, bordering the flats.

The right of passageway was created by a deed given in 1834 by the owner of the flats and the adjoining uplands. The court says "the passage may be by walking on the bare flats, by wading when practicable, or by boat when convenient." The court leaves the boundaries of the passageway to be defined later. W. A. Rollins; Walter S. Phillips.

GRAND PRESENTATION OF THE CREATION

Choral Society of Quincy Scores Another Great Success at Music Hall

The work of the Quincy Choral society is attracting not only the attention of the musical people of our own city but of neighboring towns as well for its membership includes several out-of-town singers and there was also a good representation in the audience Tuesday night at Music hall for the "Creation" concert. For this season's study Joseph Haydn's great oratorio "The Creation" was selected and that it was a wise choice was apparent from the fine rendering and the approval accorded it by the large audience assembled.

Beside the chorus of 100 voices and an orchestra of the first twelve players of the Boston Festival orchestra with Mr. John W. Crowley as principal, the Society was assisted by Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams, soprano; Mr. Frederic Kennedy, tenor and Mr. Frederic Martin, bass, all conducted by Mr. Arthur Wonson, who since the formation of the Society has been its conductor and contributed so materially to its standing in musical circles.

The introduction was begun promptly at quarter of eight and from the beginning on through the whole rendering of the oratorio a fine interpretation was given by soloist, chorus and orchestra. "The Creation" is conceded to be Haydn's best known work and also one of the most beautiful oratorios ever written. It abounds in rich melody; solo and chorus parts being equally well rounded and pleasing. As conducted by Mr. Wonson and sung by the Choral society Tuesday evening it won frequent and deserved applause from the audience.

Mrs. Williams who sang her way into the hearts of Quincy people at her first appearance here last winter in the "Messiah" concert was received as an old favorite and given a cordial greeting. Whether in solos, duets or trios she was perfect; her sweetness and purity of tone, perfect control and ease in singing making her interpretation a delight. The Creation music seemed especially adapted to her voice, the solos requiring sweetness and purity of expression.

It was Mr. Kennedy's first appearance in Quincy and he made a good impression. His voice is sympathetic, sure and pleasing. He sings with ease and musical feeling. The tenor part in "The Creation" is not so prominent as in other oratorios but Mr. Kennedy was always adequate and received frequent appreciative applause.

Mr. Martin known to the musical people of Quincy by reputation made his first appearance here and was at once a favorite. A voice of fine quality in every register, well handled, combined with an unusually pleasing personality won for him much applause. His understanding and appreciation of the music was infectious.

In the ensemble there was smoothness, precision and good understanding, showing faithfulness in rehearsals and careful conducting by Mr. Wonson.

It was certainly a finished production. As one looks back over the three years' concerts Elijah given first, then the Messiah and now The Creation the thought comes what will this society undertake next. Nothing seems too ambitious and everything undertaken is well done, creditable to participants and to the musical standing of the city.

MEN'S MEETINGS.

The first Men's meeting of the year at the Y. M. C. A. will be held next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the assembly hall of the association building. This meeting will be in charge of the Walther class of the Wollaston Baptist church. An inspiring meeting is anticipated. Special music will be a feature, and an unusually interesting speaker, Dr. Walter Calley of Jamaica Plain, will deliver the address. Dr. Calley is a man's man, and he will speak upon a man's subject,—"Cobbler or shoemaker?" All the men in Quincy are invited to this meeting, and it is expected that a goodly number will be present to hear some good music and a good live speech.

DIVINITY SCHOLARSHIP.

Henry Houghton Schumacher of this city, who has recently preached at the First church and the Wollaston Unitarian church was this week awarded a scholarship by the faculty of Divinity of Harvard University. Twenty in all were awarded from nine different funds, that of Mr. Schumacher being one of three from the A. W. Buttrick fund. Mr. Schumacher was graduated from Boston University in 1908 with the degree of A. B. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

"The Charleston News and Courier regrets there are not more college men in journalism." There would be if there was more journalism in college men.

Now comes information that Taft aimed at Kavanaugh alone, but, as usual, in his recent broadside the charge scattered over twenty-six states.

The whitewashers say Ballinger should not be fired, and another lot says Lorimer should not be. There is not, however enough whitewash to cover the entire Illinois scandal.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon is striving hard to keep in the spot light, but it is clear that observers treat him like the stuffed specimen of an extinct megatherium in a museum.

Although the exact amount from sales of Red Cross seals during the Christmas period has not been reported, judging from their general use on mail matter, it must have been gratifyingly large. Most of the money from sales in Quincy goes for local work at Mt. Pleasant camp. The fight against consumption is one worth making all the time and the Red Cross seals supply the ammunition.

As a measure of prime importance which will be urged by the President the Secretary of War, the Secretary of State and by members and Senators in both houses of Congress, is the prompt fortification of the Panama Canal, especially at its western end. Defenses against modern dreadnoughts cannot be improvised in a night, and it is impossible to exaggerate the importance of protecting a work upon which so much money has been spent and which is so vital to the protection of the Pacific coast.

DRIFT OF OPINION

The proposed ship subsidy bill authorizes bounties for mail service on American built ships, but limits them to vessels engaged in trade with South American ports. In addition, the measure includes a provision for free registry of foreign built ships, thus conceding a piont persistently demanded by powerful marine interests. The President's attitude toward the free ship proposal is problematical, but he is on record with the opinion that American manufacturers of ships are as clearly entitled to protection as American manufacturers of pig iron or tin plate. As for the plan to limit bounties for mail service to ships trading with South America, it is better than nothing and will probably be accepted if nothing better can be obtained. Its results in a few years would in all likelihood completely justify an extension of the system to the Pacific.—New York Evening Mail.

At this season of prospect and retrospect it is particularly encouraging to note the obvious increase in the world's interest in the spread of the gospel of peace. Coincident with the increase in the costly armaments of the world has come an increased aversion to the insistence on such things as savor of eternal and suspicious mutual vigilance. It is less and less regarded as an idle dream that nations should be ruled by law to the same extent as are individual men, and should relegate battle to the remote realms of history and tradition. War will not perish as by magic from the earth—but is it not reasonable to take account of its slow decay? Slowly, but not less surely, the world has been coming to see the utter absurdity and childishness of its ancient system of settling international differences—a system that savors of nothing so much as the schoolboy stage of existence in the life of a man. —Framingham News.

The death of two of the leading aviators of the world on Saturday, brings very vividly to the mind of the general public that man-flight is a very dangerous undertaking. Both Hoxey and Moisant were very daring in their flights, Hoxey having reached the highest altitude recorded in aviation, and Moisant having become distinguished for his skill and intrepidity. It is said they each encountered what is technically known as a "hole in the air," a vortex caused by a whirlwind, or a fierce circular current in the atmosphere, creating a sort of vacuum in which no aeroplane can retain its equilibrium. It would seem that the special mission of the aeroplane will for a long time be mainly spectacular. There is money in playing to the crowds that will assemble to watch the flights, and the greater the danger the larger the attendance of curious spectators. If the fate of the aviators who have lost their lives shall induce those who remain to be less venturesome, it will be well.—Lynn Item.

The special State commission appointed to investigate and report as to the advisability of the establishment of a State hospital for treating cases of nervous breakdown has reported. The sense of that report is that it is not advisable to create such a hospital, as nervous wrecks are too numerous to be taken care of in one such place. They must therefore go on taking care of themselves. The report of the committee shows what a speedy and racking life modern humans lead. Massachusetts is doubtless no worse than other States in this respect. Nerve breakdowns are not due to irrational and badly managed lives altogether—not by any means. Neither is it the general fact, when a breakdown follows bad management of the nerves, that this mismanagement is something the owner of the nerves is alone responsible for. The drive and speed of work, the stress of competition, the evil conditions under which some work is done, and a dozen other causes combine to wreck people who cannot escape the punishment their environment brings to them. A mental wreck is by no means always to be set down as a mental suicide. Conditions far beyond his power to prevent, unless he throws up his job and perhaps abandons his method of earning a livelihood, may be to blame for his smash. —Brockton Enterprise.

GREAT INGRATITUDE.

The late Mrs. Slara Dewey How of Philadelphia, whose philanthropic work among immigrants made her well known, had a trenchant wit, and one afternoon in Philadelphia, discussing the womans suffrage movement with a clergyman, she said:

"You men are all alike. You all resemble the orphan that Mrs. Stanton and her friends brought up. Mrs. Stanton and a body of ladies from her church, all interested in woman suffrage, once took a little newsboy from the gutter and educated him superbly. They sent him through school and college and finally made a minister of him.

"This young minister the work of their hands, preached his first sermon in their church. That was a proud Sunday morning for the good ladies. They thought they had at last firmly planted among the male sex a strong and splendid supporter. So, in their best bonnets, they filled the church that Sunday morning. They were on tiptoe with expectation. Who could tell but that their charge might preach in their honor a woman suffrage sermon?

"Imagine their emotions when the youth arose in the pulpit, looked calmly and even sternly over the congregation, and announced that his text would be from St. Paul:

" 'Let the women keep silence in the church.' "—Washington Star.

DEPOSITED IN ADVANCE.

A young Scotch farmer, who could not read, came into a small country city directly after an "anti-spitting" ordinance had come into effect, and proceeded to break it.

When told of the nature of his offence he warmly protested ignorance of the law, but was informed that this did not shield him. At the magistrate's advice he pleaded guilty and was fined $6 and costs. This totalled $7.50.

With painful dignity the young kiltie drew forth a wallet and extracted therefrom a $10 bill, which he placed upon the desk and turned to leave the place.

"Wait a moment, my friend," cried the officer. "Here is your change."

'Nae, mon, I wanna tak' it," cooly replied the Scotchman. "I mae wiss to blaw my nase before I lea'e toun."—Judge.

Mamma—"Johnny, haven't I told you that you must not go off this block?"

Johnny—"But, mamma, papa said I must not hit any boy who wasn't as big as me, and they're all littler than me on this block"

HOME FROM CANADA.

Edward Colligan of this city returned from Montreal Monday whither he had gone to spend the Christmas holidays. He expresses himself as highly pleased with his trip and much impressed with the many attractions of the great Canadian city. The climate appeared to suit him to perfection and he greatly enjoyed the clear, crisp air of twenty-two below zero. So pleased was Mr. Colligan with his trip that it is quite likely in the not far distant future he will pay Montreal another visit and it is understood it will be on a very interesting mission.

OLD YEAR MEMORIES.

Let us forget the things that vexed and tried us,
The worrying things that caused our souls to fret;
The hopes that, cherished long, were still denied us
Let us forget.

Let us forget the little slights that pained us,
The greater wrongs that rankle sometimes yet;
The pride with which some lofty one disdains us
Let us forget.

Let us forget our brother's fault and failing,
The yielding to temptation that beset,
That he perchance, though grief be unavailing,
Can not forget.

But blessings manifold, past all deserving,
Kind words and helpful deeds, a countless throng,
The fault o'ercome, the rectitude unswerving,
Let us remember long.

The sacrifice of love, the generous giving
When friends were few, and handclasp warm and strong,
The fragrance of each life of holy living,
Let us remember long.

Whatever things were good and true and gracious,
Whate'er of right has triumphed over wrong,
What love of God of man has rendered precious,
Let us remember long.

So pondering well the lessons it has taught us,
We tenderly may bid the year "Goodby,"
Holding in memory the good it brought us,
Letting the evil die.

ALWAYS LOYAL TO BAY STATE

Lodge Defends His Record at a Mighty Reception

IMMENSE AUDIENCE THRILLED

Senator Himself as Well as Hearers Moved to Tears as He Eloquently Gives an Account of His Stewardship as Servant of the People—His Peroration Ranks as Perfect Gem of Oratory

Boston, Jan. 4.—"I have given my all. No man can give more." With these words Senator Lodge last night "explained," while Symphony hall, packed to the doors, cheered hysterically and old political friends of the senator shouted themselves hoarse with tears streaming from their eyes.

Tears trickled down the cheeks of Lodge as he reached the peroration of an address which lasted precisely an hour. At the close he referred to his long years of service and his loyalty to Massachusetts.

His voice broke as the periods of the peroration thrilled through the great auditorium.

A big overflow meeting followed in Chickering hall. Old campaigners said it was the most remarkable spectacle they ever witnessed in the politics of the state.

Never in these two meeting-places has there been a more pronounced display of emotion. The speech was delivered with much simplicity of manner, but the climaxes fairly swept the audiences from their feet.

Senator Lodge was cheered for seven minutes when he appeared upon the platform at 8 o'clock. Section by section the auditorium took up the cheers until they went around again and again.

His entire speech was devoted largely to a survey of his career in congress and a restatement of his position upon the tariff. He declared that upon the tariff and Canadian reciprocity he had been persistently and effectively misrepresented, but he made no direct allusion to Governor-elect Foss, and apparently did not aim this shaft at the recent campaign which the governor-elect has been waging.

Senator Lodge was the only occupant of the rostrum. He stood there alone, his hand resting easily upon the desk upon which lay the typewritten pages of his address. Parts of it he read with care, and the eloquent parts he delivered with hands outstretched and with his voice penetrating to the furthermost recesses of the hall.

In the peroration to his speech, after declaring that he loved every inch of his native state, Lodge said:

"To this love I add the deep gratitude I feel to the people of Massachusetts for the confidence they have so long reposed in me. No matter what the future may have in store, that gratitude which comes from my heart can never be either chilled or lessened. To be senator from Massachusetts has been the pride of my life. I have put aside great offices, for to me no public place, except one to which I never aspired, has seemed equal to that which I hold, and there was assuredly none which could so engage my affections.

"I have valued the high positions given me in the senate because they meant large opportunity and testified to the trust and confidence of my associates. But I prize them most because they give to Massachusetts the place which is her due in the councils of the nation.

"I have felt greatly honored when the Republican party of the nation placed me at the head of the committee on resolutions and twice made me permanent chairman of the national convention. But I cared for those honors most because I could lay them at the feet of Massachusetts as mute witnesses that now, as in the past, she was a leader among the states.

"Every tradition of our great state is dear to me, every page of her history is to me a household word. To her service I have given the best years of my life and the best that was in me to give. I hope that I have not been an altogether unprofitable servant. I have given my all; no man can give more. Others may well serve her with greater ability than I. I fervantly hope that there will be many such others in the days to come, when her light will still shine before men as it now shines with steady radiance in the pages of history. Others may easily serve her better than I in those days yet to be, but of this I am sure: that no one can ever serve her with a greater love or deeper loyalty."

FIRE PROTECTION.

Fire Commissioner Daly of Boston has appointed a special board to arrange for a mutual aid system between Boston and the nearby cities.

If the scheme is successfully carried out, it will mean all of Boston's alarms will be sounded on small tappers in the surrounding cities and towns and a similar system will extend into Boston's headquarters.

The board appointed yesterday will have weekly meetings at which the possibility of many proposed features will be discussed and a running card of apparatus arranged to be installed in the mutual aid stations, showing instantly just what pieces of apparatus should respond to certain alarms and where they should report.

NEW YEARS WHIST.

The Jolly Sixteen had a New Years party at the home of Mrs. Arthur Merritt, 13 Elm place, on Tuesday evening. At 8 o'clock, the eight couples sat down to two very prettily decorated tables for a substantial turkey supper. At the conclusion of the feast, the members played whist. The unusual thing about the games was that everyone received a prize in the form of a souvenir. We may well believe that throughout the course of the evening the Jolly Sixteen did not belie their name.

WHY IT WAS CHEAPER.

Two poorly clad women were proceeding homeward after the exhilarating gayeties of the mother's meeting, and what more natural than that they should discuss domestic economy?

"Dae ye ken, Mrs. Brown, I'm due ten and nine for gas this quarter, and I dinna ken how I'll get it paid."

"Why not be like me," said Mrs. Green, "and use the penny in the slot meter?"

"But they say its the dearest in the end.' Ye get less gas for your penny, ye ken, than I get for mine."

"Aye, but ye see, it's just this way wi' me—I never pit in nae more than a penny at a time, and, ye see, a lot o' folk comes tae my house at nicht, and whenever the gas begin to gae down I just let on I hinna got a copper, an' there is aye somebody ready to stump up the penny. Oh, yes; it's far cheaper in the end"

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

After what has seemed like a long vacation the Quincy Women's club will resume meetings next week.

Tomorrow morning the executive board meets at the clubhouse and in the evening a Twelfth Night Revel is to be held at Alpha hall under the auspices of the Education committee of the club. It is not for club members alone, but for members and friends who would enjoy a merry-making of this kind, the men being especially welcome. Many are going in fancy costume so that it promises to be a pretty sight to look upon if one does not care to participate in the frolic. The affair has a long list of patronesses and members of the Education committee are receiving subscriptions.

Ex-Governor Curtis Guild is to speak at the meeting of the club on Tuesday afternoon, his subject being "Origin and changes of the Flag of Massachusetts and of the American Flag. The business meeting will be at half-past two as usual the lecture and music at three followed by a social tea.

The exchange at W. G. Shaw's store on Saturday afternoons has been given up because of lack of patronage but the exchange will be found at the clubhouse each club afternoon with a goodly array of home cooking.

The Arts and Crafts committee has arranged a course of four talks to be given on the third Tuesdays of each month, beginning Jan. 16. This is the last opportunity the present Arts and Crafts committee will have to serve the community and a generous response is solicited from club members, waiting list and teachers.

The talks have grown out of the expressed desire of many whose limited time does not permit of lessons, but who feel an interest inthis widespreading movement. The teachers in our schools have also asked to be accorded some privileges in our club life.

For them the hour is placed at four o'clock and the entire program including exhibitions will cover but one hour, closing promptly.

ADAMS CHAPTER. D. R.

Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, met Monday afternoon at the birthplace of President John Adams transacting routine business, followed by the reading of the letters of Flora Adams Darling which the chapter finds most entertaining, they are so brightly written.

The Chapter regretted to learn of the illness of several members who were missed from the meeting. Entertaining and improvements of the old house were discussed and plans made for future meetings and the annual in March.

DAY NURSERY ASSOCIATION.

Bad weather did not prevent a good attendance at the January meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery association on Tuesday afternoon at the Women's clubhouse and all were enthusiastic over past and future plans for the good of the Nursery.

Reports were given of the annual Christmas and New Year party for the children and mothers at the Nursery on Saturday Dec. 31. Everything conspired to make it a particularly joyous occasion. The weather was good so most of the little ones could be present. The beautiful tree was laden with toys and pretty ornaments as well as useful presents of handkerchiefs and mittens. The ice cream, cake and candy were all given by kind friends of the Nursery.

But best of all was the sight of the bright, happy faces of the children singing a Christmas carol as they marched in to see the tree for the first time. Mrs. Loring had prepared a short program of carols, recitations, and songs by the children and their ready response and enthusiastic singing was a delight to all the listeners.

After the presents had been distributed the children were seated at their little tables where after their customary blessing sung sweetly and reverently, ice cream and cake were served by the ladies of the association in charge. A dainty individual cake sent by Mrs. Addison was given to each child to carry home with the bag of candy, orange and gifts.

Donations to the Nursery for the month of December were as follows:

Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, large basket of carrots, cake for the Christmas tree.

Mrs. G. W. Wheeler, box of clothing.

Mrs. Harry L. Rice, candy bags, dolls, toys, pug dog.

Mrs. Herbert Lawton, ornaments for tree, wreaths for windows and piazza.

Mrs. C. C. Hearn, ten pounds of Christmas candy.

Mrs. Frank S. Davis, five pounds candy and cake.

Mrs. Clarence Burgin individual cakes frosted with little candies.

Mrs. Haskins, frosted cakes.

Mrs. Frank A. Page, large box clothing and cake.

Mrs. Eugene Hultman, cake, books and toys.

Mrs. Huntington, toys.

Mrs. James S. Baxter, two high chairs.

Miss A. L. Bumpus, dressed twelve dolls.

Miss Esau, dolls for tree.

Mrs. T. A. Addison, individual cakes with a Happy New Year on them.

Mrs. F. J. Schell, box of new toys.

Arrangements were made for the Valentine dances one on Friday evening, Feb. 10, at Music hall and for the children on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 11.

IN EXCESS OF TAX LEVY

Unusually Good Year for Tax Collections

For the first time in many years the tax collections of 1910 were in excess of the tax levy of that year. The levy was $668,323.13, and the collections $675,608.17, just $7,285.04 in excess. This shows good work on the part of Tax Collectors Carey and O'Hara.

City Auditor Fairbanks furnishes these figures on collections:

Year 1910,..... ..... $675,608.17
Year 1909, ... $592,773.92
Year 1908, ... $526,681.45

WATER RECEIPTS.

The water receipts of 1910 were larger than 1909 but do not show as large a gain as 1909 over 1908. The figures of the City Auditor are:

Year 1910, ... $115,766.57
Year 1909, ... $113,901.86
Year 1908, ... $108,612.56

SEWER RECEIPTS.

Sewer receipts are not on rentals, but from assessments on account of new construction, and no comparison can be made. The amounts were:

Year 1910, ... $14,977.56
Year 1909, ... $17,728.57
Year 1908, ... $13,571.62

NEW GRAND KNIGHT

John J. Cunniff Installed at Head of Quincy Council

The officers of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, were installed Tuesday evening at Greenleaf hall in the presence of a large number of members of Quincy council as well as the officers of Ave Marie council of West Quincy and other visitors.

GRAND KNIGHT CUNNIFF.

The installing officer was Charles J. Brady, district deputy grand supreme knight, who was assisted by John S. Quinn of Mt. Pleasant council as warden, John Shea and Eugene I. Corbett of Magnolia council as grand guards and John Gillhooly of Mt. Pleasant council as marshal. Others on his suite were Dr. W. S. Rowe of James E. Hayes council, Clement Stepper of Mt. Pleasant council.

After the installation there were short addresses by Dupty Grady, Rev. John J. Coan, chaplain of the council, John J. Cunniff the new grand knight, and Lawrence W. Lyons the retiring grand knight. There were also monologues by Fred McDonnell, Songs by Dennis Sweeney Edward Sullivan, and Alfred J. LaCroix. Peter M. Sullivan was the accompanist.

An adjournment was then made to the banquet hall where a supper was served by a Boston caterer.

WORKING TOO HARD.

The owner of the farm had been enjoying himself at the county fair, relates the New York Herald, while his hard-working wife stayed at home to see that the farm suffered no loss in his absence.

"Well, Sarah," said the owner upon his return, "I'm about all tired out. Is the cows in the barn?"

"Yes, long since," replied his wife, barely looking up from the task then in hand.

"Is the hosses unharnessed an' fed?"

"Yes."

'Chickens locked up?"

"Yes."

"Wood chopped for mornin'?"

"Yes."

"Wagon wheel mended an' ready t' start in th' mornin'?"

"Well, then," concluded the exhausted owner, with a sigh of relief, "let me have my supper. I'm goin't'turn in. Farmin's beginnin't'tell on me."

TOO PREVIOUS.

A Richmond woman has in her employ a little darky, Miff Cole. One day Miff became confidential and told his mistress he was "goin' to the cimitery next Sunday."

"But Miff, that's a long walk. You know it is more than five miles."

"Oh, missus, I ain't goin' to walk. I's goin' to ride."

"How is that, Miff?"

"I's goin' in a kerridge t' my uncle's funeral."

All day Saturday Miff could talk of nothing but the approaching affair. Sunday his mistress excused him, and she expected that on Monday she would be regaled with a full account of the funeral. But Miff turned up with a most melancholy face. In answer to her inquiry he said:

'I didn't go, Missus. He ain't dead yit."—New York Herald.

PICKPOCKET REARRESTED

Chicago Police Secure Miller Wanted in Quincy

Chief of Police Burrell received a telegram from Chicago this morning, informing him of the arrest in that city of Henry Miller, alias Ross, who is wanted by the police for picking pockets.

Miller is the man who tried to pick the pocket of Michael Walsh on a Brockton car last August, as it pulled into City Square. During the scuffle Miller's friends got him off the car. A young boy had his eye on him, however, and saw Miller board a car for Houghs Neck.

Inspector McKay made a harried trip to Houghs Neck, where Miller was pointed out to him. After a lively chase over fences and through back yards Miller was arrested.

He was later arraigned in court and after a hearing was held for the grand jury. He furnished sureties, but when the grand jury came in he was among the missing. Word was sent out to the police departments in all large cities, with the result that when he was arrested in Chicago as a suspicious character he was recognized as the man wanted by the Quincy police. It is probable that after getting the necessary papers Inspector McKay will go to Chicago after Miller.

TIME-LIMIT FRANCHISE.

The question of the authority of the board of railroad commissioners to grant a franchise limited as to time for the carriage of freight by street railway companies was again fought out before the board of railroad commissioners Tuesday, says the Globe, the matter coming before the board on the question of approving a franchise granted by the city of Worcester to the Worcester consolidated street railway company for a period of 20 years.

The board has always contended that it has no legal power under the statutes to approve anything but an unlimited franchise, and in this position it is sustained by Atty. Gen. Malone; but City Solicitor Vaughan of Worcester argued before the board Tuesday that the attorney general errs in his construction of the law, and the hearing was closed, with the understanding that within a few days Mr. Vaughan will submit a brief giving his authorities to contradict the attorney general.

OPERA HOUSE FOR KAISER.

Finest and Most Luxurious In World Is Planned.

The German emperor, it is said, is seeking a site in Berlin for the erection of the finest opera house in the world. It will be a luxurious building, and eight of Germany's leading architects are said to be at work upon its plans.

Three thousand persons will be accommodated in the auditorium, while the stage will be 100 feet in width and ninety feet in depth. For the use of the royal family there will be a box capable of seating eighty persons. There will also be spacious dressing and retiring rooms for the use of royal visitors.

The cost of the whole scheme will be very great, so great, it is reported, that the actual sum has been withheld from the German public.

Thales, born 640 years B. C., was the first to note the four distinct divisions due to the position of the sun—viz, the solstices and the equinoxes. He also taught that moonlight was simply reflected sunlight and was the man who first made a prediction of a solar eclipse.

Alexander the Great.

Alexander the Great used his sword against women rather than for them, and one of his favorite pastimes was beating his wives with the flat of his steel blade.

PAINTED FURNITURE.

Recently there has developed a vogue for painted furniture. And nowhere can it be used with better effect than in a young girl's bedroom. There is a youthfulness and daintiness about it that makes it eminently suitable for girls.

It may be enameled in any color to harmonize with the treatment of the room, and it may be further embellished with floral decorations. The latter idea is most effective on white-enameled wooden sets. In a blue or pink room the painted wooden set has almost entirely superseded the brass bed and bird's-eye maple has so long been popular for young girls.

A room recently fitted up for a young girl in a most attractive manner had the paint done in ivory-white enamel, the walls hung in a wall paper of creamy tint and with a rose design, and the curtains of cream-white net, with side curtains of soft pink. The furniture was a wooden set that had lain for many years in the attic. It was first painted with a coat of ordinary paint, then enameled in cream white, then formal little bunches of pink roses were painted on the headboard and footboard of the bed and on the backs of the chairs and on the drawers of the bureau.

Of course a lovely room can be evolved with a pale blue color scheme. The wooden set can be enameled in blue and decorated with the same formal bunches of roses in a delicate pink, or else white china asters. The outside curtains should be of a pale blue, but a white or cream paper in small stripes should be used with furniture painted wholly in a color to get the most artistic effect.

CRETONNE ON CHAIRS.

It is astonishing what some women can do with a few tacks, a hammer, and some lengths of cretonne! The appearance of a room may be entirely changed with a judicious handling of these three by a woman of taste. Not only the appearance of the room can be changed, but the atmosphere can be altered.

In the shops art cretonnes and chintz can be bought at a reasonable price. Chairs and sofas can be made to look like new if these materials are used to re-cover them. This re-covering is not a difficult matter.

Remove the old cover and use it for a pattern. In cutting the new one remember to have the thread run the right way and always in a straight line. If it is necessary to piece the material one should be careful to match the pattern exactly. And one should try to use wide material, as it always cuts to so much greater advantage and obviates the necessity for so many seams. It is better to have the stitching done on the machine, as it makes it firmer.

One of the greatest difficulties to the amateur upholsterer are the edges. If the material used will not turn under neatly one can use guimpe with the most successful results. To apply it use brass-headed tacks; one can easily put them in at regular intervals by using a tape measure.

Dress Hints.

A clothes tree on which to hang unfinished garments is a great convenience in a sewing room.

Collars of garments may be cleansed by dissolving one part salt in four of alcohol. Apply with a sponge and rub well.

Always shrink a new braid before sewing to a skirt; otherwise the bottom of the skirt will become puckered the first time of wearing in a shower of rain.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Fashions Now Settled Until Early Spring.

Indoor and House Gowns Very Artistic.

Fashions jog along comfortably and sensibly now. Women are rather more interested in getting Christmas gifts and preparing for the holiday palate than in making gowns or choosing hats. But it is only a day, not a period, of surcease from clothes. Hardly a woman in the land but who says to herself to-night: "Now that the children have all their clothes, Thanksgiving and Christmas are over, curtains are up, and the house repapered, I will get my Winter wardrobe."

If this were not a fashion article, pure and simple, I should like to wander off into a bypath and discuss women's work during the Autumn. Why is it that we crush all the heroic efforts of the season into the short days between the 1st of October and the 1st of January? Is is never possible to scatter the work over the twelve months? Is it never possible to prepare for the strain by getting ready many of the things during the long days of Spring or the idle days of September? It seems not.

Everything comes at once, as our lives are now arranged. Hunting houses, arranging houses, getting the children ready for school, training new servants, bringing out debutante daughters, rushing madly to and fro with the speed of a comet— such is the life of every American woman during the Fall months.

Therefore it is more than probable that she will take a long breath tonight, look back upon all that has been accomplished at the expense of vitality, temper, and health, and prepare to get herself some badly needed clothes.

There are two comforting advantages about this choice of her to buy clothes now; the styles are settled and she is able to know what she wants; and the worst weather is upon us, and she will need her winter clothes every moment. The woman who chooses her wardrobe the day after Christmas finds also that garments are not nearly so high in price as they were in October.

The best dressmakers and tailors, as well as the shops, are in league with the buyers to rush everything through as fast as they can during the autumn. This leaves them partly exhausted, but ready to do things at a somewhat reduced price in order to keep the trade brisk until the new spring clothes are ordered.

The woman who begins her ordering now has much less doubt on any sartorial subject than she had before Christmas. If she has kept her eyes open she has seen a score of models repeated over and over and she has seen most fashions from the tight skirt to the monk's robe tried out in various materials on varying figures.

If she has not been able to watch the moving kaleidoscope of fashion as it is presented to those who live in stirring centres where all fashions are adopted for a time, she will not have as much experience as others to go on. Therefore this summary of what has been tried and what will be worn may be of help.

It is safe to assert that few new things will be projected until March, but experiments are steadily going on around the fashions that have been accepted. This will widely benefit the woman who gets her clothes now. She will profit by the failures which have been made in the last three months, and by the ingenious and graceful modifications of the original ideas.

The walking skirt of the day has been raised into fame by caricature and cartoon. At it have been aimed most of the shafts of ridicule that have been sent out to hit women's clothes. It bears the brunt of the battle, as the so-called Mery Widow hat did three seasons ago. If it remains in fashion it is probable it will sink into insignificance and pass by without mention.

This is the fate of the huge hat. Few people pay any attention to it, although it is still worn by the hundreds in hamlet and city. True, it is the day of the small hat, but this has not caused the big one to disappear. Somehow the Eiffel Tower hat did not win out over here, although it was widely advertised and brought out by some of the big concerns.

The skirt with the wide band or tight scarf at the foot line is another fashion that did not make any headway in America as it did in Paris. The London women wore it extensively all spring and summer, but few of the Americans tried it, except those who used it in cheap fabrics and were evidently anxious to be conspicuous.

The extraordinarily tight skirt that was started here in October never got very far. It was oftener seen through the pen of the cartoonist than on the figure of a woman; yet out of it was evolved a most graceful narrow skirt that is entirely accepted now by every element, conservative as well as sensational. The hem is two yards wide. there is a seam down each side and usually a wide panel down the back. The latter is left out of a good many gowns and on a number of others it is of silk braid.

The woman who is going to choose a plain coat and skirt suit will find these models convenient and fashionable. She may have the hem wider if she wishes, but she must entirely avoid any inclination of the skirt to flare. Its width must be governed by the size of the hips.

She also wants to choose a skirt with the extension belt. This has been accepted as a settled fashion. It is convenient because it allows women to worry about something else than a separate belt and buckle. The width of this extension is entirely governed by the figure. If one is short waisted, then an inch, or a little more is enough. If one is long waisted the two-and-a-half-inch extension can be easily worn.

If a woman will only exercise common sense, and have a skirt that is not too narrow for walking and not so wide that it will blow in the wind, she will find that this latest model is the most comfortable one she can wear.

When she comes to the point of choosing a coat for this skirt she will be delighted to find that the accepted fashions are so wide and various that she does not have to confine herself to one model. The short coat is established, so she need not worry about getting a long one which may serve for next spring.

If one can judge by the talk in high quarters, coats will get shorter instead of longer as the season goes on. There seems no warrantable evidence that we shall be wearing coats that fall below the hips when the warm weather arrives.

Anyway it always seems like poor judgment to be so economical that one is willing to be out of fashion in a new suit in order that one may be in fashion when the suit is old. Half the women who dress by such a method do not put it so tersely, and they might be astonished if they thought this was the truth, and yet this is exactly what half the women do who buy clothes.

It is not necessary to get the most modish coat of the year to be in fashion. There are many admirable compromises between the ultra-new and the passing-old. The features that one wants to avoid are loose sleeves, double-breasted fastening, notched revers, a padded armhole, and gathers at the shoulder line.

Many coats avoid these features and yet remain smart and reflect the fashion of the year.

It is not important whether one chooses a coat that opens in front or buttons to the neck, although the latter is newer and certainly warmer for winter weather. The one long rever which runs from shoulder to waist, crossing over a short one on the left side, has a good deal of style, and as it only leaves a two-inch V open at the neck, it has its own measure of warmth.

Often this rever is of fur, rough or smooth, according to the fabric. It may be of corduroy, which is more serviceable than velvet on an every-day suit. Concerning the three-quarter sleeves which have appeared in some of the coats, every two people have a different opinion. They are adopted bodily from the Russian peasant costume, and have been widely taken up for house gowns—where they belong—but as a sleeve in an every-day coat for a woman in a cold climate it does not appear to be practicable.

It serves very well in fur in a top-coat which is worn over a long under-sleeve and which is not worn every day and all day in the street. However, if a woman likes this kind especially well—and it is graceful, with its immense cuff of fur as an edge—then she must be sure to have a wide, long muff to cover her fore-arm.

The street suit is not the only part of the wardrobe that is to be bought after Christmas. The indoor gowns, those that serve for social affairs in the afternoon or evening, are usually the ones that are to be thought out during the first leisure moments of the season.

Many women find they can still wear the gowns they have with a little alteration and freshening up, until they have a chance to get new ones, deliberately. The social season is not well on until the New Year, and there are few occasions to display brilliant and effective indoor gowns.

The woman who goes out every night has the money to be prepared for all emergencies, and to her the varying seasons mean little as they concern new clothes, but the woman who takes society as incidental is the one who tries to get the work of the year well started before she decides on the clothes that must be worn to theatres, dinners etc.

The strong fashion for black and white this season is a boon to the woman who cannot have many clothes. The unfortunate ones are those who cannot wear these colors; who only look their best in shades that have life and vitality. No economical turn of mind should impel them toward either black or white if they cannot wear it.

It is a color year as well as a black year, and royal blue, peacock green, mauve, violet, myrtle green, and old-leather brown are still fashionable tones. Nothing new has been introduced this winter. The dyers have not exercised their inventive genius for a year, and they earned the rest, because they have worked like Trojans for the last three years.

Both the gray and brown tones of London smoke are back in first favor, and they make admirable indoor gowns. Their neutral tones can be touched off with gold or aluminum, with apple green or king's blue, and especially are the terra-cotta shades good in combination with the smoke tones.

Here, right at hand, lies a bewildering variety of colors for indoor gowns. The buyer wants to avoid the over-draped skirt, for simplicity is the keynote of the new season . The dressmakers are working more and more toward it. This is always unfortunate for the woman with a small purse, for simplicity means a perfect cut, and such work comes high when done by a professional, and is almost impossible for an amateur.

The Empire skirt, with its almost straight waist seams and its extra broad peasant waist, is the foundation stone for almost all indoor gowns. The transparant bodice is universal, and the new idea which should be easily grasped by women is the drapery of transparent stuff over a colored bodice. The outer layer matches the skirt in color, but the under layer contrasts with it.

For instance an admirable model in black veiling, which is now called marquisette, has a skirt slightly gathered at the waist line and held in to a two-yard measurement by wide, loose folds of satin. There is a definite overskirt pulled tightly across the hips finished with a satin edge, and disappearing under the skirt at the back.

The bodice is made of white Mechlin lace and royal blue satin ribbon, over which is draped the sheer black stuff. This model will serve for any woman who wishes to be conservative, yet at the same time fashionable.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

Bad Colds Some colds are worse than others, but they are all bad. Do not neglect them. Treat promptly, vigorously. First of all, ask your doctor about taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Then do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

HOUSE PLANTS.

Every woman likes to have a few growing things around in winter, not only as a warm contrast to the general bleakness without, but also because plants seem to add a subtle air of refinement to a home.

No doubt a plant is a certain amount of care, but it is a care that no woman who has known it would be willing to forego. After all, it requires only a few moments' attention each day.

The most up-to-date houses and apartments have the temperature too high for ferns, and even the hardy Boston fern cannot thrive in an atmosphere so different from that of its native habitat.

Ferns require to be kept cool and moist, some varieties thriving in a temperature as low as 55 degrees.

See that your plants have plenty of light. A window with a northern exposure is the best possible position for the plants.

It often happens in the arrangement of a room that some plant must be put back in a corner away from the light. Do not let it remain there indefinitely, but change it about from day to day with those in the window so that the amount of light may be equally divided among them all.

Another detail that the home gardener should bear in mind is that every few days a plant should be turned around, thus enabling all sides to grow equally, and the plant to present a symmetrical, graceful appearance.

Ferns are semi-dormant in winter, and so require less water than in summer. However, they must be kept moist at all times, and the amount of water necessary will depend upon the species and upon the temperature of the room.

Stale water in the bottoms of jardinieres and in saucers is injurious. Water the ferns as usual and after about 15 minutes empty out the jardiniere or saucer and dry it.

Fresh water is not to be confounded with stale, however. A florist says that a good way to prolong the life of ferns in steamheated houses and apartments is to keep them constantly standing in water that is frequently changed.

When watering your ferns be careful not to touch the leaves, but see that the roots are thoroughly saturated.

If you soak the ferns in a tub let them drain there for about half an hour after the water has been let out.

If the plant seems not to be doing well and there is no apparent reason for this failure to thrive, then try repotting. Turn the pot upside down, remove the plants, shake off all the earth and repot in a good fibrous loam which is composed of one-third leaf mold. Pack the earth firmly, but not too solidly around the plant and give a sufficient but not a plentiful supply of water.

If you have reason to suspect the new soil is not as rich as it should be, then sprinkle a little bone meal over the top and water profusely.

No plant can be kept healthy in winter if dust is allowed to accumulate on its leaves. To keep the foliage clean, plain tepid water and a mall sponge are all that are required. Sometimes for very delicate foliage a dry syringe is better.

Boston ferns are quite hardy and should do well almost anywhere if not given too much sunshine or kept too hot. Plenty of water and a light rich soil are pra ctically all that are required.—San Diego Union.

ALL-DAY FIGHT AGAINST ODDS

London Anarchists Are Finally Overcome by Fire

REMAINS OF TWO ARE FOUND

May Have Alone Fought Police and Military Who Were Called Out to Dislodge Them From Their Den, Which Is Engulfed In Flames After Steady Stream of Bullets Plays Between the Contending Forces

London, Jan. 4.—All London has been stirred by the terrific battle waged nearly all day yesterday between anarchists on the one side and hundreds of police, infantry from the Tower and artillerymen on the other.

How many of the anarchists took part in the engagement, which was fought in and around a barricaded house in Sidney street in the East End, is not definitely known, but so far, after a search of the debris of the burned structure, portions of only two bodies have been discovered. The remains consist of the trunk and part of the head of one man and a few more charred bones of another.

It is the opinion of some that two desperadoes alone for many hours held 500 police and a large force of military at bay. Thousands flocked from all parts of London to witness the thrilling spectacle—a steady stream of bullets, flashes of fire, smoke pouring from windows, the house in flames, and finally men on the roof shouting defiance and falling into the seething mass below.

A police sergeant, searching for the burglar who only a few nights ago killed four policemen, was reconnoitering around this Sidney street den. Suddenly a shot was fired and the sergeant fell with a bullet through the lungs. A call for police was sounded, and the entire neighborhood was cordoned. People were driven from their houses and a pitched battle began between those fortressed in the house and hundreds of police.

The Scots Guards from the Tower were hastily dispatched to the scene and later a battery of artillery with Gatling guns came at double quick. Their pieces were placed in position, but they did not open fire.

A steady stream of bullets played between the contending forces, and the guardsmen took up a sheltered position, firing volley after volley into the house. Piles of straw were cast in all directions and lighted in the hope that the desperadoes would be smoked out. At last sparks were observed shooting from the windows, accompanied by clouds of smoke, and here and there a jet of flame. A detachment of firemen stretched their hose and threw water on the adjoining structures.

Soon they directed their streams against the stronghold of the desperadoes, which was now burning fiercely. Driven from the lower floors the anarchists made their way to the roof where, it seemed to the watching thousands, several forms could be perceived amid the driving smoke. Then the roof collapsed and with it the men.

At present there is no evidence that the house had any other occupants than the two whose charred bodies were found. Several others, police and civilians, received minor injuries.

POSTAL BANKS IN OPERATION

Americans and Foreigners Respond on Opening Day

MUCH INTEREST MANIFESTED

System Will Help Those of Poorer Class and Will Encourage Children to Save Their Pennies—Interest Rate of Two Percent Allowed In New England States—Features of New System Now Under Test

Boston, Jan. 4.—Postal savings banks, authorized by congress, opened for business yesterday all over the country. Only one postoffice in each of the New England states was selected for the introduction of the system. Norwood was designated to make the first trial in Massachusetts; Bristol in Rhode Island, Berlin in New Hampshire, Rumford in Maine and Montpelier in Vermont.

This innovation in banking or postal business was received with a display of general interest from the first hour. When the doors of the postoffice were opened at Norwood there were several persons on hand with small amounts of cash ready to be deposited, and as the day wore on more came to make deposits or make inquiries, so that this new feature kept the postmaster and his assistant busy all day.

The idea that foreigners would avail themselves of the system, with which they had become somewhat familiar at home, proved to be correct; but the interest was not confined to them. Many American persons opened accounts in the postoffice.

There are two ways of depositing, and both were called into operation. Some patrons had as much as $1 to deposit and for this they were given a certificate. Others, who had less, bought little books with spaces for 10-cent stamps, and a few stamps to put into them. This little book they can bring to the office whenever they have 10 cents to spend for a stamp and when they have filled it they may turn it in and receive a certificate for it like the certificate given for larger cash deposits.

It is this provision for small deposits which is going to be of help to those who have small earnings, and will be an encouragement for the little folks in the town to save their pennies and start bank accounts with them.

It is understood that in establishing the experimental postal savings banks in the various states, the government was guided in its selection by the character and nationality of the foreign people, many of whom are averse to making deposits in local banks and consequently are sending large amounts of money through postal money orders and through the express companies to their home countries. The results in these trial postal banks will be studied carefully by the federal officials so that necessary improvements may be made and the system adjusted and perfected as rapidly as possible.

In the New England states the interest rate of 2 percent allowed by the government is lower than the average rate paid by the local savings banks, but this difference in the interest rate may be offset by the absolute security of deposits made in the postal banks. Throughout New England the deposits in the local savings banks may be taxed for ½ percent in the levies of the tax assessors, but the assessors cannot levy on the deposits in the postal savings banks.

A valuable feature of the system is the privilege accorded of converting the savings into United States bonds issued in denominations of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100 and so on up to $500. These bonds will draw 2½ percent interest. Not more than $100 may be deposited in one month, nor a total exceeding $500 by one person.

BROUGHT UP BY DREDGE

Bones of One of the Victims of Battleship Maine Recovered

Havana, Jan. 4.—The first human remains from the wreck of the old battleship Maine were brought to the surface by a dredge. They consisted of two ribs and some small bones, apparently bones of the hand, and they were carefully placed in a special receptacle to await the recovery of other parts.

The dredge also brought up some three-inch shells, a large quantity of coal and a portion of the coal bunkers, lying apart from the ship, which is considered as possibly confirmatory of the theory of an external explosion under the bunkers.

This, however, cannot be verified without a further examination of the wreck.

Thirty-Four Lives Lost at Sea

London, Jan. 4.—Wreckage reported picked up in the Bay of Biscay leaves no doubt of the fate of the British steamship Axim, which left London Dec. 9 for West Africa ports, with a crew of thirty sailors and four passengers. The vessel was lost in the heavy storms of mid-December.

HANDICAPPED BY DEARTH OF WATER

Firemen Watch Business Section of Town Burn Up

Granville, N. Y., Jan. 4.—The business section of this town, a place of 5000 inhabitants, was swept by fire, with a loss of $300,000. The absolute failure of the water supply at the critical moment, owing to a stoppage of the intake pipe at the reservoir which supplies the village, gave the flames full sway. The local firemen, assisted by volunteers from several nearby towns, finally strung long lines of hose to the bank of the Pawlet river and then pumped a feeble stream up to the scene of the blaze, but their efforts were of little avail.

A sudden shift of the wind saved the residential section of the village, driving the flames back over the burned business section.

The principal buildings destroyed were ten business blocks, three hotels and seven residences. The fire started in the store owned by Barney Lovitz.

LIKE DIME NOVEL ROBBERY

Lone Bandit Holds Up Six Men and Robs Fitchburg Store

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 4.—A masked man, brandishing a revolver, entered the store of John Lavoie last night and held six men at bay while he rifled the cash drawer of $100.72. He then walked out backwards and fled into the woods. Eight policemen were on his trail within half an hour, but failed to catch him.

The stranger, wearing a dark silk handkerchief over his face with slits for his eyes, and a tall felt hat to keep the handkerchief in position, stalked in boldly with the revolver exposed. George Beauregard, the clerk, and five of his friends were telling stories.

Not a word did the stranger utter, but pointed the revolver first at one of the men, and then at another. They all remained motionless.

He walked directly to the cash drawer and took out the money with one hand while with the other he kept pointing the revolver. He faced the men as he retreated. All during the robbery not a word was spoken.

BAIL RAISED TO $12,000

Trial of Mrs. Dodge Is Postponed Until Next April

Guildhall, Vt., Jan. 4.—The trial of Mrs. J. M. Dodge, wife of a former sheriff of Essex county, and the wealthiest woman in Lunenburg, who is charged with killing William Heath, a painter, last September, was called yesterday and postponed until the first Tuesday in April. Her bail was raised to $12,000.

Heath was shot while painting the interior of Mrs. Dodge's home. Mrs. Dodge herself gave the alarm. It was at first thought that he was a suicide, but the autopsy showed that he could not have shot himself.

Mrs. Dodge was indicted. She has never been in jail. So far the government has been unable to supply a motive. Heath was shot with Mrs. Dodge's revolver. This much she admits.

RESIGNS AS STEEL HEAD

Big Corporation Not Likely to Name Successor to Corey

New York, Jan. 4.—William E. Corey, president of the United States Steel corporation, has resigned, and it is likely that he will have no successor. His resignation was announced by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the finance committee of the corporation, to take effect at the pleasure of the directors.

Corey carries with him the best wishes of all connected with the corporation, says the statement issued, and leaves with feelings of loyalty to and friendship for the corporation and all of its interests, but nothing is said of his plans for the future.

SEVERE QUAKE SOMEWHERE

Estimated to Be About 3500 Miles Distant From Washington

Washington, Jan. 4.—Earthquake tremors of a very pronounced character were recorded on the seismograph at Georgetown university last night. They are reported to be the most severe yet recorded at the university.

The vibrations began at 6:41 p. m., and continued until 9:03 p. m. They were recorded with about the same intensity on both horizontal and vertical instruments. The distance was estimated at about 3500 miles.

Illinois Capital a Commission City

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 4.—By a vote of 3699 to 3029, Springfield adopted the commission form of government. This is expected to have an effect upon the elections to be held on this proposition in other Illinois cities.

Torpedo Boat at Auction

Washington, Jan. 4.—The Winslow, one of the first torpedo boats built for the new navy, was sold to P. Hanson of New York, the highest bidder, for $2250.

SHEAR QUEUES IN PUBLIC

Example to Be Set by Wu Ting Fang and Other Leading Chinese

Shanghai, Jan. 4.—One hundred and fifty leading Chinese citizens met at the residence of Wu Ting Fang, one time minister to the United States, and after a discussion decided to publicly cut off their queues on Jan. 15.

Wu Ting Fang is an enthusiastic supporter of this movement. While occupying the post of Chinese minister to the United States for the second time Wu Ting Fang memoralized the throne in favor of the abolishment of the queue.

Mr. Wu said that in his travels he had found the Chinese patriotic and loyal, but that eight-tenths of them either had their queues cut off or wore them coiled on top of their heads beneath their hats. He said also many of them had adopted a western type of dress. They claimed, he said, that the queues were a menace when worn among the machinery in mills and factories.

JURY IN GALLAGHER CASE

Inquiry Into Sanity of Assailant of Gaynor Is Begun

New York, Jan. 4.—An inquiry into the sanity of James J. Gallagher, who shot Mayor Gaynor, was begun before Supreme Court Justice Swayze in Jersey City yesterday. Two common pleas judges also sat on the bench, and after argument by counsel the court ordered that a jury be summoned to consider the case.

If Gallagher is pronounced insane he will be committed to an asylum, but if adjudged sane he will immediately be put on trial on a charge of attempting to kill Street Commissioner Edwards, who was shot while defending Mayor Gaynor.

A jury was quickly drawn and Dr. Hamilton of the Manhattan state hospital testified that the prisoner was "a sane man, legally sane and also from the medical viewpoint." He asserted that Gallagher only shammed insanity.

CASE TO BE AIRED FROM EVERY POINT

Lorimer Affair Beginning to Worry Republican Senators

Washington, Jan. 4.—The Lorimer case will open up with the reassembling of the senate tomorrow. A resolution declaring invalid the seat of Senator Lorimer of Illinois will be offered and a speech made upon it which will inform the country in detail why the opponents of Lorimer allege ten votes in the Illinois legislature, or enough to cut Lorimer's seat out from under him, to have been tainted.

The senate probably will adjourn over until Monday and for almost a month the morning hour will be devoted to an airing of the Lorimer case from every point. At the end of that time it is hoped a vote will be reached.

Since it has become known that Mr. Taft, as Republican and not as president, is insisting upon a thorough examination of the case before the Lorimer report is acted upon, there has been a rush of Republican senators to place themselves on the "moral" side of the issue. It is expected that several will go on record against the seating of Lorimer before the vote is taken.

NEW TRIAL IS DENIED

Death Sentence of Wife Murderer Jordan Is Sustained

Boston, Jan. 4.—The full bench of the supreme court has denied a new trial to Chester S. Jordan, convicted of the murder of his wife, Honora C. Jordan, at their home in Somerville, two years ago last fall.

The attorneys for Jordan based their hope for a new trial chiefly on the ground that William A. White, a juror, who became violently insane a few days after the trial, was actually insane during the trial. Jordan's only hope for his life now lies in the United States supreme court or the clemency of the governor.

MUST PAY $29,000 FINE

Oleomargarine Company Failed to Pay Its Revenue Tax

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Congressman Mosley's oleomargarine company lost in the United States circuit court of appeals in its fight against payment of a $29,600 fine charged against it because of failure to pay the 10 cents a pound revenue tax on oleomargarine manufactured by it.

Mosley's claim was that use of palm oil as a coloring and food ingredient did not violate the internal revenue law.

Explosion Kills Six Miners

Sydney, C. B., Jan. 4.—An explosion of gas caused the death of six miners in a colliery of the Nova Scotia Steel company's mines at Sydney Mines.

Panama Libel Suit Quashed

Washington, Jan. 4.—The supreme court of the United States sustained the lower court, quashing the Panama libel suit against the New York World.

ELECTRODES DID NOT FIT HEAD TIGHTLY

Two Shocks Necessary to Electrocute Wife Murderer

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Samuel Austin, a negro, who killed his wife, was put to death by electricity in Sing Sing. It took two shocks, each of 1800 volts and eight amperes, to kill him. The man had a peculiar egg-shaped head and the electrodes did not fit as tightly as they should have to the forehead.

Austin was accompanied to the chair by Rev. S. E. Jones, prison chaplain. Austin's lips were moving as he entered the death chamber and he seemed to be praying. When he sat down in the chair there was a smile on his face.

Austin was a well known jockey and was 30 years old. He shot his wife at their home in Mararoneck. The night before he shot her he told her that if she did not leave Mararoneck by the following day he would see that she was carried out.

GREGORY REMAINS IN JAIL

Supreme Court Holds That "Trading Stamp" Law Is Constitutional

Washington, Jan. 4.—Holding that the "gift enterprise law" passed by congress for the District of Columbia was constitutional, the supreme court of the United States refused to liberate Walter J. Gregory from jail.

Gregory had been sentenced in the local police court to jail on a charge of violating this law as an agent of the Sperry & Hutchinson company, engaged in the "trading stamp" business in Washington and throughout the country.

WANTS AN OPEN BALLOT

Walker Fears That Otherwise He May Lose the Speakership

Boston, Jan. 4.—One of the biggest fights on the speakership in the history of the Massachusetts house of representatives is promised when that body convenes today.

The unanimous nomination last night of Representative Lomasney as the Democratic candidate for speaker and the threatened disaffection among the Republican members caused an eleventh hour shift in the plans of Speaker Walker.

He announced last night that he would make a fight today for an open ballot, although for over 100 years it has been customary to elect a speaker by secret ballot. The move for an open ballot will be fought by Lomasney.

HALEY QUITS THE CONTEST

Race For Hale's Seat In Senate Is Narrowing Down

Augusta, Me., Jan. 4.—The withdrawal of George F. Haley from the four-cornered contest for the Democratic nomination for United States senator to succeed Senator Hale, and his announcement that the eleven legislators pledged to his candidacy would now favor Charles F. Johnson of Waterville, leaves the situation surrounding the contest much clearer.

When the matter comes before the Democratic caucus tonight it is probable that Johnson will be opposed only by Obadiah Gardner. The expectation is that William Pennell also will withdraw his name before the caucus. It may be that Johnson's will be the only name presented to the caucus.

TWO TOWNS ARE TAKEN

Bonilla Lands In Honduras and Proclaims Himself President

New Orleans, Jan. 4.—Dispatches received here announce the capture of two towns, Truxillo and Rusatan, Honduras, by the revolutionists. Truxillo surrendered to the gunboat Hornet and Rusatan fell without a shot being fired.

Re-entering the country over which formerly he ruled and from which he was practically banished after being deposed three years ago, Manuel Bonilla has proclaimed himself "constitutional president of the republic of Honduras."

Bandit Murdered Fifty Persons

Manila, Jan. 4.—Felipe Salvador, the Luzon bandit chief who was captured last July, was yesterday given the death sentence. He said that he could die only once. Salvador had a record of fifty murders.

Opposes Senate Direct Vote

Providence, Jan. 4.—The present system of indirect election of United States senators was favored by Governor Pothier in his annual message upon being inducted into office for a third time.

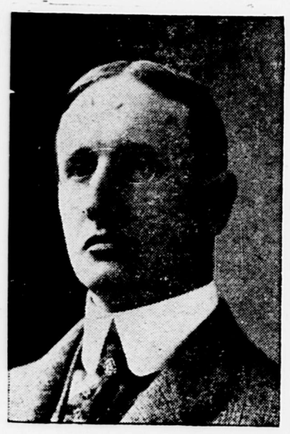
WALKER REELECTED

As President of Massachusetts House

The Massachusetts Legislature met today for organization and attracted greater interest than usual.



The Senate reelected Hon. Allen T. Treadway of Stockbridge as president, and Henry D. Coolidge of Concord as clerk, and Rev. Edward A. Horton as chaplain.

In the House, Martin Lomasney of Boston put up a good fight as the candidate of the Democrats, but Joseph Walker of Brookline was reelected speaker. James W. Kimball of Lynn was reelected clerk and Rev. Daniel W. Waldren of Boston was elected chaplain.

The vote for speaker stood:

Walker	130
Lomansey	99
Scattering	4

The Quincy district is represented in the Senate by Hon. George L. Barnes of Weymouth, a former member of the House. Both the Quincy Representatives were returned to the House, William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier, and both voted for Speaker Walker.

APPEAL DISMISSED.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: An appeal by the Fore River Ship Building Company in a damage suit brought by Mrs. Selma T. Hagg was dismissed today by the supreme court. Her husband, Charles A. Hagg, lost his life from an accident in the forge shop at Quincy, where he was employed. Mrs. Hagg, a native of Sweden, was awarded damages under the Massachusetts law. It was claimed that the Massachusetts statute was of such a penal character that it should not be invoked in the case.

The address of Gov. Foss will be printed in the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

WRESTLING AT COLISEUM

Bob Somerville and Bob Parrington the Winners

The patrons of wrestling saw a very good show at the reopening of the Quincy Coliseum on Tuesday, under the direction of George V. Tuohey, of Boston Arena fame. The attendance far exceeded his expectation, and all was so successful that the shows will be continued every Tuesday evening. Mr. Tuohey spoke briefly before the program opened, telling of his aim to give only the best, and practically the same as in Boston.

The first bout was between Bob Parrington and Young Rover who were closely matched. It took the former 14m., 30 s. to win by a front half Nelson and body throw.

ALLI HASSAN.

The "Big Greek" who was to have met Alli Hassan, the Syrian, did not put in an appearance, but instead an exhibition bout was announced between Hassan and "Young Joseph" his cousin. The latter proved a courageous rival of Hassen, and often won the plaudits of the audience. No throw was secured in the ten minutes. Hassen then gave a physical culture exhibition, showing remarkable control over the muscles of the chest and arms.

The event of the evening was the bouts of Bob Somerville vs. Walter Saxon of Buffalo, to a finish, two in three falls. Saxon proved a lively competitor for Bob, and there was something doing from start to finish. Each in turn had the advantage, but quick as a flash the situation was reversed. Bob was almost floored at different times but won the first bout in 19 minutes by the relinguished toe hold.

In their second bout after intermission, both won frequent applause. At the end of 17 minutes Bob won by a cross throw.

In the audience was Chief of Police Burrell, Inspector McKay, and many well known citizens. A good card was announced for next Tuesday evening.

STARTS WITH A VICTORY

Quincy High Defeats Taunton High 27 to 19

After a month's absence from the floor, Quincy High school reopened her basketball season by defeating Taunton High in a well played game on Tuesday with the final score 27 to 19.

The Chapman brothers with four baskets apiece to their credit were the star performers for Quincy, although Manning with his strong defensive work and three baskets chalked up opposite his name, deserves much praise. Prout played a good game at centre, and shared with Lockhart of the opponents, the honor of scoring by a difficult one hand shot.

Arthur, the regular centre, was unable to be present on account of sickness, and thus the Quincy team was weakened to some extent.

J. Hall, the right forward on the Taunton team, was practically the whole thing on his side. In addition to shooting five baskets from the floor he scored five goals from fouls, and in general played a good scrappy game. There was much fouling on both sides, and the Quincy men showed their lack of practice by indifferent passing and scrapping for the ball among themselves. This last was eliminated to some extent in the second half, when the team came out in white jerseys, which were in marked contrast to the orange and black of the Taunton men.

Quincy played a scrappy game and fought all the way through. Their opponents have probably had more opportunity to play together this season, and thus put up a more finished style of basketball, although they were unable to win.

The summary:

QUINCY	TAUNTON
Manning, rf	lb, Lockhart
H. Chapman, lf	rb, J. Anthony
H. Prout, c	c, Irving
M. Chapman, rb	lf, H. Hall
Harmon, lb	rf, J. Hall

Score—Quincy, 27; Taunton, 19. Goals from floor—J. Hall 5, H. Chapman 4, M. Chapman 4, Manning 3, Prout 1, Lockhart 1, J. Anthony 1.

Goals from fouls—J. Hall 5, Manning 3. Referee—R. Bates. Umpire—Hickey. Scorer—Rice. Timer—Robinson. Time—20 and 15 minute halves. Attendance—150.

The second team was ready for their game with the Weymouth 1st, but the latter failed to put in an appearance. The Quincy second team consists of the following men: R. F.—L. Chapman; L. F.—Larin, C. Trask; L. B.—H. Johnson; R. B.—H. Sutermeister.

The game with Oliver Ames school on Friday is an important one and many of the fans believe that a victory in that game will be a big boost toward the championship of the state. With two days to digest the experience of this first game, the team should be in first class condition for Friday's contest.

HOW TO KNOW THE TREES.

There is an auctioneer whose "gift of gab" and native wit draw many purchasers to his sales. But sometimes he is the subject rather than the cause of amusement.

The man's name is O. A. Kelley. Not long ago he had to sell, among other things, a lot of pine logs, and the day before the sale he went over them and marked the end of each log with his initials.

On the day of the auction an Irishman came along and immediately noticed the logs with the letters on them.

"O. A. K.," he read, loud enough for all round to hear. "Begorra, if 'tis not just like Kelley to deceive us into belaving thim pine logs are oak!"

"Pa!"

"Well, son, what is it?"

"This mythology book speaks of the husband of Venus being a lame god. Which one of the Greek gods was lame?"

"Why—er—Olympus, of course. Use your head a little and don't ask so many questions!"—Cleveland Leader.

LASKER TO VISIT AMERICA.

Chess Champion of World Will Exhibit His Skill In Many Cities.

Dr. Emanuel Lasker, the world's champion chess player, who has just concluded his championship matches with Janowski, intends to sail for America the second week in January. He plans to spend at least six months on this side of the Atlantic, during which time he will give exhibitions in many of the chief cities of the United States and Canada. The visit will afford American chess experts an opportunity to meet the man who is acknowledged to be the greatest living master of the game.

Dr. Lasker did not need his latest victory over Janowski to stamp him the master of the game. His defeat of the great Parisian player only showed to the world his marvelous skill and ingenuity.

As a mere boy Dr. Lasker was greater at chess than most players and early learned to calculate results far ahead of the game. His first efforts were made when he was twelve years old. His first tutor in the game was his brother, whom he readily outstripped. In 1889 he entered the Haupt-Turnier, at Breslau, and surprised his friends and competitors by carrying off all the honors. Since that time he has been the admitted master of the science. In 1895 he scored a great triumph at St. Petersburg, in which he defeated Steinitz, Pillsbury and Tschigorin. The following year, at Nuremberg, he won the International championship, defeating all the great players of the world.

TITLE MEET FOR PHILLY.

Quaker City May Be Awarded A. A. U. Championships of 1911.

With the appointment of George F. Pawling, president of the Middle Atlantic association of the Amateur Athletic union, to the championship committee at the annual meeting of the A. A. U., Philadelphia is practically assured of the American track and field championships in 1911. Mr. Pawling takes the place of Thomas F. Hickey of San Francisco.

This committee has the awarding of all national championships. Baltimore, Chicago, Pittsburg and a half dozen other cities were applicants for the championships, but after the field was thoroughly canvassed and Mr. Pawling received his appointment the only contenders for the championships were Philadelphia and Pittsburg. Unless great opposition is stirred up the championships surely will be held in Pennsylvania.

Jockey Miller Home From Germany.

Walter Miller, former champion American jockey, is home from Germany, where he rode successfully this season. Although he began riding only six years ago, he is worth $200,000.

Only a Few .300 Batters.

Since 1872 of 4,000 major league baseball players only 450 have batted .300.

FUTURE SPORT EVENTS

George Goulding of England, the champion walker of the world, will compete in New York Feb. 4.

The 1911 automobile race meet for the so called national stock car championships will again be held at Elgin, Ill.

The annual meeting af the United States Lawn Tennis association will be held in New York the first week in February.

Jockey Butwell has received an offer to ride in Germany next season and is giving the matter serious consideration. Henry Spencer is also thinking of training a string in France next year.

Great Britain may send an all star cricket eleven to this country and Canada next summer. The combination will include several of England's most brilliant cricketers, and the visit is awaited with much interest.

The crews of the University of Pennsylvania and the Naval academy will row on the Severn next spring. The date has been fixed for May 6. The varsity eights will meet at two miles and the freshman boats at one and one half miles.

PARIS LOSES EXQUISITE.

Andre Fouquieres to Decorate Court of Kapurthala.

Paris, it is said, is to lose one of her chief ornaments. The modern Beau Brummel of France, the most exquisite of twentieth century dandies, the spoiled arbiter of the Paris drawing room and the country house, is about to leave the scenes of his triumphs. M. Andre Fouquieres, to whom this inadequate description applies, has succumbed to the blandishments of the maharaja of Kapurthala.

Not long ago the maharaja robbed Europe of one of her most beautiful daughters in the person of a Spanish dancer whom he placed high among his wives. And now he is going to take away one who in inventing eccentricities of dress and above all in the management of a cotillion defied competition. The maharaja has said to him, so rumor has it:

"You have nothing more to do in this Parisian rabble of society that has lost all respect for hierarchy and for delicacies of tone. You are much too distinguished and refined for France, and I ask you to come with me to preside over and organize the fetes that will be given at the marriage of my daughter."

And the invitation has been accepted.

Rosa Bonheur's Humble Lover.

When asked why she had never married Rosa Bonheur always answered: "Nobody ever fell in love with me. I have never been truly loved." More than one man, however, really worshiped her. But she inspired such deep respect that no man seems to have dared to reveal his feelings to her. There is a curious example of this fact, taken from the humble walks of life. On several occasions Rosa Bonheur had done service for a workingman who throughout his life spent his savings in buying engravings of her principal pictures and photographs of herself. His simple dwelling was a temple to her kindness. He described himself as "the earthworm in love with a star." The person here referred to—E. A. Bautray of Clermont-Ferrand—tells me that Rosa Bonheur once asked him why he was not married, and he replied by asking her the same question. Here was her answer: "Well, sir, it is not because I am an enemy of marriage, but I assure you that I have never had time to consider the subject."—"Reminiscences of Rosa Bonheur."

Horrors of Bokhara.

The terrible deeds that once made Bokhara a byword are now prohibited by the Russian government. Prisoners are not permitted, for instance, to be dragged through the streets by galloping horses. Nor are they thrown from the top of the high tower called the Minar Katan. This was the usuall punishment meted out to evildoers in the old days. Watched by thousands of spectators, the poor wretches were flung from that giddy height on to the flagstones beneath.

Bokhara has many chambers of horrors, unwholesome for western eyes to see and the description of which would certainly be unfit for publication. Perhaps the most horrible of these is a pit where prisoners were tortured by vermin, which were so numerous and ravenous that in the absence of human prey they were fed on chunks of raw meat.—Wide World Magazine.

Very True.

The Easterner—Your new town is all right, but you have very poor fire protection.

The Westerner—Well, Rome wasn't built in a day.

The Easterner—Yes, but she was about burned down in a day.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Attempting Too Much.

He sang a tender ballad,
And every eye was wet—
"When you know you're not forgotten
By the girl you can't forget"—
But when he tried a higher note
Than any heard before
That brutal crowd did whoop aloud
And pound upon the floor.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO SHIPYARD MEN ON WAY TO WORK

THE BEST ROUTE FOR CANAL TO NEW YORK

Quincy Board of Trade Favored by United States Engineers With First Reports

Hingham Harbor to Be the Boston Terminus

Frank Fessender Crane, the commissioner of water front and waterways of Quincy, read a lengthy report on Wednesday evening at the Board of Trade meeting from Col. Frederic V. Abbott of the United States corps of engineers, recommending as the best route for the proposed intra coastal waterway between Boston and Texas, a canal starting from Boston harbor at Hingham, and passing through Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover, Pembroke, Halifax, Middleboro, Raynham and Taunton, where it would enter the Taunton river and thence to Narragansett bay.

The engineer in his report says that a practical route between Boston harbor and the Taunton river has been found which does not cross any trunk line of railroad. Four branch lines are crossed, however, which will require three double track drawbridges and one single track bridge. The estimates of cost over the route have been made for a canal having its summit level of about 35 feet above mean low water with a flight of two locks of 17 1-2 feet at the Boston end and one of 15 and one of 20 at the Taunton end.

The project will lessen the time of transit for steamers between Boston and Point Judith about two hours, and for barges in tow of about 13 hours and in addition to this it will eliminate the danger of about 9 miles of coast navigation along a coast line noted for storms, fogs and rocky shore.

The distance between Boston and Point Judith by the canal is about 98 miles, around Cape Cod about 187 miles, and through the new Cape Cod canal about 118 miles. Of the 98 miles about 34 will be through the open water of Narraganset Bay 52 miles across the state of Massachusetts, and 12 miles through the deep channels of Boston harbor. A steamer making 15 miles per hour and allowing for lockage will have a transit time of about 11 hours. For barges having a speed of 6 miles the transit time would be about 18 hours.

A sea level route has also been found between Narraganset Bay and Plymouth harbor which does not cross any trunk railroad line. Three branch lines are crossed however necessitating three double track drawbridges. The Taunton-Plymouth route would shorten the time of steamers a little over 3 hours and barges in tow 12 hours, but would necessitate outside navigation through exposed waters for 30 miles from Plymouth to Boston Light.

The attitude of the government toward works of this kind demands that no project shall be undertaken which does not insure a reasonable return to the people of the United States for the expenditure involved, and any project which does not carry convincing evidence of merit to the minds of the Senators and Representatives in Congress is unlikely to secure an appropriation for construction. The character and volume of traffic to pass through the canal should be shown and reasons given for the diversion of traffic from present established routes, the probable diminution of cost of transit, including terminal charges, saving of time, etc.

It is possible that the establishing of such a canal through Massachusetts would develop some special manufacturies and other industries by reducing the cost of raw material and manufactured products and might tend to lower the present freight rates. Passengers and light freight between New York city and Boston and intermediate points might also utilize a suitable canal.

While the Boston-Narraganset Bay section may not have sufficient merit to warrant its construction independent of other links of the Intra-Coastal waterway it seems that its value to the territory through which it would pass would be greatly increased by the construction of the section next immediately south, insuring a smooth water connection with New York city and all points on Long Island sound.

It is quite impossible to compile data showing the commercial necessity of work of this magnitude and importance without the cooperation of the organized bodies and of the individuals interested in commercial development of the immediate locality as well as the country at large. Statements are therefor requested as to the probable prospctive commerce, and the commercial necessity for the construction of such a canal.

You are earnestly requested to give this subject the consideration which its importance merits and to assist in the efforts of the board to arrive at a proper solution of the questions involved. To this end a written statement is desired showing what width and depth the canal should have and the reasons for the recommendations you make should be stated.

Accompanying are tables showing the estimated cost of a water way of various cross sections between Narraganset Bay and Boston. A lock canal, 35 feet summit, with bottom width of 200 feet from Hingham harbor to Taunton river would cost as follows: 18 feet deep, $29,590,000; 25 feet deep, $40,047,000. The cost of annual maintenance, capitalized at 4 per cent would in either case be about $20,000,000.

BARGE LOAD OF TEN STRUCK BY ELECTRIC CAR

The Driver, Warren B. Hollis, Fatally Injured at Newcomb Square, About 6.40 This Morning

LIST OF INJURED.

Warren B. Hollis, driver of the barge, Commercial street, Weymouth.

Robert Donnelly, assistant foreman of the X department, Washington street, Weymouth.

James Hollywood, foreman of blacksmith's shop, Liberty street, East Braintree.

John McNeil, head carpenter of the H department, Washington street, Weymouth.

Chessman Keene, machinist, Front street, Weymouth.

Gilman Keene, father of Chessman, machinist, Front street, Weymouth.

Otis Hollis, machinist, Baker avenue, Weymouth.

Aubrey Williams, machinist draftsman, Washington street, Weymouth.

Melville Wood, loftsman, Walnut avenue, East Braintree.

David Godfrey, ship carpenter, Sterling avenue, Weymouth.

One man was probably fatally injured and several others cut and bruised this morning when a special car from West Quincy, containing a number of Fore River workmen ran into a barge containing other shipyard workmen at the corner of Quincy avenue and Shaw street, at Newcomb square.

The car was in charge of Conductor Neil McDougal and Motorman B. W. Litchfield. It left West Quincy at 6.25 this morning for the shipyard. The car was going down the hill at Newcomb Square, and at the time of the accident was near the point where it should turn off onto the private track leading into the Fore River yard. There is quite a steep grade at this point and the rules require that the car shall move slow and be under perfect control. Just after passing the store of J. A. S. Pierce on the corner the barge of Charles J. Hollis of East Braintree drove onto the track.

According to the motorman the barge appeared on the track without warning and was directly on the track less than fifteen feet away when he saw it. The brakes were applied, but before the car could be stopped it struck the forward wheel of the barge and tipped it over, throwing it against the drinking fountain and smashing it almost beyond repair.

The barge is usually driven by Charles J. Hollis, but this morning he was a little under the weather, and it was being driven by his father W. B. Hollis, who is 75 years of age. In the barge at the time were nine men all of whom were thrown out. Mr. Hollis was also thrown and struck on his head on the frozen ground.

He was taken to the Quincy City hospital where it was found that he had sustained a fracture of the skull and intercranium hemorrhage. It was given out by the physicians that his recovery was doubtful.

Of the other men in the barge, James Hollinwood received cuts by glass on the face and head and he was treated at the Fore River hospital by Dr. Blanchard.

In the meantime some of the others had gone home, and a little later Charles Hollis drove to the scene in a hack and took the others to Braintree, where their injuries were attended by Dr. Bullock. These men were Aubrey Williams, cuts about the ehad; Otis Hollis, injuries to the back and shoulder; Gillman Keene and Chessman Keen, injuries about the head. The injuries to these men were none of them of a serious nature being largely bruises and cuts caused by broken glass.

Others who were more or less cut and bruised were Robert Donnelly, David Godfrey and John McNeil and Melville Wood. All of these men with the exception of Hollinwood and Wood live in Weymouth. The two latter reside in East Braintree. It was reported, however, that none of their injuries were of a serious nature, consisting of a general shaking up and bruises by falling on the frozen ground.

The barge which was thrown against the fountain was badly smashed, and probably beyond repair. The horses on the barge escaped without injury.

The motorman claims that he was using due care, and that the car was under perfect control and that the brakes were on. The rules oblige him to come to a full stop just before taking the switch leading into the Fore River yard and he says that he was coasting slowly at the time. He did not see the approaching barge until it drove into the track directly in front of him. He also claims that he was sounding his gong.

The men on the barge claim that they did not hear any gong sound, and the first that they knew was when the car struck them and they were sent flying through the air.

LATEST.

Warren B. Hollis, the driver of the barge, who was the most seriously injured in the accident, passed away at the City Hospital shortly before noon without having regained consciousness.

Mr. Hollis was one of the oldest residents of Weymouth where he has conducted a livery stable business at 58 Commercial street for many years. He also ran a line of carriages from the Weymouth depot. Since the establishment of the Fore River plant at Quincy Point he has run a barge from East Braintree, to convey workmen too and from their work. Of late, however, his son has driven this barge. This morning owing to a slight illness, the son remained at home, and his father drove the barge.

CATHOLIC CLUB WHIST.

A largely attended and very enjoyable whist party held under the auspices of the Quincy Catholic club in aid of its charity fund was held Wednesday evening at Colonial hall. Twenty-five tables were in play and the contest was a keen one. At the conclusion of two hours' play frappe was served. The committee in charge were assisted by Miss Emily Dinegan, Miss Helen Brogan, Miss Carmel Brogan, Miss A. Reardon and Miss A. Heaney. Hansome souvenirs for those having the best scores were given to Miss Louise Halloran, Miss Margaret Reveney, Mrs. Thomas H. McDonnell, Mrs. Elizabeth Neary, John Hart, Richard J. Howard, Thomas H. McDonnell and Henry G. McDonnell.

BRIDGE IMPROVEMENTS.

The trustees of the Fore River bridge met in the office of Mayor Shea this morning, when action was taken toward making the necessary repairs to the bridge, which have been authorized by the Harbor and Land Commissioners.

The trustees voted to have plans and specifications prepared for the repairing of the bridge. It was also voted to advertise for bids for rebuilding the centre pier also for painting the structure.

Another matter that was brought up was the cost of opening and closing the draw of the bridge, which is now done by hand, and is necessarily a slow process. It was voted to look into this matter, and ascertain the cost of putting in the necessary equipment that the draw may be opened and closed by electricity.

BOARD OF TRADE REVIEW WORK OF YEAR

Well Pleased With All That Has Been Accomplished Along Many Lines

New Court house; Electricity and Gas Rates Reduced

As summarized by President Eugene R. Stone, the work of Quincy Board of Trade during the year 1910 was one of achievement. In his address at the annual meeting on Wednesday evening he congratulated the association upon the improved financial condition the success of the petition started for a new Courthouse, the work done relative to abolition of grade crossings, the interest awakened in waterways and the development of Quincy water front, the move for double tracking of Washington street, the work for Metropolitan parkway extension, for a municipal dock, for better freight facilities, for better train service, for public landings,, for reduction in rates of electricity and gas, for interest taken in the grand Fourth of July celebration, etc. He gave great credit to the committees which had been interested in these improvements. He predicted, however, that 1911 would be the banner year for the Board of Trade.

PRESIDENT STONE.

It was the annual meeting of the Board of Trade and was largely attended. Secretary Stetson reported that twelve regular and one special meeting had been held during the year. The membership was 106.

Charles H. Johnson, the treasurer, reported receipts and expenditues of about $575, and a small balance in the treasury. If all dues were paid, and all bills paid, there would be a balance of $100. The auditors reported the accounts correct.

A double list of candidates were presented, but there were several withdrawals, and the following officers were elected almost unanimously:

President—Eugene R. Stone.
Vice President—William P. Thompson.
Secretary—Arthur W. Stetson.
Treasurer—Charles H. Johnson.
Directors—John R. Richards, W. H. Teasdale and A. L. Whitman.

Refreshemnts were served at 9 P. M. by a committee headed by Charles C. Foster.

Frank Fessenden Crane, the representative of the Board of Trade to Rivers and Harbors Congress at Washington reported at length. He said Quincy and Springfield were the only Boards of Trade in Massachusetts to be represented, and that the State had one of the smallest delegations. All states were represented and the convention was a great success, being very busy and enthusiastic. He told

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Every little while there is an announcement of a treaty between this and some other country for parcels post, the latest being with Brazil. The most interesting and the one long looked for is that of parcels post of these United States.

Brockton seems to have a mayor of the right sort. Mayor Harry C. Howard has issued a statement to the effect that there will be no more "Sacred" concerts or moving picture shows open Sunday nights in Brockton.

It is doubtful if the Mikado's government knows anything about the alleged wireless stations that certain Japanese are said to have built on the lonely coasts of the Philippines; or that Japanese merchants are smuggling arms and explosives to our always more or less rebellious Philippine dependants. What a stupid contratemps it was anyhow, of the Spanish war for us to have forfeited Cuba and to have fastened the Philippine milestone around our neck.

Representative Longworth of Ohio has come back to Washington with the complete draft of a bill creating a tariff commission, and it is said that Payne, Aldrich, Dalzell and the rest of them are in favor of such a commission and that legislation on the subject will be completed before the 4th of March. The bill as drafted creates a commission of five members each with a salary of $7,500 and of the membership not more than three are to be of the same political party. The central office is to be in Washington, but the commission is empowered to meet anywhere and is given wide powers of collection and collation of facts. The bill authorizes the commission to go into the cost of production of all articles and to investigate the wages paid at home and in foreign countries, also the prices paid for raw materials, whether imported or domestic. The maximum and minimum clause of the present tariff law is reenacted in the bill. The members of the commission are to be appointed by the President.

BY HYPNOTIC POWER

Pretty Girl Believed to Have Been Lured From Her Home

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 5.—Believed to have been lured away from home under hypnotic influence and stories of immense wealth, Jessie M. Gearhardt, aged 15, the pretty daughter of I. H. Gearhardt, has been missing since New Year's day.

On the pretese that she was going to the Arcade depot to bid farewell to a friend, the girl left home Sunday morning and that was the last time her parents saw her. After conducting a vigorous search, her mother appealed to the detectives for aid in locating her.

The mother told the detectives that she believed the girl had been induced to leave her home by Harrie Wilson, a Boston man who had frequently called on her during the past few weeks.

Detectives who are working on the case think Wilson's real name is Harry Murphy. They say he has hypnotic powers to a pronounced degree. Friends of the family fear Mrs. Gearhardt will lose her mind through grief unless her daughter is found soon.

SUPPOSED BANDIT CAUGHT

Had Escaped From Police Station While Chief Was Absent

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 5.—After being arrested and escaping from the Leominster police station while Chief Laselle was absent, Orvilla Charron, aged 28, was recaptured and brought to this city to answer to the charge of robbing George Beauregard, manager of John Lavole's grocery, of $120, at the point of a gun.

The robbery was committed by a man in the attire of a western bandit, and with his face masked. The police say that Charron has admitted the act, and he will also be asked if he knows anything about the holdup and robbery of Miss Carrie Jobes of Leominster on the streets of that town.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

Discussed by Four Speakers at Wollaston Alliance

A neighborhood meeting was held on Wednesday by the Ladies Aid Alliance of the Wollaston Unitarian church, guests from twenty-five Alliance branches being invited. The church was well filled with delegates from Quincy, Lexington, Canton, Neponset, Melrose, West Roxbury, North Easton, Dorchester, Braintree, Brockton and Brookline in addition to the members of the local branch.

The morning session opened at 11 o'clock with a devotional service led by Mrs. Frank A. Page acting president of the Wollaston Alliance. This meeting was devoted largely to a description and discussion of the various activities and methods of work in force at the different branches, special attention being paid to the post office mission and cheerful letter work.

At noon the delegates adjourned to the vestry where a dainty luncheon of cold meats, escalloped oysters, salads and other delicacies was served under the direction of Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, ably assisted by a committee composed of Mrs. George R. Thompson Mrs. Alfred H. Richards, Mrs. George Weston, Mrs. William A. Bense, Mrs. William Burrell, Mrs. George B. Damon, Mrs. Clifton H. Baker, Mrs. Marion Thompson, Mrs. Winthrop Southworth Mrs. Edward J. Cummings, Mrs. Roderick D. Hall, Miss Jennie C. Foster and Mrs. James S. Whiting.

At the afternoon exercises which opened at 1.30 the subject "Personal responsibility" was dealt with by four speakers coming from Wollaston and out-of-town.

The first speaker, Miss Bertha Langmaid of Boston said that, inasmuch as the strength of chain is known by its weakest link, so in Alliance work if we but have a greater sense of personal responsibility there is no limit to what may be accomplished.

In her paper, Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney of Wollaston was, as usual most interesting. She spoke largely of responsibility as regards the Sunday School which she considered the greatest power in the education and development of character. Mrs. Gurney bespoke more beauty and comfort for Sunday school rooms, and urged that, instead of being put to the varied uses they generally are at present, they be used more as a place to commune with God.

Mrs. Harry A. Stevens of Wollaston spoke chiefly of the objects of Cheerful Letter work, and said that each should feel a personal and individual responsibility in this branch of the Alliance endeavors.

Speaking most interestingly of Alliance work in general, Mrs. W. O. Witherell of West Roxbury, the last speaker, gave many personal references in regard to the same.

During the afternoon those present were favored with vocal solos by Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade of Quincy accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

Announcement was made of the meeting to be held by the New England Associate Alliance in Arlington on Thursday, January 19th.

DEATH OF SENATOR ELKINS

Members of Family at His Bedside When the End Comes

Washington, Jan. 5.—Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia died at his home here about midnight.

Early last night, when the senator had a sudden sinking spell, it was felt that death was near, and members of his family gathered about his bedside.

The senator had been ill for several weeks, and despite the best of medical care, had been gradually getting worse from the day he was first stricken.

LAW MOVES SWIFTLY IN GALLAGHER CASE

Assailant of Gaynor and Edwards Gets Twelve Years

Jersey City, Jan. 5.—James J. Gallagher was found guilty of intent to kill Street Commissioner Edwards of New York and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment. Gallagher wounded Edwards at the time he shot Mayor Gaynor.

Jersey justice, proverbially swift, moved with celerity in Gallagher's trial. The jury was chosen in a little over ten minutes, two of the jurors selected having acted on the jury that declared Gallagher sane. Assistant Prosecutor Vickers opened for the state, taking exactly four minutes. The employes of the steamship company told how Gallagher came to the steamship and inquired for Mayor Gaynor. Their testimony was taken in five minutes and Edwards took the stand and told of the shooting and how he went to Mayor Gaynor's assistance.

Skeletons of Horned Man-Monkey Pigmies Are Unearthed

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 5.—What are described as skeletons of a strange tribe of horned man-monkey pigmies are being exhumed from an ancient burying ground discovered in the delta of Topango canyon, near Santa Monica.

Forty-four skulls and almost as many complete sets of torso and limb bones have been recovered, together with strange antiquities apparently used by the tribe as weapons, and many stone mortars.

The tribe is thought to have been the last of the kind, and it is asserted by a legend of the oldest Spanish families that Aztec Indians exterminated them upon their invasion into Southern California.

TWO YEARS FOR KROL

Judge States Why Counterfeiter Gets a Light Sentence

Boston, Jan. 5.—Anton Krol of New Bedford, after pleading guilty in the federal court of counterfeiting $2 bills, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1 and to serve two years at hard labor in the federal prison at Atlanta.

In passing sentence Judge Dodge said that he was imposing a light sentence because Krol pleaded guilty and surrendered the plates from which the bills were printed. Five other defendants charged with counterfeiting are awaiting disposal of their cases.

OFFICERS ARE CO-DEFENDANTS

Anti-Trust Suit Is Brought Against Steamship Lines

WHAT GOVERNMENT CHARGES

Thirteen Trans-Atlantic Companies Operating Under "Alleged Unlawful Combination or Conspiracy"—Said to Have Forced Russian-American Line to Make Terms With Conference—Controls Steerage Traffic

New York, Jan. 5.—The federal government brought suit here, under the terms of the Sherman anti-trust law, in the United States circuit court of the southern district of New York, against thirteen of the principal trans-Atlantic carriers, estimated to control 90 percent of the steerage traffic, worth to them $55,000,000 a year. Twelve officers of the defendant companies, all resident in America, are also named as co-defendants.

In its petition the government prays "that each, every and all of the defendant steamship lines be forbidden either to enter or clear any of their vessels at or from the port of New York or any other port of entry in the United States or any of its possessions, so long as they shall continue to operate under the aforesaid alleged unlawful combination or conspiracy."

These thirteen companies, the government charges, entered in an illegal contract on Feb. 5, 1908, at London, by which they constituted themselves the Atlantic conference, with power to apportion all traffic pro-rata, impose heavy fines on members of the conference for violation of any of the articles of agreement, and wage cut-throat competition against all lines outside the conference.

As a result, it is alleged, the Russian volunteer fleet, plying between New York and Libau, were driven out of business, and the Russian-American line was forced to make terms with the conference, and enter its membership.

Suit was brought by Henry A. Wise, United States district attorney, acting under instructions from George Wickersham, United States attorney general, and the government further prays the court to "enjoin the defendants from further agreeing, combining, conspiring . . . to injure or destroy the business of any person or corporation engaged in the business of carrying steerage passengers between points in the United States and Europe."

When in March, 1910, the federal government instituted an inquiry into the affairs of the defendant companies, the committee of three organized to direct reprisals on competing lines was disbanded, says the complaint, and rates for steerage transportation on the fighting ships are said to have been altered from time to time.

The average number of immigrants for the last five years is given at 1,200,000 and the average number of annual emigrants for the same period at 500,000, and the income from steerage rates, the complaint says, is one of the most important parts of the defendant companies' revenue.

The text of the complaint and petition was given out so late yesterday afternoon that none of the defendant companies would make any statement through their representatives, preferring to wait until they had read it in full. An answer is expected today.

NIGHT INSPECTORS TO GO

Result of Investigation of Doings at Boston Custom House

Boston, Jan. 5.—As a result of the investigation by special treasury agents, when at least one of the night inspectors was found to be asleep, clad in pink pajamas, when he was supposed to be keeping watch, the force of local night customs inspectors is soon to be abolished.

Most of the men now holding the jobs will be reduced to watchmen. A few will be made day inspectors, depending on the recommendations made to Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh by his special agents who have been conducting the inquiry in Boston.

HEN VALUED AT $12,000.

Eggs Laid by Black Orpington Are Sold at $25 Each.

Poultry at $1,200 a pound and eggs at $25 each seem rather high even in these days, when the high cost of living is a subject of general concern and congressional investigation, but these quotations have recently been made. The poultry was not sold, but the eggs were, and the owner of the hen said in refusing an offer of $6,000 for her that he was not extremely eager to sell her at $12,000, which would be at the rate of $1,200 a pound, live weight.

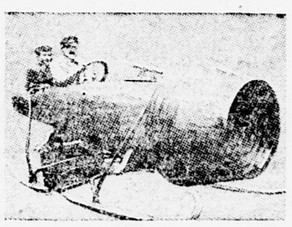
These ten pounds of costly meat and feathers are embodied in the person of Lady Washington, a Black Orpington hen that has won prizes at poultry shows in New York, Philadelphia and other cities. She has a daughter whose eggs are sold at $25 a dozen, and even the eggs laid by her granddaughters are entirely too high priced for use in an omelet.

MOTOR SLEDGE IS LATEST.

Russian Grand Duke Has New Style Power Vehicle.

Automobiles have been in use for years in Russia, but sledges are popular there where the winters are long and where few vehicles with wheels are seen from November to March.



SLEDGE RUN BY A MOTOR.

Efforts to combine the pleasures of motoring with the delights of sledging have often been made, but as a rule they have not been successful. The usual plan has been to have a drive wheel armed with spikes.

The Grand Duke Cyril of Russia has just had a motor sledge built that is constructed on a new principle. It is the familiar sledge on runners, but it carries a six cylinder, thirty horsepower motor to take the place of horses. The vehicle is to be drawn, not pushed, by a propeller constructed on the familiar turbine principle.

The sledge is about twelve feet long, has accommodations for two passengers and is expected to develop a speed of a mile a minute.

FREAK OF AN EXPLOSION.

Scantling, Thrown Across Street and Imbedded In Brick Wall.

The explosion of a tank for gas used in illuminating passenger cars near the Grand Central station in New York called the attention of the authorities to a danger about which little was known, and it also informed the public concerning the explosive properties of gas when mixed with air. Under certain conditions the gas is more dangerous than dynamite, and when it explodes it exerts more force than nitroglycerin.

The tremendous force of the explosion was shown in many ways, some of them being in the nature of freaks. For instance, a pine scantling was driven from the power house where the explosion occurred across the street and was firmly imbedded in the brick wall of an apartment house. The scantling must have been going with the velocity of a projectile fired from a high power gun to penetrate the wall as it did.

The damage to property from the explosion is estimated at $500,000 to $600,000, windows being shattered for blocks. The damages that the New York Central railroad will have to pay because of the twelve persons killed and the 125 or more injured will probably be more than a million dollars.

The "Golden Rod" appeared Tuesday morning and found a ready sale immediately. The cover design is very simple, but none the less artistic. The Golden Rod above the design and 1911 below, complete the adornment of the front cover. The design itself is a "Q," with a cluster of golden rod surrounding the letter.

The frontispiece is a picture of the victorious football team. The editorials deal with pertinent topics of the school life. Six stories contributed mostly by Seniors, make up the main body of the volume. "Agatha's Soldier of the Roses" is a well written story, but the last chapter is a little inadequate. "Jones's Theory" is well explained and is genuinely funny. "All's well that ends well" is well done. The characters are consistent and the story well told. "Herr Mueller's Christmas" is perhaps the best of the collection, because of its simplicity and naturalness. The writer has the knack of writing vivid description. "That Pup," one of the humorous contributions as the title may suggest, is a good story with a ludicrous situation at the climax. "Just Pie," the only contribution by other than a Senior, is a very human story with an air of mystery about it. The humorous side of the family's quest is well worked up. The athletic department was conducted by Millard Chapman, and Phillip Rice had charge of the locals and the jokes. The caricature of the lunch counter is very good, and the jokes are of the usual character. The Alumni and Exchange department was in charge of Doris Straw. Dorothy Darling served as editor-in-chief, Sidney Crane as literary editor, Clara Bushnell as artist, and Paul Blackmur as business manager. The other three members of the editorial staff have been mentioned above. The magazine as a whole is well arranged and contains interesting reading. There is no pretense at great literary attainment and no attempt at exposition or essay. The work speaks for itself as being in the better class of preparatory school publications. The work of the artist is especially commendable.

FOODS FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Ellen H. Richards Addresses Mothers' Meeting

The Mothers' Association met in Bethany chapel Wednesday afternoon with an attendance of 125, to hear a lecture on "Foods for school children" by Mrs. Ellen H. Richards of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Devotional exercises were led by Mrs. W. H. Doble. She spoke briefly on the value of the services by women as homemakers. The text was taken from the last chapter of Proverbs: "She looketh well to the ways of her household."

Mrs. John D. Mackay, president of the association introduced the speaker as "one whose aim is to have people in good health and to make homes happy."

A Daily Ledger representative took a stenographic report of the address by Mrs. Richards, which will be printed in installments.

MRS. RICHARD'S ADDRESS.

We will not discuss theories this afternoon, but certain definite facts which we can tie to. There are plenty of theories to be built upon these facts.

First, let us go to nature. We are obliged to learn, of course, a great deal from what we see actually happening around us. Now the human child is first of all, so far as the fat question is concerned, a little animal. I am going to call your attention to the fat of three animals, as developed, that we may compare them with our own.

First, we will take the calf. The calf at once begins to live on milk, and if it is not interferred with by the human people taking the milk away from it, it continues to feed and grow on the cow's milk for a number of days before it begins to take the cow's food.

Then if you will take the chicken on our farms. The chicken is quite a lively animal as soon as it comes from the shell. Now what has been the fat of that chicken? It is developed out of the yolk of the egg with the white. That is, the little chicken which is very lively and very active as it comes from the shell has grown and developed from the fat of the egg, therefore the egg contains the material necessary for the human body.

Now we turn to the more helpless things, the familiar robin. The little bird is much more helpless than the chicken. It has to be fed for a long time, and it is said that the mother bird brings to the robin thirty times her own weight before the little bird is ready to leave the nest. Now what does the mother robin bring to the little bird. Always worms, animal fat. The little bird always has its animal fat. Now it is true of all our birds that they are fed on animal fat. It is so with our sparrows, although the sparrows themselves feed more or less on grains afterwards, and of course that is why the small sparrow is always fed on animal fat.

With these three instances we should be able to

on the fat out of the small animal.

The milk contains besides other ingredients the sugar of the milk which we are apt to forget. We sometimes throw away the skim milk which contains 8 per cent of the milk and more than half of that is in the milk sugar, which is the most easily digested fat that we know of, so we have the nutriment which supplies the energy for the young calf, and it is the mineral matter from which the bones are made. That is in the skim milk and not in the cream. This is a little lesson for the feeding infant.

The egg, as I say, contains also the fat, as you know, and there is the mineral matter in the yolk. Whereas there is no sugar there is rather an excess of the fat which will take the place in the making of the chick perhaps up to that time. What does the chick take the minute it get free?

We used to feed ours on corn meal and they immediately began to eat.

Now they do not get sugar, but they do get starch. We all know that corn meal is very largely starch, and also fat, so the young chick gets its starch and fat and a certain amount of mineral matter. The little robin gets a certain amount of fat from the worms. There we have from the animals our lesson as to what to choose for

THE HUMAN FAMILY.

Of course the small child is fed principally on milk, and uor great trouble today is when the child is weaned to get clean milk. The great problem of today is clean milk, and fresh eggs, and these are the great problems of the young child today because there is no better food and no better nourishment known than those two things. The very young child gets the muscle making fat out of milk, so there is no need of discussing very much that question, so long as the child can get plenty of clean, safe milk. The egg we have to be a little careful about.

The milk is just the right proportion of the other substances, but the egg has so little water in it that there needs to be a good deal of water taken with it, unless used with rice, an ideal meal for young children, cooked with the yolk of the egg separated from the white and boiled hard, then used as a powder with boiled rice or anything the child likes to take with the rice. That is an ideal, highly nutritious, easily digested food. When it comes to the question that we cannot get clean milk at any price there is nothing better to take the place of it, than soup. That is to say, with proper management of the soup, especially if one uses the bones so as to get a little more mineral matter into the soup, one can very well replace the milk with that and use the rice and starch things with it to take the place of it.

Now we will discuss the food of the OLDER CHILDREN.

When the child goes about and enters into very active play the little body loses heat very rapidly. Most of you know how warm the little body seems always, especially after active play. The one fact that all should remember is that the small body has a great deal more superfluous skin than the larger one, pound for pound.

That is, a child weighing 10 pounds loses heat in proportion to the area of the skin much greater than the person weighing 100 or 200 pounds. That means that the small child must manufacture a lot of heat to make up for this loss. There must be plenty of heat material in the food.

Here comes one of our special points and I might say facts. The albumen meat or muscle, whichever we use, leaves a good deal of residue when it is digested. There are some meats or kinds of fat that give more ashes than others, just as furnaces. The meat diet itself leaves a good deal more residue than we need. That is one of the reasons why a pure meat diet is not so good for most people.

How about the starch? Starch, as you all know, has to be made over into the starch sugar before it does us any good. There is one fact that we must bear in mind. Our digestive apparatus is just as much outside of us as our kitchen stoves. While it needs the body to keep it warm, the lining is just as impervious as our skin, quite so. That is to say, the absorption into the cells of the body comes back in some way unknown.

We do not know just how they find their way, but they do not come from them until these little sensitive cells admit them. Nothing but the thoroughly changed sugar goes into them. Not even cane sugar, but milk sugar I believe does, cane sugar having to be changed over before the body will admit it. It takes time for that and some times we get a little weary or tired and the starch does not digest readily. There are a great many disorders which come entirely from starch indigestion.

How about the little child? Milk sugar is all right. What about the the child can have? Fruit sugar is the next best to the milk sugar. Raisins, dates, figs; apples do not have so much, but grapes, are good, also all those foods that have a certain amount of sugar and are the next best things, the easiest digested and the quickest. The little child is constantly active, must be so, and we believe the energy is very largely fostered by the sugar the child has. Those are the best sugars, but cane sugar is cheaper.

Fortunately most of our candy is gluco sugar now and is digested more quickly than the rock candy, but our ordinary sugar is digested so quickly that within five minutes of eating it we can feel the refreshing element of it. This does ot mean that we can eat candy in great quantities without making ourselves sick. We must eat it in conservative and small quantities to obtain the good from the sugar therein.

The child of 8 or 10 can have from 3 to 4 ounces of sugar at a time safely, not much more. That does not mean a tablespoonful or two in so-called coffee in the morning, and a tablespoonful or syrup on bread at the same time. That is too much. There is our sugar. Then we have the curd of the milk, the white of the egg for muscle, the meat for nitrogeneous and for the albunenous the fat in the milk and the fat in the corn meal, which has to go to a certain amount.

Of all things, keep the exposition promoter out.—New Bedford Standard.

LAYMEN'S SUPPER

Former Rector Gives Enlightening Talk on Missions

The first annual "Laymen's supper" of the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church was held in the parish house Wednesday evening with an attendance of nearly 100 men. At 7 o'clock the company sat down to a very plentiful and excellent lunch served by H. P. Furnald, a member of the brotherhood.

The menu was as follows:—Chicken salad, potato salad, cold ham Escalloped oysters, cake, ice cream, butter, rolls, and coffee.

Harry Nicholson furnished music on the piano while the tables were being cleared.

William Walker president of the organization opened the post-prandial exercises by telling a little of the history of the club and the work which it is doing at the present time.

Rev. R.E. Armstrong was then introduced as toastmaster. He in turn introduced the speakers as follows: Archibald McLeod, "The value of organization;" M. T. Holbrook, "Education;" Roy Prout, "Outside activities;" N. M. Spencer, "Ritualistic work;" Merton Turner, "Impression of a newly initiated."

Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of Bethany church was called upon, and spoke with deep feeling of the value he set upon the friendship of Mr. Gardner and Mr. Armstrong, and the harmony between Christ church and Bethany church.

Rev. W. E. Gardner, the principal speaker of the evening, was received with great acclamation.

In opening his address, he said that although he had been in a richer parish and a larger one, there was no parish that would hold so much for him or will be so dear to him as this one. The main topic of his speech was "Missions." Mr. Gardner said in part: "There is a great big work ahead for the men of America along missionary lines. By missions I do not mean the ordinary definition, sending a little money or a barrel of clothes for the heathen, and doing nothing more. All the great men of the day are vitally interested in Missions. Roosevelt, Taft, and all the leaders in legislation realize that the foreign relations are the most important. Seth Lowe, former mayor of New York city said, "I have been converted to missions, I have come to a realization that it is the great central subject of the world today."

Missionary work is helping others. A missionary is one sent by a great ideal to help other men. The great heroes of the day are missionaries. In our denomination, Bishop Stanton in the Philippines and Bishop Rowe in Alaska are truly great heroes.

God has a plan for every man and woe be unto him who does not fit in it. The thing for us men to do is to take hold of the things God is interested in. It's a great thing to be able to grasp a man by the hand and feel that he is bigger, better and nobler on account of you.

We are facing a great crisis in the history of the world. In India, China, Japan, Turkey, Korea, the western civilization is making itself felt. Three great Eastern powers, China, India and Japan, with a population of 900,000,000 are striving against the United States with its 90,000,000 for the balance of powers. Today our country has it in finance, in education in morals. The men from the East are coming here to learn from us. They get the structure of our institutions but they the failing to grasp Christianity, the foundation of all of them. What would happen if the East should get the balance of power without Christianity. But you say, can 90,000,000 retain it against 900,000,000? Surely they can. Don't let the numbers bother you, but let this bother you. What kind of a Christianity sends men and women to China? The Y. M. C. A. had to leave a certain street in China because it could not get a building. All were appropriated to the pursuits resulting from importation from America.

Are we going to let Japan and China take the structure with the foundation? With rapid transit as it is and the airship coming, a blot on the other side of the world means untold misery on this side. On the other hand who would think that a corner on wheat in Chicago meant a famine in India?

We must be interested in Missions. If not, the task of America cannot be accomplished. The great exposition which is to be held in Boston next spring is solely for that purpose, of showing the people of America the conditions in other lands and awakening them to a realization that the time for action is at hand."

After the speech Mr. Armstrong called for an expression of opinion as to what could be done. M. T. Holbrook voiced the sentiment of the gathering when he said that something must be done, and Mr. Gardner's suggestion that John R. Mott's "The Decisive hour" shall be introduced as a text book into the Brotherhood, will in all probability be carried out. A concerted movement will follow the acquirement of knowledge of the work. During the coming year missionary zeal will be aroused and plans for an "every man canvass" will be formulated. Every man will be asked to read one book on Missions during the year, and to give something for missions each week.

About 30 men pledged themselves to active service in promoting this local interest in Missions.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Gardner was given a rising vote of thanks for his excellent speech. It was without question the most enlightening speech on Missions ever heard in this city. Mr. Gardner is one of the eight denominational missionary secretaries in the United States. He has the whole of New England for his field and his mission is good and great and the man is eminently well suited to the task.

RAYNER'S ARGUMENT AGAINST LORIMER

It May Deprive the Illinois Senator of His Seat

Washington, Jan. 5.—Senator Raynor of Maryland has prepared a legal argument for presentation to the senate in support of his contention that Senator Lorimer should be unseated. Raynor will treat the subject on its legal aspects, without regard to the morals involved, and expects to demonstrate that by taking the whitewashing report of the committee on privileges and elections as a basis Lorimer is not entitled to his seat in the senate.

According to Raynor, the constitution provides that a senator must receive a majority of the votes of the members elected to the legislature. The senate committee, in absolving Lorimer of the charges made against him, reported that 108 members of the Illinois legislature voted for Lorimer, of which number seven were tainted. Eliminating those seven votes leaves the Lorimer vote at 101.

The full roster of the legislature was 202, a majority of which was 102. Lorimer only got 101 votes and Rayner will contend, therefore, that his seat should be declared forfeited.

A Strange Pond.

Hicks pond, in Palmyra, Me., is a strange body of water. It is only twelve acres in area, but it is more than 100 feet in depth. It has no visible inlet, although a fair sized stream flows from it into Lake Sebasticook. The volume of its water is not materially affected by either drought or freshet, and the water is always cold.

INFECTED ANIMALS KILLED

Number Reached Over Three Thousand In Maine Last Year

Augusta, Me., Jan. 5.—The Maine state cattle commissioners report the slaughter of 2786 grade cattle, 146 pure blood cattle, 165 horses and five sheep, all of which were found afflicted with infectious diseases during the past twelve months. The cost was $21,565.25, against which is set $2,687.66 received from the sale of hides.

The commission reports that a larger return could be made from salvage if the state had a law similar to Massachusetts.

SEES CHILDREN BURN

Horrified Mother Has to Look on, Powerless to Help Them

West Kingston, R. I., Jan. 5.—Two little children were burned to death and their home destroyed while the mother looked on, powerless to render any aid, in the isolated Glen Rock section.

The children were the son and daughter, aged 3 and 1½ respectively, of Mr. and Mrs. John Reynolds. The little girl had been ill and Mrs. Reynolds, leaving the children alone in the attic, went to a neighbor's house some distance away for medicine. Returning home, Mrs. Reynolds was horrified to find her house completely enveloped in flames. All she could do was to watch the burning of her home and the incineration of her children.

Nothing is known of the manner in which the fire originated.

—Robert G., C. D. and J. H. Lyle, brothers, celebrated the anniversaries of their birth on January 3. Sixteen years intervene between the oldest and the youngest. C. D. Lyle, is the eldest, being born on January 3, 1846. The second is J. H. Lyle, born on January 3, 1852, while Robert G. Lyle, a wealthy farmer and stockman, living near Pullman, Wash., first saw the light of day January 3, 1862. The latter believes that his family has a record seldom if ever equalled in any on the continent. His claims are verified by documentary proof in the shape of city and county records, giving the date of births as already noted. Robert G. Lyle has been a resident of eastern Washington since territorial days. He has made a study of breeding cattle and other stock, also devoting much of his time to agriculture. His farm is one of the best in Whitman county, where the average wheat production is about 5,000,000 bushels a year.

GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE

It Is Coming to Be Only a Name, Says Governor Foss

HIS ADDRESS TO LEGISLATURE

No Public Servant Must Have Any Other Master Than the People—Labor's Just Demands Must Be Met—People Against Return of Lodge—Initiative, Referendum and Recall Declared to Be Already at Hand

Gentlemen of the General Court of Massachusetts:—We are here, in accord with time honored custom, to complete the inauguration of an executive. I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred and the obligation imposed. There are, however, weightier matters than the mere formality of inauguration confronting us, and to these we must address ourselves.

Popular Government

We have reached a crisis in the affairs of this commonwealth. It is a crisis which our form of government is facing today not only in Massachusetts but in every state of the union. This crisis is all the more marked in our state because Massachusetts is the birthplace of popular government.

The people, in all sections of the country, have lost confidence in many of their public servants. The dictatorship by political bosses and by representatives of special interests is hotly resented, for these men desire to control public servants and to direct legislation to their own ends. They do not desire the enactment of laws guaranteeing justice to all and privilege to none.

Massachusetts has always been the leader at every great turning point in the policy of the nation, and she must lead today in restoring the government into the hands of the people. She must banish every power and every influence which is hostile to the rule of the people.

She must tolerate no public servant who arrogates to himself the prerogatives of government, or who turns his back to the people at the beck of special interests or their agents—it exists for the people. It belongs to the people.

That, gentlemen, is the ideal. Now, what are the conditions today? Government of the people is coming to be only a name. Representatives of the monopolistic interests have usurped the prerogatives of the people. They have acquired too great a control, and have too largely shaped the policy of federal and state affairs.

The usurpation of power can only be ended by the people taking into their own hands the direction and control of their government.

The first step is to abolish the boss and all his agencies; the caucus, the nominating convention and all political machinery which intervenes between the people and their government.

All candidates for public office without exception must be chosen by the people through the direct primary. Only by this means can they be held accountable. No public servant must have any other master than the people.

Establish the direct primary, choose your own public servants without reference to any machine or faction, make them accountable only to yourselves, and popular government will be established.

To the direct primary must be joined the power of recall; so that any public servant who proves recreant to his trust may be immediately dismissed.

Important as these steps are, it is of far greater importance that the people keep their power over legislation through the initiative and the referendum.

Under the conditions which exist today, as I see them, these are the only true safeguards of representative government.

There can be no valid objection to these measures if we believe in the capacity, and therefore the right, of the people to govern themselves.

If the people are competent to exercise the power of the franchise, then they are competent to advise their public servants and recall them if they are not true to their trust.

The referendum provides that an important legislative measure shall be submitted to the people upon their request before it becomes a law.

The initiative provides that the people themselves may prepare and pass a constitutional amendment or an important law if the legislature persistently refuses to enact it.

I urge upon you a resolve for a constitutional amendment to provide for the initiative and the referendum.

Labor

Labor is the foundation upon which the structure of popular government is built, and as such it must be recognized, its just demands met, its rights guarded and protected. It must have every legislative safeguard that capital has.

We all recognize the right of labor to organize, and we must furtner recognize that labor should be exempt from unfair injunction restrictions, and that the liberty or property of any citizen ought not to be taken from him without trial by jury.

It is even more important that the compensation of labor be above a bare living. It must ensure to the workingman some measure of protection to those dependent upon him.

We must rigidly define and limit the hours of labor, especially for women and children, with due regard to healthful conditions and educational opportunity.

In safeguarding labor from unjust conditions and from destitution we can learn much from Germany, which is the home of old-age pensions.

In particular I would direct your earnest attention to the subject of workingmen's compensation for injuries. Immediate and equitable legislation is demanded, not only by the employe but by the employer. A wise compensation act is a safeguard to both capital and labor. The criterion of such a law must be definite, certain and speedy adjustment of all claims, so that they may be discounted, alike by capital and labor.

The result of such a law is not to be measured merely by financial considerations, but by the better relationship which will be brought about between the employer and his employe.

Let Massachusetts take the lead along this humanitarian line of progress; for above everything else we are an industrial commonwealth. It is therefore vital that our industries be strengthened and our workmen safeguarded by wise and progressive legislation.

Vocational Training

And right here we must recognize that a sound body and an industrial training and education are the birthright of every citizen. This birthright must be ensured to him by an industrial education which fits him to earn his living.

We have technical colleges, but we need industrial kindergartens to teach our boys and girls how to do the simplest things in life, and to do them intelligently.

This is the age of specialization, even in the ordinary vocations. We are specializing to so great an extent that old methods no longer meet the industrial need of the present day. Our educational institutions must keep pace with the new order of things; and for this reason attention must be given not merely to the higher forms of technical education, but to what are termed vocational and trade schools, in which the youth may fit himself for practical, every-day work.

This change in our educational system must come immediately—even at the expense of academic work, if necessary; for our boys and girls on leaving school must have some practical training which will make an honest livelihood possible.

Transportation

From labor we pass to the next vital necessity of industry—transportation.

We must encourage and extend by wise and equitable legislation all the transportation facilities at our command, in a spirit not of hostility but of fairness and co-operation.

We must legislate with a view to bringing the trunk lines not only of this country but of Canada to our great terminal and our ports, in order that we may have a wider distribution for our products and a freer communication by rail and water with the markets of the world.

We should recognize that Massachusetts and all New England constitute a vast terminal for the creation of business, which requires for its products the widest distribution. We must enlarge these means of distribution by every method in our power.

Above all things our transportation must not be confined to the railroads. We have one of the finest seaports of the world, and its development and use depend upon broad legislation directed to both coastwise and foreign business.

The state must co-operate with its metropolis, Boston, in the ownership and development of docks and terminals, in order that the largest and most modern steamships may unite with the railroads in the upbuilding of our industry and commerce.

The state must also take immediate steps to outline and construct a system of waterways and canals to supplement the railroads, so that raw materials may be secured to our industries at the lowest possible cost.

We have cause for gratification that work on the Cape Cod canal is progressing so rapidly, and that its early completion seems assured.

I believe that the dredging out of the Merrimac and Connecticut rivers, and the building of the so-called Weymouth canal from Fall River through the Bridgewaters and Brockton are among the first undertakings that should be inaugurated.

In the last session of the general court an expenditure of $3,000,000 was authorized to provide for new piers, with the condition that they should be leased before construction. I respectfully urge that this act be amended so that work may begin immediately, believing as I do that if, when the piers are completed, they are not quickly brought into useful and profitable service by our dominant railroad corporations, then the state can and ought to take immediate steps to secure some other tenant.

Quasi-Public Corporations

Right here let me say what I think the attitude of the state should be with reference to the quasi-public corporations. In the first place, I see nothing inimical in the mere size of a corporation, provided, of course, it is suitably regulated.

On the other hand, a holding company is in theory wholly at variance with the common law and with the statutes of the state. It is therefore indefensible.

It can be regarded only as an act of legislative complaisance or of financial subterfuge, and on either of these grounds it is intolerable.

The incorporation of the Boston Holding company was special legislation in the interest of privilege. I regard it as one of the most flagrant examples of pernicious legislation enacted in recent years. It legalized some of the most objectionable corporate methods.

The people are to be congratulated that the original proposal, permitting the company to issue bonds which were to be free from taxation, and which were to be a legal investment for savings banks, was thwarted. Legislation of this character should never again be permitted.

I would also call attention to the voluntary associations which issue shares evidencing a participating ownership, but which, under existing laws, are subject to none of the regulations as to publicity and taxation that apply to both business and public service corporations.

I do not recommend the appointment of a special commission to consider this subject, but I believe that the tax commissioner may well be directed to investigate the further regulation by the commonwealth of such voluntary associations, and to report thereon to the next general court, with specific recommendations.

I also think there should be a change of method on the part of the public service corporations in seeking legislation from the general court. The old method of framing desired legislation behind closed doors, through legislative agents and the lobby, should be entirely discontinued. There is no occasion for secrecy, but, on the contrary, for the greatest degree of publicity.

The corporation before coming to the legislature should put its case before the people themselves, through the press and by public meetings, if necessary, and in this way enlighten the people fully and frankly as to just what it wants and what it proposes to give in return.

The people will then be in a position to advise their legislators. The corporation should do this with the greatest frankness, revealing not merely a part of the truth, but the whole truth.

My own experience in corporate management is that when the people thoroughly understand a proposition they act with intelligence and fairness. If the corporation meets the public in this spirit of honesty and co-operation, then the public in return will grant more liberal concessions than can be secured in any other way. These methods will command the confidence and enlist the capital of the people for these enterprises.

This procedure on the part of the corporations will forever end the lobby and its attendant train, and it will inevitably give the corporation all that it is entitled to.

The Judiciary

I think we are all agreed that the first duty of a free government is to ensure the prompt enforcement of legal rights as between man and man. There is no excuse for a delay of years before a plaintiff can finally establish his rights, or a defendant be finally relieved of the trouble and uncertainty of a law suit.

I am well aware that in this state delays in the trial of causes have amounted to a practical denial of justice.

It is evident that some method must be found of clearing the dockets of the superior court, so that cases may be speedily heard and determined; and to this end I recommend that the number of justices be increased.

I further recommend that the present salaries of the justices of the supreme and superior courts be increased; and, as a condition of this increase, I recommend that the courts open for their fall term on the Tuesday succeeding Labor day.

I would further recommend that this legislature carefully reconsider the report of the commission appointed to study the conditions in our courts, and see whether more of their recommendations cannot now be adopted.

I would also recommend that the supreme and superior courts be given full control and regulation of their trial dockets.

In respect to criminal cases, it is, in my judgment, outrageous that a suspected person must now remain imprisoned for a long period before a hearing can be given and his rights determined. This violates all public sense of justice, and should be remedied.

Finance Board

The affairs of the commonwealth pertaining to the conduct of the public business are essentially of a business character, and they should be conducted along well-established business lines, such as prevail in any great corporation.

The Massachusetts commission on the cost of living says that "the methods of compiling statistics in various state, county, city and town administrative departments . . . . appear to be an arithmetical chaos. They need simplification and co-ordination; they should supplement and explain each other, and lead to some clear and logical conclusion."

In the administration of the several counties of this state officials have multiplied and expenses grown, until today it is virtually impossible to determine how much the counties cost or how many officers are employed, or to obtain any definite information regarding county affairs.

To accomplish this end, it is necessary that some central authority be appointed by the state, with power to investigate and report to the public on the business methods of the various state and county departments, and, when occasion demands, city and town governments.

Such a board, with powers covering the whole state, having authority to summons persons with papers, should be authorized by the legislature. This board, to reach its highest efficiency, should be non-partisan in its broadest sense. The result of its work will be of the highest importance as a means of preventing fraud and extravagance.

Another branch of the state's business in which a higher efficiency is demanded is that relating to the wards of the state.

During the past year we have spent more than the total amount of the direct state tax in the care of our charitable and correctional institutions. The tax amounted to $4,500,000; the expense stated amounted to over $4,900,000.

While it must ever remain our fixed duty to protect these helpless ones, yet immediate steps should be taken to prevent such a large and increasing number of persons from losing the power of self-support, either through mental, moral or physical sickness, or through that industrial inefficiency which leads to pauperism.

We should seek out all the causes which result in the loss of personal independence and self-supporting power, and apply scientific measures of personal help to all who are drifting toward our public institutions.

This is the greatest problem at present confronting us. In the endeavor to solve it, I call upon all citizens who are properly qualified by training and experience to advise the executive office freely, as a matter of public duty. I shall also at the earliest possible moment secure the services of the most competent experts, with a view to recommending the necessary legislation.

State Commissions

On business principles, I am not in favor of commissions as a means of transacting public business, unless they are appointed subject to recall, for I believe their tendency is not in accord with popular or representative government.

They have practically no check placed over them. They multiply unnecessary officers and clerks, and thereby increase the expense of carrying on the work of the different branches of the state's activities.

I now advise the abolition of the following commissions which relate to quasi-public corporations, namely: the railroad commission, the gas and electric light commission, the Boston transit commission and the highway commission, which includes the supervision of the telephone and telegraph companies. And in their places I recommend the creation of a public utilities board, which should consolidate into itself the functions of these commissions, with the stipulation that the tax collecting function of the highway commission shall revert to the state treasurer's department.

This board should be composed of five members, whose terms should be for ten years, subject to the recall of any member at any state election. The chairman should be a lawyer. This board should have the right to employ and hear counsel; its decisions should be in writing, with the vote of each member recorded; and it should have the power of initiative.

Home Rule For Cities

I regard home rule for cities as an essential part of popular government. The responsibility for good government in our municipalities must rest directly upon the citizens, and they should be sovereign in the affairs of their city.

Our first duty, as I see it, is to create a greater Boston by the confederation of all the towns and cities within a radius of at least ten miles, and possibly more.

I maintain that our suburban citizens, whose business interests bring them to Boston daily, who enjoy the protection of her police and the use of her highways, and who are included within her five-cent fare limit, have no right to stamp the dust from their feet at 5 o'clock, and assume that they have no further responsibility for good government of the very city in which they earn their livelihood, and where their commercial and financial interests are centered.

It is my observation that the people who have made the loudest protest against the city government have been those who sleep and pay their taxes outside the city limits.

I contend that it is the duty of these suburban towns and cities which are already part of the metropolitan district to unite with the city itself in the creation of a great metropolis. This union should be not merely a commercial, but also a political one.

We should have a union on the borough system, under which these several towns and cities might preserve their autonomy, their individuality and historic interest, but under which they would contribute by their franchise and their personal service to the better government of the metropolitan city.

Election Reforms

Turning now to the consideration of our election methods, let us give earnest thought to the subject of campaign expenses.

The use of money in our elections has become a great evil, for it amounts to a substantial denial of the privilege of a man of moderate means to aspire to many public offices in the commonwealth; or else it overwhelmingly tempts him to make his secret peace with those private interests which will finance his campaign if he will serve them in office.

It has become no small part of the lobby today to go about the state before the caucuses, "setting up districts;" in other words, making private agreements to supply candidates with campaign funds if they will promise in return to be friendly to the interests the lobby is serving.

To correct this evil it is necessary to prohibit those methods of campaigning which cost so much money, and are not in themselves necessary for the proper enlightenment of the voters.

A healthy man does not need—and ought not to have—a carriage to convey him to the polls to perform a duty which he owes to his country, his state and his family.

The burden of hiring carriages and automobiles is too great for a candidate poor in his own purse, and not pledged to some strong financial interest, to assume.

The occasional carriage which is needed to convey an infirm man to the polls the state ought to furnish.

For these reasons I recommend that the general court prohibit the hiring of carriages to transport voters to the polls in any state, city or town election, except such as may be provided by the state for the use of the disabled.

As for the able-bodied voter, it would be far better to provide a penalty for unreasonably neglecting to go to the polls, or to give the warden of the election precinct power to issue a warrant and bring him to the polls; just as the speaker of the house can order the sergeant-at-arms to arrest and bring a member to his seat when his presence is needed.

If it is not constitutional to compel citizens to do their civic duty, Massachusetts ought to take the lead in such wise legislation by making it so.

In my judgment, the state should provide the political parties with halls in which to hold rallies in state elections, and should also provide a circular in which the candidates may state to the voters the arguments in support of their candidacy. For the giving of political information to the voters and expounding the political principles of the candidates is not a privilege of the candidate, but is a privilege of the voters themselves; not a privilege of a political party, but a privilege of government iself—since those who are to handle the machinery of government must be chosen upon the fullest information and must conduct it upon correct principles.

The government itself is the chief beneficiary of the public meetings which are held to discuss political measures and candidates. Hence the government ought to supply hall in the different cities and towns once during a campaign for the candidates of all political parties.

I am of the opinion that the armories and assembly halls in cities and towns should be freely opened to the citizens for political meetings.

The meetings suggested will act to stimulate the citizen to take a closer and more personal interest in shaping the policies of their government.

This will tend to lessen the influence of the men or corporations offering to pay campaign expenses. It will give the man of moderate means a more equal chance to serve his state, and it will promote the independence of our public servants.

Direct Nominations

I recommend that legislation be enacted calling for the popular nomination of United States senators.

Twenty-nine state legislatures have now passed resolutions to this end, and all but two of the remaining states have expressed themselves as favoring direct elections in one form or another. Twenty-two states through various laws now nominate their senators by the vote of the people; and seven states have, through the voluntary action of the political parties, arrived at the same result.

Four times has the national house of representatives given the two-thirds vote required for an amendment of the constitution in this respect, and four times has the United States senate defeated the amendment. The last vote of the house in 1902 was unanimous.

Last May the house of representatives of this commonwealth voted in favor of such direct vote, but the senate defeated the resolution. Thus I have the endorsement of the popular branch of the general court in recommending that a measure be passed, under which the legislators may be instructed by the people as to their choice for United States senator.

Legislative Districts

The federal law requires the redistricting of the state at this time. The purpose of this provision is not only to ensure a fair congressional apportionment, but to guarantee that the people shall be equitaby represented in the state legislature.

In the past this redistricting has been governed too largely by partisan considerations, and the districts have been laid out with a view to serving the interests of the dominant political party in the state.

The necessity of such a reform has just been clearly shown at our state election.

The plurality of over 35,000 which I received on clear-cut issues indicated unmistakably and overwhelmingly the will of the people.

Moreover, in the total popular vote for the lower house of our legislature a plurality of over 38,000 was registered against the return of our senior senator to the United States senate. Yet, owing to our gerrymandered districts, we have today a small Republican majority in the legislature, when an honest division of the state into districts would have shown a Democratic majority; and we are confronted with the possibility of returning to the senate of the United States a man whose retirement the people have thus clearly demanded.

In view of these facts and figures, I confidently expect that this legislature will have the courage to obey the manifest will of the people, and elect a senator, irrespective of party, who represents the progressive platform for which the majority of the people voted.

Our methods are not in accord with the new order of things, and I respectfully recommend that in the redistricting of the state no consideration whatever shall be given to partisan schemes, but that every district shall be laid out on geometrical lines by the state engineers.

I recommend that the boundaries of districts so far as possible shall conform to parallels of latitude and meridians of longitude; and that each district must possess the shortest possible boundary lines, and hence be rendered as compact as this arbitrary method of surveying and the distribution of population will permit.

Popular Government

In spite of all opposition, the initiative, the referendum and the recall are already at hand. They represent popular government in its highest conception. We who know the town meeting should recognize the value of the principle when it is proposed to extend it to the state; it is Democratic to the core.

The intelligence of the people, of the press and of legislators will be heightened by the study of specific measures; better men will enter public life; class legislation will be discouraged by the united vote of all classes; the farmers and laboring men will secure the full measure of their influence in public affairs; restraints will be removed upon needed reforms, and respect for law will be increased when every statute represents the will of a majority of the people; the ignorant and indifferent will have less weight in such decisions, and the people can exercise their intelligence better in voting for certain measures than for uncertain ones.

It is undoubtedly true that to a great extent the election this year has been a protest against Republican misgovernment and the failure of that party to redeem its pledges to honestly revise the tariff, and by so doing to remove the burdens of unequal taxation from the masses of the people.

Basis of Popular Verdict

To my mind, the basis of the popular verdict is as plain as if it were written in unmistakable words: the people demand that the duties shall be removed from all food products, that raw materials shall be placed on the free list, and that substantial reductions shall be made in the duties on manufactured products; that the federal government shall take steps looking toward better trade relations with our neighbor Canada, and that as a proof of our earnestness we shall reduce our duties to a level with those of Canada, and then seek further reciprocal trade relations not only with her but with other countries as the wisest and most efficient method of securing wider markets for our products. They also demand that Massachusetts shall take her place alongside of other states in aiding the federal government in levying an income tax, that the burdens of taxation may fall more evenly upon the wealth of the country, where they justly belong.

This wise legislation will assist in securing the necessary revenue for the support of the general government, and permit the burdens of taxation to be lifted from food products and the necessities of life, in order to reduce the cost of living to the mass of the people.

To this end I strongly urge you to ratify the federal income tax amendment, and memorialize congress upon the remaining points just enumerated.

Massachusetts has a great history and proud traditions. It rests with us to see that she has a great present and a great future. She has always led in industrial, commercial and educational lines, and has exercised great weight in the councils of the nation. She must not lag in the progressive legislation which the people are now demanding.

We must see to it that Massachusetts is in the forefront, and that the voice of her people is still potent in the councils of the nation.

Scores of Quincy Citizens Have Learned It.

If you suffer from backache,
There is only one way to cure it.
The perfect way is to cure the kidneys.

A bad back means sick kidneys.
Neglect it, urinary troubles follow.
Doan's Kidney Pills are made for kidneys only.

Are endorsed by Quincy people.

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch Street, Quincy, Mass., says. "About five years ago I began to suffer from kidney trouble. I had pains in my back which were very severe at times and cold or damp weather aggravated my suffering. I knew that my kidneys were at fault and used everything I could think of in an effort to obtain relief, but to no avail. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly advertised, I finally decided to give them a trial and procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before I had finished the contents of two boxes, the backache was a thing of the past and I felt better in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

JOHNSON WILL SUCCEED HALE

Democrat to Represent Pine Tree State in the Senate

FIRST IN SIXTY-THREE YEARS

Receives Sixty-Seven Votes In Caucus, Gardner Mustering Twenty-One and Pennell Seventeen—Granger Member of Legislature Declares That Former Master of State Grange Was "Crucified"

Augusta, Me., Jan. 5.—Charles F. Johnson of Waterville, Democratic candidate for governor of Maine in 1892 and again in 1894, a member of the state board of legal examiners, and one of the most prominent lawyers in Maine, was nominated on the first ballot last night at the Democratic caucus to succeed United States Senator Eugene Hale at the expiration of his term on March 4 next.

As the Maine legislature is safely Democratic, his nomination was equivalent to an election, and he will be the first Democrat to represent Maine since 1847.

Besides Johnson, the candidates for the United States senatorship nomination were Obadiah Gardner of Rockland, who two years ago lacked only about 7000 votes of being elected governor of Maine, and who for ten years was master of the state grange, Patrons of Husbandry, and William M. Pennell of Portland, who at the September election was barely defeated for congress by Asher C. Hinds, in the First district.

The result of the ballot was as 105; necessary for choice, 53. Johnson had 67, Gardner 21 and Pennell 17.

Representative Pearce of Eddington, a prominent granger, declared that the Democratic "machine" had "crucified Gardner, and that they were met either for the burial or the resurrection."

The Democrats have organized the legislature for the first time in a generation. Frederick W. Plaisted was inaugurated governor today. The senate organized with the election of Nathan Clifford as president. Frank A. Morey was chosen speaker of the house.

FOSS IS INAUGURATED

Parents, Wife and Twin Children of Governor Witness the Ceremony

Boston, Jan. 5.—Eugene N. Foss was inaugurated governor of Massachusetts today. In the presence of ex-governors, prominent jurists and men of the highest standing in the affairs of the commonwealth, he took the oath of office administered by Chief Justice Aiken.

At the moment that the governor finished his oath a battery of seventeen guns was fired on Boston common in accordance with the old custom, announcing to the citizens of Massachusetts that the state has a new governor.

The inaugural address was delivered before both branches of the legislature in the house of representatives. Color was lent to the ceremony by the attendance of the new staff.

The father and mother of the governor had the pleasure of seeing their son inaugurated. The governor's wife and the famous Foss twins were also in evidence, as was the brother of the governor, Congressman Foss of Illinois.

After the ceremonies the governor held a public reception in his office.

Governor Baldwin Also Comes Out For Woman Suffrage

Hartford, Jan. 5.—The oath of office as governor of Connecticut was taken by Simeon E. Baldwin before the general assembly, in joint convention, and an unusually large gathering of prominent citizens of the state and many guests of the new executive.

Governor Baldwin in his inaugural message touched both on the legal and the historical side of many state questions.

Among other things he advocated legislation providing for the registration and supervision of flying machines and dirigible balloons, and the extension of the electors' privilege to women, saying there has been a revolution of property relations between husband and wife and that "taxation without representation does not seem to be in harmony with our republican institutions."

ROBIN GOES TO TOMBS

Banker Pleads Not Guilty and Bail Is Raised to $40,000

New York, Jan. 5.—Joseph G. Robin, banker, promoter and financial operator of large undertakings, was lodged in the Tombs on an indictment charging him with stealing $80,000 from the Washington Savings bank, of which he was president.

On his plea of not guilty, bail was raised from $25,000 to $40,000, which was not furnished. Robin's counsel, former District Atorney Jerome, told the court that his client was without a dollar in the world.

The hearing on the petition of Robin's sister, Dr. Louise Robinovitch, to have him declared insane, is set for today.

THREE BURNED IN REDS' DEN

DEATHS FRUSTRATE A PLOT

General Demonstration Against European Royalty Was Scheduled to Occur During Coronation Ceremonies—England Made Ridiculous by Blundering In Raid on Anarchists—Summoning Soldiers Unnecessary

London, Jan. 5.—The charred and blackened body of "Peter the Painter," leader of the gang of anarchists which tore out a red page of Russian terrorism and rewrote it in English blood, was dragged from the ruins of the Sidney street den yesterday, while from all parts of England the press was calling upon the government for the sternest crusade against foreigdn anarchists in the history of the country.

The police have received further confirmation of the report that the band headed by two Russian terrorists, "Peter the Painter" and "Dutch Fritz," were formulating a general demonstration against royalty when their plans were cut short by death.

This plot is believed to have been aimed at King George and practically all of the royalty of Europe who will be in attendance at the coronation ceremonies here next June. The news of it was given to King George and he at once urged the police to wage a relentless campaign against revolutionary suspects.

A Russian woman taken prisoner in the anarchist citadel before the battle began is believed to have betrayed secrets and plans of the gang involving scores of anarchists.

Three bodies have now been taken from the ruins of the Sidney street stronghold. One of the bodies recovered had been identified as "Dutch Fritz," or Fritz Svarrs, as he is known to the police of three continents, but the identity of the third is still unknown.

Police reserves had to be called out yesterday to hold the street crowds in check. The tops of neighboring houses were black with people. Moving picture machines taking photographs of the battle's scene clicked for hours, and while the ruins were being searched.

The police investigation established the fact that the anarchists fired the building themselves, going to their self-inflicted doom rather than surrender themselves alive to the authorities.

After a day's reflection the sober thought of London appears to be that the marshalling of a great force of police and military to destroy a little nest of outlaws was a mistake. A number of provincial papers, too, criticise the authorities sharply.

The Manchester Dispatch says that Englishmen have been made to appear ridiculous and that the affair is one which the country will be glad to forget. The impression is gaining ground that the policemen should have dealt with the business without calling upon the soldiers, and that the summoning of the horse artillery was a particularly unnecessary move.

Some of the critics point out that instead of walking up stairs, kicking in the door and taking their man, or taking whatever any officer is likely to get in the discharge of his duties, they summoned the landlady from the upper floor and then reconnoitered about the house until they drew the fire of the anarchists from the windows of their room. The battle finally ended in the burning alive of human beings within the sight of as many of London's thousands as could crowd upon the adjoining rooftops.

WAR AGAINST TYPHOID

Prophylactic Treatment Recommended Throughout the Army

Washington, Jan. 5.—The success of the prophylactic treatment to prevent infection by typhoid has been so definite that Major General Wood, chief of staff of the army, has issued a general order directing all commanding officers throughout the service to use their best efforts to induce all officers and men in their commands, and all civilians connected with the army, to submit to vaccination against typhoid and thus reduce the liability of the spread of the disease.

There is no compulsory order for the application of this prophylactic.

BOILER INSPECTOR'S ORDERS VIOLATED

High Pressure or Safety Valve Caused Seventeen Deaths

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 5.—F. L. Forbush, inspector for the state police, stated, at the inquest of the Morewood Lake Ice company, at whose plant seventeen men lost their lives by the explosion of a boiler, before Judge Burke, that in three instances Shand and Lesure, the proprietors of the ice company, had violated his orders.

He said that he had instructed them to remove the bushing and the pipe, to set the pressure of the safety valve at seventy and to purchase a new two-inch safety valve.

Instead, he testified, the valve was set at eighty and the new valve was three and one-half inches instead of two.

CURE FOR THE "NERVES"

Italian Doctor Says That Silence Is the One Thing Necessary

Washington, Jan. 5.—Dr. Enrico Serafini of Italy says silence is the only cure for neurasthenia and all nervous disorders.

"Nervous depression and neurasthenia are due," said Serafini, "to a tendency to talk too much, a mental effort which excites the entire nervous system—the effort of thinking of making up phrases, of listening to and forming arguments with hearers, of being attentive to them, of co-ordinating the thread of conversation.

"Persons who are not loquacious, medical records show, have always been remarkable for their good health."

SOCIAL OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

Good Time by Those Connected with First Church

The annual social of the Sunday School of the First church, to the parents and friends of the school, was held Wednesday evening in the chapel, and was very largely attended. In fact it was the largest of the parties yet held by the Sunday School.

The pupils' parents and friends gathered in the chapel at 8 o'clock. They were welcomed by Supt. Johnson, who spoke briefly of the work of the Sunday School. Then followed an entertainment by the pupils of the school under the direction of Mrs. Isabelle Davis. At the conclusion of the entertainment an adjournment was made to the newly furnished rooms in the basement, where there was a social hour, during which light refreshments were served.

also of his appearance before the Naval board in favor of the removal of Channel rock in the Weymouth Fore river.

Mr. Crane then read the exhaustive report of the United States engineers on the Boston end of the proposed intra-Coastal Waterway, an extended abstract of which appears in another column of the Ledger. The Board was the first to get the report. Mr. Crane regretted that the route suggested would be disappointment to his friend Loyed E. Chamberlin of Brockton, as that gentleman had been foremost in the movement from the start. He believed the Hingham route just as good for Quincy, and suggested that a committee of three be appointed to furnish the engineers the data requested. (Applause followed the report.

It was voted to appoint the committee suggested and President Stone named F. F. Crane, E. W. Branch and E. J. Sandberg.

ANNUAL BANQUET.

Upon motion of ex-President Walter E. Piper it was voted to have an annual banquet as usual at an early date, which will also be a ladies' night. The following committee was appointed: H. S. Barker, W. H. Teasdale, T. L. Williams Charles C. Foster, Walter E. Piper, A. L. Whitman, John D. Mackay, Frank F. Prescott, Myles McInnis, Adolph Sandberg, John R. Richards and John G. Hall.

Quite a discussion took place on the advisability of a merger of different organizations of the city, and the following committee was appointed to interview the Merchants' Association and others: W. H. Teasdale, E. W. Branch and Walter E. Piper.

One new member was elected.

F. F. Crane offered the following New Years resolution which was adopted: "Resolved, that the Board of Trade back up its President in 1911." Adjourned at 10.25.

—If the receipts are to be no more than $4,000,000 and it is going to cost $17,000,000 a year to maintain and operate the Panama canal, then the tolls would better be revised upward forthwith. The nation did not build the waterway with the intention of making money out of it, but at least it should earn expenses. Probably when the canal is opened it will be found that the receipts will be larger and the expenses less than now estimated. —Framingham News.

A Newspaper Serial

It Was Written For One Purpose, But Accomplished Two Purposes

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

"What we want," said the managing editor, "in our serials is plot. We must have our characters or some one of them at the end of an installment hanging over a precipice a thousand feet deep, to be rescued in the next, tumbled overboard in midocean, left to drown, rescued again, etc. And you needn't bring it all out happily in the end. Kill the hero if you like. There's Tess of the D'Urbervilles, who was strung up at the end of the story, and the whole world read it and wept over it. Big sales, large profits."

"You want it true to life, don't you?"

"Truth is stranger than fiction. If you'll strike a plot that every one says couldn't possibly have happened you'll get a selling story. The critics will call it 'rot,' but the people will want to read it. Try to do something startling. My object is to put the paper on its feet. Many a newspaper has been made by an ingenious serial."

I had no confidence in the paper's being established by any serial I could write, however improbable I should make it, and I told Heaton so, but he told me to get out and do as he had instructed. He had no more time to talk about the matter. "You know what we want," he said; "go and do it."

I puzzled for a considerable time over a plot, but could invent nothing original. Then it occurred to me that there is nothing original except in real incidents that occur from time to time, and even these repeat themselves. After all, the novel Heaton had quoted had nothing startling in the plot. It was the writing of it and the tragedy at the end. I determined to be content with a commonplace plan and rely on hanging somebody to do the rest. I would drag in all the horrid details of an execution, and I hoped in this way to serve the managing editor's purpose to a limited extent. In order to make the story more harrowing I determined that the man who dangled at the end of a rope should be the innocent victim of circumstances.

Haycroft was my hero, Gwendolin Montclaveries my heroine. They loved. Haycroft was a distant connection to a millionaire who was a bachelor, and, since Haycroft was the only child of several generations of older children descending from the millionaire's only brother (or sister, for that matter), in case the millionaire died without will Haycroft would inherit all his property. Pitblado, the villian of the story, also loves Gwendolin, and I must invent some plan for him to get Haycroft out of the way. It was very easy for me to kill the rich man under suspicious circumstances—at least I had Pitblado manufacture the circumstances—which went to show that Haycroft had poisoned the old gentleman to get his money. The ingenuity required was to weave a lot of circumstances that would convict Haycroft and yet he must be innocent.

Nothing very original about that, you say. Well, if there is any originality in the matter at all I didn't supply it. Fate lays all the plots for stories, and all we scribblers do is to write them up. Nevertheless, though I didn't know it, I was doing the biggest job of my life. And do you know while I thought I was writing a blood and thunder love tragedy I was turning bitterness and gall in a real household into a great happiness.

The story was coming out, the installments appearing once a week. I had convicted the hero, and he was waiting the result of an appeal which I intended to have denied by a merciless judge. I was writing the description of the hanging and intended as soon as it was over to drive the heroine insane and conclude with her shrieks dying away gradually as doors were closing behind her in a madhouse. The issue of the paper had appeared containing an explanation of that chain of circumstances which had convicted the murderer. Though they were not to save him, I felt bound to show my skill in finding a key to them which if brought to light would save the victim. But, relying as I did on a double tragedy at the end, I proposed to bring out the key when it was too late to do any good. You see, I didn't intend to spoil the tragic effect by being chicken hearted, especially as the people involved were merely creatures of my own brain. Besides, I remembered the instructions of the managing editor, and I was to attract the attention of the reading public, which increases the circulation of the paper and brings in the advertisements, the ultimate object of the whole thing.

About a week after the appearance of the issue containing the explanation of the incidents that had proved Haycroft guilty, while I was engaged writing the removal of Gwendolin to a madhouse, a servant knocked at my door to say that a man was downstairs who wished to see me.

"Get out of here," I cried, "and tell the man to get out too! I'm doing work that must not be interrupted."

The maid went away and returned to say that she thought the man was having a fit. It required something of the sort to cause me to break off from my work, and, throwing down my pen, I hastened away. The man had buried his face in the lounge pillows and was giving way to violent spasmodic contortions. Hearing me enter, he arose and faced me. I never saw greater agony on any face. He looked from me to the maid and pointed to the door. I told her to leave us and closed the door behind her. Then I turned to my visitor.

"How did you get on to it?" he asked, his eyes starting out of his head.

"Get on to what?"

"My making up that prescription wrong."

"What prescription?"

"That killed the man in your story."

"Killed the man in my story!" I repeated, my eyes bulging with astonishment. I had been writing of an imaginary lunatic, and my first impression was that I had a real one before me.

"You called him Chesterton."

"Well?"

"Oh, my God! He was Middleton. You might as well have given the real name as one so like it."

I stood staring at the man for awhile, then said to him:

"My friend, you must pardon me for excusing myself, but I have no time to devote to cranks. I am putting the finishing touches to the serial you speak of, and the copy must be ready this afternoon. The hero has been executed, the girl who loved him has gone mad, and"—

I didn't finish the sentence, for the fellow fell in a fit true enough. I picked him up and laid him on the lounge. As soon as he quieted down a bit he started up and began to talk in a hoarse whisper just as people on the dramatic stage do when they have something harrowing to communicate.

"I'm a drug clerk. One day a prescription came in and I put it up. Hours after it had gone out I found a small vial of deadly poison standing on the board where I had mixed the medicine. I had taken it up by mistake and put enough to kill any one into the mixture. I darted out to stop the patient from taking it. A boy rushed past me selling newspapers and crying, 'Sudden death of Banker Middleton!' That was the name given when the medicine was called for.

"I went back to the store, told my employer that my mother was dying and left town within an hour. My secret has preyed on me, but I never dreamed it would involve another life."

The man had given the key to the circumstances that had convicted an innocent man as I had concocted it for my novel. I saw at once that it was fate and not I who had been writing a detective story, the parts of which fate had evolved in its way, not mine.

In a distant town the drug clerk had picked up a copy of our paper containing that installment of my story which gave my concocted key. It being identical with his own act. Later his eye met a newspaper item that the man who had poisoned Middleton for his money would be executed in three weeks. He had come to me as the author of the story, supposing that I had his secret.

In this sequel to the product of my brain I saw what the story itself would not produce. I am a newspaper man, and my newspaper instincts came to the front.

"You come with me," I said. "Put yourself in the hands of our paper, and we'll give you the best outcome to your fatal mistake one can secure for you."

He assented, and, taking him to the office, I told the story to Heaton.

"Shake!" he said, thrusting out his hand and grasping mine in an iron grip. "The paper's made!"

Then I called the drug clerk in and introduced him to the managing editor. Heaton gave him what money he wanted and told him to go where he liked—leaving his address, of course—and keep his mouth shut. The next morning out came scare heads announcing that a remarkable combination detective-fiction exploit had led to the discovery that George Barton, the man who had been convicted of the murder of Banker Middleton, was innocent. This set everybody agog for the next issue.

In the morning we announced that the paper had produced a drug clerk whose mistake had caused the poisoning of Middleton. A hint was thrown out that an author-detective who wrote exclusively for the paper had built a theory of his own as to the cause of Middleton's death and had written the story with the intent of bringing out the real culprit.

And so it came about that an innocent man was saved from a hanging because people like to read about such tragedies and because I was instructed to hang an imaginary character. But, after all, did it not come about on the principal of an ad.?

We got the drug clerk off with light punishment and had Barton up in our editorial rooms, where I was introduced to him as the man who had saved him from a felon's death. He asked me if I had really written the story on the theory that Middleton had been poisoned by the mistake of a drug clerk. The look of noncommittal wisdom I put on was a stroke of genius. It claimed nothing for me, but helped the paper.

There was another coincidence which I have left to the last, for it is the touching part. Barton was engaged to a very lovely girl. She had stood by him during his trial, confident in his innocence. Barton asked me to go to see her, and I did so. The interview was very affecting. She told me that if her fiance had been executed she believed she would have gone mad, as did the heroine of my story. Then I realized that better things had been accomplished by my serial than the building up of a newspaper.

COLLEGIANS WILL FLY.

Harvard and Columbia Arrange New Sport Competition.

The first intercollegiate aviation contest will be held next spring between Harvard and Columbia at Belmont park. The Harvard Aero club sent a challenge for a gliding contest to the Columbia station of the aeronautical reserve recently, and the Columbia students have obtained the permission of the faculty committee on organization to go ahead and arrange for the contest.

It is expected that the Columbia club will insist on motor driven contrivances.

If this suggestion is adopted the Columbia students will immediately begin work on a biplane. Philip W. Wilcox, who built a biplane at Columbia a year ago, will have supervision of the construction of the machine, but all the work will be done by students.

MAN WILL FREEZE TO DEATH

Dr. Wiley's Theory of Ultimate Extinction of Life.

The earth is slowly cooling and man will freeze, not starve, to death in the distant future, according to Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the department of agriculture, who forsook the subject of germs and pure foods long enough to address the Secular league at Washington.

However, he added, there will be fuel for at least another million years.

"In the future," he said further, "the air will furnish heat, fuel and power, and companies will be formed for utilizing it. This is not a theory, but an actuality of the future based upon actual conditions and natural laws."

FRANCE HAS WAR CENSUS.

Can Requisition All Aeroplanes. Horses and Automobiles.

The French government has already taken a census of all the horses and automobiles in France so that it can requisition their services in case of war, and it is now drawing up a law to provide for a census of aeroplanes so that it will be able to call upon all the monoplanes and biplanes in the country if need arises.

New Sign of Danger.

A zigzag arrow has been adopted in Germany as a danger sign to be displayed on high tension electrical apparatus.

English Etchings.

London's first lord mayor, Henry Fitz-Ailwin, held the office for twenty-four years.

The English Anti-suffrage society has just published an appeal for a half million dollar fund to be devoted to fighting the growing suffrage party.

It is estimated that to meet the demand for the new King George postage stamp 1,000,000 stamps will have to be printed every hour of the working day throughout next year.

Disraeli and Goldwin Smith.

It may have been partly by suspicion of my possession of an unpleasant secret that Disraeli was moved to follow me across the Atlantic and try, as he did in "Lothair," to brand me as "a social sycophant." His knowledge of my social character was not great, for I had only once met him in society. His allusion to the "Oxford professor" who was going to the United States was as transparent as if he had used my name. Had I been in England, where my character was known, I should have let the attack pass, but I was in a strange country, where, made by a man of note, the attack was likely to tell. I therefore gave Disraeli the lie, and neither he nor any of his organs ever ventured to repeat the calumny.—Goldwin Smith in McClure's.

Aigrets.

The easiest and best way to clean aigrets is to lay them on a towel, take a soft complexion brush, wet with warm water and white soap, rub lightly the way of the feathers until they are clean, rinse in warm water and hang in a cool breeze. It will take from two to four hours for them to thoroughly dry.

Not Always.

"Artists are generally temperamental."

"Yet I know one who is as cold and calm as a clam."

"I know another of that type, too, yet he is always making scenes."

"How is that?"

"He paints 'em for theaters."—Baltimore American.

JAMES H. STETSON THE KING AND MRS. STETSON THE QUEEN

Twelfth Night Revels Under the Auspices of Committee of Quincy Women's Club

In response to the proclamation of the Educational committee of the Quincy Women's club a large number of the townspeople gathered at Alpha hall Thursday evening to participate in the Twelfth Night Revels. A large part of those present came in costume representing many of the well known Shakespearian characters while others came in gowns that once graced the forms of their ancestors. It was a heterogeneous mixture of court ladies and gentlemen, gypsies, Indians, soldiers, college girls, monks, clowns, dominoes and other well known characters such as one might expect to find at any costume party.

The townspeople gathered at the hall at 8 o'clock and at a little after the revels commenced by a grand march headed by the Town Beadle and followed by Merry Christmas, the cake bearers and the party in general, representing the spirit of mirth and folly.

THRONE ELECTED.

After march crowd gathered in front of the throne which had been erected on the platform. Then the Beadle mounted the steps and in a loud voice read the proclamation. Twelfth Night had too long been neglected in Quincy he cried, and it is decreed that hereafter it shall be celebrated. For this occasion all laws are suspended. There shall be no curfew rung tonight and ye shall not be sober. He who may, shall dance with her that looks good to him, whether she will or not. He then cried that a King and Queen of the revels shall be chosen. Let the cake be cut, and he whose teeth find a Boston bean shall be King, and she who shall find the red ring shall be Queen.

KING AND QUEEN

The cake was deposited in front of the throne and Merry Christmas cut in it twain. The pieces were passed about, and Mrs. James H. Stetson having found the red ring was declared Queen, while James H. Stetson who had the Boston bean was declared King. They were escorted to their thrones and duly crowned.

Their majesties certainly looked every inch a King and Queen as they sat on their high throne and gave free rein to the revelers. Mrs. Stetson wore a magnificent black velvet gown with ermine cape, and on her head was a crown of gold. Mr. Stetson wore black knee breeches and doublet, his head also being surmounted by a crown. Their costumes being of the Louis VI period. Then the revels before their majesties commenced.

THE REVELERS.

Miss Helen Rhines was first commanded to appear, and she did several fancy dances. Following came a bunch of merry rollers, who sang a group of songs. They were led by Sir Eddie Angier, representing a pirate of the Captain Kidd period. Others among the rollers were Harry Slade, representing the music master; Fred B. Rice, as a monk; George E. Pfaffmann, as a court courrier; Dr. Edwin E. Davis, as a court courrier; Clarence Burgin, E. C. Haskins, W. F. Nichols and Paul R. Blackmur all of whom were in black satin knee breeches, crimped shirt fronts and wigs.

Among the songs sang were "Little old red shawl," "Health to King Charles," with solo part by Eddie Angier; "The Stein song," with solo part by Nichols, the gas man; and "Why is a wild cat wild?" Their efforts were duly appreciated by the townspeople who at this time had seated themselves in a circle on the floor that they might the better rest their weary bones, for the dancing that was to come later, as wellas not to obstruct the view of those in the rear of the hall.

The next number was a group of songs by Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell, who was followed by a group of young bloods from the High school who carolled carols. In this group were Roy Sidelinger, Arthur Bullock, Rhyder Gay, Winthrop Safford, William Cranshaw, Artemus Dingwell, John Anderson and Henry Huston.

SEVERAL OTHER HITS.

The high and mighty ladies, Misses Bass and Elwell, gowned as gypsy ladies, gave an amusing character dance that brought forth rounds of laughter. They were followed by three dainty little maidens, known as the Yum Yum quartet gowned to represent the three maidens in the Mikado. They were Misses Minnie Ella, Ruth and Dorothy Packard, and their number was a feature of the revels.

Then came Sir J. A. Barraja-Frauenfelder costumed as an Italian count, who sang an Italian love song. He was loudly encored, but could only be prevailed upon to respond by acknowledging his applause with a stately bow. Erastus Osgood, as a Spanish gentleman, gave several Spanish songs with banjo accompaniment. The last number on the program of revels was a baritone solo by William P. Thompson, gowned as a Mexican. Mr. Thompson received an encore that made the walls of the hall shake. He responded by repeating one verse of his song, but the applause still continued. The Beadle tried several times to announce that the program was over, and for all ye frolickers to join in dancing, but his voice was drowned and it was not until Mr. Thompson had again sung that the Beadle could be heard.

CIDER AND DOUGHNUTS.

At 10.30 the Beadle again assembled the revelers in front of the throne and the line of march was again formed. This time it was to go to Union hall on the lower floor. This hall had been completely transformed with evergreen and pine boughs which had been draped around the sides and end of the hall. In the centre of the floor was a long table upon which was displayed a keg of cider, apples, crackers and cheese and doughnuts. It was ye good old fashioned supper, of which all partook with a relish. The supper over, Alpha hall was again sought, where general dancing was resumed until near the hour of midnight.

THE CHARACTERS.

The character of the Town Beadle was represented by Delcevare King, who was the life of the party. Mr. King wore black knee breeches and black stockings, black velvet hat and carried the insigna of his office.

Merry Christmas was impersonated by Hon. John F. Merrill, and it was not until he had removed his time honored white whiskers that his identity was known.

The cake bearers were Bruce Saville and John Kitson.

Some of the other characters impersonated were as follows:—

Henry W. Tirrell and Albert M. Parker as Knights Templar.
Gertrude Shaw as a Chinese maiden.
A. F. Schenkelberger as Perriot.
Miss Gerna Saville as folly.
Rev. C. B. Ames as an Arab.
Miss Getrtrude King as a gypsy.
Mrs. J. F. Merrill as an old fashioned lady.
Mrs. N. S. Hunting as a Spanish lady.

REAL BOSTON PRESENTED

At Meeting of the Quincy Civic League

The Civic League dinner was held in the banquet hall of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday evening. Owing to various other diversions the attendance was not large, but it was a body of representative men and good results will surely come from the meeting. A very substantial roast beef dinner was served by a caterer from Somerville to about 30 men.

At the head table were Wendell H. Hull, president of the Civic League; David F. Edwards, secretary manufacturers' committee, Boston chamber of commerce; Ralph G. Wells, secretary of Greater Boston committee; Rev Edwin N. Hardy and Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra.

POPULATION AND AREA.

Mr. Edwards the first speaker, told why Boston needed enlargement in population and area. The other great cities of the country have expended in territory as the population has increased. In 1790, New York had a total area of three and one half square miles. Today it has 327 square miles of territory. Philadelphia increase from 4 square miles to 130 in the same length of time.

Boston starting with an area of four and three fourths square miles has now 38 square miles. The "Real Boston" including 40 cities and towns within a radius of 10 miles from the municipal city, has an area of 417 square miles and a population of 1,423,429.

The competition between cities of the United States is much greater than the superficial observer could imagine. Boston suffers in comparison with some of the more active cities, because she has failed to let the country know just how she stands. The people of the United States as a whole believe that Chicago is the living example of industrial energy and commercial

An example of divided effort in Quincy was clearly shown Thursday evening. The Civic League invited all people of Quincy interested in a discussion of the "Real Boston" question, to attend their banquet, yet less than forty were present. On the same evening the Merchants' Association held a meeting, and decided that they wanted to know more about the "Greater Boston" movement, and made arrangement for speakers. Clearly a merger or a federation is needed in Quincy. A federation could jointly hold a public meeting in a large hall and secure a representative gathering.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The theory that churches need business managers as well as pastors, advanced by J. E. McAfee, associate secretary of the Board of home misssions of the Presbyterian church, at a conference of lay workers in Pittsburg, isn't a bad one. A big church in these times is quite an important business proposition. It requires careful management along all lines. In the old days—in some churches today—a large share of the business management devolved upon the pastor. He was supposed to be a good preacher, a good pastor, joyful at the wedding and soothing and helpful at the funeral; a "mixer" with the young folks, a dignified and somewhat austere figure in meetings of the elderly; and withall one who could draw crowds to the church and could so run things that the church would gain in wealth and influence and standing. All this was quite a contract for a man, and demanded a many-sided individuality, but a host of pastors tried to accomplish it and many succeeded and are even doing so today.—Framingham News.

FIRST TRIP OF RIPPLE.

The Ripple, the latest otter trawler came into Boston with her first catch of fish. Capt. Michael Green brought his new steamer to T wharf on time. He had a good catch of haddock and a small quantity of cod. Everything worked well on the steamer, and Capt. Green had a chance to try her out in the bad weather of last Friday and Saturday. For the first time the three otter trawlers were at the wharf at one time. The Foram was on the South side of the wharf and the Spray on the north side, and she hauled out to give the Ripple a berth. The market has profited by the timely arrival of the three steamers, which landed 160,000 pounds of haddock.

TO MAKE MINORITY REPORT

Beveridge Will Ask to Have Lorimer's Seat Declared Vacant

Washington, Jan. 6.—Senator Beveridge, a member of the committee on privileges and elections, has decided to make a minority report in the Lorimer case and will make a speech asking the senate to declare the election of Senator Lorimer to have been illegal.

It is expected the report will be made on Monday and that he will speak in advance of Senator Owen, who was to have made a speech against Lorimer yesterday.

—The movement for across-the-State highways is passing from State to State out West. The commissioners for three counties in Colorado have started the demand for a great State road from Colorado Springs through Canon City to Salida, and across the Continental divide to the western slope. A State meeting of county commissioners in Denver is expected to indorse the project. The Legislature will be asked to appropriate $75,000 and the aid of convict labor toward carrying out of the plans.—Springfield Republican.

MERCHANTS

opportunity in Quincy for united effort. Merchants' week inaugurated last year was a good thing. It had increased home trade, and curtailed buying in Boston.

A letter was received by the association from Mayor Shea relative to a vote at a previous meeting against sidewalk oratory, saying the subject would receive attention.

Voted to ask the Citizens Gas Light Company to make a demonstration of street lighting in City Square as proposed last year.

Adolph Sandberg presented a scheme for rebates to encourage home trade, but no action was taken.

Votes of thanks were extended to President Sheppard, Secretary Foy and Treasurer Ames for their services the past year, and each responded.

Henry L. Kincaide brought up the subject of "Real Boston," which he thought merchants should consider. A bill had already been drawn for presentation to the Legislature. Some sort of a merger was desirable. It means a great deal to Quincy. The subject should be discussed at some future meeting.

R. E. Foy favored an address by a prominent advocate at the next meeting.

President Sheppard would carefully consider the movement. If Quincy once got in, it would never get out.

Eugene R. Stone, the president of the Board of Trade, was present and was invited to speak. He told of some of the improvements Quincy needed: Better lighted City Square; better street railway service which required double tracking of Washington and other streets; better freight facilities; development of water front; a public landing, etc. Organizations should work together. It was important to have the different wards of the city more united. Merchants' week had been a good thing and the people will look for it every year. We should have another Fourth of July celebration, and united effort all along the line.

Walter E. Piper of the Board of Trade was also a guest, and favored a public meeting in some hall for the discussion of the Greater Boston bill.

The date of the February meeting was left with the president, but will probably be changed to some Tuesday.

WAS IT A BLUFF?

Not long ago a young couple entered a railway carriage at Sheffield and were immediately put down as a bridal pair. But they were remarkably self-possessed and behaved with such sangfroid that the other passengers began to doubt if their first surmise was correct, after all.

As the train moved out, however, the young man rose to remove his overcoat, and a shower of rice fell out, while the passengers smiled broadly.

But even that did not effect the youth, who also smiled, and, turning to his partner, remarked audibly:

"By Jove, May! I've stolen the bridegroom's overcoat."

GOT HIS HALF ALL RIGHT.

"Got any work this morning,' Mistah Boyd?" asked old Billy Bulger, safe in the knowledge that no work would be entrusted to him.

"No," was the response; and then, before Billy could ask for the customary contribution, " but wait a minute. Lawyer Phillips has owed me $20 for twenty years. Collect it and I'll give you half." The merchant, knowing how bad was the debt, winked at a waiting customer.

The old man found the lawyer in the middle of a group of prospective clients and influential citizens. Thrusting through the group he called in stentorian tones:

"Mistah Phillips, suh!"

"Well," queried the lawyer, much annoyed.

"Mistah Boyd done tell me that you've owed him $20 for a bout a hundred years, and kin you pay him, suh."

The lawyer hurried to Billy's side.

"You idiot," he said sotto voce, "do you want to ruin my business? Here!" and he thrust a ten dollar bill into the old man's hand. Back to the old merchant toddled the old man.

"Well, Billy," said the merchant, "did you get it?"

The old man grinned.

"I got my half ,all right," he chuckled: "but you'd better look out when you go back to get your half—he's right smart hot over it, suh!"—Success.

BOY BANDIT IS AGAIN IN TOILS

Fifteen-Year-Old Lad Cannot Resist Temptation

EXHIBITS REMARKABLE DARING

Holds Up Woman on Dark Road, Points Revolver at Her and Demands Money or Her Life—Both Flee When Intended Victim Screams—Police Consider Precocious Stoneham Youth a Kleptomaniac

Winchester, Mass., Jan. 6.—Paul Boyce, a 15-year-old Stoneham boy, pointed a revolver at Miss Ellen McHale, a domestic, on dark Sheffield road and demanded her money at 8 o'clock last night.

Boyce was arrested an hour after the attempted robbery as he was about to board a car for Stoneham. He was identified by Miss McHale as her assailant. He confessed, the police say, that he held the woman up, and a revolver was found in his possession.

It was the third arrest of this 15-year-old boy on robbery charges. He is now on probation for breaking and entering charges in various places. One year ago this month he was arrested for breaking and entering the Wedgmere station in this town and was placed on probation because of his extreme youth.

As her assailant aprpoached her last night Miss McHale screamed and fled. He also fled without firing a shot and without even striking her. He merely had time to shout "Money or your life."

She ran into the house of Henry C. Metcalf at 31 Sheffield road. He called for the police, and she described her assailant. Officer McAuliff was among those engaged in the search for the would-be robber. He saw Boyce board the Stoneham car, and since he bore the description Miss McHale gave, arrested him.

Miss McHale said she observed Boyce loitering at the Wedgmere station, and turned round now and then to see him following her.

In Boyce's pockets at the station were found a number of tacks. They were taken out of the Wedgmere station windows, according to the station agent there, in exactly the same way Boyce was charged with having done one year ago. A chisel also was found on him.

The police consider Boyce a precocious youth. He appears intelligent far beyond his years, but they call him a kleptomaniac. He spent a few weeks last summer in Waverly at the McLean hospital for the feeble minded, but ran away from there directly to Canada, where he was charged with further robberies.

Boyce made such a good appearance in court that he easily won probation twice.

DENIED BY ROBIN

Aged Couple Claim to Be Parents of the Fallen Banker

New York, Jan. 6.—"What's the matter with you, anyway? What do you think you are trying to do?" asked Joseph G. Robin, the fallen banker, of a gray-headed couple who say they are his parents. They had been taken to the jail to identify Robin. This they both did as their son.

Annoyed, ill at ease, by turns smiling and scowling, he absolutely refused to have anything to do with them.

Again Robin denied that his parents were in this country, after the man had said Robin was his son, and at this fresh denial the husband joined with the wife in upraised hands and moans of grief.

Cookery Points

Pare, quarter and core one dozen good cooking apples, steam over hot water until just tender, then finish cooking with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and a grating of lemon peel and just enough of the lemon juice to keep the apples from sticking. When quite dry beat to a pulp. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter and cook in it four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. Add gradually the apple pulp and the yolks of four eggs, beaten slightly. Cook over hot water until the eggs are set, then put aside to cool. Shape into cylinder croquettes, dip into egg and crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat. If you do not wish to use so many eggs, three will do by substituting more cornstarch, a tablespoonful for each egg, or if you have stale sponge cake or macaroons or toasted biscuit substitute these for the eggs and cornstarch. The mixture should be as soft as you can handle conveniently. These are delicious served with a roast of pork or goose.

Spanish Nougat.

Ingredients are one and a half cupfuls of brown sugar, one-half cupful pale sirup, one-half cupful water, white of one egg, one teaspoonful vanilla, one cupful chopped mixed nut kernels. Boil sugar, sirup and water, stirring gently occasionally. When cooked sufficiently to reach the "soft ball" stage remove the mixture from immediate heat and beat the white of the egg to a stiff white froth until it can be cut through with a knife without breaking. On to this pour gently half the above mixture, beating it up constantly. The other half of the sirup still in the pan must now be boiled until on dropping some into cold water it becomes brittle, then beat this also into the half with the egg mixture. Now add flavoring and nuts. Have ready a pan lined well with waved paper and into this pour the mixture and allow it to get cold before cutting in cubes.

A Good Dessert.

Souffle of Apples With a Border of Rice.—Prepare the rice in cream, etc., as for rice cake, and keep it of a strong, solid substance. Dress it round a buttered dish about three inches high; give it a nice shape, level and smooth. Have ready an apple marmalade, very thick. Mix with it four yolks of eggs well beaten, a small piece of butter and a pinch of salt; warm it upon the stove; then take the whites of four eggs well whipped, mix very lightly with the marmalade, put the whole in the middle of the rice and set in a moderately heated oven. When the souffle rises high send in to table at once or it will fall. Some cooks hold a salamander over it just before taking into the room.

Filled Cookies.

Cream together one cupful of sugar and two-thirds cupful of butter, add one egg, two-thirds teaspoonful cream tartar, one-third teaspoonful soda, four teaspoonfuls sweet milk, one teaspoonful vanilla, flour to make stiff; chill, roll very thin, put filling on one cooky, lay another over it; bake in quick oven.

Date Filling For Filled Cookies.—Stew one-half pound dates and one-half cupful of milk and water together with one-half cupful sugar and one-half cupful shredded cocoanut till dates are soft. Cool before using.

Fine Peanut Wafers.

One quart of peanuts, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of granulated sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, two-thirds of a cupful of milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Chop nutmeats rather coarsely, cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and beat until very, very light. Add milk and flour alternately, then the vanilla, beating continually. Drop on greased tins from the end of a knife, placing them very far apart. Do not bake more than six at a time, as they are to be doubled over while hot, and they harden quickly.

Devil's Food.

Boil one cupful of bitter chocolate, one cupful of sour milk, one cupful of brown sugar and set aside until cool. Beat to a cream one cupful of granulated sugar, one scant cupful of butter; add three eggs, well beaten, and one cupful of sour milk. After this has been beaten add your cold chocolate, one teaspoonful of vanilla, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, sifted, with a teaspoonful of baking soda. Be sure to use baking soda and not baking powder. Then beat all together. Bake in layers in a hot oven.

Rocks.

One and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of butter, three eggs, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, three-fourth cupful of raisins, one cupful of chopped walnuts, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Drop in teaspoonfuls.

Used Instead of Bonbons.

Large raisins seeded and stuffed with minced walnuts make a nice sweet to serve instead of bonbons at the end of a dinner.

CUT A SYMBOL ON DEAD MAN

Anarchists Believed Responsible For London Mystery

THE SYDNEY STREET INCIDENT

Man Wanted by Police Believed to Have Escaped Flames—Gang Not Thought to Be Those Who Operated In Boston—Authorities Blundered In Not Capturing Desperadoes Alive and Securing Story of Plot

London, Jan. 6.—Another element of mystery developed at the inquest into the death of Joseph Beron, whose mutilated body was found on Clapham common last Sunday. The murder is attributed by the police to the Houndsditch anarchist burglar gang, two members of which were killed in the raid on their den Tuesday.

The physicians who examined Beron's body said that they found on each cheek a wound cleanly cut in the form of the letter "S." The witnesses declared that this deliberate cutting did not cause death, was quite symmetrical and obviously symbolic of a secret society. They had never seen anything of the sort before. The police accept the theory that Beron was killed by the members of an organization of veiled purposes who left the sign of their order upon the body of the victim.

The police are not satisfied that "Peter the Painter" was one of the two men killed in the Sidney street battle and are now working on the theory that he is alive and still at large. Two hundred armed officers scoured the district of the East End, where the outlaws are supposed to have lived, and another spectacular fight is promised should the fugitives be cornered.

Officials at the police headquarters, when shown dispatches from New York and Boston saying that the authorities of those cities believed that the outlaws killed Tuesday were members of a gang that had operated in America, said that the local investigations had not produced the least confirmation of such a theory. The names mentioned in the dispatches do not indicate any connection with the bands of criminals.

These dispatches stated that it was believed that the two men were wanted for the robbery of the jewelry store of Samuel E. Ullian in Boston, last March. The men were arrested at the time, but decamped while out on bail. The names of the Boston trio are Harry Rothstein, alias "Kavok the Blacksmith," Jacob Goldberg, alias "Red Tracy," and Goldberg's brother. Rothstein is said to have been the inventor of an instrument known as the "can opener," which rips up an ordinary safe easily.

The London papers publish interviews and statements from numerous magistrates and other officials connected with the administration of the criminal law, and they almost without exception advocate stringent measures against aliens and a more effective application of the existing aliens act. The newspapers also print many letters, articles and editorials from foreign papers, criticising the police methods and suggesting that a couple of desperadoes might have been smoked out or dealt with without such an enormous display of force.

Home Secretary Churchill, having been in charge of operations, will have awkward questions to answer in parliament, and the government will have a considerable bill of damages to settle for the burned building and the losses to tenants.

Thanks to the action of Churchill in not allowing the fire brigade to play on the flames until an hour after its arrival at the scene, all that is left of one of the bodies is contained in a handkerchief. The authorities are beginnig to realize that it was of the utmost importance that the desperadoes should have been captured alive. It is feared now that the full story of the anarchist plot will never be made known.

KILLED HIS GRANDMOTHER

MAIL FRAUD CHARGED

Broker Said to Have Engaged In Promoting Worthless Stock

Boston, Jan. 6.—William W. Wheatley was arrested at his place of business in Lawrence by postoffice inspectors, charged with fraudulent use of the mails. He is charged with having been engaged in the promotion of worthless stock, securing many victims in New England and Montreal. He was brought before Commissioner Hayes in this city and held in $3000 for a hearing next week.

Wheatley operated in lumber, grain and hay. His method was to secure quotations on car load lots of these materials, the inspectors say, and later to order from the farmers with whom he had corresponded, sample car loads. He would dispose of the materials for cash, it is charged, and then would complain that the shipment had been unsatisfactory.

CLOSING IN ON DAVILA

Revolutionists Planning to Make Attack on Capital of Honduras

New Orleans, Jan. 6.—That General Duron, revolutionist, commanding 2000 Honduran and Nicaraguan troops, is closing in on Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, and will attempt to take the city soon, is the news brought by the steamer Karen.

General Bonilla, formerly president of Honduras and leader of the revolution against the Davila administration, is aboard the gunboat Hornet, with forty Americans. The Hornet is to attack the coast towns and subdue them, while General Duron attacks Tegucigalpa and General Christmas sweeps into the capital from another direction.

Officers of the Karen say President Davila has only native soldiers and cannot hope to hold out against the revolutionists.

FOREIGN CONCERNS MUST PAY STATE TAX

Not In Conflict With Interstate Commerce Act

Boston, Jan. 6.—The tax on foreign corporations doing business in this state, which was enacted in 1909, was declared by the supreme judicial court to be constitutional and not in conflict with the interstate commerce act.

It was claimed by the Baltic Mining company, which maintains offices in this city, that a tax of $300 which it paid under protest to State Treasurer Stevens should be refunded to it because, it was claimed, the company was being taxed upon business done in states other than Massachusetts.

The court held that the plaintiff's regular place of business here is not used in the transaction of interstate commerce as are the passenger stations and freight houses of a railroad corporation.

The maximum limit of the tax is $2000 and is based upon the par value of the capital stock, and therefore, the court holds, is not a tax upon property.

EDUCATION OF THE CHILD

Supt. Parlin Believes in a Long Childhood

At the meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Massachusetts Fields school held in the assembly hall on Thursday evening, Frank E. Parlin, superintendent of the Cambridge public schools, spoke on the "Education of the child."

A short business meeting, at which the president, Miss Ruth Taylor, presided, and reports of various committees were received, preceded the address.

Not all education is received from books and the school room, said Superintendent Parlin, as he took Abraham Lincoln as an example. I know man men of power and ability that rank well with the college graduate. This is not an argument to omit the school, but rather that many have a wrong idea of what education really is.

Mr. Parlin told of his early education on the farm, and of the experiences he gathered in performing the homely routine of the country. There is education, he said, in harrowing burnt land with wild steers although the operation is conducive to strong language and does not incline toward piety.

The shop and the store have elements of education which are just as valuable. In fact, said the speaker, anything that will help the boy or girl to take hold of the handle instead of the tail of life is a step toward education.

Superintendent Parlin took up in detail the development and functioning of the brain cells, and showed the reasons that the sensory and motor areas of the child should first be developed.

He spoke a word for the restless child. When we make a child sit still, his energy is allowed to accumulate until bye and bye he has such a store that it slops over. Our discipline should not be a round of "don'ts" but we should furnish a shunting off place by suggesting something else for him to do. We should not bar the stream but should furnish an exit and complete the circuit.

Mr. Parlin mentioned the nervous child which he said was more often than not because the child was not disciplined. If this is ollowed to go on and the child not taught to practise inhibition it will develope a nervous organism which in the end will wreck itself. A spanking will generally provide a new outlet for the discharge of nervous energy. Any method may be used. but the good old-fashioned remedy always works. I was brought up on it myself, and always found it efficient.

Educators of today know what they are doing, and are aware that undeveloped nerve cells ought not to be used. A precocious child is a misfortune, and prodigies are to be pitied for the reaction of the undeveloped cells is but weak. These stop far short of their natural development and robs the child of its nerve strength.

Be thankful your child is a child and not an adult. It is the worst thing in the world to have the tastes and thoughts of an adult in a young body.

For a strong old age enjoy a long childhood and you'll get it. Some of the ablest men have remained boys for a very long time. To ripen too early means to decay too early.

Mr. Parlin's address was listened to attentively by a large audience and at its close he was extended a hearty vote of thanks.

The new electric lights were used in the assembly hall for the first time and the School Committee has promised a new piano for the school. Plans are in preparation for an entertainment to be given next month by the children of the school.

TEAMSTERS' BILL ENDORSED.

At a regular meeting of the Central Labor Union held at Wilsons hall, January 5, after hearing a report of the committee, and the coal teamsters bill of prices and conditions, and learning that the coal dealers refused to sign the new scale, the Central Union unanimously endorsed the coal teamsters bill in its entirety and appointed a committee to appear before every local union in Quincy and urge them individually and collectively to support the local teamsters in their "battle for Humane Rights and a Living Wage."

REAL BOSTON

activity, and yet figures have proved that in the rate of increase in the value of manufactured products from 1900 to 1905 Boston led Chicago by 9 percent, and was only 3 per cent behind New York.

The people of the west look upon Boston as a nice historic old town with little or no possibilities as an industrial centre. The magnificent water front is ignored, and the density of the population of the suburban towns is not known when they form their estimate. By means of a loose federation the surrounding cities and towns would retain their own individuality, but would be united with the metropolis in administrative affairs.

INDIVIDUAL WANTS.

Ralph G. Wells, secretary of the Greater Boston committee was next introduced. He unfolded the plan of the committee relative to unifying the interests of Boston with the 40 cities and towns of the Metropolitan district. The members of the committee are going to all of these suburban municipia to get the point of view of the citizens. One or two of them, Hyde Park for instance, are in favor of annexation, but the committee are inclined to believe that it would be unwise. Greater good can be accomplished they believe, by having the smaller municipalities, each with its own governing body. In to this they suggest a delegate assembly with only advisory power, one delegate to be appointed or elected in each of the 40 cities and towns. The value of this assembly would be that by means of an expression of opinion from all the suburbs, the manufacturing interests and all business interests would be unified to a greater extent, and mutual benefits of other kinds would lower the tax rate and give added protection to the individual towns and cities. Thus the movement would not be for the benefit of Boston alone, but for the upbuilding of all the suburbs included in the Metropolitan district.

DISCUSSION FOLLOWS.

After the speaker had concluded his remarks, questions were asked with regard to the feasibility of the scheme. All of these were answered satisfactorily, and the men seemed to think very favorably of the idea of loose federation.

At the conclusion of the discussion the president of the league appointed the nominating committee: George A. Sidelinger, chairman, Dr. C. T. Sherman and Amos P. Leavitt. The committee will report at the February meeting. It is expected that Joseph Walker, speaker of the House of Representatives, will be the guest of the league at that meeting.

Baker, in behalf of newly installed officers and the degree team, presented the district deputy with a cut glass bon-bon dish, followed by Miss Georgietta M. DELAY AT HOUGHS NECK.

There is still another delay in the opening of the new school building at Houghs Neck, and the 140 pupils will have to be patient for another week. It was hoped that the school would be ready to open next Monday morning. Supt. Barbour paid a visit to the school building on Thursday and was disappointed to find the building was not in proper shape for occupancy. This morning Supt. Barbour said that the opening of the school would have to be postponed until Monday, Jan. 16.

WARD FOUR IMPROVEMENTS

Band Concert, State Highway, More Cars, Banquet

A regular meeting of the Ward Four Improvement association was held Thursday evening and was well attended. Robert J. Teasdale, secretary for the year 1910, told what the association had accomplished during the year. Dr. John H. Ash, the treasurer, reported that all bills of 1910 had been paid and that there was a good balance in the treasury.

It was voted to get in touch with the Metropolitan Park Commissioners at an early date, in regard to having band concerts the coming summer on the parkway near Beadle rock, also in regard to having seats placed along the parkway.

It was voted to appoint a committee to look into the matter of having Willard street from the West Quincy depot to the Braintree line accepted and built as a State road. The committee appointed were James H. Elcock, Peter T. Fallon and Edward J. Sandberg.

The members were requested to make returns of tickets sold for the annual banquet to the secretary not later than Jan. 19, in order that proper arrangements might be made. George F. Elcock was appointed as chairman of the committee on decoration of the hall for the banquet, and empowered to call on any members he desired for help.

Following this there was a lengthy discussion on the crowded condition of the special cars in the morning to the shipyard and the Tubular Rivet works, also on the hardship to West Quincy people being obliged to pay two fares between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills. It was voted that the committee on transportation communicate with the street railway in relation to the same.

GALAHAD SOCIAL.

The Galahad club had a very pretty graphophone party Thursday evening in the parish house of Christ church, with an attendance of about 25 couples. Music was furnished for dancing by Frank Boutelier, as well as by the graphophone, which was operated by George Newcomb. Between dances, special selections were played on the graphophone.

The committee in charge consisted of Robert King, Ellis Young and Henry Boutelier. Outside guests were invited, and a number of them responded to the invitation.

The punch which was brewed by William Richards disappeared very rapidly, which signified that it was up to the usual sandard of the brewer.

The matrons for the party were Miss Gardner, Mrs. Armstrong, Miss Rhines Miss Pratt and Miss Mandigo.

The Galahad club is having a very successful and enjoyable season under the direction of H. C. Hallowell, Jr. In addition to the Bible study on Sundays and lectures on interesting subjects, parties of a character similar to the one held Thursday evening, are given each month. The next lecture will be on the 19th of January. Walter Burke will tell of interesting experiences in "Alligator hunting in Florida."

—The School Board of Minneapolis has issued an order prohibiting the wearing of high heels by the pupils in the schools. The objections of the board to the high heels are that to wear them is not conducive to health, that there is danger in going up and down stairs ,and that the practice of wearing them is largely an expression of vanity, and contrary to sound education.—Boston Transcript.

Iron and Copper.

The world could not get along today without iron and copper. Breaking Iron.

A simple way of breaking a mass of iron two feet square and four feet long is to bore a perpendicular hole one inch in diameter and between three and four inches deep. If this is filled with water and closed with an accurately fitting iron bolt one heavy blow on the bolt will break the mass into two pieces.

Mrs. Harry Slade wore an old-fashioned yellow gown, her hair ornament being a silver comb that was once worn by her great-grandmother; about her wrist was an old-fashioned hair bracelet that was once worn by her great-great-aunt.

Another very attractive costume was worn by Miss Frye. It was a white wedding gown that once graced the form of a bride 100 years ago.

Miss Helen T. O'Reilley was gowned as a tambourine girl.

Miss Clara E. G. Thayer as an old-fashioned lady.

Dr. Francis Abele as a court physician.

Then there were scores of others representing almost every known character.

The affair was pronounced a success from the start to finish, and for its success much credit is due the committee who had it in charge. The object of the affair was to swell the treasury of the Educational committee of the Quincy Women's club, to enable them to carry on the work of the summer schools. Mrs. John D. Mackay is the chairman of this committee, and labored hard for its success. She was ably assisted by the following who compose the members of the Educational Committee: Mrs. John D. Mackay, Mrs. George L. Badger, Mrs. Stanley Bone, Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs. William F. Cummings, Mrs. Percy Holman, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. James M. So great was the success of the revels, that it is a foregone conclusion that every year the Twelfth day after Christmas the revels will be repeated.

HANNON IS PERSISTENT.

Connecticut Man Says Mrs. Eddy Died Eighteen Months Ago.

Robert Charles Hannon of South Windsor, Conn., who recently made the claim that Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy had designated him as her successor as leader of the Christian Science church, persists that his statement is true, but he has taken no active steps to gain the place. After giving out his first statement Mr. Hannon, who has long been identified with Christian Science, made a second statement in which he declared that Mrs. Eddy died eighteen months ago and that in the few public appearances she was supposed to have made since that time she has been personated by other women.

Mr. Hannon asserts that the men and women who have been closest to Mrs. Eddy arranged the deception and carried it out. He says he hopes soon to have absolute proof of the truth of his statement.

The belief that Mrs. Eddy has been dead for many months, possibly for several years, has many adherents. Several years ago the story was published, and at that time a meeting was arranged between Mrs. Eddy and representatives of the press. The meeting took place in Mrs. Eddy's home in Concord, N. H., but it was surrounded by so much mystery and was under such conditions that it was not convincing. Some of the reporters who were present were sure that the pale, fragile woman they saw for a few moments was Mrs. Eddy; others said it might have been some other woman.

At any rate, the demonstration did not have the effect that the guardians of Mrs. Eddy hoped it would have, and the story that the aged woman's death had been concealed continued to be heard.

An Old Norman Tradition.

There is a tradition in Normandy that before burying a body all the ground around a dwelling should be searched in order to make sure that the soul has not hidden itself somewhere. At one time every family in Normandy faithfully observed this tradition, but now only a few pay heed to it.

Mrs. Ellen H. Richards Addresses Mothers' Meeting

The address of Mrs. Richards at the Mothers' meeting of Wednesday is continued from the Ledger of Thursday.

We do not have fat in sugar. What is the office of the fat in the body? There are two things. Within the fat is the one thing that can be laid up and stored; sugar is never laid up and stored, it decomposes too easily. Starch we believe is made over into fat. The body carries 6 to 8 pounds of fat, even if a person does not appear to be fat. Stout people are mostly water and not fat, although there is apparently little fat in much of our plumpness. Our bodies remind me of our old-time New England pantry where we kept our store of pies. The reason, I think, that we always made pies was because we had no hotel and always expected our friends to drop in on us at meal times. The body has to have its pantry of some kind. We might be out some day without food and the body must not be allowed to get sick, hence this reserve that it carries. You know that no young things have a great deal of fat. A broiler has very little fat compared to the old pullet. These young things have no place to lay up fat but uses all it gets. If it did not it would not grow as fast as it does.

MUST HAVE FOOD.

The child must not go without its food a day. It would not hurt any of us to go without food ten days. Even lean people carry enough fat to last some days, which has been proved to be true in cases of starvation. The young thing has no great surplus, therefore we must see that the child has these elements of fat fairly often. We cannot drench it with candy, butter or cream, because the digestive apparatus won't stand it.

There must be some way to protect these young children from eating the wrong thing. We tell them they must not eat this thing and that, but they have lost the instinct which tells them which to choose, the instinct which protects the bird, and which the child does not have.

You may say, were we not when young sometimes tempted in the same way? No. We had half a dozen kinds of food to go to. We came in hungry and mother gave us bread and butter, bread and cheese, or bread and molasses, etc.

We did not have the delicatessen shops and baker's stuff to tempt us. You see we are in a different condition from the early days when we had mother's pantry. Now we go to the food shops and the bakers to get what we want.

WHO IS TO WARN

the child of the dangers? Of course, we can always tell them that such and such a thing is not fit for them to eat, but will they believe it? I am always reminded of the story of Peter Brines who lived on one of the mountains for several years and then came to the town. It describes his going along and seeing the cake in the shop window. I believe this cake is made nowhere but in San Francisco, as I saw it there one time when there and said, "There is Peter Brine's cake." He tells of going in and sitting down, and eating a whole cake because he had been living on beans so long, and the advice he gave his grandson a few years later was, "Nothing ever can be as good as that cake looked." I often think of that when we are tempted by the looks of things. Can things be as good as these tempting things look?

We would be all right if we did not have so much of a thing so often. We are apt to have too much of one kind.

The trouble is that the child when it is of the school age forages for itself and is attracted by Peter Brine's cake. It is a new experience and the child is simply attracted by it just as the child is attracted by anything that has color. We should not blame the child. The instinct, as I said, is lacking. Somewhere the mother should give the child a little protection and how much is the crucial point.

I believe the first thing we should do the moment a child is weaned and allowed to forage for itself, is to have a certain line of food which it is allowed to choose from, and another line of food which it knows nothing about. That is the way I deal with my parrot. She always says, "Nice bread." There are certain things she never sees and never calls for, and that is the way to treat the child. As I stated before, the child is

A LITTLE ANIMAL.

Do we ever grow up to where we are not tempted? I doubt if we ever do, but the best thing is to accustom the child to that sort of food which agrees with it, and is good for it.

I do not know how we are going to protect the children. I do not see really any way but to let them find out for themselves and make themselves sick with the wrong kind of food, but unfortunately the thing we think is going to make them sick doesn't always do so, and all we can say is that the child must test things for itself. Physiologists agree on that.

After that comes the difficult time when the child is from 8 or 10 years to 14, the school age. The child is apt to have capricious appetite. I suppose you mothers have found that the greatest difficulty. In cases like this there are the many kinds of bread, the fruits which by that time the child can digest and then the vegetables.

A child should not acquire the habit of too much salt in its food, unless it takes heavily of fruits to counteract the balance. A certain amount of meat and fresh foods are all right. Sandwiches of all kinds, bread and butter, peanuts, figs and dates are very good, raisins above everything, dates if they are clean; then the dried fruits if one can't have the fresh ones. We make a great mistake by ignoring the dried fruits which can be soaked and cooked so well and they are so good for the child.

As to the proportions and weights, people differ so much as to the amount of energy they get out of the foods that it is difficult to give weights one should have. There are a great many made. I brought 1 or 2 of them which are rough calculations because it seems we are all very different, and at different times in life we are able to get more energy out of our food than at other times. I don't know whether the ages would be of any special value, but you might roughly take this for a child of about the school age.

Milk, 2 lbs, per day; 14 lbs. per week.

Oat meal, 2 ounces per day; 1 lb. per week.

Bread, 5 ounces per day; 2 lbs. per week.

Butter 1-2 ounce per day; 1-4 lb. per week.

Eggs, 1 each day for five days, 1-2 lb. per week.

Prunes, 1-2 lb. per week.

Rice, 1-2 lb. per week.

Prunes are exceedingly good cooked without sugar. If one wishes they can add sugar afterward, but never cook sugar in fruit.

That is one dietary which answers very well and with these substances can be used, a 1-2 to 3-4 of an ounce of meat a day, in any form.

Then we have the concentrated foods, as eggs and cheese. In this country we do not as we should. You notice I said the egg would be better boiled hard and powdered, never running. Cook the yolk and white separately then you will get them right. So with cheese, it is easily digested if finely powdered. The trouble with indigestion is because the cheese is so easily rolled up in a ball and will not digest in the stomach. That is the trouble with nuts, hard-boiled eggs, cheese, soggy, doughy bread and that sort of food which needs to be finely powdered, and that is where Fletcherizing comes in. Very few things are indigestible, but we do not chew them well. The child should learn to eat slowly and chew things until they are finely powdered. That is the advantage of the peanut butter which is powdered so much it is easily digested.

As I said before,

WE ARE ALL DIFFERENT

Some people can eat at once when getting up in the morning, and some do not want food so soon, but the child should have something because it does not have the storehouse. It does not matter if we do not have anything, but the child should have something, although I am in doubt about a heavy breakfast. It should take a good deal of fluid, and there is nothing as good as skim milk, as it is very digestible, then the child can have butter on the bread. Well-baked bread and some fruit is an excellent diet. For the very young child, under twelve years, it is too long to go from 7 to 12.30, it is usually better to have a little something at about half-past ten and especially for the younger child, but it depends on whether one eats enough at breakfast to stand by.

The noon time is when one can eat a more hearty meal. If one must have meat and pie that is the time to have it. As a meal a piece of mince pie is all right, but not as a dessert.

In the afternoon it depends on the amount of exercise the child has, whether a lunch is needed or not.

Then comes supper, which depends on how long the child sits up afterward. Now comes the question as to whether one should have soups or not. If one cannot have plenty of milk to drink, then one better have some kind of soup, but if one has plenty of milk it is not necessary. As to the other things, the various KINDS OF BREADS.

Here is one fault of this country we do not make as many kinds of bread as we might. We do not use the different kinds of flour to make the breads. The German breads are good. You notice even the children buy the coffee bread with the sugar on the outside and the cooky with the sugar on the outside or any of those things which are so simple and not highly flavored.

We have a very good dietary here in New England, but we have a habit of putting it all on one load and taking too many things at one meal, mixing them in such a way that they are not easily digested. So if it is the simple foods some children do not like and they probably have some reason back of it; somebody suggested that it was not just this or that perhaps some false idea about it as children often do.

There are comparatively few things that are really poisonous taken by themselves it is only when they are all on one load.

The great thing in the winter is that the child who has been quiet a long time in the school room should have SOMETHING HOT.

I believe even a glass of hot water is all right. Anything to start the circulation and give the stimulus that exercise would give if the child were out of doors. I believe the child should get plenty of fluid either hot or cold. In the summer a cold drink is more refreshing, but in the winter the hot drink is the more important to start the circulation.

I do not believe that children ought to have too much fat as a rule. That is why we have to devise pie crust for them sometimes. They do not want it in the form of beef or mutton fat and we must find some way to give it to them. I think we make too much fuss over the whims of a child. If we let them alone a few days they will come out all right as a rule. The children of the school age are just coming to where the little simple matters upset them in a mental way and it is often the attitude of the people around the children toward food sometimes that affects the children. Food is a necessary thing we must have it just as we breathe and do not make it hard for the child by talking about your food and other people's food. Do not force it on them let them come to it themselves. Be careful about talking about food at the table before the children because it is just this suggestion that we have to guard against.

GOVERNOR PLAISTED

PROHIBITION A FAILURE

Maine's New Governor Takes a Whack at No-License Law

Augusta, Me., Jan. 6.—Governor Plaisted, in his inaugural address, arraigned the Maine prohibitory law, declaring it had been a failure. "Not only has the purpose failed of accomplishment, but hyproicsy, corruption and disrespect for law have been begotten," he said.

Governor Plaisted is the first Democrat to hold the office in thirty years, or since the completion of the term of his father.

A bill to repeal the Sturgis law for the strict enforcement of the prohibitory law was passed to be engrossed by the senate under suspension of the rules. This was the first matter of legislation. The house has not acted.

RAILROAD BUYS LAND

Boston and Maine Expected to Soon Start Big Shops

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 6.—What may mean employment for thousands of workmen and the making of Tewksbury one of the busiest industrial towns leaked out when it became known that the Boston and Maine railroad has secured options on nearly 600 acres of land in the town of Tewksbury.

While the object of the move has not been officially announced, it is believed that the railroad contemplates the building of great centralized repair shops and car constructing shops to care for the entire railroad system of Northern New England.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

PARK THEATRE.

Don't you enjoy a rattling good detective play? Well, I am frank to confess that I do. I had read the "Arsene Lupin" stories by that clever Frenchman, Maurice Leblanc, and for two years I have been awaiting the coming of the great detective-thief play. "Arsene Lupin." I'd heard about the unprecedented success of this piece in Paris and how it duplicated this success during its long run at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, so I can assure you, dear readers, that I was more than glad to go to the Park Theatre, Boston, Monday evening, and see Mr. Charles Frohman's wonderful production of this fascinating detective play. First of all I must commend Mr. Frohman for the unusually brilliant cast he has selected for this play. William Courtenay, to my mind, the handsomest and most talented actor on the American stage, plays the title role. After seeing Mr. Courtenay's Duke of Charmerace I could readily understand why this debonaire and polished young actor was the idol of the matinee girl. You know I am a fussy old person but after seeing William Courtenay I felt so frivolous and young that I really wanted to meet him after the performance and find out just what sort of a man he was off the stage, but I was coldly informed that Mr. Courtenay never met "critics." In addition to Mr. Courtenay the long and distinguished cast includes an evenly balanced cast. As for the play itself it is interesting from beginning to end, filled with thrilling situations and containing the most tender love episode. Arsene Lupin is a gentlemanly and polished thief, the sort of man whom one expects to find in the most exclusive drawing-rooms and the best clubs. Although Lupin is a thief you cannot help but admire his splendid courage, his polished manners and most of all his ardent wooing of the pensive little Russian girl, Sonia. I advise all my readers to go and see "Arsene Lupin." If you don't you will regret it. It is the best play in Boston at the present time.—Marie Dascombe.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Some of the largest audiences in the history of the Castle Square Theatre have witnessed "Jack and the Beanstalk" during the past two weeks, and consequently that delightful fairy extravaganza will be continued for another and a third week, beginning on Monday. Mr. Craig's production is having an unexampled success, and praise is being bestowed upon every feature of it, including especially Mary Young's bright and cheery impersonation of Jack Hubbard, the lively dances and the charming singing of choruses and solos. The children are notably taking a delight in "Jack and the Beanstalk" but it is none the less pleasing to their elders. To see Sinbad the Sailor, Mother Hubbard, King Cole, the Fairy Queen, Little Miss Muffet, Mistress Mary, the Giant and a host of other familiar characters on the stage is a genuine novelty and pleasure. The demand for seats is so great during the coming week that immediate application should be made at the box office.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

For three weeks at the Shubert Theatre, commencing Jan. 9th, that most original of comediennes, Marie Cahill, will present in Boston her latest Broadway success, the unusual musical comedy "Judy Forgot," which comes here direct from New York with its famous "Judy Chorus" of sixty young and pretty girls. The piece is a prologue in two acts whose sparkling dialogue and lyrics were written by Avery Hopwood, the author of "Seven Days" and whose rich variety of tuneful melodies and song hits is the creation of Silvio Hein, composer of all Miss Cahill's successes. Marienbad, Bohemia, the locale of the piece, has provided Daniel V. Arthur with opportunities for picturesque scenic surprises and brilliant array of fascinating costumes. Judy's plot turns on the fact of a bride losing her memory and so claiming the wrong man, who is also on his honeymoon, for her husband. For Miss Cahill's art of comedy which is peculiarly and preeminently hers alone, the part of Judy provides oppulent opportunities. Mr. Hopwood has been particularly fortunate in fashioning what has come to be known as characteristic Cahill song hits and "Good Morning, Judge," "Whoop La-La" and the "Turkish Love Song" are melodious gems of their kind. Other compositions which aroused unusual comment are "The Song of the Honeymoon," "Give Me All the Flowers," "Women's Eyes," "My Toreador," the "Judy Waltz" and "Dream, Dream Man." The only matinees of the engagement will be on Saturdays. Seats are now on sale.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Miss Bessie McCoy and her lively crew of comedians, singers and dancers, who are presenting "The Echo" at the Colonial Theatre, have only one more week in Boston. Miss McCoy's engagement ends Saturday night, January 14. It is seldom that a musical comedy is so universally praised as "The Echo" has been. The Boston newspapers have been as one in saying that the piece is a wonderfully diverting entertainment. Following are a few extracts from the critical comments:

Globe—"There is fun and melody every minute."

Post—"Filled with catchy songs; plenty of laughs."

Journal—"Bessie McCoy is a bunch of happiness."

Herald—"A terpsichorean feast."

American—"A most superior kind of musical comedy."

Transcript—"Enough action to supply half a dozen musical pieces."

Traveler—"Star and whole company dance divinely."

Record—"Success."

"The Echo" is essentially a dance tournament, with 17 varieties of the art on exhibition, from Miss McCoy's own delicate art to the exotic hula-hula of the Hawaiians. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturdays

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

At the Majestic Theatre, Madame X, "the supreme drama of thrills" entered last Monday, upon the second week of its Boston engagement to an audience which filled the house to overflowing and gave vent to its approval of the stirring melo-drama in numerous scene and curtain calls. The Bisson Melodrama is evidently in for a long and prosperous run here. It is many years since a melodrama of this style has been performed here and the excellence of Mr. Savage's company contributes not a little to the remarkable endorsement which the play has received. There are no flaws in the cast, while on the other hand many characters are so strongly played that the impression created is a lasting one. Dorothy Donnelly, in the title role, is called upon to depict varying phases of emotion beginning as a frivolous Parisian wife who has committed an indiscretion and has deserted her home to return repentant and begs for forgiveness; then later as a poor drab of the gutter, a victim of drugs and drink, with one decent human impulse—to save her son from the knowledge of his mother's infamy—and finally the pathetic figure of the accused, nameless woman on trial for her life for having killed her worthless lover. The Raymond of William Elliott is scarcely less ably conceived or brilliantly executed. Never once does he suggest the theatrical in his remarkable plea to the jury. He is pointed, direct and sincere and the storm of applause which greets the conclusion of his address is spontaneous. Malcolm Williams as the happy-go-lucky adventurer, Laroque who will do anything for money; William H. Denny as the black-mailer, Perissard, and Harry C. Bradley as the simple hotel porter of the tawdry Bordeaux hotel—all give extraordinarily life-like representations.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The highest salaried woman on the stage today is Miss Eva Tanguay, who because of her wonderful vivaciousness has been called "The Madcap Comedienne." There has never been anybody quite like her on the stage, and her song "I Don't Care," has become one of the classics of vaudeville. Miss Tanguay has not been seen in Boston for a long time, not since she sang "I don't Care," "Nothing Bothers Me," and other original songs about herself which caught the public. This season she has been fortunate in securing even better songs than these, and has been making the success of her career in New York. Among her new songs are "Egotistical Eva," "An Animal in the Zoo;" "Personality;" and "Oh, You Money." In the latter she wears a costume of coins and throws pennies into the audience. There are thousands of these souvenirs kept in places where she has appeared. Miss Tanguay will unquestionably be the biggest attraction that will be seen at B. F. Keith's this season, and since the first announcement of her appearance, there has been a constant demand for tickets at the box office. Miss Tanguay will head an exceptionally strong bill, another feature of which will be what is without question the greatest manikin act that has ever come to this country. It is called Schichtl's Manikens, and was imported from Germany for the Keith circuit this season. The manipulation of these manikens will prove a sensation to Bostonians, and made one of the biggest hits of the season at the Manhattan Opera House in New York. Other features will be the Valdare Troupe of acrobats; Miller and Lyle in a comedy sketch; and a host of others.

WITH THE ACTORS.

"The Dollar Princess" is booked for Jan. 16 at the Colonial.

Jan. 16 David Warfield comes to the Hollis Street Theatre in "The Spendthrift."

It is useless to praise or criticise Sarah Bernhardt—she is something apart from all others, and no words can flatter her and few could hurt her or injure the unique reputation which she has held for a generation. This evening she appeared "upon the halls," if the magnificent Coliseum can be included in that category. She is to be with us for a fortnight, and she has chosen as her "turn" the second act in Rostand's stirring drama, "L'Aiglon." It is the act in which the son of Napoleon, his ambitions stirred once again by the memories of the veteran Flambeau, determines to fly from the Austrian Court, where he is virtually a prisoner, to France. This act certainly affords the greatest actress of modern times an excellent opportunity of displaying her versatility. In turn, we see her filled with the martial ardour of a Napoleon, and in turn overcome with the despondency and the vacillation of a Hapsburg. Her voice carries with the clearness that it ever did, whether it be raised in loud protestation or almost lost in the faintest of whispers. Her gestures are as great as ever, and never a one that is out of place or harmony. The physical energy which was once so marvellous may be a little less, but the difference is so slight that one hardly dares to mention the fact. Above all, Sarah Bernhardt does not fail in the slightest to fascinate. The applause which greeted her tonight was as great as ever. Her admirers, French and English, were loth to let her leave the stage, and time and again they recalled her, seemingly only with a desire to see her.—London Press.

"Do you want to know why some plays don't draw any better in these days?" asks the man who goes now and then to the theatre. "I'll tell you. Too little individuality; too much mass playing by the crowd in general. A play is announced to come to the theatre. Very good. We always used to ask, when we saw that an attraction had been booked, 'Who plays in it?' If we found the cast was headed by a well-known name we took a chance and went. We had respect for our stage idols; if one of them was in a play we felt that all would be at least reasonably wel l. The actor's personality saved loss to many a manager. How is it today? A play that has been a success in New York comes to town. We know the chances are that the original company is not coming. We ask who is? We are told that the management, Bjinks and Bjones—they are always carefully starred and advertised—will send a 'competent company.' What does that mean to us? Only that we must take another chance. We know nobody in the company; the management apparently doesn't intend we should. We have the name of the manager, but he isn't going to play any part. We have to have faith in him, however, or else stay away from the theatre. Actors nowadays are like puppets, and they are moved about like them. A comparatively few gain any name for themselves; the rest fill parts as they are told, and are sent thither and yon over the country, unheralded, almost unknown except to people who make their living in amusement ventures, and with no power in themselves to draw a dollar to the box-office. Haven't the managers erred a little by trying to save money by keeping as many actors as possible almost unknown to their public, that they might be in no position to ask for better salaries?"—Brockton Enterprise.

MOUNTAINS ARE SPLIT APART

Terrible Force of Earth Tremors In Turkestan

DEATH LIST WILL BE LARGE

Two Thousand Persons Reported Killed or Injured and Whole Towns Wiped Out—Soldiers Rushed to Stricken Territory, Which Embraces About a Thousand Square Miles—Communication Is Cut Off

Tashmend, Asiatic Russia, Jan. 6.—Two thousand soldiers, accoutred for relief work, have been rushed into the earthquake-stricken territory of Semiryetchensk, Turkestan, where fully 2000 are now reported to have been killed or wounded in the terrific and devastating earth tremors.

Practically 1000 square miles of territory are said to have been ravaged, with whole towns wiped out and wide fissures in the steppes growing hourly.

Reports from towns and villages on the edge of the death belt whither refugees fled in great numbers during the night, state that conditions in the interior of the devastated zone are horrifying beyond description.

A big detachment of troops was ordered to hurry at all possible speed from the Tashmend barracks towards Kyernia, a fortified town of 23,000 inhabitants, which is reported wholly in ruins.

At Kopal, a great section of the town lies in ruins, according to the meagre reports. Communication was practically cut off and from the interior of the earthquake zone no definite word came at all.

In the Sirke desert, east of Kopal, and upon the vast steppes stretching among the mountains, hundreds of members of Turkestan tribes are said to have been swallowed up by the earth.

Scores of persons perished in Lake Issy-kul. When the earth began to rock many fled into boats upon the water, thinking themselves safe from falling buildings or cracks in the earth. However, the surface of the lake became so violent that the boats were swamped and sunk.

So great was the force of the tremors that mountains in the Koongo Ala-Tue range were split open. The force of the shock was felt for hundreds of miles along the northern frontier of China. It is feared that an epidemic will follow the disaster.

Army medical men were commanded to accompany the relief corps which were sent with medical supplies into the stricken zone.

The fate of the soldiers in the barracks at Vyerny is in doubt. The garrison there had been but recently strengthened. Fleet couriers were ordered to proceed with all possible haste towards Vyerny and long provision trains were started in that direction.

TWENTY-TWO INDICTMENTS

Grand Jury Acts on the Los Angeles Times Explosion

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—The grand jury in the Los Angeles Times explosion case returned twenty-two indictments last evening. Wholesale murder, the outcome of a dynamite plot, is understood to be the charge set forth in the indictments, but it is believed that not more than three men are named in the true bills.

The return of the indictments was a sequel of a disaster that excited the people of Los Angeles to a degree that for a few days bordered upon panic and resulted in the offering of rewards aggregating $100,000.

Union labor, which The Times and its proprietors had opposed, was injected into the situation.

WAR ON TOBACCO TRUST

Reopened at Washington by Heavy Brigade of Legal Talent

Washington, Jan. 6.—The second battle of the United States government to dissolve the American Tobacco company, known as the tobacco trust, opened here with the filing of briefs on behalf of the company with the supreme court.

A heavy brigade of legal talent, including J. J. Johnson of Philadelphia, W. J. Fuller, Delancy Nicoll and Julian Parker of New York, appeared for the corporation. W. M. Ivins filed another brief. Oral argument was begun today and will last three days.

Fatality In College Fire

Granby, Que., Jan. 6.—Forty students in St. Joseph's college, a Roman Catholic institution, were routed from their beds by a fire which destroyed the main building. One of the teachers jumped from a third-story window and was fatally injured.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Principal Reason For Divorces, According to an Ohio Judge

Cleveland, Jan. 6.—The high cost of living is blamed for most divorces by Judge Neff, who, during the term of court just ended, granted 428 separations, breaking the record for Cuyahoga county.

High prices, coupled with small incomes, resulting in an intense struggle to keep up appearances and gratify social ambitions, are responsible for the wrecking of a large number of homes," said Neff.

"Perhaps if we adopted the prudential marriage system of Europe we should be better off. Courtship in America is often a mere social masquerade.

"Lovers never see each other except when at their best, and consequently the young woman marries a hero and the young man an angel, only to be disillusioned shortly after the wedding day."

CHILD BRUTALLY BEATEN

His Stepmother Arrested on a Charge of Assault

North Adams, Mass., Jan. 6.—Mrs. Agnes Smith is charged with brutally beating her 5-year-old stepson in a frenzy of spite because the boy's father got the better of her in a quarrel.

With one arm badly fractured, his back and abdomen a network of welts, the little fellow appeared in the Greylock school. When he sat down in his seat he collapsed.

The examination by doctors called in by his teacher disclosed the pitiful condition of the boy's body. He was hurried to the North Adams hospital.

Mrs. Smith, who is 26 years old, was immediately placed under arrest on a charge of assault.

GRACE'S CAP AND GOGGLES ARE FOUND

Relics of Aviator Picked Up In North Sea, Near Belgian Coast

Brussels, Jan. 6.—The Aero club received a dispatch from the president of the Ostend Aero club stating that an aviator's cap and glasses, probably those worn by Cecil Grace, supposed to have been lost in the North sea, had been picked up at sea off Mariakerke, on the Belgian coast.

Cecil Grace left England in an aeroplane on Dec. 22, crossed the channel, and reached the Belgian frontier, where he turned back and headed for Calais. After he landed a heavy fog rose, but he determined, nevertheless, to attempt the return trip to England. Without accompaniment, he started back, and was last seen by life savers on the Goodwin Sands, seven miles off the English coast. At that time he had evidently become confused, and was heading northward into the German ocean.

Of aviators Grace was certainly one of the most daring and most popular. He was one of the youngest, too, for he was only about 24 years of age.

MOUSE CAUSES TROUBLE

Puts Whole Town's Electric Lighting System Out of Commission

Plymouth, Mass., Jan. 6.—A tiny mouse put the electric lighting system out of commission for three-quarters of an hour. It crawled into the switch box at the power house, found a place in the insulation on the feed wire just big enough to admit its slender tail; then, resting its nose on the return wire, short circuited the system and incidentally gave up its own life.

From the time the power house was darkened after a terrific flash until the electrical engineers found the cause of the trouble, three-quarters of an hour had elapsed, and the entire town was wondering what the matter was.

JOKE MARRIAGE LEGAL

Outcome of Ceremony Performed For Amusement of Guests

Seattle, Jan. 6.—While celebrating New Year's at the home of a friend here, Charles E. Beeks, a Vancouver, B. C., banker, and Miss Jeanne P. Hartman went through a mock marriage ceremony for the amusement of the guests.

Some one later remembered that the man performing the ceremony had recently been appointed justice of the peace and the district attorney has held that the marriage is legal. The couple decided to let the marriage stand.

LARGE DORMITORY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Causes Loss of Over $100,000 at Mt. Herman School

Northfield, Mass., Jan. 6.—Crossly hall, the largest dormitory at the Mt. Hermon boys' school at Mt. Hermon, was destroyed by fire. The loss on the building is $100,000.

Additional loss is suffered by the students. About 190 boys were quartered in Crossly. All of them had left their effects in their rooms when they went away for the Christmas holidays.

The fire started in a pile of rubbish in one corner of the basement. A match was dropped into this rubbish by one of the cleaners who had been at work in the building.

Wednesday was the first day of the winter term at the school and only a few of the students had returned. Many of them were in the building when the fire was discovered, but made their escape. No one was hurt.

There is no fire department at the school and none in Northfield, the nearest town. With the majority of the students away no attempt was made to check the flames.

THE BARGE ACCIDENT

Injured Doing Well and Will All Recover

All of the men injured in the accident at Newcomb Square on Thursday morning, which resulted in the death of W. B. Hollis, are doing well, and unless new complications set in the most of them will be able to return to work in a few days.

One of the most injured was Aubrey Williams of Weymouth. Both of his ears were nearly severed from his head, and he is badly cut and bruised about the head. It will be some time before he is able to return to work.

James Hollywood of East Braintree, another of the victims was smoking a pipe at the time of the accident, and the stem of his pipe was driven through his lip. He also received a bad cut on the forehead. The other men are not seriously hurt as far as can be learned. All were more or less bruised and received numerous cuts by broken glass. They will doubtless feel a little sore and lame from their bruises for a time.

STRUCK BY ELECTRIC.

Alexander Cotton, aged 41 years, of Holmes street, Norfolk Downs, an oil pedler, was locked up at the police station Thursday evening for drunkenness.

Cotton was at Squantum on Thursday with his oil wagon, and according to the police had partaken of more liquid refreshment than was good for him. While returning home shortly after 8.30 P. M. Thursday, he got in the way of an electric car on Squantum street, near the aviation field, with the result that his wagon was smashed and he was thrown out. When the wagon was struck the horse cleared himself from the wreck and ran away. Cotton was put aboard the car and taken to the car barn. He refused to say anything about himself and as he was considerably the worse for liquor the police ambulance was called and he was taken to the police station and locked up for drunkenness. He received some cuts on the face and hands, but his injuries were not serious enough to call a physician. He was released in the morning after signing the usual statement that he had not been arrested within a year for drunkenness.

"I think Mr. Doolittle is an awful clever man," said Maud Littleton, in one of her confidential chats with her friend Polly Perkins.

"Do you?" said the friend. "I don't. I think he's awfully stupid."

"Oh, but he knows lots more than most men," went on Maud. "For one thing, he knows when to go when he's making a call, and for another thing he never puts his foot in it, for the reason that he never says anything." Harper's Bazar.

AN ENGLISH TRAIN WRECK.

Fatal Accident Occurred at Junction In the London District.

The English are prone to boast of the safety of railway travel in Great Britain, and it is a fact that there are fewer serious accidents on the English roads than in America. This may be partly due to the fact that England is more thickly settled, traffic is heavier and consequently more profitable, so the roads can afford to spend more money on safety appliances and for the employment of a greater number of men.

But accidents do happen in England just the same as elsewhere, and when they occur they are not always the result of causes that could not be avoided. When a speeding express train runs into a local train standing at a station it means that some one blundered—that the intangible something known as "the human element" failed.

In a recent accident at Willesden Junction two carriages of a train standing at the platform were telescoped by a moving train, two passengers were killed, and forty-five were injured. English papers commented on the seemingly miraculous escape of the occupants of the telescoped cars, which were jammed together in a tangle that made it seem impossible that any one inside could have lived.

Both trains were crowded, as the accident occurred during the rush hour of the morning, when business men and workers were hurrying to town. The accident is described as one of the most serious ever known in the London district.

LIFE OF CHRIST ILLUSTRATED.

Those who attended the illustrated address at Bethany Church a month ago will be glad to know that Dr. Hardy is to use the remainder of the same set on Sunday evening. All the lantern photographs are reproductions o f the paintings of the great artist, William Hole, who spent a long time in the most thorough study of life in Palestine and has succeeded better than almost any other artist in reproducing to the eye the actual conditions existing at the time Christ lived. Over forty pictures will be shown illustrating the later ministry and crucifiction of our Lord.

RAISING OF CHIEFS

Hodenosaunee Tribe Honored by Visit of Great Sachem

The council fires of Hodenosaunee tribe of Red Men were kindled at Greenleaf hall last evening for the raising of chiefs for the ensuing year. Ladies and a few palefaces were among the guests and the seating capacity of the hall was taxed.

BRIEFS

The Granite Railway Co. has declared a dividend of two per cent.

Mrs. Agnes Fletcher of Maple lodge will instal officers of Silsby lodge, K. and L. of H. of Brockton on Jan. 17.

Rev. Charles P. Marshall of the Washington Street Congregational church is to preach at the Old North church, Weymouth, Sunday morning in exchange with the pastor.

The supper to be given by the Blues of the Davis class to the Reds who won the contest will take place Monday evening in the Calvary Baptist church. Every one present will be called on for a toast and no one will know the nature of his toast until called upon.

The Granite City Tailoring Co. opened the store at 4 Maple street, in the Johnson building, today with a splendid line of fine woolens from the best foreign and domestic mills. In order that the public may become acquainted with this new firm they announce they will make a suit or overcoat from $15 upwards, and trousers to order for $3 and upwards.

Many were disappointed at the Revels Thursday night that Mr. Joseph Barraja-Frauenfelder did not respond to the hearty encore accorded him, for his beautiful rendering of the song from Rigoletto. In costume, if not in song, Mr. Frauenfelder was far from his native land, Italy, representing King Charles, the First of England.

The ice men have not been able to house any of their season's crop of ice as yet. Late in December the Meadow Brook company had ten inches of ice and was about to begin cutting, when it commenced to rain. There have been several days of rain since then which with the warm days has played havoc with what ice they had on their pond.

TO CELEBRATE FOURTH

Committee Hope to Secure Appropriation from the City

Although the Fourth of July, "the day we celebrate," is several months away, the permanent Fourth of July committee, formed last August, of the chairmen of the several committees having in charge the celebration of 1910, are bestirring themselves to make this year's celebration eclipse anything yet held in Quincy.

One of the great draw backs last year was the lack of funds, as not a cent was appropriated by the city. It was argued at that time that any appropriation of this kind should go into the budget, as there was some question about the legality of bonding the city for this purpose.

This year an effort will be made to have money provided in the annual budget. With this in view, the chairmen of the committees on finance, music, fireworks, water and field sports and publicity met Friday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade, to discuss plans for raising funds this year. Eugene R. Stone presided and Arthur W. Stetson was secretary.

There was an informal discussion on the outlook for next Fourth, and it was the general opinion that if everybody put their shoulder to the wheel the celebration of 1911 would eclipse anything yet held in Quincy. Before the meeting adjourned President Stone and James H. Elcock, chairman of the finance committee, were appointed a committee to take up the matter of having the city appropriate a certain sum in the annual budget which will probably be passed in March.

With such a sum as a starter the committee will feel encouraged to go ahead and work hard for the success of the celebration of 1911.

CONCERT AND DANCE

Given by John Adams Commandery Knights of Malta

There was a large attendance of sir knights and ladies at Electa hall last evening at the concert and dance given by John Adams commandery No. 355, Knights of Malta. The object of the concert was not so much to raise money as it was to bring the sir knights and their ladies together in a social manner, that they might become better acquainted. This object was certainly accomplished, for after the ice had been broken all entered into the enjoyment of the affair like one large family party.

During the first part of the evening there was an excellent concert. The program opened with a solo by Mrs. George Buckley and was followed by a comic song by John Grant. Then came a reading by O. Tremaine, solos by Mrs. James Bingham and John W. Tate, a comic song by William Walker, and a solo by George H. Jaques the sir knight commander. The program closed with a group of songs by Mrs. George Buckley. All of the numbers were enthusiastically encored, prolonging the entertainment until after 9 o'clock. Mrs. James Melville was the accompanist.

Immediately after the concert ice cream and cake were served, after which there was dancing until midnight, music being furnished by Melvilles orchestra.

The committee in charge of the refreshments were Robert Green, Oscar A. Barron and William R. McQuinn. Those in charge of the dancing were William Walker, John W. Tate, A. W. Coates and Robert A. Faulkner. Frank R. Melville was chairman of the committee in general charge.

ARLINGTON GLEE CLUB

Gives Entertainment in the Y. P. R. U. Course

The second of the series in the Young People's Religious Union course was given in the chapel of the First church last evening. The Arlington Glee club of 18 voices assisted by Miss Kate M. Thomas, a Boston violinist, furnished one of the most pleasing concerts ever given before a Quincy audience. In addition to the selections by the whole club there were solos accompanied by piano or guitar.

Mr. Robertson's solo, "Massa's in the Cold Cold Ground," was very well rendered. The singer showed surprising ability in mastering the extremely low notes with great clearness.

Mr McElroy sang a baritone solo "I'm a jolly old tar" in a truly nautical fashion, and Mr. Holmes accompanying himself on a guitar gave a very good lirical account of "Old shay and his automobile."

The violinist, Miss Thomas, appeared twice, and both contributions merited the prolonged applause they received. The Mazarka played on her second appearance was perhaps the most pleasing number although the 'cello imitation given as its encore was delightful.

The selections by the whole glee club were given with an accuracy which was admirable, and with excellence in harmony and modulation which took the audience by storm. All the numbers were so good that it is hard to choose between them. "The Bedouin love song" and "Mrs. Cosey's boarding house" were received with the greatest applause. "The Cannibal," another humorous song and "De Sandman," a plantation melody, were very well rendered. Practically every number on the program was encored and the entertainers were very generous in the length and quality of the selections given in response.

William Weston of Wollaston served as accompanist for the soloists and the violinist. Franklin Russell, was conductor of the glee club. The concert was attended by over 200 people all of whom appeared to be music lovers judging from the applause given the artists. The next of the series will be a dance on Feb. 3.

FUNERAL OF W. B. HOLLIS.

The funeral of Warren B. Hollis of Weymouth, the victim of Thursday's accident at Newcomb Square, was held this afternoon from his late residence on Commercial street. The services which were largely attended were conducted by Rev. Robert H. Carey, late pastor of the Baptist church. A quartette furnished music during the services. The burial was in the Village cemetery, Weymouth.

"Doctor," asked Mr. Tyte-Phist, "do you notice how lean I am? What will cure me of it?"

"Proverbs, 11th chapter and 25th verse," replied the old fashioned family physician.—Chicago Tribune.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Notwithstanding the criticism as to the new telephone rates, limitation of service, etc., it seems to be a fact more telephones are being installed all over Boston and the suburban cities and towns than ever known since the telephone came into general use. All exchanges are growing rapidly and Quincy apepars to keep up with other places in this respect.

Commuters of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. will be pleased if the plans for the proposed subway from the South Station to Park street via Summer and Winter streets are adopted. The street railway service in connection with the South Station has been wretched since the opening of the Washington street tunnel. On the Elevated but few trains are run, especially toward Dudley street; some waits of fifteen minutes occurring. It is not convenient to take the Atlantic avenue-Roxbury crossing line for the theatres and subway transfer, and the Hotel Touraine corner is a bleak one at which to make a transfer. People desire to take the cars under cover, and should have much better service.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

"Twelfth Night" will be read Monday evenings Jan. 9 and 23 at eight o'clock at the home of Judge and Mrs. Albert E. Avery, East Braintree. The following cast is announced:

Orsino, duke — Mr. Rogers
Sebastian, brother of Viola, — Mr. Kneeland
Antonio, sea captain friend of Sebastian, Another, sea captain friend of Viola, — Mr. Oakman
Valentine, duke's attendant, — Mr. Simms
Curio, — F. Everett Winslow
Sir Toby Belch, — Mr. Avery
Sir Andrew Ague Cheek, — Mr. Wiggin
Fabian, servant to Olivia, — Mr. Hewes
Clown, servant to Olivia, — Mr. Wm. Gallagher
Malvolio, steward to Olivia, — Dr. Gallagher
Viola, — Mrs. Rogers
Maria, Olivia's woman, — Mrs. Winslow

The next regular meeting is to be "Gentlemen's night" on Jan. 17 at 8 o'clock. Each member is allowed to bring one guest. Miss Mary Agnes Best will tell "true stories." She comes to the Philergians recommended by such people as Prof. William James, Ida M. Tarbell, and Ray Stanward Baker.

It has been asked that a class in millinery be started by the Philergians. All who wish to join such a class are requested to give their names to Mrs. Kane at once and if there are enough applicants the plan will be carried out.

Mrs. William F. Rogers and Mrs. Thomas Simms have been chosen to act as delegates from the Philergians at the midwinter meeting of the State Federation. Mrs. F. A. Bower was chosen as delegate at the State Conference of the home economic department on Wednesday Jan. 11 in Newtonville. Mrs. Rogers the president extended a hearty New Year's greeting to the members, and read a short collect for club women. A new rule has been established, namely that every lady shall remove her hat at all future meetings of the Philergians.

Dr. Benj. Sharp the speaker of the afternoon is state representative for Nantucket. As a zoologist he has been connected with the University of Pennsylvania and Wood's Hole. He gave a most instructive talk on "Alaska and Siberia."

Good Way to Mend a Rug Fringe.

If your rug has a torn fringe do not put it in the attic, but mend the fringe. It is very easy to do and well worth your pains.

Cut off all the fringe, get a piece of pasteboard four inches square and wind around it yarn of a color to match the rug. Wind the yarn one way around the pasteboard five or six times and slip it off. Then put one end of the yarn through the end of the rug and pull the other end through and clinch it. Keep this up until you get all the way across the end of the rug. If only a little torn and you can match the fringe exactly you do not need to cut off all that is there. This method, of course, is equally good for any fabric fringe.

DANCE OF TEAM DRIVERS

Large Party at Alpha Hall and Enjoyable Party

The first grand dance of the General Team drivers union, I. B. of T. C. S. of H., was held last evening at Alpha hall, and brought together a large number of the friends of the union and their ladies. Upwards of 100 couples participated in the dancing which was from 8 to 12 o'clock to the music of Wilson's orchestra. The dance order contained sixteen numbers with a plentiful sprinkling of quadrilles and other square dances, each number being dedicated to some person or sentiment. It was evidently expected that some of the union men would be somewhat lame by midnight, for the last waltz bore the sentiment, "Home Sweet Home, on Crutches."

E. P. Curran was floor director, John A. Harling assistant and Alexander Craig chief of aids. The aids were Sylvester Webster, Thomas Cahill, Walter McKenna, Edward Jolliccer, Jr., and Albert Trotman.

The officers of the union are J. J. Lyons, president; James Allerby, vice president; E. P. Curran, recording secretary, John A. Harling, secretary treasurer; Thomas Cahill, warden; James McInnis, conductor.

ELKS INSTALLATION.

Acting District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler William H. Barter of the Masachusetts southeast district will make an official visitation to Quincy lodge of Elks at its regular meeting next Tuesday evening at Alpha hall. As the deputy and his suite are well known orators, a rare feast of reason is sure to follow. After the meeting a banquet will be served in Union hall.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held Monday evening. President Bryant will probably announce the standing committees at this meeting and there is considerable speculation to learn upon whose shoulders the chairmanship mantles will fall. Who will be chairman of the Finance committee?

MEN AND WOMEN AS LODGERS.

"Men," said the pretty Second street widow who owns a big rooming house, are pretty much on the square as far as I find them, and I don't mean to say by that women are not. Tell the truth though, I would rather have five men in my house than one woman. Here is the reason: The other day I rented an apartment to a girl. She was a pretty, dainty creature who told me that she had a place at a glove counter in a big store down town. I have no reason to think that she has not.

"The first night that she came home she had about three handkerchiefs that she wanted to wash out. I got hot water for her.

"Next evening she came in with a request that she be allowed the use of my range and kitchen to heat some irons and smooth out a dress skirt that had been damaged by rain.

"Next evening she wanted to borrow my can of gasoline to clean a pair of gloves. Last night it was necessary to mend a pair of hose. I'm wondering what is going to happen to that girl next.

"Just to show you the difference," continued the little widow," a man came here a week ago and applied for a room. I hadn't anything attractive, but showed him the best in the house.

"'It's good enough for me," he declared. 'All I want is a bed to sleep in and some water and a towel in the morning to wash my face.'

"He has been in the house for a week, and I have never seen him since except when he came to pay the week's rent.

"Of course, this is all pretty hard to say against women, but it's a fact, and every rooming house owner in Louisville knows it, that women are hard to take care of."—Louisville Times.

OLD STOUGHTON SING.

The one hundred and twenty-fourth annual concert by the Old Stoughton Musical society was held in the town hall, Stoughton Sunday evening, before an unusually large and appreciative audience. The rendering of the different selections by the grand chorus accompanied by a most excellent orchestra was inspiring. The soloists in "Jehovah's Praise" were Miss Alice Belcher and Mrs. J. V. Beal of Randolph.

Miss Fannie E. Buck sung two pleasing selections while Mlle. Emeelia Ippolito also sung two pieces in a manner possible only to a trained singer with a wonderful voice. Had Bethoven been living we think he would be satisfied with the rendering upon the violin of his piece called "Romance" by Alexander Kartstein. Mr. B. C. Faunce of Abington with his thrilling bass not only caught us in spirit and carried us to the heights of "The Hills of God," but he took us to the very depths also.

During the evening mention was made and eulogy given to three distinguished members of the society who were called beyond during the past year. Prof. Hiram Wilde Sanford Capen, and Nelson Mann the beloved conductor. This was followed by the singing of "China" by the chorus accompanied by the orchestra.

"Why do we mourn departed friends
Or shrink at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice of Jesus sends
To call them to his arms."

It may not be known to all that this is the oldest musical association in the world, so far as known. On account of this fact it had the honor of singing at the World's Columbian Exposition held in Chicago in 1892.

Altogether this last concert was a grand success if a large audience and much applause are criteria.—H. A. Penniman.

NEW YEARS.

Philip Doddridge.

Great God, we sing that mighty hand
By which, supported, still we stand:
The opening year Thy mercy shows;
That mercy crowns it till it close.

By day, by night, at home, abroad,
Still are we guarded by our God;
By His incessant bounty fed
By His unerring counsel led.

With grateful hearts the past we own:
The future, all to us unknown,
We to Thy guardian care commit,
And, peaceful leave before Thy feet.

In scenes exalted or depressed
Thou art our joy, and Thou our rest;
Thy goodness all our hopes shall raise,
Adored through all our changing days.

POISON WAS IN WINE GLASSES

Impression of Doctor Called by the Elosser Family

STARTLING TESTIMONY GIVEN

May Elosser Also Suffered From Poison Which Killed Her Sister and Prospective Brother-In-Law—Physicians Declare That Both Victims Died In Greatest Agony—Father of Grace Contradicts Testimony

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 7.—Sensation after sensation followed in rapid succession last night at the beginning of the inquest to decide as to the manner and cause of the deaths of Grase Elosser and Charles E. Twigg, who were to have been married last Monday, but instead on Saturday were found dead sitting beside each other on a couch in the parlor of the young woman's home here.

The first fact that had not been known was revealed by Dr. Goard, one of the physicians summoned to the Elosser home, when he told how he had found May Elosser, a sister of the dead woman, in a swoon on the floor, frothing at the mouth and apparently almost in a dying condition from the effects of the poison which had killed her sister and her prospective brother-in-law.

This evidence even startled Coroner Beall and District Attorney Robb, who are conducting the inquest.

It had been a matter of general knowledge that, prior to the transferring of his affections to Grace Elosser, Twigg had been very attentive to May Elosser, who was just as pretty and just as vivacious as her sister.

It also has been proven that Grace Elosser and her sister May had not spoken for weeks, following the announcement of the engagement of Grace Elosser and Twigg.

Contrary to expectations, Dr. Brodrup, another of the physicians called by members of the Elosser family, testified that he had found two glasses upon the piano in the parlor, and it was his impression that the cyanide of potassium, from which Miss Elosser and Twigg had died, had been taken in these glasses.

Dr. Brodrup also testified that when he reached the house, he saw May Elosser lying on the floor. Her eyes were staring, he said, as though she had taken poison.

Dr. Brodrup told of administering spirits of ammounia to May Elosser, carrying her upstairs and bringing her to consciousness.

Witnesses also testified that the only things found in the pockets of Twigg was chewing gum, cigaret papers and a roll of money. There was absolutely nothing to indicate that he had any premonition of his approaching death. He had been cheerful and had spoken of his approaching marriage to numerous persons. Only two hours before his death Twigg had purchased a wedding ring.

In direct contradiction of all this testimony, Louis F. Elosser, father of the dead girl, testified to Twigg arriving at the Elosser home after first telephoning and asking permission if he might call, and the father declared positively that only Grace Elosser and Twigg were in the parlor at the time of the tragedy.

Mrs. Elosser, according to the father, had found the bodies and her screams brought May to the parlor. In the most matter-of-fact manner, the father demonstrated the manner of the finding of the bodies and the position in which they were found. Here he also differed with the physicians in declaring that both had gone to their deaths with a smile on their lips.

The testifying physicians all declared that both had died in the greatest agony, their hands being clenched, the young woman's at her side and Twigg clutching at his hair, apparently attempting to pull it out by the roots, so great was the pain produced by the poison.

According to the father, May, after leading her mother from the parlor and after the body of Grace had been carried to a bedroom, returned to the parlor, where she swooned. It was this swoon the physicians described as having been caused by poison and not by a faint.

Coroner Beall brought out the fact that, just prior to her death, Grace Elosser had eaten some fruitcake and had drunk some wine. It is the belief of the physicians that the poison was given to the young woman in this wine, and the authorities are making a supreme effort to ascertain who served the cake and the wine to the dead couple.

Woman Suffrage Bill Killed

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 7.—The house, by a vote of 123 to 97, defeated the bill to grant the women of Vermont the right to vote on the license question. The debate took a wide range and every phase was discussed.

Rome, Jan. 7.—Cardinal Francesca Segna, prefect of the congregation of the index expurgatorius, died of heart disease. He was born in 1836, and created a cardinal in 1894.

ATTRACTIVE ATLANTIC.

A stranger entering Atlantic ten years ago would have received a far different impression of that section of the city than one would at the present date. Formerly a wretched depot was the first offense to the eye, but this has been replaced by an attractive building. Through the efforts of the civic betterment committee the surrounding grounds are in good condition.

The regrading of the foot of Madison and Old Colony streets together with the steel railroad bridge has changed that section to a clean and attractive approach to the station and city.

The well-kept playground is another feature of the ward. While the new granite church with its simple lines and Norman tower makes a beautiful picture. The handsome Quincy schoolhouse is a public building any city would be proud to boast of.

Scattered throughout Atlantic cosey and attractive houses are springing up with great rapidity. In fact the larger percent of new houses is being erected at this end of Quincy.

Atlantic is certainly becoming a progressive place, and its growing popularity may be judged by the steady increase of visitors and home-makers drawn hither by the enthusiasm of the present residents.

SUPPER AND LECTURE.

The monthly supper of the Social club of Union church of Weymouth and Braintree, held Wednesday evening, was a great success. A goodly company sat down to the attractive tables which were served efficiently by a committee of men from the club. Mrs. A. D. Tirrell, the competent secretary was responsible for the abundance of the good things to which the company sat down, and the following men for the speed and efficiency with which the guest were served. Edward W. Hunt and Edward Frary had charge of the serving department and kept the folowing waiters busy: Chas. T. Crane, Arthur Hamilton, William F. Curtis, Edward Avery, William Wallace, L. W. Nash and William Morgan.

After supper the company adjourned to the main auditorium to enjoy John Harris Gutterson's organ recital. Mr. Gutterson's music is always greatly appreciated by a large circle of friends, and when before beginning his lecture Col. Anderson paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Gutterson ,the warm-hearted and spontaneous applause which greeted the Colonel's tribute showed how well the speaker had voiced the appreciation of the audience.

Col. Anderson's lecture which followed was one long to be remembered. For nearly one hour and a half the speaker carried his audience back to the heroic age of American history. Back to the stirring days of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, before the invention of the cotton gin, when the slave-owners, numbering 8000 wealthy and powerful men controlled Congress and elected the presidents for 13,000,000 men. Col. Anderson was one of that early band of Boston young men who went out to reinforce John Brown and preserve Kansas from the thugs and ruffians sent in by the pro-slavery party. Col. Anderson's description of his meeting with John Brown was dramatic in its interest. His meeting with Abraham Lincoln and his description of the great-hearted Emancipator, and his talk with the young soldiers, was of absorbing interest. Then humor and pathos mingled as the speaker with masterly dramatic power threw picture after picture on the screen of his auditors' imagination, showing the crude material out of which the Union armies were created, the difference between the fearlessness of ignorance, and the bravery which carries a trembling body right into the jaws of death, by the power of an unconquerable will.

Col. Anderson has a wonderful vocabulary and splendid artistic powers of word-painting. His stories of romance and heroism kept his auditors one moment on the borderland of tears, only to have the tension relieved the next moment before it became painful, by some humorous incident. There were moments, as when he described the Irish trooper dying in the hospital, speaking tender words of patriotism, as he looked up at the old flag, when one might have heard a pin drop, so intense was the interest of the listening audience.

The old heroes are dying off one by one. But those who were privileged to listen to Col. Anderson Wednesday night breathed many a prayer that the men of his type who still remain, may be permitted to stay many years longer among us to inspire and ennoble the younger generation with the example of their own dauntless patriotism.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL.

Charming New Art Lamps Give an Artistic Effect.

SOME OF THE NEW ART LAMPS.

Gas, oil and electric lamps in the very newest and most approved style are here illustrated. Perfectly fascinating is the banquet lamp of crystal, with an empire shade of pink silk. And the bedroom candlesticks, which, by the way, may be fitted with electrical attachments if one wishes to sacrifice the colonial effect, are very new, with their wind shield for the flame and glass prisms.

The artistic housewife studies the lighting of her home as carefully nowadays as she does the preparation of her menus, for she knows that as much of the comfort of home depends upon suitable lights as upon matters thought to be of more essential importance.

New Woman's College In Egypt.

The new woman soon may be an important factor in old Egypt. A woman's college has been started in Cairo along the same general lines as an American or English college for girls. The institution was started as a part of a university founded two years ago by Prince Ahmed Fuad Pasha, uncle of the present khedive of Egypt. The prince is enthusiastic about the new project, and, speaking of the school for Mussulman women, he said: "It was an experiment which I resolved upon after mature consideration, with, I confess, some little misgiving. For an oriental country, where the women are not emancipated and where, of course, they still wear the face covering called a yashmak, this was rather venturesome, but I am thankful to say that by the blessing of Providence people were very little scandalized, and so success was assured. The young ladies are ordinary members of the community who are not intended for any profession. In fact, we have not as yet any degrees either in law or in medicine, although that will come before long, I hope, with a suitable increase of the means at our disposal. Lectures on the history of womankind, on motherhood, on household life, on hygiene, and so forth, are the staple items in the teaching on the female side, and those on motherhood I consider of vital importance, more particularly in a country like Egypt."

Blue Horsehair Chair Covers.

There are no pale blue horses outside of dream books, but there are several pale blue horse chairs in Continental Memorial hall, in Washington, furnished and designed on historical models by the Maryland chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The chairs are after a pattern still extant in the Hamilton Fish family of New York. The frames are of deep mahogany, and all have great glass claws and well carved pedestals. The sideboard is of dark, carved mahogany, and on each side are big mahogany receptacles for knives, forks and spoons. There are roomy settees, and the table no doubt will furnish the model for the housekeeper who inclines to the most graceful and useful model of the colonial banquet hall. The drapings are to be of blue, in colonial prints, hung from the massive lambrequin frames which were so dear to the ancient dames of the republic.

A little girl went visiting one day, and after a time was given the album of family photographs to look at. She turned the leaves over carefully, and pretty soon closed the book.

"Well, dear," asked the hostess, "did you look at the album?"

"Oh yes," answered the little maid brightly; "and we've got one zactly like it, only the pictures are prettier."

The Social Realm

The week, in fact from the beginning of the holidays, has been a round of social gaiety, some nights there being several entertainments. The past week there has been great variety which should have suited every taste, good music, dances, card parties, banquets, lectures, as well as many delightful house parties.

Quincy society is now looking forward to the annual Valentine dance to be given at Music hall on February tenth by a committee of the Day Nursery association. A Valentine German for the children will be held Saturday afternoon the eleventh.

The Ladies' Whist club of Atlantic was entertained this week by Mrs. Rednor Coombs of Billings street. An especially pleasant evening was enjoyed by the members.

What a stately king and queen presided over the festivities of the Twelfth Night Revels at Alpha hall on Thursday night. Real monarchs could not have looked more kingly than did Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stetson. In our own city it would be difficult to find any one more suited. Some years ago Mr. and Mrs. Stetson took the parts of King Ferdinand and Isabella in an entertainment making a decided hit at the time and receiving many congratulations from their friends.

A society event enjoyed by Quincy as well as Braintree people is the annual ball of the Cochato club at their hall in Braintree. The eleventh annual will be held on the thirteenth and being under the direction of Mr. George E. Williams promises to be its usual great success and a brilliant affair.

* * *

Mrs. F. C. Babcock gave by special request, Thursday at South Framingham her lecture on Holland before the Framingham Travel club. The meeting was held in the handsome Board of Trade rooms in the Amsden building. The audience was large and appreciative and after the lecture an informal reception was held.

Miss Lillian Brooks of Montello is spending a week with her father at Houghs Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Stanley nee Gill of Hull avenue, New York are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son born December 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stecker were members of a gay New Year's party at one of the popular hotels of Boston.

The charity whist given by the ladies of the Quincy Catholic club Wednesday evening at Colonial hall was an unusually pretty as well as enjoyable affair. Much of the success of these whist parties is due to the energetic president of the club Miss Mary L. Gavin.

* * *

Rev. and Mrs. Frederick H. Steenstra of St. Chrysostom's church will be at home on Tuesday afternoons and evenings through January and February to parishioners.

Quincy and Wollaston people were guests at the wedding last week at Weymouth of Mr. John Donovan and Miss Elizabeth Hart Tracey. Mr. and Mrs. Donovan are to reside at St. Josephs, Mo., where Mr. Donovan is in business.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wigglesworth of 303 Adams street announce the marriage of their daughter Marian Epes to Dr. Lloyd Thornton Brown on Saturday, January 14. Miss Wigglesworth and Dr. Brown attended Milton academy at the same time, and were great friends throughout their course there.

* * *

Mrs. Walter F. Jones of Wollaston park, regent of the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R. was a guest last week of the Susannah Tufts Chapter of Weymouth, at the home of Mrs. C. Elizabeth Hobart. Mrs. Jones was formerly a member of this chapter resigning to form the new one at Wollaston, which already has a good membership and holds pleasant meetings each month at the homes of its members.

A distinguished visitor comes to our city on Tuesday afternoon, Ex-Governor Curtis Guild, who will be the guest of the Quincy Women's club and speak to them on the subject: "Origin and changes of the Flag of Massachusetts and of the American Flag." A large meeting is anticipated as members may invite men guests to meet Mr. Guild and also because he is an interesting speaker of pleasing personality and was a popular governor.

* * *

Mr. G. O. Shields, president of the League of American Sportsmen is to lecture in Livermore hall, Quincy Mansion school on Monday evening, the lecture to be illustrated by the stereopticon. Mrs. Horace M. Willard is extending invitations to friends of the school to enjoy the lecture with them.

The engagement is announced of Miss Clara Merrill, daughter of Mr. James F. Merrill of Dorchester, formerly of Quincy, to Mr. Roy Franklin Steward of Washington, D. C. * * *

Quincy people are becoming devotees to the opera and there is seldom an evening or matinee performance at the Boston Opera house that does not number several from Quincy in the audience. The season is to be a long one extending well into the spring.

Russell C. Low returned Tuesday from a ten days' visit to New York. Mrs. Low is continuing her visit, being the guest of friends in and about New York returning to Quincy later in the month.

SUBWAY TO PARK STREET

Recommended in Reports to the Legislature

Boston subways from Park street to the South station, under Winter and Summer streets, and from the South station to Andrew square, South Boston, are recommended in reports submitted to the Legislature yesterday by the joint board of railroad commissioners and Boston transit commissioners.

The report on the Park street-South station project is based upon studies made by Edmund S. Davis, acting chief engineer of the transit commission, under authority given by the last Legislature. Mr. Davis estimates the cost of the extension, with stations, connections and other apurtenances, exclusive of land damages at $2,600,000.

The committee's recommendation in the matter of the Park street-South station bore is for authority to construct the subway, or tunnel, "from the Park street station of the Cambridge connection, so called, under Boston Common, and running under Winter street, Washington street, Summer street, Dewey square and Atlantic avenue south of Dewey square to such point as may be requisite for a station having connection with the South station.

"The studies indicate that no special difficulties will be encountered in the extension of the Cambridge tunnel to the South station, and that convenient connections can be made with the Tremont street subway, the Washington street tunnel and the South station," says the report.

The Love Cure.

A set of sables in good time is a fairly effective preventive of a rapidly cooling love.—Lippincott's.

LIEUT. RICHARD M. SANBORN.

Richard M. Sanborn of Crescent avenue a highly respected citizen of Braintree and Quincy and a resident in the former town for sixty-one years, observed the seventy-fifth anniversary of his birth Dec. 29, at his home surrounded by his devoted family. Mr. Sanborn, the son of Dr. Samuel R. Sanborn of Northfield and Clarissa (Thayer) Sanborn formerly of Braintree was born in Northfield, N. H., Dec. 29, 1835. With his parents he removed to Braintree when he was fourteen years of age where he associated himself with Calvin Doane, a well known plumber in the town from whom he learned the tinsmiths trade. He remained with Mr. Doane until his twentieth year when he caught the gold fever in 1855 and went to California.

On his return from the west he enlisted in his country's service Jan. 30, 1864, to serve for three years with the third Massachusetts Cavalry. He participated in the Red River campaign in the battles of Winchester, Va., Fisher's Hill, Va., Cedar Creek, Va., and Opequon, thus serving under General Sheridan where his famous ride and charge was made. Lieutenant Sanborn made a good record while with the regiment and won for himself an honorable place in the esteem of all those who knew him as one of the great company who defended the honor of the flag in the hour of his country's need.

He was honorably discharged September 26, 1865, when he returned to Braintree and resumed his plumbing business. For over thirty years he has been the senior partner in the well known firm of Sanborn & Damon of Quincy and during all those years his name has stood as a guarantee of fair and honest dealing to his many customers both in Quincy and Braintree.

March 10, 1866, he was united in marriage to Eliza M. Thayer of Braintree, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Thayer, a well known and highly respected couple. Mr. Thayer's business was that of shoe making and it is a most interesting fact that ex-Gov. William L. Douglas, the successful shoe manufacturer of Brockton learned his trade of Mr. Thayer and was a member of the household for three years. This explains the life long intimacy of Mr. Douglas and the Thayer and Sanborn families.

Another fact in the family history is the pathetic loss of four of Mrs. Sanborn's brothers, George F., Loring W., Lucius U., and Charles S. Thayer, all volunteer soldiers in the Union army who died in defence of their country. They were Braintree boys and their remains are at rest in the family lot at the Pond Street cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn have one daughter, Mrs. Frank A. Reed who with her husband and three children reside at Crescent avenue making the one united family. Mr. Sanborn has one brother John C. Sanborn who for many years before his recent retirement was entrusted with many positions of trust in railroad circles and who is at present the guest of his son Dr. Fletcher Sanborn of Los Angeles, Cal. The subject of this sketch is one of the oldest living members of Rural lodge, A. F. and A. M. of Quincy and of the South Shore Commandery, Knights Templar. His host of friends wish him many continued years of health and prosperity.—Braintree Observer.

New Ruler of Siam to Make Many Changes

SIAM'S new king, who made a tour of the United States some years ago while he was the crown prince, will be known as King Chowfa, his full name being Chowfa Maha Vajiravudh. He was recently crowned with appropriate ceremonies, and it is expected that he will gradually make many changes in the government of his land. He has been well trained, and so far as education goes he is fitted to become a ruler who will be a great help to his people.

He is an interesting character in many ways, combining as he does the progressiveness of the west with the superstition of the east. He is entirely different from the men who have ruled Siam before him, though his father, the late King Chulalongkorn, was himself progressive and a believer in education. Dissatisfied with the schools in his own land, he sent his eldest son, destined to succeed him, to England and Germany to be educated.

After spending several years under a private tutor and in studying British military methods at Sandhurst the future king passed a creditable examination and was admitted to Oxford university, where he was graduated with honors. His success so pleased his father that ten of his stepbrothers were sent to England, where they went through Eton.

After finishing his education in England and Germany the future king visited the United States and studied political and commercial conditions here. He was particularly pleased with the school system of America, and he declared that some day his country should have similar advantages. It is believed that the first reform the new king will attempt will be to establish schools in Siam.

While he was in this country the future ruler spent some time at the world's fair in St. Louis, where he was a close student of exhibits.

With the exception of a few schools in Bangkok, the capital, education in Siam is now entirely in the hands of the priests, the boys going to the temples for instruction between the ages of eight and thirteen.

The teaching is most inadequate and elementary. By the precepts of the KING CHOWFA OF SIAM.

Buddha no money is accepted, but the pupils are obliged to dig in the temple gardens, do other labor or make presents to the priests instead. Girls, if they are not taught by their brothers at home, receive no education.

King Chowfa is twenty-nine years old. He rules over about 10,000,000 persons, 6,000,000 of them being in Siam proper. He speaks several languages and is familiar with the work of the best British, American, French, German and Siamese authors and has written several books and plays that were favorably received. He has appeared on the stage as an amateur and has shown ability that would enable him to make a living as an actor if it were necessary.

A little less than five years ago King Chowfa created quite a stir in literary circles of France when he published an interesting volume telling in quaint but charming style the mysterious and curious folklore of his native land. About the same time several of his dramatic productions were staged at Budapest and attracted much attention, not solely because the young monarch finished his education in that city, but because of their merit.

The new king of Siam knows every movement of the intricate British and German military tactics. He has mastered the science of soldiery to the last letter, for not only has he studied at Sandhurst, but he has been a cadet at Potsdam and has been attached to the Durham Light infantry at Aldershot.

King Chowfa operates a typewriter with the ease of an experienced stenographer. He was pleased with the first machine he saw as a youngster and ordered one made especially for him with a keyboard of Siamese characters.

The old King Chulalongkorn was so pleased with the idea and so tickled that his son had caused the inauguration of the Siamese typewriter that he ordered all manuscripts presented at court to be written in this manner. It was not long before the typewriter became much used in Siam.

NORA NAGLE MAY RECOVER

Bullet Passes Through Body of Twelve-Year-Old Girl

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 7.—Nora Nagle, the 12-year-old girl who was shot by William Hart, Jr., is resting comfortably at the hospital and the physicians say that in their opinion she has an even chance for recovery. The county solicitor has been notified of the shooting, but as yet no action has been taken against the Hart boy.

The boy is 16 years old. He says that he did not mean to shoot the girl, and that he did not aim at her. The girl, after being taken to the hospital, declared that young Hart pulled the trigger of his .22-calibre rifle three times, the weapon missing fire the first two times.

The bullet entered the girl's back, passed through her body and came out above the pit of her stomach.

ILL TREATMENT CHARGED

Swiss Newspapers Find Fault With Authorities In America

Berne, Jan. 7.—The newspapers here publish protests against the alleged ill treatment by the American authorities of seventeen Swiss watchmakers employed by a Michigan watch company.

They charge that the watchmakers were deported by the United States government last November on the pretence that they were contract laborers, that they were treated with exceptional harshness and were held on Ellis island for a month. Owing to this treatment, it is further alleged, the wife and the child of one of the men became ill.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND DEAD IN TURKESTAN

Latest Estimate of Number of Earthquake Victims

Tashmend, Russia, Jan. 7.—Reports from Russian outposts on the edge of the earthquake death belt where refugees have taken shelter, state that the dead in the Turkestan calamity may number 15,000.

The relief columns of soldiers dispatched to the scene have made little progress, owing to the vast cracks in the earth around which they have to make detours. It is believed that at least a score of populated communities have been destroyed. New rivers have been formed by the upheaval of the earth.

The town of Prejevalsk, a community on the banks of Lake Issikkul, is said to have been totally destroyed and many of its 10,000 inhabitants killed or wounded.

WAS LAVISH ENTERTAINER

Death of Baroness de Rothschild, Who Gave Much to Charity

Paris, Jan. 7.—Baroness Alphonse de Rothschild died here. Baron de Rothschild, head of the bread banking house, died six years ago. Before his death Baroness de Rothschild was among the most lavish entertainers of Europe, her vast wealth making it possible for her to outdo royalty.

The baroness' salons in the great palace of the rue St. Florentin, formerly the home of the great Talleyrand, were crowded by the elite of Europe. In recent years she lived a retired life, continuing many of the charities started by her late husband.

THIS MAN NOT SENSITIVE

Was Not Aware That Rifle Bullet Had Passed Through His Body

Sharon, Pa., Jan. 7.—To be shot through the body and not know it was the experience of Herman Runker at Mercer. Runker had been hunting and, going into the barn, stood the [illegible] door. It fell and was discharged. He did not know he had been struck until his cousin saw blood running down Runker's coat.

Runker walked to the house, where it was discovered the bullet had passed through his body, coming out below the left shoulder blade. He feels no ill effects from the wound.

HIDDEN DANGERS

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Quincy Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Quincy proof:

H. A. Vinton, 1366 Hancock Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble which had been in my system for at least ten years. I had pains in my back and loins and I believed my trouble to be rheumatism. I consulted a doctor and tried many remedies but found only temporary relief. Being advised to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and began their use. They quickly drove away the pains in my back and my health is better today than it has been for a long time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Boston Broker Placed Under Arrest by Federal Officers

ALLEGED SCHEME TO DEFRAUD

Fraudulent Mining and other Companies Said to Hae Been Promoted by Victor Weil, Who Is Held In $3000 Bail—Mining Claims Never Have Been Worked and Are Believed Worthless, Says Inspector

Boston, Jan. 7,—Victor M. Weil, president of the Inter-Trust Security company and manager of the Amalgamated Exploration corporation, whom the United States officials claim has promoted about one hundred concerns of more or less questionable worth, was arrested at his offices in the Winthrop building, charged with using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

The arrest was made by Deputy United States Marshal Ruhl and immediately afterwards Weil was taken to the federal building and a force of inspectors and helpers began to remove from the office papers, correspondence and other matter which they may wish to use in prosecuting the case against the promoter of alleged fraudulent mining and other companies.

Weil was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes and held in $3000 for a hearing next Wednesday. He was bailed later.

Blanche Morton, a stenographer in the employ of Weil, and Arthur B. Moorhouse, who is known as an agent for Weil, were summoned before Hayes and held as witnesses.

According to the postoffice inspectors, Weil's scheme was a cleverly contrived one which caught many victims in Greater Boston and elsewhere, mostly throught the sale of stock of practically no value. Inspector Clarahan, in whose name the complaint is made out and who has been in charge of the preparation of the case, says that the plans were carried out in the following manner:

In 1907 Weil secured six claims in California and Nevada, which had been located by Jefferson F. Howell, a mining engineer, and early in that year there was organized the Howell & Little Mining company, incorporated under the laws of Arizona for $200,000. The claims are said never to have been worked and are believed to be worth nothing.

One of these claims was purchased late in 1907 by a new corporation known as the United States Gold Mining company, which Weil had organized meantime, and the money obtained by the Howell & Little company from the sale of one of its claims was used to pay a 4 percent dividend on its stock.

At about the same time the V. M. Weil Exploration corporation was organized and purchased another of the Howell & Little claims for enough to enable the latter company to pay another 4 percent. The same sort of plan was carried out when the Nevada-Boston Mining company was organized and took a third claim out of the six at first in the possession of the original company. Rawhide-Boston Mining company was the next to be started under the same general idea and by the means of these the Howell & Little was enabled to pay four 4 percent dividends within one year and to force its stock up to fully double value.

Later all of these companies were consolidated under the general corporate name of the Standard Amalgamated Exploration corporation, one of those complained of in the inspector's action against Weil. The Standard Amalgamated is understood to have $1,000,000 capital. It was organized under the laws of Nevada about two years ago.

The Inter-Trust Security company, of which Weil is president, is capitalized at $25,000. That is said to have been the medium through which the stocks of the mining companies were placed before a gullible public. To put his companies on the market, Weil published the Mining Securities Review, the editorial column of which is headed: "A Guide for Investors."

The inspectors say that while several other people had at various times been associated with Weil in his questionable undertakings probably few if any of them were aware of the nature of the concerns with which they had permitted their names to become connected. The inspectors allege that Weil was practically the whole concern in each instance and that the Inter-Trust Security company, of which he was nominally manager, but in reality the "whole show," had reaped most of the profits from the stock sales since its organization.

BOY GETS LIMIT TERM

Judge Thinks Young Bandit Should Be Put Away For Life

Woburn, Mass., Jan. 7.—Judge Johnson said, in sentencing 15-year-old Paul Boyce of Stoneham, the youthful desperado who held up Miss McHale, to the Lyman school for boys, that Boyce should be confined somewhere for the rest of his life because the boy has shown himself to be very abnormal. When Johnson pronounced sentence on Boyce he gave him the limit sentence for the Lyman school.

The chief of police of Winchester went to the South station yesterday afternoon and there secured a suit case which had been left by the boy, which leads many to believe that he fully intended to make an extensive journey. In this case was clothing of various kinds.

FORTY-FOUR NEW SEATS

Plan Which Satisfies the Various Factions In Congress

Washington, Jan. 7.—The apportionment muddle was clarified by the introduction of a new bill by Representative Crumpacker of Indiana, chairman of the census committee, providing for a house membership of 435 members, a gain of forty-four over the present congress at the next session.

This measure is satisfactory to the Democratic members of the census committee and probably will be unanimously reported to the house next week. It compromises the claims of various factions, and probably will be enacted into law at an early date.

SECRET OF ELKINS ROMANCE IS BARED

Duke Stuck to Loyalty and Tradition Rather Than to Love

New York, Jan. 7.—Held confidential under a pledge of secrecy during his life, says the New York American, the death of Senator Stephen B. Elkins permits the revelation of the true reason why the marriage of his daughter, Katherine, to the Duke of the Abruzzi of Italy, did not take place.

As told in confidence to The American's informant by Elkins it was a case of an American father insisting that his daughter should either be given full recognition as a wife with all the honors appertaining to Abruzzi's position as a member of the royal family of Italy, or, failing this, the duke should renounce his allegiance to King Victor Emmanuel and become an American citizen, offering in the latter case not only to establish the duke in business here but to give the young couple a princely fortune as a marriage settlement.

In the end it came to a question between the duke's loyalty to his king and the traditions of his family and his love for Miss Elkins. Loyalty and tradition won.

NEW LIGHT ON STETSON CASE

Shed by Alleged Former Member of Eddy Household

FRIENDSHIP OF MANY YEARS

Love of Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. Stetson Unimpaired Until Alleged Cabal Was Formed to Oust New York Woman From Church—Christian Scientists Said to Disagree as to Whether Founder of Faith Will "Return"

New York, Jan. 7.—A remarkable interview with an alleged member of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, the Mother Church of Boston, said to have been at one time a member of the Eddy household, is published in the New York World, wherein the correspondent for that newspaper in Boston states that the directors of the Mother Church "prejudged" the case of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson and announced three weeks before Mrs. Stetson was summoned to Boston that the New York woman would be excommunicated.

The report declares that Clifford P. Smith, first reader of the Mother Church, announced to a friend that Mrs. Stetson's fate was determined long in advance of the session at which she was arraigned for heresy. It goes on to say that Mary Baker Eddy loved Mrs. Stetson, and that their friendship of twenty-six years was unimpaired up to the time of the forming of an alleged cabal to remove the New York woman from membership.

Meanwhile, it is stated in the article, dissensions exist among Christian Scientists, between those who maintain with the five directors that Mrs. Eddy is dead, never to return, and those who, like Mrs. Stetson's followers, affirm that the founder of the faith will return, and will "demonstrate" over death.

The informant of The World's correspondent goes on to say: "I am not now in the confidence of the directors, of the men who have taken charge of the earthly remains of Mrs. Eddy, but I do know that Mrs. Stetson is not alone in her belief that Mrs. Eddy will prove her demonstration, though she seems to be alone in affirming it publicly.

"It is only right to state here and now that Mrs. Eddy frequently spoke of the demonstration she expected to make over death. She did not say she would not die. On the contrary, she said she would, and all would, in this generation at least, experience the thing known as death. But she often told those of her household and a few of her intimates that she was confident she would prove there was no real death, by returning to lead her church and the world on to eternal victory.

"Mrs. Stetson in the old days was a constant visitor at the house of Mrs. Eddy, and they spent many hours together. The founder of Christian Science often spoke of her student in the fondest terms."

No explanation is made in The World's story as to the reason for Mrs. Eddy's action last spring in writing to the members of the First Church in New York and advising them to abide by the action of the directors of the Mother Church in excommunicating the former New York leader. It is regarded as incredible that Mrs. Eddy acted on other than her own responsibility.

EIGHT MORE TRUE BILLS AGAINST ROBIN

Larceny of $217,000 Is Now Charged Against Banker

New York, Jan. 7.—Eight additional indictments, charging the further larceny of $217,000 were returned against Joseph G. Robin, recently indicted on the charge of larceny of $80,000 from the Washington Savings bank, by the grand jury yesterday afternoon.

A subpoena summoning Mr. Jerome, Robin's counsel, to testify before the grand jury was served upon Jerome. Jerome had refused to produce books and records of the Railway Traction and Construction company, of which Robin was the moving spirit, on the ground that they might incriminate his client. Judge Swann will decide Monday whether they shall be produced.

SIX CHINESE KILLED

Perish In Fire Which Destroys Lodging House In Chinatown

New York, Jan. 7.—Six persons are believed to have perished in a fire which destroyed "The House of Five Entrances," a five-story lodging house in Chinatown. The building is in such an unsafe condition that Chief Croker ordered the search suspended.

The two bodies recovered are said to be those of relatives of Tom Lee, "mayor of Chinatown." The last fireman to leave the building said that one of the other four seen was that of a woman.

WHO SURRENDERED?

"Have you ever experienced the feeling, Mr. Johnson," said a young lady softly, "that some great opportunity was within your grasp, but you had hardly the presence of mind, the—the courtesy, as it were, to avail yourself of it?"

"Why-er-yes, Miss Stevens, I have at times had that kind of feeling."

Miss Stevens sighed dreamily and then there was a pause, during which the young couple sat in the semi-darkness of the parlor in profound silence. He sat down and looked helplessly at the glowing coals in the grate, with the feeling that every breath he drew was a mortifying and ghastly blunder.

"As you were about to say, Mr. Johnson," resumed the young lady, "there are times when it seems to all of us we must speak what is in our minds."

"Yes," vaguely answered the bewildered youth, as he tried to remember when he had begun to say anything of the kind. "Yes, of course."

"And while I am not so sure, I ought to listen to you, Mr. Johnson," she said with downcast eyes, "when you speak to me in this—this personal matter, yet—"

The young man could feel his pulse beat a tattoo on the drums of his ears, but he sat like a boy with his master's eye upon him and said nothing.

"By the way," exclaimed Miss Stevens presently, "I have a new book of engravings, Mr. Johnson, that I am sure you will enjoy seeing. It is a large book, and you'll have to move your chair. Yes, you can sit here with me on the sofa. I never thought of that."

The pictures danced before the eyes of the young man in blurred, confused images.

"Is'nt this engraving of the 'courtship of Florence Dombey and Walter Gay' perfectly lovely?"

"Wh-which is Walter?" he gasped.

"There! Look closer! Don't you see him?"

"Wh-who's he courting?"

"You'll have to come closer, Mr. Johnson, I declare, though"—and she looked archly at the trembling youth—"I am almost afraid to let you come any nearer. You look exactly like Walter in the picture."

And then the arm of the helpless young man stole in a timid, apologetic sneaking way round the waist of the charming Miss Stevens, her head sank upon his shoulder and the book of engravings fell neglected to the floor.

"Samuel," she said an hour later, as she toyed with the button of his coat, "you bold boy! How on earth did you ever muster courage to ask me to become your wife? You know well enough I never gave you a particle of encouragement."

The young man patted her condescendingly on the head, and then said proudly, with the voice of an Ajax defying the lightning:

"When I make up my mind to do anything, Stella, no obstacle on earth can stop me."

They were married just three months after this glad and joyful night; and, we are pleased to add, are very happy together.—New York Telegraph.

SENIORS WIN FROM JUNIORS

Basket Ball by Woodward Institute Teams

The second game in the basketball series at Woodward Institute was won by the Seniors yesterday afternoon by a score of 36 to 22. This gives the Seniors the championship of the school, unless they are challenged by one of the other classes.

The game was interesting throughout and three star players appeared prominently, Frances Curtin and Ruth Ekstrand for the Seniors, and Esther Dasha for the Juniors. Miss Curtin shot 11 baskets, Miss Dasha 10 and Miss Ekstrand 7. Grace Hunter of Juniors shot the one remaining basket. The game was more interesting than the first one played on Dec. 9. Fewer fouls were called, and more baskets were shot in this than in the other contest. For winning this second game the Seniors will be allowed to hold the silver cup offered by the school unless it is won by the team of the Sophomore or Freshmen class in a challenge series.

There is so much going on that dates are apt to conflict and it would be well to look over the Ledger list and when your date is arranged to send it to the editor that others will not select the same date. January and February promise to be full months with few spare dates.

John D. Cobb, register of probate for Norfolk county, reports 1181 documents filed and allowed during the year.

—The proposed New Jersey statute requiring married men to wear a thumb ring for identification, so that they shall not be able to pose as bachelors and make love to innocent ladies, should be amended in such fashion as to require that the ring be worn in the nose, just to convenience such wives as desire to lead their husbands.—Boston Herald.

For the Children

Prince Olaf, Who May Be King of Norway.

Prince Olaf, who may some day be king of Norway, is a little, yellow haired boy that loves nothing so much as to play with his pony, Chris. Prince Olaf's father is Danish and his mother is English, and so the small boy is both Danish and English as well as Norwegian. Several months ago he went to England for a visit, and there he saw his cousins, the children of the British king, and they all had ponies. They all could ride well. This made Prince Olaf envious. He could not ride, and he did not have a pony to ride on, anyway. So when he reached home after his visit in England he begged his father and mother, the king and queen of Norway, to give him a pony. It was not long before the little horse was brought to the royal stables, and Prince Olaf named him Chris for no reason that any one knows except that Chris is a good name. The pony follows the little prince about like a dog.

The Boys and the Peddler.

Even the roughest street gamin has a tender spot if circumstances shape themselves in such a manner as to appeal to his better nature. This was illustrated recently when an Italian peddler pushing his handcart along a New York street struck a stone and upset his vehicle, which was piled high with apples and pears. In a twinkling the fruit was rolling in all directions and a score of newsboys were filling their pockets. The Italian stood in hopeless despair, wrung his hands and burst into tears. The astonished newsboys at first laughed and then, apparently touched by the poor fellow's grief, drew near and emptied their pockets into the cart. Then they pitched in vigorously and helped the now encouraged man to gather up the remainder of the scattered fruit. The apples and pears were soon back in the cart with not one missing, and the Italian felt so thankful to the boys that he presented each one of them with a large apple. The boys laughed merrily this time and soon disappeared in the crowd.

The Anteater.

The anteater, as its name implies, feeds largely on ants, as well as on termites and various other insects, its long, flexible tongue acting as a hand for the purpose of conveying food to its mouth. The tongue of the anteater when protruded to its fullest extent bears resemblance to a great red earthworm, and as it is employed in its food collecting task it coils and twists about as if possessed of a separate vitality of its own.

Snatch the Handkerchief.

The two squads stand fifty feet apart, and on an Indian club halfway between is placed a handkerchief. At the word "Go!" a player from each side runs out to snatch the handkerchief and get back without being tagged by the other. If she succeeds her opponent becomes her prisoner; if tagged she herself becomes the prisoner. The girl who fails to get the handkerchief and fails to catch the one who did becomes prisoner.

Hate-to-Hurry and Put-It-Off.

Hate-to-Hurry and Put-It-Off
They had to go a mile.
"I'll rest," said one, "now I've begun."
Said one, "I'll wait awhile.'

Resting and waiting, they planned their trip,
And, lo, at set of sun
They rubbed their eyes in great surprise,
For neither mile was done.

And I heard the old clock on the shelf
Set up a sorry chime.
The wee hand told the seconds,
And the long hand told the minutes,
And the short hand told the hours,
And they all told Father Time.

Hate-to-Hurry and Put-It-Off,
You didn't mean to shirk.
You just went slow where you had to go.
You just delayed your work.

But he who rests by the busy road
And he who hates to start
They take poor place in any race
And play a sorry part.

So next time let the old clock tick
A merry, cheery rime,
When the wee hand tells the seconds,
And the long hand tells the minutes,
And the short hand tells the hours,
And they all tell Father Time.

TIE GAME BASKET BALL

Many Controversies at Oliver Ames---Quincy Game

In the hottest game seen in Quincy for many a day, Quincy High and Oliver Ames High of North Easton fought it out to a tie 19 to 19 in the High school gymnasium Friday afternoon. At the end of the game the visitors and practically everyone else believed that Oliver Ames had won. The deciding point was scored after the whistle blew but the refree called the foul before, and H. Chapman shot a clean basket tying the score.

At the opening of the game the visiting team showed that they were used to professional rules and resented the referees calling a foul for "too much mouth," etc. To be sure such things did detract from the interest of the game, but the referee was abiding by the rules.

Nelson, right forward for Oliver Ames, was the individual star of the game. He shot three baskets and seven fouls, and throughout the contest played clean basketball. Long also shot three baskets, and was responsible for most of the fouls called against his team.

Harold Chapman was the best man for Quincy. He shot two baskets and eight fouls, and played a hard, clean game all the time. Prout and Manning shot one basket each and Trask, who took Manning's place in the second half, also shot one and showed up very well in blocking and passing.

The game was prolonged until 5.30 owing to numerous intermissions for controversies and trips to the locker room to stop bleeding noses.

Oliver Ames showed more skill than Quincy, and if the game had been a cleaner one the former would probably have won. As it was the fouls enabled Quincy to tie their opponents, and if all that were called had been shot, Quincy would have won by 5 points.

In the second half, Oliver Ames weakened or else lost his eye, for only one basket was shot, whereas Quincy got three.

The game was not altogether satisfactory owing to dissatisfaction with the officials on both sides. Oliver Ames considered "Rus" as if he were hired by Quincy to win the game for them, and Pratt, the umpire, was looked upon by Quincy as one of Pluto's own. Everyone knows that "Rus" refereed the game as fairly as he could, but an attempt should be made to get neutral officials and thus ensure a less stormy conflict in the future.

As soon as our High school players get their eye for the basket, they may be considered as good as there is.

The summary:

OLIVER AMES		QUINCY

The River Nile.

The fertilizing matter which the river Nile distributes in Egypt in time of flood is estimated at 100,000,000 tons, or enough to cover a road from the earth to the moon sixteen feet wide by two and a half inches deep.

The World's Deserts.

The deserts of the earth cover 4,180,000 square miles.

Fish and Their Food.

Fish swallow their food whole because they are obliged to keep continually opening and closing the mouth for the purpose of respiration.

When Guests Appear.

For a good old fashioned treat when guests come in some winter evening try serving them with cruliers and apple cider and see how they will like the combination.

To make the dainties core some good apples, fill the centers with any kind of preserved fruit and bake carefully. Serve sprinkled over with a little confectioner's sugar and a spiced prune on the top of each.

White as a Color.

Speaking scientifically, white is a combination of all colors—that is, the pure light of the sun when decomposed by the spectrum analysis shows that it is made up of all the colors Speaking popularly, white is a color, as a paint, and is not a color, as when we say that a person was "perfectly colorless."

SPORTING NOTES.

In the Tech interclass meet held Friday afternoon, E. T. Marceau, '12 of Quincy, got second place in the half mile run. The time, 2.12 2-5, was good for an indoor track.

Newton High school defeated Thayer Academy at basketball Friday afternoon by a score of 45 to 20.

The Quincy High basketball team has great possibilities and will not lose a game this season if the men can get their eye for the basket. By tying Oliver Ames yesterday, Quincy proved her mettle and gave evidence that she is a team to be feared.

"Rus" Bates decided to give up basketball playing last week and this week he is of the opinion that the referee business is not all it is cracked up to be. Nevertheless "Rus" was up against a pretty tough proposition yesterday and he handled it as well as anyone could.

The Woodward girls show themselves up and coming in athletics. Quincy High school girls ought to be heard from pretty soon in basketball. A game between High school and Woodward would give the feminine portion of scholastic Quincy more to talk about than if the boys should win the State championship.

Between the halves of the High school game two teams without titles played a game without rules, which ended in an unknown score. D. Crane, H. Smith, K. Edwards, Larkin and B. Smith were on one team and R. Prout, A. Robertson, L. Chapman, H. Johnson and O'Connor on the other. W. Edwards umpired the game very fairly not calling fouls on either side.

In the Extension club basketball series at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening, Quincy Adams defeated Wollaston 41 to 15 and Atlantic won from Quincy Point by a score of 15 to 12.

GRANITE INDUSTRY IS GROWING

About 2000 Men Are Daily Employed in the Quincy Granite Business

About 200 More Granite Cutters Than in 1905

Through the kindness of James Duncan, secretary-treasurer of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America, the following figures are given showing the number of men employed in the granite industry of the city each month during the year 1910. These figures which are given in comparison with the number employed each month during cars 1909 and 1905 but do not include superintendents, foremen, apprentices, tool sharpeners and polishers.

	1910	1909	1905
January	1,073	1,010	881
February	1,057	1,015	895
March	1,057	988	836
April	1,070	1,006	841
May	1,157	1,067	913
June	1,171	1,080	960
July	1,171	1,071	980
August	1,130	1,107	959
September	1,159	1,112	927
October	1,171	1,093	927
November	1,118	1,089	919
December	1,118	1,081	931
Average	1,121	1,060	914

If we add to these the number of superintendents, etc., in addition to the manufacturers, we will have in the vicinity of 2,000 men who are daily employed in this one industry alone.

Taken in comparison with the figures of the previous year in will be seen that the industry is not going backward, but that it is slowly but surely going ahead, and that each year more and more men are daily employed in the business. When it is considered that the average number employed in 1905 was 914 it will be seen that business is growing.

A QUINCY MONOPLANE.

A gentleman in this city, having previously gained some notoriety in successful inventions, is at present spending his spare moments on the construction of a monoplane model. We are unable at the present time to give the details of its principles, owing to the utmost secrecy being displayed in the matter but we are safe in stating that when it is brought forth for trial from a certain dark cellar on Granite street, that a surprise is in store for aviators and others. The inventor and his movements are being closely watched by the curious ones, and we hope in a short while to give a more minute description of the machine.

PURSE FOR MRS. RICHARDS.

Those who attended the Mothers' Association meeting last week, and those who read in the Daily Ledger the address of Mrs. Ellen H. Richards on "Food for children" are pleased to that her work is appreciated.

A complimentary luncheon was tendered on Saturday to Mrs. Richards, who is a member of the Technology faculty and a graduate of the institute, at Technology union by the association of the women of Technology. The occasion was in commemoration of the conferring of the honorary degree of doctor of science upon Mrs. Richards by Smith college in October last. Almost 100 members of the association and guests were present at the luncheon. Susan Murray of Boston on behalf of the association, presented Mrs. Richards with a purse of $1000 to be used by her in carrying on her work of research at the institute.

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

Work was commenced this noon making extensive repairs to the Boston end of the Neponset bridge. New timbers are to be put in and new planking. The bridge will not be closed to teams, but cars from Quincy will only run as far as the draw and passengers will have to transfer to the Elevated cars. Cars from Dudley street for Quincy will run only to the Elevated car barn, and passengers will have to walk to the draw to get cars for Quincy.

NAVY YARDS MAY BUILD

Asked to Submit Bids for New Revenue Cutters

Rear Admiral John C. Fremont, commandant at the Charlestown navy yard has begun active work in getting out preliminary estimates of the cost to construct at the yard one of the new revenue cutters authorized by congress, says a Boston paper.

Bids for the construction of the cutters were called for from private firms, but all were rejected as being above the appropriation. As all revenue cutters are now practically auxiliary naval vessels, the government decided to build them at navy yards.

The Boston, New York and Norfolk yards on this coast and the Mare island and Puget sound navy yards on the pacific coast have been asked to submit estimates. It is generally conceded that the Boston yard will be given one of the ships, as the New York and Norfolk yards now have naval vessels under construction, and as the local yard has the equipment and force for building a boat of the size of the cutters, only a few years ago completing the steel practice sailing ship Severn, which is about the same size and hull type.

The new cutters, according to the plans received at the Boston yard, are to be 200 feet long, 34 feet beam and have a tonnage displacement or weight of 1224 tons. The largest steel ship built at the local yard in recent years was the Severn, which was originally named the Chesapeake and which displaces but 1175 tons.

TODAY'S COURT.

Frederick Anderson was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy John Maguire $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth and Frederick J. Spargo $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Edward Brown and Andreas Randall were arraigned for mutual assault at Quincy. They were fined $10 each.

The continued case of John Burke for assault on Lawrence M. Norris at Quincy was heard. He was fined $15.

MUTUAL ASSAULT.

Andreas Randall and Edward Brown were arrested in City Square late Saturday night by Officer Forde, for mutual assault. The two young men came from Boston on the late train, and it is said they had some trouble over a girl. After leaving the train they engaged in a fistic encounter and were hammering each other in good shape when Officer Forde stepped in as referee, and locked both up. In court they were assessed $15 each.

—At Lowell a committee of 60 citizens is drafting a new city charter which, it is understood, will be on the lines of the new charters at Haverhill and Lynn. The committee has voted to fix the mayor's salary at $3,000 a year and the other members at $2,500.

NEW PLAN AT QUINCY COURT

Fines in Some Cases to be Paid in Installments

A new system of probation went into effect at the District court this morning. Heretofore it has often been the rule, when a fine was imposed for a misdemeanor, to suspend the sentence for a month or two, in order to give the parties time to raise the amount of their fines.

It has been found that in many cases the parties have abused this privilege, and when the suspension expired they were among the missing and the fine still unpaid.

The new rule that wen into effect this morning was that after a fine was imposed the case was placed on probation for two or three months, and the defendents ordered to pay $1 a week toward the liquidation of their fine. In this way the probation officer will be able to get after these men quicker in case they do not pay as ordered.

AMMUNITION BARGE.

The new steel ammunition carrying barge, built at the Charlestown navy yard last year, will have its first work today. It will be loaded with all the ammunition now aboard the battleship Missouri and a part of the ammunition of the battleship New Jersey, both of which are in reserve at the navy yard, and will take it down to the new naval magazine in Weymouth.

CONGRESSMAN ILL.

Congressman Curley was taken seriously ill Sunday at his home, 105 Mt. Pleasant avenue, while eating dinner. He was removed to the City Hospital where he was later operated upon, and it is reported that he is resting comfortably. His trouble is of the same nature as he had just after the election, and was due to an abscess. It is thought he will be able to be about again in a few days. Although able to be about for the past month his health has been poor.

WEST QUINCY FIRE.

The alarm from Box 445 at 8.29 this morning was for a slight fire in a bed lounge in a house off Quarry street, occupied by an Italian family. A four year old boy left alone in the house for a few minutes by his mother got hold of some matches and started the fire. The loss was slight and the recall was quickly sounded.

—The Somerville Journal says: "It is outrageous that letter-carriers should have to hire teams at their own expense to distribute Christmas presents sent by mail. If the government is going to make an expressman of the letter-carrier it ought to pay the bills."

REVISED FIRE ALARM

Published for First Time in Numerical Order

Practically all of the 23 new fire alarm boxes ordered by the City Council have now been cut into the fire alarm circuits. Those that are not now installed will be cut in within a few days. The new boxes have been noted from time to time in the Daily Ledger.

There are now 120 boxes in the Quincy fire alarm system, which are divided very equally among the wards with 13 additional at Houghs Neck.

Ward One has 18 boxes, Ward Two 22, Ward Three, 13, Ward Four, 19, Ward Five, 21, Ward Six 14, and Houghs Neck, 13.

In all the lists of boxes which have been published, the arrangement has been largely by wards, but in the revised list, published by the Daily Ledger today, ward lines have been obliterated, and all boxes are in numerical order.

The Love of Oatmeal What it Signifies

The growing child craves oatmeal and delights in it. The normal adult—working with muscle or brain—always retains a marked fondness for oats. It is the call of nature for this food of all foods—for the elements we most require.

Oatmeal feeds bodies and brains and nerves. These are the reasons why, within us all, some instinct calls for oats.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Pretty hard on a frenzied financier when even the insane asylums refuse to admit him.

Haiti is purchasing new warships just as if there wasn't any Carnegie $10,000,000 peace fund.

If the Japs positively insist upon it, Uncle Sam may have to spank them before he gets his Panama Canal paddle.

For millions of Americans it is very welcome news that the former cordial relations between President Taft and Col. Roosevelt have been resumed.

You can't say that Chicago is not great on good manners. A woman there carefully removed another woman's glasses before slapping her in the face.

This is the season of war scares, promoted, it is said by some in order to get large appropriations for the army and navy and for the contractors who furnish military supplies. There is a report that the Japanese government has successfully negotiated with President Diaz of Mexico for a port and a depot of supplies on the western coast. If there were truth in this, it would be cause for immediate interference by the United States government.

They are progressive over in North Weymouth. It is given out that two houses are to be built at the Bluffs of the high type of concrete. The houses are to be put up to show the advantage of concrete over other building materials. Several unique points are to be introduced among them concrete floors, concrete shelves in the pantries, mantels of the same material and concrete roof, although the latter will be covered with red tile for appearances. Practically the only wood which will enter into construction will be for doors, door frames and window casings.

Apropos of the immigrant question, the fact that the attorney general is proceeding against the international steam ship lines under the Sherman law is very significant and far-reaching. The reason Europe is scraped, as it were, with a fine tooth comb for the million or more of immigrants annually landing in this country is found to a great extent in the fact that steerage traffic is immensely profitable to the great steam ship lines such as Lloyds, the Hamburg-American the Cunard, the White Star, the Holland-American and several others. They make millions yearly in this traffic and it is a well known fact that they carry large bodies of steerage passengers both ways. At least half a million are taken eastward back to the "old country" every year. All the steam ship lines have immigrant bureaus and travelling agents using every means and inducement to bring immigrants to this country.

The present Federal bankruptcy law should be amended, so an individual or firm that becomes financially embarrassed in business, may by petition of a creditor, or by voluntary act, become the direct subject of the Court. This would eliminate all the demoralizing and costly go-between red tape procedure of greedy lawyers, keepers and receivers who absorb the bulk of the assets which should go to the creditors.

In almost every instance the individual or firm summoned to the Court can pay 10 per cent at once upon all liabilities, which is all usually received by the creditors after months of delay under the present system. Then at the discretion of the Court an extention of time may be granted for further payments, and for possible reorganization of the business. Such a course would obviate failure in the vast majority of cases, and save millions yearly which are now lost, or needlessly wasted, through outside operation of the law.

If every individual or firm in business could feel they were thus protected by the United States Court from vicious attacks and business injury of the present system of keepers and receivers, and investors and stockholders could feel the same protection for their interests, there would come fresh confidence and great improvement in business conditions. There would be more business all over the country, better credit and all needless failures checked. This course of the law would establish honesty in all business methods and give stability to trade.

The only way to obtain this amendment to the present law is for business men to become aroused everywhere to the necessity of thus protecting their business from outside mercenary attacks, and to agitate until Congress shall listen and grant their request.

DRIFT OF OPINION

On every hand is heard the cry for a lessening of the tax burdens in Massachusetts, and yet it is proposed to add to the staggering load by creating a pension system for state and county employes. Provision is made for contributions to the fund by prospective beneficiaries, but even at that the drain upon the public treasury will be serious indeed. The state and counties are rather generous employers, as a comparison of prices paid for equivalent service in private channels will demonstrate. With exceptions so few that they prove the general rule, private employes are required to provide for themselves against the day of possible need. Is it unscientific or uncharitable to suggest that better-paid public employes should be required to conform to the same rule of action.—Salem News.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

That the Braintree People's Forum is still a potent attraction is a self evident conclusion judging from the large audience that assembled Sunday afternoon at All Souls' church, Braintree, to listen to an address on socialism. Mr. John Spargo was the speaker of the afternoon and had for his subject: "Socialism: A Spiritual Movement and a Practical Program." Mr. Spargo is well qualified to speak on such subjects as he is one of the foremost socialists of the country and has recently published a biography of Karl Marx, said to be the best one yet written in any language.

Mr. Spargo spoke very calmly and easily without recourse to high sounding phrases or rhetorical effect but his remarks were forceful and convincing and he commanded the close attention of his audience during the hour and a half alotted to him. He gave a graphic description of how socialism appeals to the wage earner, the college professor and the religious enthusiast. He proved in a convincing way that socialism is a spiritual movement as well as having a more materialistic side and said that socialism did not aim or pretend to make all men equal but was intended to create an equal opportunity for all.

Next Sunday afternoon Mrs. Florence Kelley of New York will speak on "Young Workers and how we Really Pay Them." Mrs. Kelley is a very eloquent speaker and no doubt will call out a large audience.

ARBITRATION VS STRIKES.

Declaraing stikes and lockouts to be illegal and providing compulsory arbitration for all disputes are the means set forth to solve the labor question in a bill prepared by State Senator George W. Shaefer of Spokane, for introduction at the coming session of the Legislature. The penalty for inciting a strike or a lockout is fixed at $1,000.

The bill provides that any employe may be fined $50 for every day he is on strike, while any employer causing a lockout becomes liable to a fine of $10 a day for each employe thus deprived of work. This in no instance to be less than $100 a day in the aggregate. The arbitration board is to be composed of five members, two each to be selected by employer and employed, the four chosen to appoint the fifth. Any member accepting a gratuity from either side is liable to a fine of $1,000.

Seven classes of industrial disputes are named as coming within the jurisdiction of the arbitration board, as follows: Wages, hours and terms of employment, employment of children, favoritism, faulty material or damaged work, established customs and uses of various trades and interpretation of agreements.

Difference arising out of any of the foregoing causes is ground for applying to the commissioner of labor to appoint a board of arbitration, following which neither employer nor employed is permitted to make any change in the terms or conditions of employment until a final decision has been given by the board. In the event no decision is reached a new board may be summoned at once.

While the board is empowered to summons witnesses and take testimony, attorneys at law are barred from appearing except by agreement of both parties and all members of the arbitration body.

BRINGING UP THE BOY.

"I just can't bear to have my little boy grow up. It seems that it will break my heart to lose my baby."

And her baby whoops, "Maw! I want to go out to Johnnie's house! Maw, why can't I? Say, maw, why can't I?"

"Now, Jimmy, mama doesn't think you'd better. It will be too late for you to get home tonight."

"Ay, maw, you said I could? Maw, I want to go! Maw, let me; I'm a-goin' anyway!"

"Now, Jimmie, I'll tell your father on you when he comes home. He'll make you mind!"

Her baby! Can't bear to have him grow up! Why, he isn't growing up. He is simply getting to be a bigger nuisance.

Why? Because she never taught him respect for his mother and obedience.

There is only one cure for that habit of disobedience—it is a habit—which makes some homes the very abode of the fiends instead of a haven of rest, which drives some men to fling down their evening papers in rage, snatch Jimmie, shake Jennie, and rush off to the club or anywhere out of doors where they can be at peace from squabbling children.

"I'll tell your father on you!"

Fine thing for a grown woman to say to a little bit of a child!

If that mother had honestly, fearlessly and steadily required from her children actual, instant obedience from the time they could understand—and that is mighty early, let me tell you—she would not have to spank him more than once.

In the little affairs of the household that instant obedience, obedience without an answer in return, is the price of peace.

In the bigger affairs, involving the spending of money, or questions of conduct oustide home, or of actual morals, say to your son or your daughter, "This is how it is. You understand this as well as I do," and make it clear, pleasantly, and as to one with a growing and active mind.

Then, "Now, think it over and decide. I think you have plenty of sense and the right sort of sense. Use it."

If that course is pursued with the boy or girl you are going to be surprised by the self-denial, bythe consideration for others, by the beautiful spirit of understanding that will be manifested.

Youth is the time of ideals. When we refuse to give our children room to exercise those ideals in home life, we deprive ourselves of a deep pleasure and do the children a serious wrong.

Teach a boy or girl to obey your slightest word, first, and do it instantly. Yes, you can! If you can not, what business have you with children about the place at all?

Then give them room to choose in really big things, and let them abide by their choice. No need to talk about children being bad when you do these two things.

"If my three should turn bad right now," says one small woman, who is the only controlling force in her family, "they have been enough comfort to me already to make up for anything. They have always known that 'no' was final and was never said for amusement nor without thought. They obeyed me and learned to obey their own good judgment. And the result is comfort and peace for them and for me."

Obedience—obedience—obedience—of that high sort that comes very shortly to mean obedience of the child to his own well-developed sense of right—that is the secret of raising good boys.—Chicago Tribune.

DERAILED CAR IN NARROW CUT

Threatened Destruction to Speedy Express Train

BRAKEMAN BECOMES A HERO

Leaps From Cab of Freight Locomotive Traveling at Rate of Thirty Miles an Hour and Flags Fast Train, Greatly Reducing Its Speed Before It Crashes Into Obstruction—Faints After Severe Strain

North Adams, Mass., Jan. 9.—Brakeman David Leighton leaped from the cab of a engine traveling at thirty miles an hour, saved a west-bound Boston express running to destruction with its load of passengers in a narrow cut, blocked by a derailed car, and then swung himself by a shrub to the top of a cliff just in time to save his own life.

A fraction of a second later the express train, speeding at fifty miles an hour, rushed beneath him as he clung to the face of the ledge.

The express, running at greatly reduced speed, because of his efforts, crashed into the obstruction near Zoar and demolished several cars.

Leighton was riding in the engine cab of an extra-east-bound freight. On the curve in the cut opposite Beaver island, a loaded coal car in the middle of the train jumped the track, derailing several cars behind it, and filling up the cut with wreckage.

With the first jar in the cab, caused by the sudden pull of the train, Leighton looked out. Just ahead, rounding the curve, flashed the headlight of an express from Boston, racing toward the messed up freight cars in the cut.

Leighton, realizing that the sides of the express would almost grate along the rocky walls of the cut, nevertheless leaped from the cab, waving his red lantern.

He hit the cinders, plunged headlong, then leaped to his feet again, waving the signal to stop. Weak from the shock and pain of his leap from the cab, the brakeman then sprang at the side of the cut.

His leap landed him against the face of the rock. One hand came in contact with a shrub growing out of a crevice in the ledge. With fast diminishing strength he hauled himself clear of the express to a perch on a shelflike fault in the ledge, where he fainted.

Engineer Larrabee of the express saw the brakeman's signal just in time. He shut off steam and put on the brakes, slowing down the express until it was running at fifteen miles only when it crashed into the debris of the freight train.

The passenger locomotive tore the coal car to pieces, carromed off the rocky side of the cut and ploughed into the freight train. The running gear of the locomotive was destroyed and several freight cars were demolished, but beyond the sudden jar no one in the passenger train was injured.

The engineer of the freight train, knowing that Leighton had signalled in time to save the express, started the search for his body, thinking that he had been ground under the wheels of the big passenger locomotive.

Passengers and train crews scoured the cut, crawled under cars, without success, until Conductor Rose, from the top of a freight car, saw Leighton on the ledge.

Gomez Seems Secure In Administration of Cuban Affairs

Havana, Jan. 9.—As the second year of Cuba's second independence draws to a close it finds the administration apparently more firmly entrenched in power than it has been at any time since the termination of the provisional government of Governor Magoon on Jan. 28, 1909.

So far as appears on the surface, Gomez dominates the situation and enters on the third year of his administration under much better auspices than those which attended his inauguration.

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 9.—"I ran away because I didn't like my schoolteacher," was the explanation given by 11-year-old Hazel Jollimore to her parents when brought home. This little girl has given no end of trouble to the police for miles around, who have been seeking her for several days.

MUCH DAMAGE BY WIND

Reaches Velocity of Sixty-Two Miles an Hour In Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 9.—One man was killed, one other fatally hurt and much damage was done to electric signs and windows Sunday by a windstorm.

The wind, which came from the west, gained a maximum velocity of sixty-two miles and kept at its high point for some time, dropping at night to a velocity of forty miles.

A large and a small iron sign on a building in Halstead street were torn from their fastenings and an unidentified man was caught under the larger one and instantly killed, while Michael Moriarity was struck by the smaller and suffered injuries which may prove fatal. Several others had narrow escapes. Plate glass windows were broken in many stores.

COMEDIAN WALKER DEAD

Went at Too Fast a Pace When He Met With Prosperity

New York, Jan. 9.—George Walker, for many years the companion comedian of Bert Williams, died after a year's illness in a sanatorium at Islip, L. I. When taken to the sanatorium Walker was a physical and mental wreck. The cause of death is given as paresis.

Williams and Walker were some years breaking into Broadway, but when they did get in they made an instantaneous hit. From a $30-a-week team they soon jumped their price to $1000 a week, and it is said that they got as high as $2000 a week. This skyrocket prosperity was too much for Walker. He cut out a pace which he was not strong enough physically or mentally to stand.

STANDPATTERS WANT MEASURE MODIFIED

Longworth Tariff Commission Bill Ready For Senate

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senator Lodge expects today to offer to the senate the Longworth tariff commission bill, which has just been introduced in the house. The finance committee of the senate intends to resume consideration of the matter at an early day.

Stand-pat members of the house say the Longworth bill will probably be modified considerably before it is adopted. They are willing to make a commission, something like the tarriff board, so as to assure its permanency. Then a Democratic house could not deny the necessary appropriations.

CONTRACTORS ARRESTED

Two Charged With Larceny From the City of Lawrence

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 9.—Charged with larceny from the city of Lawrence, Fred L. Snow, 45, a stone contractor, and James H. Horsfall, 36, an overseer of dyeing, were arrested and booked at the local police station. They were later released under bonds of $3000 each.

Snow and Horsfall are members of a firm which deals in granite paving blocks, with offices in Westford, Snow's home town.

On Dec. 12, 1910, the firm rendered a bill to the city of Lawrence for $4351 for paving blocks. It is alleged that they had not delivered the amount of material for which they billed the city, the discrepancy charged being $1279.80.

SUNDAY IN CHURCHES

Reopening of the Sunday Schools at Wollaston

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Charles B. Ames occupied the pulpit Sunday morning at the First church and preached an interesting sermon, his text being "Truth." Music was furnished by the regular choir.

This afternoon the Alliance meets and will listen to an address by Rev. William H. Ramsey on "Woman's Work."

This evening the Junior Alliance will meet and listen to a talk by Mrs. Abby Peterson on her work in the South. The subject is "A North Carolina Neighborhood."

On Wednesday the Fragment society holds an all-day meeting in the chapel with lunch at noon.

On Thursday evening the teachers' meeting postponed from Jan. 2, will be held at 7.30.

SWEDISH METHODIST.

The evangelistic services which started Wednesday will be continued through this week. Mr. Gondret, the evangelist has been delivering inspiring addresses every evening. On Sunday he spoke at both morning and evening services and at the Sunday school session. At every meeting many have come to the altar for prayers and a great deal of good will undoubtedly be accomplished by the series of meetings. The Young People's service last evening was led by Miss Olga Anderson.

All the regular services will be suspended this week owing to the evangelistic services. The male chorus sang two fine anthems at the evening service Sunday and there will be good music at all the services through the week.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The pastor preached at the morning service using for his theme, "Preparation for Service."

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was very well attended and many of the older church members were present. Mrs. R. J. Davis led the meeting and all were inspired by it. One new member was taken into the society. The topic for the evening address was: "Christ a friend of Sinners."

All who are to sing in the chorus during the evangelistic services are requested to meet with the organist and leader at the parsonage this evening. Good music will add greatly to the power of the meetings.

Beginning Wednesday evening Jan. 11, Mr. Waterbury of Boston will speak at the series of evangelistic meetings which will be held every night at 7.30.

Among the themes which he will use are the following: "The Night Vision of a Runaway." "The All-Night Struggle with an Unknown Antagonist," "The Birthnight of a Nation," "The Midnight Flight of the Midianites," "The Birthnight of the Prince of Peace," "A Night Interview with the New Teacher," "The Night Storm on the Lake," "A Night on the Mountain," "The Darkest Night in History," "The Night Gathering Behind Closed Doors," "The Night Deliverance of the Imprisoned Apostles," "A Midnight Jail Service," "No Night There."

The Red and Blue banquet of the Davis class will not be held until after the series of special services.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The Sunday morning service was well attended. The pastor took for his text "And he urged him, and he took it." The text deals with the return of Jacob with presents one of which he was going to give to Esau. The giver was always considered the inferior and Jacob had always been considered the superior himself but Esau was finally persuaded since he was the elder brother."

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was a largely attended and helpful service. Subject: "Blessed to bless."

In the evening the pastor took for his text "Come now let us reason together."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Taking as his text the words found in the seventh verse of the first chapter of Proverbs, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," Rev. Carl G. Horst opened his discourse Sunday morning by saying that this fear referred to is not the emotion of fear as commonly understood, but a sense of reverence and worship. Religion is the chief corner stone of a truly successful life. We, in a country comparatively new, exalt wealth and material welfare, but neither money, nor the many beautiful and helpful things that money may put within our reach, can in any satisfactory and lasting way make for our true character unless, underlying all, is the religion of Jesus.

Intellectual development, and surroundings, refined and aesthetic, will not insure high ideals, and growth in knowledge is no security of growth in spirit unless individual character is elevated. The religion of Jesus carries with it moral vigor—it creates and inspires virtue, and makes possible a sustained nobility of character in human life that nothing else has ever had power to do.

At the twilight hour the church was filled with people of all denominations who gathered at the vesper service, to enjoy the finely rendered selections by the Beethoven quartet, and the brief but stirring address of the minister of the church. Using the words "Ye make clean the outside of the cup and the platter," as his text, Rev. Mr. Horst urged the necessity of all social reform and national betterment beginning in the conscience of individuals, rather than in the more superficial method of the patching of thin places in the social fabric. His words embodied an earnest and stimulating appeal to right-living and high thinking, based on the optimistic belief that if the heart is right, and the mind pure nothing can proceed from the mouth of man but wisdom and strength for his fellow men.

An unusually large number attended the meeting of the Y. P. R. U. Sunday evening to hear H. Houghton Schumacher, who gave a very pleasing and helpful talk to the young people on the topic "The haunted man."

At the meeting of the Women's Alliance of the Austin Street Unitarian church in Cambridge, this afternoon, Rev. Carl G. Horst gave the address.

The sessions of the Sunday schools were resumed after a vacation of three weeks.

The Junior League meeting was held at 4 P. M., and the Epworth League at 6 P. M. Storer W. Wiggin was the leader at the latter, his subject being "Reading for league effectiveness."

The New England branch of the W. F. M. S. will hold its quarterly meeting in the Baker Memorial church on Wednesday at 10.30 and 2.00.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

At the morning service, Rev. E. N. Hardy, PhD., pastor of the Bethany Congregational church, preached on the subject, "What is Man." The speaker gave a very able discourse which was much appreciated by the congregation.

The Sunday school had a very good attendance and the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting likewise was well attended. Miss Katherine McKinnon was the leader.

At the evening service, the pastor spoke on the subject, "Christ the Chief Cornerstone." Excellent music was furnished by the choir.

The church prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30. At its conclusion there will be a meeting of the Men's League for election of officers and general business.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor preached in the morning using for his theme: "Jesus at twelve years."

The evening service was of a special character and in consequence the church was packed to the doors. Excellent music was furnished by the mixed choir and the male chorus. The pastor spoke on the theme, "Dangerous Pathways." "Everyone before me," he said, "is journeying down some pathway of life and the reason why this subject is chosen for tonight is that some of you who are going on the wrong paths may change your course and find the right one."

The four principal danger marks Mr. Palmgren pointed out were: (1) Opposing the call of conscience. (2) Trusting to luck. (3) Feeling self satisfaction and (4) Undervaluing the advice of the wise.

All of us have reached a point where we know whether a thing is right or wrong but we do not always heed the pricks of conscience. When things go right we are apt to think that it is our doing but we should think with Luther that it is through Christ that we can accomplish things. The younger people have their education and knowledge of many things but experience has been the best teacher of the older ones and thus their advice should be heeded for experience is the best of teachers.

The week of prayer was observed last week with larger attendance and greater results along spiritual lines than ever before. Dr. Groenlund, a former missionary to China gave an excellent address at the Thursday evening meeting.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

Rev. S. N. Elvin, the pastor, took for his morning theme, "How shall man come to the knowledge of the Truth."

The Sunday evening service was also addressed by the pastor who preached a fine sermon on the subject, "Jesus the Light of the World."

The Dorcas society will meet with Mrs. Andrew Anderson, Buckley street, Tuesday evening at the usual hour.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The week of prayer services were held every night last week with great results along spiritual lines. Many conversions were made by the pastor Rev. John Lillback.

The pastor spoke at both morning and evening services yesterday to large and enthusiastic audiences. The Young People's meeting was addressed by Mr. E. G. Gay, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

The regular prayer meeting will be held on Thursday.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The week of prayer was observed last week and inspiring and helpful services were held every evening. The spiritual life of the congregation will undoubtedly be strengthened by this series of services.

The pastor spoke at the Sunday morning service from the text, "Ye are all brethren together." The text was suggested by the Evangelical Alliance topic, "The Brotherhood of Man."

In the evening the pastor took his theme from "Christ healing the paralytic boy." The attendance was large and the sermon was excellent.

The regular meetings for the week have been cancelled so that the church members may attend the evangelistic services at the Calvary Baptist church.

The Busy Workers will meet with Mrs. Gibson, 20 Bryant place, Friday evening at 7 o'clock.

ADVERTISING A PUBLIC TRUST.

President George W. Coleman of the Pilgrim Publicity Association recently had this to say regarding transportation and advertising: "Transportation and advertising are not only inter-dependable, but both constitute a public trust. The public has rights in both, and just as the public today exercises to a certain extent its right over the railroads, so I believe the day will come when the public will exercise a similar right over the advertising—it will eventually insist upon dependable believable advertising, just as it insists today upon adequate service from our great transportation corporations."

SINGLE TAX IN CONCORD.

Through the medium of a little pamphlet prepared by Jonas M. Miles and issued for private circulation among those interested in the question of which it treats, we have, as a result of patient and intelligent investigation, a statement showing what the probable consequences would be in case the single tax system were applied to a typical New England town. Concord, Mass., may be taken as a community in which conditions are as nearly stable as they are anywhere on this globe. It is morally wholesome, its habits are conservative its circumstances are substantial, its traditions are deep-rooted and respectable, its ideals are high. Hardly a better place could be found in which to carry on an imaginary economic revolution and to draw quiet conclusions from the experiment.

Mr. Miles found the taxable property of Concord in the year 1910 to consist of land, $1,795,726, representing 24.53 per cent; buildings, $3,056,065, representing 41.75 per cent, and personal estate, $2,467,472, representing 33.71 per cent. The rate of taxation was $14.30 on $1,000. Supposing the law provided that taxes be levied on land alone, a levy of $58 on each $1,000 of land value would have been necessary. The proposal to put the whole burden of taxation on land values, constituting only one-fourth of the whole present property valuation, it is conceded, seems radical and even startling; but, it is contended, the land owners are now paying nearly all the taxes, for they pay all the taxes on the land, all the taxes on the buildings and the taxes on four-fifths of all the personal estate. Collectively, according to Mr. Miles, the land owners are now paying, under the present system, 93 per cent of all the taxes. The remaining 7 per cent is paid by miscellaneous residents. The proposal of a single tax on land values is stated to amount to simply this: The land owners who now pay 93 per cent of all taxes shall be allowed and permitted to pay the other 7 per cent also. Then they shall adjust the matter with their tenants and lessees, and with one another, as they may agree; and all shall go tax free as to their buildings and personal estate. "That," says Mr. Miles, "doesn't seem to be a very startling proposal after all. The effect on the tax bill of any individual would depend on the ratio of the value of his land, on the one side, to the value of his buildings and personal estate, on the other."

It would be impossible to follow here the investigation carried on by this gentleman through all of its details, interesting as they are. Certain conclusions only may be touched upon. It appeared, for example, not only that the single tax would free from taxation those who do not own land, but that it would reduce the tax bills of many who do. Fifty-seven per cent of all the tax payers in Concord would have smaller tax bills. "The most costly buildings and nine-tenths of the personal property are to be found in precinct 1; yet 60 per cent of the land owners residing there would have larger tax bills if their buildings and personal estate were not taxed at all; and in precinct 2 (the district of small homes, small incomes and comparatively little personal estate) 62 per cent of the resident land owners would have smaller tax bills, if all the taxes were levied on land alone."

Mr. Miles discovered that under the operation of single tax in Concord a person who owns land and no other taxable property would find his tax bill quadrupled; among 1,100 tax payers, however, he found only twenty-nine residents in this situation. Altogether the land owned by these is valued at less than $12,000; only three have land valued at more than $1,000 and one of the three is a land company. From this the conclusion is drawn that in a town where land is so desirable as it is in Concord these twenty-nine land owners would be able to find some way of distributing an increased burden laid upon them by the single tax, should it prove too heavy.

This exposition of the manner in which Henry George's theory of land taxation may be applied practically is informing and should have the effect of stimulating further inquiry along the same lines. What the average man approached on the single tax question is desirous of learning is just how it will work out. To many the results said to have been achieved in Edmonton, Alberta, and in other places where it has been tested in a greater or lesser degree, may, perhaps, prove a sufficient answer to this query, but to the great majority it might be answered more conclusively were the system once put in successful operation in a thoroughly settled and conservative community such as Concord, Mass.—Christian Science Monitor.

Justice White Married a Widow.

Mrs. Edward D. White, wife of the new chief justice of the supreme court, is, like her husband, a Catholic. She is a woman of retiring disposition. In girlhood in New Orleans she fell in love with White, but he had his fortune to make, and her family objected to the match. They married her to a more prosperous suitor, though her friends say she was heartbroken. The husband, uncle of Preston Gibson, playwright, lived only a few years. After a season of mourning the widow was married to White. The couple possess a fortune, and their home in Rhode Island avenue, Washington, is filled with artistic treasures. They are more conspicuous in church affairs than in purely social circles.

evening frock for the young girl is repeated in the party frock of her little sister.

Fine white net trimmed with tucking and insertion, chiffon, lingerie fabrics and china silk are all utilized in the making of the party frock for the small girl. India silk, messaline or soft satin is used for the slip. In some instances the outer frock is not attached to the lining.

The illustration shows a dainty little dress of all over eyelet embroidery, which will be found as useful for summer wear as it is appropriate for the dance dress. A slip of pink silk gives the color note.

The Young Women's Glee club meets tonight at 7.45 at the Women's clubhouse. Miss Alice Gertrude Coe of Atlantic is director and a concert will probably be given later in the season.

Miss C. Belle Kenney of the Quincy Mansion school was elected a member of the executive board of the association of the women of Technology at its annual meeting held on Saturday at Technology union, Boston. Mrs. Ellen H. Richards was made permanent president.

CITY COUNCIL TONIGHT.

The first regular meeting of the City Council since inauguration day will be held tonight. As no committees have been appointed as yet tonight's docket will be largely new business, although there is one order in the calendar that will come up. This is the order authorizing the Mayor to have the annual reports of the various departments printed. It is probable that President Bryant will announce the standing committees of the Council, after which the Council will get down to work, as there are many matters pending that were sent over by the Council of 1910.

ROBBER TAKES WOMAN'S LIFE

Stabs and Clubs Her to Death In Little Grocery Store

SIGNS OF SEVERE STRUGGLE

Providence Widow Evidently Put Up Stubborn Fight Before Being Overcome—Police Station but Three Hundred Feet Distant From Scene of Tragedy—Money Which Victim Carried About Her Waist Is Stolen

Providence, Jan. 9.—Desperately fighting to the last to preserve for her three sons the life she had devoted to their rearing since her husband's death, five years ago, Mrs. Minnie Fine, aged 48, was clubbed and stabbed to death by a robber, for whom the police of Providence and other cities are searching.

Her body was found by her sister, Mrs. Esther Blestein, in the little little grocery store at 4 Ambrose street, which Mrs. Fine had conducted for the support of herself and her boys, Saturday night, scarcely two hours after Mrs. Blestein had seen her there alive and well.

Boxes and bins had been overturned and their contents strewn over the floor, the disorder of the whole store being a silent witness to the struggle that ended the mother's life.

Mrs. Fine's jaw was broken and the back of her skull crushed in. One of two stabs in her left breast is thought to have reached her heart.

No hint of the crime had gone beyond the walls of the little store before its discoveryr. The police, 100 yards away in the police station of the second precinct, were told of the murder by neighbors. The entire detective force of the city was set to work.

The police discovered in an oil tank in the store an empty leather bag. This Mrs. Fine had worn at her waist to keep her money in. The strings which fastened it to her waistband had been cut and the money, probably about $40, taken.

None of the sons was home at the time of the tragedy. Louis, the oldest, is a long distance runner at Brown university. The family lived in rooms in the same building with the store.

Saturday night Annie Balskovitch, a neighbor's child, was sent to Mrs. Fine's store to make a small purchase. She found a strange man in the store, who gruffly ordered her away. She ran home and told her mother, who only laughed at her story and sent her back. Again the child walked into the store, to find the stranger still there, and with a black look and sharp words he once more drove her out.

The murdered woman was 48 years of age, had been a resident of Providence for many years and was well known in the Hebrew section of the city. Her son Louis has participated in several marathon runs.

TO SPITE HIS WIFE

Prisoner In Omaha Jail Chews and Swallows $100 Bill

Omaha, Jan. 9.—What is believed to be the most costly "morsel" ever served in Omaha was eaten here by Fred C. Throop, a prisoner of the Douglas county jail, who deliberately put into his mouth, masticated and then swallowed a $100 bill.

The police were searching Throop, who had been arrested on an insanity charge preferred by his wife, and had discovered $65 about his person. He declared that was all he had, but his wife insisted that he had much more.

Thereupon Throop went to a corner of his cell where his shoes were, extracted from them the $100 bill and ate it.

GHOST OF A KITTEN

Schoolteacher Says It Impelled Her to Attempt Murder

Cincinnati, Jan. 9.—Miss Isabelle Phelps of this city, who shot and fatally wounded Louis Walker and fired a shot at his wife, Jennie, in Hamilton, told the police that the ghost of a kitten she had killed when she was 3 years old haunted her and drove her to attempt murder.

Concerning her crime Miss Phelps has no compunctions. She believes that it has rid her of the haunting cat, which, she says, "followed and tormented" her all through life. She will be tried for lunacy.

Mrs. Howe's Memory Honored

Boston, Jan. 9.—Four thousand persons thronged Symphony hall last evening to honor the memory of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe—woman of letters, philanthropist, reformer—but most of all she was revered in the memorial services as the author of that wonderful poem, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Ex-Governor Guild delivered the oration.

HAVEMEYER'S VIOLINS

Those In Mansion of Late Sugar King Are Valued at $69,000

New York, Jan. 9.—The value of the violins Henry O. Havemeyer, the sugar manufacturer, had in his mansion, is shown by the state appraiser's report upon the Havemeyer estate, which has just been filed.

The family still owns the following rare instruments:

King Joseph, $12,000; Kiesewetter, $7500; Stradivarius, $5000; Guarnerius, $4000; Ruggierl, $600; Joseph, $300; total, $29,400.

A few days before Christmas Collector Loeb caused two special agents of the United States treasury to seize a violin from the Havemeyer collection on the allegation that it was smuggled through Boston in September.

This confiscated instrument is said to be a genuine Stradivarius, and the most valuable one in the Havemeyer collection, being worth $40,000.

TO FOLLOW THE HOBBLE

Harem Skirt Will Soon Make Its Appearance In Paris

Paris, Jan. 9.—Paul Poiret has threatened fashionable women with a dreadful thing in smart skirts to follow the hobble. This is the harem skirt, adapted by Poiret from the Turkish trousers worn by oriental women.

The trouser effect is rather disguised. It simply seems a scant skirt, diminishing still more around the ankles, but allowing its wearer to walk with less effort than an ordinary scant skirt.

The harem skirt is to appear in the spring. First it will be seen on the stage, as this is the approved Parisian manner of introducing a novelty in clothes.

BRANDEIS' IDEAS NOT ACCEPTABLE TO HILL

Cost Atchison Road a Million For "Economy" Experiment

New York, Jan. 9.—James J. Hill was at the New York office of the Great Northern upon his return from a trip to the Pacific coast.

The theories and proposals of Louis Brandeis, the Boston lawyer, in regard to railroad economies, Hill said, are poppycock. "The Atchison," he continued, "gave that scheme a fair trial under the most favorable conditions in the shop where such a system ought to make good if anywhere, and it cost the Atchison a million dollars to make the experiment."

Mr. Hill said the Great Northern's earnings since the beginning of the last fiscal year had pleased him. The six months' gross is but $100,000 less than the previous year's in spite of light grain trade.

FIRE IN LODGING HOUSE

Sixty Persons Escape Serious Injury When Building Is Gutted

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 9.—Thrilling rescues and heroic work by members of the fire and police departments marked a $6000 fire in a lodging house here at an early hour Sunday morning, when sixty people were trapped in a five-story building which was gutted by the flames.

Starting under the rear stairway, the fire got a good headway before it was discovered, and that no one was seriously burned is due to many acts of bravery.

A half dozen persons were carried out of the burning building, two women jumped and one woman barely escaped by a daring slide down a rope.

WEDDED IN SECRET

It Costs Pastor of Swedish Baptist Church His Pulpit

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 9.—His secret marriage discountenanced by his congregation, Rev. Oscar Schuleen, pastor of the Harmel Street Swedish Baptist church, published the fact of his secret marriage in the newspapers and followed this act by reading his resignation in the church yesterday to the assembled parishioners.

Though the marriage for the first time became public Saturday, it was a matter of common knowledge for some time past among the leading members of the congregation.

Newspaper Burned Out

Berlin, N. H., Jan. 9.—The Bell block, a three-story brick structure in this city, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss estimated at $25,000. Of this amount $20,000 is on the building and $5000 on the plant of the Berlin Reporter, a weekly newspaper.

A RACE FOR A WIFE

The Girl Gave Answer In Lapland Fashion to a Proposal

By ELEANOR L. BRITTON

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

Spitzburger was a great traveler. He had visited every country on the globe, and I verily believe that if aviation had come up in his day he would have sailed up beyond the clouds to find others. When I made his acquaintance he had settled down in a place he called by a jawbreaking name signifying "dwelling" that he had picked up among the Eskimos or some other benighted people. It was in the country situated on the top of a hill and looked more like a Chinese pagoda than any other structure.

Spitzburger was a widower, with one child, a daughter. She was twenty years old and for half her life had traveled during half of each year—the summer season—with her father. Heredity and travel had made her as odd as he. Rather she was unique. She was of medium height, lithe, wiry—indeed, a feminine athlete of the featherweight type. Her hair was black and straight as an Indian's; her eyes large black ones, with lashes of the Spanish type. I wondered if her mother had not been some dusky semicivilized creature her father had picked up on the underside of the world. But he told me his wife had been an American creole.

The inside of the house in which these two lived was as curious as the outside. The furniture and ornamental articles had apparently been gathered from all points of the globe, ranging from the south sea islands to Greenland. There was a mill for grinding from the Holy Land similar to those used in Bible times, a wheel from India to spin flax on, and the bathtub had been the sarcophagus of an Egyptian mummy.

The reason for my making the Spitzburgers' acquaintance was this: I was taking a postgraduate course at the time, studying the customs of different races of men, the causes and effects which shape them and their relationship. Desiring some information as to the people of Tibet, a land forbidden to foreigners and therefore little known, I was recommended to Spitzburger as one who had penetrated to the interior of that country. I went to see him, and my visit led to my studying with him.

How long I remained there doesn't matter, but it was sufficient for my enthrallment by that "little savage," as I called his daughter, Irene. Not that there was any outward intimation on my part that I was coming under a spell, and, as for the girl, I had no idea that I was any more to her than another man. Indeed, I sometimes fancied that she might have left her heart in New Zealand, Kamchatka or some other barbarous land. Whether Spitzburger suspected the drift of my inclinations I don't know, but one day he took occasion to mention with approbation the marriage customs in Lapland, where one who marries a girl without her parents' consent is adjudged guilty of a crime next below murder and is punished accordingly. I thought that he looked at me very hard, but "a guilty conscience needs no accuser," and I may have attached more meaning to his words than they covered.

The only thing to indicate that Irene and I were drifting together as lovers was that we took long walks together. I made an excuse for this that in her company I could both exercise and study. This was true. I could get from her certain information of the domestic habits of the people she had visited that I could not get from her father. One day while we were on one of these walks I said to her:

"Your father tells me that in Lapland to marry a girl without her parents' consent is punished as a crime. Please tell me how a man in that country does his courting."

"He doesn't do any courting."

"Then how does he proceed?"

"He goes to her parents and asks for her. If he is refused there is no hope for him. If they approve of his suit they tell the girl of it. She may or may not have seen the lover, but the process is the same in either case. Her parents give a feast at which they, the girl, her suitor and mutual friends are present. The two principals are placed opposite each other at table, where they can observe and talk with each other all they like."

"Well, then what? I suppose the girl has something to say in the matter, else this looking over her suitor would be useless."

"Yes, she has a good deal to say about it, but she doesn't yet make it known. She indicates her decision later. After the feast all go to an open space suitable for running a race. A course is marked off—a quarter of a mile usually—and the girl is given a handicap of a third of the distance. The handicap is intended to enable her to win the race easily if she wishes, and if she wins that indicates her refusal of the offer. But if, on the contrary, she purposely lags and her suitor catches her, that indicates she accepts him for her husband."

When Irene finished giving me this bit of a lecture on Lapland customs I walked for some distance without speaking.

"What are you thinking of?" she asked.

"I am thinking how popular this method would be at our universities, where athletics are so much in vogue. Every undergradunte would be married before the end of his course."

It was a month after this that, having got all out of Spitzburger in the line of my studies that I desired, I began to think of leaving. A singular something there was in Irene had continued to grow upon me, and—well I wanted her. Remembering what her father had said on the subject, I went to him and asked him for his daughter.

"I will inform her of the honor you do her," he said.

I waited a day for a reply, and as I received none the suspense threw me into an awful fret. At the end of the second day, the situation being the same, I was almost demented. On the morning of the third, determined to have the matter out with Irene, I asked her to go for a walk with me, the last we would take together before my departure. She assented and went up to her room for her wraps. She was some time getting them, and when she came down what was my surprise to see that she had put on a skirt reaching but little below the knees, and instead of a hat she had wrapped a veil about her head.

I didn't dream for awhile what this meant, but when she led me along a path and across a stile to a space used in season for pasture I suspected at once that she proposed to satisfy a whim by giving me an answer to my proposal after the Lapland custom. I was too hungry for it to object to the terms and was quite ready to run for my answer. Indeed, so impatient was I that I opened the subject myself.

"A good place for a race," I remarked.

"Splendid."

"And a fine morning for it too. The air is crisp and full of ozone."

"I love to snuff it in and get the odor."

"Do you see that tree yonder?"

"The oak split into two trunks near the ground?"

"Yes. I have a mind to race you for it."

"How much advantage will you give me?"

"What you like."

She pulled off a fur jacket and threw it on the ground, and I saw at once that she had divested herself of her corsets—indeed, there was nothing to interfere with any movement. Her short skirt, a tight fitting jersey and the veil about her head made an excellent racing costume.

But these preparations appalled me. What could they mean but that she desired every advantage that she might surely beat me in the race?

"I wish no handicap," she said. "I think I can beat you on equal terms. I will go over to that stump, which is about the same distance from the tree as we are here. One race would be little fun. Let us make it the best two in three. You give the signal."

"Agreed," I said, and she went off to the stump.

"One, two, three—go!" I cried.

She ran like a deer; but, spurred by love, I kept an equal pace with her. I won that race.

The second race was very different. Irene permitted me at first to gain a few yards on her, but before we had traversed two-thirds of the distance she forged ahead and reached the tree full ten feet ahead of me.

I knew now that she could beat me if she wished. Nevertheless I deemed it my proper part to do the best I could in the third and deciding race. Burning to know my fate, I wished to start at once. But she declined to go until she got her breath. While we waited I endeavored to see something encouraging in her eyes—something to indicate that these races were the answer I was expecting. But there was nothing in her expression to indicate that we were running for any purpose except pastime. She studiously ignored every other consideration.

Finally, when my patience was nearly exhausted, she signified a willingness to start. I gave the signal, and for the first half the distance she seemed determined to win. Surely she could not have put forth greater effort. I saw her glance aside to see where I was, and she dashed on, seemingly bound to reach the goal before me. But when within ten yards of it, my distance being twenty, she tripped and fell. I ran on to the tree, touched it and then back to her. Raising her, I said impatiently:

"I suppose we must try this one over."

"No," she said; "I couldn't run again."

I still held her in my arms, and, taking this for the answer I craved, I wound them about her, covering her face with kisses.

Supposing that my love had been injured by her fall, I proposed to carry her home, but she stepped out quite readily.

"How about that tripping?" I asked.

She looked at the ground, but made no reply, and I knew she had tripped on purpose.

When we returned to the house Spitzburger looked at us both curiously. I knew at once that he was aware that his daughter had given me my answer and that she had given it in accordance with the Lapland custom. He first scanned her face, but receiving no satisfaction there bent his gaze upon mine.

He did not require a long examination of my features to know that I had been made very happy, and the cause was evident. I took Irene by the hand and, leading her to her father, told him the story.

When I came to the part where Irene stumbled and fell he burst into a laugh, saying that she could run for hours without a stumble or a missstep.

HAVE YOU SEEN IT?

The Wedgwood Blouse Favorite of the Season.

A NOVELTY IN SEPARATE WAISTS.

The next time you are near a china shop step in and look at the Wedgwood jugs and plates with their charming blue coloring and snowy white patterns that stand out boldly against the blue; then go home and try to imitate the effect with blue satin and white cord or, better still, porcelain beads. These porcelain blouses, as they are called, are distinctly the thing just now, and the pretty blue coloring is most becoming.

The waist pictured is of blue chiffon over duchess lace. The popular kimono sleeve is used in the confection. Pipings of blue satin edge the cuffs and collars.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hub's Women Unlikely to Obey Fashion's Edict and Wear Bag Trousers—Live Cod Get Tomato Ketchup Well in Advance of Sunday Morning's Breakfast—France Follows German Example in Sending Exquisite Art to Bay State Treasure Houses—Penitent Baklanoff Back on the Job—What Boston-1915 Really Is.

The editor of a suburban daily newspaper comes out in strong terms of contempt for the Hub's yellowest journal which offered a prize for the most appropriate song to be played at Symphony Hall on the occasion of Senator Lodge's recent address, and awarded it to the person who suggested "Rescue the Perishing." This suburban newspaper man says editorially that the Boston paper "makes so much noise that it reminds us of the man in the restaurant who exclaimed: 'Waiter, take that man's soup away; I can't hear the band,'" and suggests forcibly that the band master dedicate a song entitled "Mind Your Own Business and Let It Alone" to his noisy associate. The prize competition, indeed, has impressed many readers as about on a par with the cheap ribaldry of the so-called musical programme rendered at Provincetown during Governor Foss' meeting. It might be remarked parenthetically that there were some other differences inthe methods of conducting these two affairs.

What, women to wear bag trousers? yet not Boston women. The seven gods and multitudinous fishes of Massachusetts Bay forbid The hated hobble is mostly a show skirt in Boston; few of them are worn by the women with net bags who are so characteristically Bostonese. Nor is Bostonian conservatism in wearing apparel so altogether undesirable. It is bad enough to look like idiots because the wise manufacturers who dictate fashions say so; but who wants to be translated into a replica of one of the ladies of the harem? The touch of henna and the Oriental veil are minor accessories to the completion of this transformation.

The expected has happened, as everybody knew it would. Mr. Baklanoff, who was summarily dismissed from the Boston Opera Company and thus indirectly from the leading opera companies of this country, at the eleventh hour before the first presentation of an important opera, is said to be about to return to the stage and favor of this institution. He must forfeit ten thousand dollars, so say the reports, and apologize to the entire company, but that is a small stake to a singer of his reputation when a whole season is in the balance. The feminine public, needless to say, would gladly welcome Mr. Baklanoff, figuratively if not literally with open arms, and doubtless the advertising arising from the little disagreement between the eminent opra director and his big song bird will redound to their mutual advantage.

Boston benefits, in unexpected ways, from the rivalry of French and Germans. Kaiser Wilhelm some years ago formed the good habit of every now and then sending a few tons of plaster casts over to Harvard Germanic Museum. Other great personages of the Fatherland, like Prince Luitpold of Bavaria, have done likewise. Now the French government, not to be outdone, is also loosening up. The university in Cambridge has just received a consignment of exquisite Sevres porcelain from Paris which, installed at the Fogg Museum of Art in Cambridge, is of a kind to make the amateur porcelain collector's mouth water.

What Boston-1910 is—if you want to know write for the 40 page booklet which this association of good people for good ends and aims has just got out. Read it carefully, digest it inwardly and then suggest that your own city either do or do not likewise. "Boston 1615 does not expect to perform miracles," the pamphlet modestly states. Those who have watched its career think otherwise; it has accomplished miracles of a kind.

Not since Lord Dunraven, challenging yachtsman, was recommended to use catsup to catch up has Father Neptune been obliged to resent such sauciness as on a day of early January when officers of the old Bay State dropped down the bay and let loose 27,540 bottles tomato ketchup. This was not merely a smart proceeding, of course; it was designed to give New England people an increased appetitte for the relishes left on shore. Under the pure food law manufacturers are not permitted to impose on human kind preserves made from rotten fruit. The penalty, in case of violation, is to feed the fish therewith. In this particular instance there is a suspicion, however, that with the inshore fishermen keen after every fish in these waters much ofthis ketchup may very shortly be back in our midst. It sounds, indeed, like a good scheme for preliminary seasoning of cod fish balls.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Chestnut Croquettes. Grind in a meat chopper two dozen blanched chestnuts, one cupful of pecan meats, one-fourth of an onion and several sprigs of parsley; add equal quantity cold mashed potatoes, fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, some cayenne pepper and an egg. Mix thoroughly, form into croquettes, roll in egg and cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Beef Soup With Okra. Cut a round steak in small pieces and cook it in three tablespoonfuls of butter to which one sliced onion has been added. When brown, put all into a soup kettle with four quarts of cold water and boil slowly for an hour. Then add salt, pepper and one pint of sliced okra and simmer three and one-half hours longer. Strain and serve with bread sticks.

Layer Cake. Cream one-half cup of butter, add one and one-half cups of sugar slowly and beat until the mixture is light and creamy. Add three-quarters cup of milk alternately with two cups of flour sifted with three level teaspoons of baking powder, and last the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Bake in buttered layer cake pans twenty minutes and spread with filling when cold.—Gene Weld.

Spanish Omelet. This may be made by making a sauce of the following: One very small bay leaf, one small onion, three sprigs of parsley, one green pepper, free from seeds; five button mushrooms, one tablespoonful of cold cooked ham, all these ingredients chpped very finely; fry in butter or olive oil and add three tomatoes or one cupful of canned tomatoes and one cupful of soup stock. Cook all for one-half an hour before making the omelet, and put on plate, slipping the omelet carefully on the sauce. The omelet is made by beating the whites and yolks separately of six eggs and adding salt and pepper, one-half tablespoonful of flour softened with as much milk as flour used; pour into a buttered dish and cook until firm, but not hard. Fold the egg over as it cooks, keeping the liquid part always on the hot pan. This will run out as the omelet is turned, making it come ut in creamy layers when done.

Gold and Silver Cake. For the gold cake cream one-half cup of butter, add one cup of sugar and beat the yolks of four eggs until light. Add one-half cup of milk and two cups of flour sifted with two and one-half level teaspoons of baking powder. Flavor with one teaspoon of lemon or vanilla. The yolks should be beaten at least five minutes.

For the silver cake cream one-third cup of butter, add one cup of sugar, two and one-quarter cups of flour sifted with two and one-half level teaspoons of baking powder sifted in it, one-half cup of milk, the whites of four eggs beaten stiff and dry and one-half teaspoon of almond flavoring.

Lettuce and Chestnut Sandwiches. Upon a thin slice of buttered bread lay a lettuce leaf; mash chestnuts and mix with one-fourth the quantity of cream cheese; cover with mayonaise dressing and press down with a second slice of buttered bread.

What's In a Name?

The late king of Siam had for a full name Phra Bat Somdeth Phra Paramindr Maha Chulalongkorn Phra Chula Chum Klo Chow Yu Hua, and this does not include his titles. A wag in Bombay saw it in the paper when the ruler was visiting that city and was being received by the British officials and passed it over to a young Irish subaltern with the challenge that he pronounce it. The young fellow looked at it a moment and then handed it back. He said he was not long enough winded, but he was sure he could play it on the garrison club piano if the instrument were a couple of octaves longer. The king's uncle, however, who was also a prince high priest, had for one name alone the following collection of letters: Pawaratsawariyalongkaun. Any one who can get through this and not flat one of the notes has lived a long time where he can look out of the window and see the gilded peak of a temple shimmering in the equatorial sun.—Christian Herald.

Funds of Bankruptcy Court and State and City Funds Tied Up—Uncertain Status of Institution Well Known In Financial Circles—Many Changes In Management Since Its Organization —Much Money Withdrawn Recently

New York, Jan. 9.—A third bank across which the shadow of Joseph G. Robin, the indicted promoter, had fallen has closed its doors and the state superintendent of banks is in possession of the Carnegie Trust company, an institution with wide southern and western affiliations, with deposits of nearly $9,000,000.

United States bankruptcy moneys, state and city funds are all tied up, bonded in varying degrees of sufficiency. The company was named the official depository of federal receivers and trustees of bankruptcy appointed by the United States district court, on application of Leslie M. Shaw, who for a period became president of the company following his resignation from the treasury department.

A bond of $25,000 was put up, but there are now on deposit $650,000 of moneys involved in compositions and settlements, all of which will be indefinitely delayed. The city, which at one time had $1,000,000 on deposit, still has $650,000, secured by the individual bonds of the directors. The state has $30,000 on deposit, amply secured by $100,000 bonds.

The future of the depositors and stockholders will not be known until the state superintendent makes public the report of his findings, but William A. Keener, one of the directors, and formerly of the firm of Keener & Lewis, counsel for the company, said: "Bank on what President Howell says —the company will pay dollar for dollar."

In 1909, when the Carnegie Trust company was under the presidency of the late C. C. Dickinson, who died mysteriously in an alchemist's laboratory last May, an effort was made to consolidate the Carnegie Trust company, the Nineteenth Ward bank, the Twelfth Ward bank and the Van Norden Trust company under the management and name of Carnegie. But the state banking department forbade the merger under a ruling that it would be impossible for a trust company to consolidate with state banks.

The closing of the Carnegie Trust company was no surprise in financial circles. On the street the uncertain status of the company had been a matter of common knowledge. In its brief career—it was organized in 1907 —it had already passed through one serious period of depression and had known four presidents.

So many changes in management had not strengthened the bank in public favor. It is evident from its report to the state superintendent, Nov. 10, that its business had greatly declined during recent months. Then the shadow of Robin fell across its doors.

Dickinson and Robin had been friends and allies. Robin was on the first directorate but resigned. When the Northern bank was closed, and Superintendent Hotchkiss of the state department of insurance made public his investigation into its affairs, a draft drawn by Robin on the Carnegie, with which he had no account, cropped up. From that time there began a steady but continuous withdrawal of funds by depositors who had lost confidence. It could scarcely be called a run on the bank, but in its culmination it proved quite as effective.

The Carnegie Trust company occupied expensive banking quarters on the ground floor of 115 Broadway, which extended from Broadway to Trinity place. An enormous rental was paid.

The officers of the Carnegie Trust company are: President, J. T. Howell; vice presidents, R. L. Smith and J. R. Curran; secretary, R. E. Morehead; assistant treasurer, W. L. Sampson; assistant secretary, A. E. Chandler. The directors of the company are: D. H. A. Bates, W. J. Cummins, A. B. Chandler, M. J. Condon, G. W. Court, G. D. Crabbs, John Cudahy, W. A. Keener, S. H. Kress, L. L. Lewis, E. F. O'Neill, J. B. Reichmann, C. M. Schwab, G. C. Smith and J. B. Stanchfield.

Jeffries Was "Drugged"

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 9.—That James J. Jeffries entered the ring with Jack Johnson at Reno, July 4, a drugged man, not one suffering from nervous collapse, is the pith of a signed article by Barney Oldfield published here and authorized by the defeated champion.

CHARGE CALLS FOR LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Ellis of Boston Pleads Guilty of "Robbery, Being Armed"

Boston, Jan. 9.—George Ellis, who, with a revolver, held up the night clerk at Hotel Westminster early New Year's morning and robbed the till, was indicted by the Suffolk grand jury on the charge of "robbery, being armed," which is punishable only by imprisonment for life.

Arraigned before Judge Stevens in the superior criminal court, without counsel, he pleaded guilty. The judge postponed sentence.

Owing to the peculiar circumstances in the case it is understood that the district attorney will probably not pros so much of the indictment as reads "being armed," lowering the offense to ordinary robbery, which is punishable by any terrm of years.

Brockton Man's Broken Thigh Bone Is Patched With Silver

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 9.—When John Schillin, a carpenter, leaves the Brockton hospital he will be assisted in walking by a silver plated thigh bone, something which no other person in the world has, according to local physicians.

Schillin fell from the roof of a two and a half story house and fractured his right thigh. When he arrived at the hospital it was found the bone was so badly shattered that it was impossible to set it.

Schillin was operated on and the two pieces of bone were joined together with a piece of silver. The physicians expect the operation will prove a success.

HAS BEEN IN MADHOUSE

Son of Former Governor of New Jersey Is Now a Free Man

Jersey City, Jan. 9.—After fifteen months' confinement in the New Jersey state hospital for the insane at Morris Plains, Randolph Bedle, the young Jersey City lawyer and Princeton graduate, who was committed on the certificate of two physicians, has at last gained his freedom.

He is the son of the late Joseph D. Bedle, a distinguished jurist who was governor of New Jersey in the '70s.

Few persons outside of Bedle's family and those concerned in his incarceration knew that he had been sent to the madhouse. Friends were at a loss to explain his disappearance, and this gave rise to all sorts of rumors.

"My, this must have been exciting!" says Mrs. Bilmers, who is reading the paper. "A twenty foot boa constrictor escaped from the zoo yesterday and was captured after it had climbed halfway up a telegraph pole."

"And I swore off when I saw it as I went downtown!" growled Mr. Bilmers disgustedly.

"What are you muttering?" she asked.

"Nothing. I just said it must have been a ticklish job."—Chicago Post.

WILL BENEFIT THE STATE

Lynn Paper Endorses the Proposed Canal

The Lynn Item says editorially:

"The benefit to the State which the construction of canals to connect Massachusetts bay with Buzzard and Narragansett bays will give can hardly be over-estimated. An officer of the engineer corps of the army has been preparing plans for a canal from Hingham to Taunton, and thence by the Taunton river to Narragansett bay and has given estimates of the cost. This is a part of the intracoastal waterway from Boston to the Rio Grande, which when completed will be a great addition to the commercial advantages of Boston.

By it the produce of the West that finds a market in Texas and the republics of South America can be forwarded by the way of Boston at a less expense for freightage, than to transport it down the Mississippi. The time for steamers from Boston to Point Judith by the proposed Taunton-Hingham canal is lessened three hours for steamers and 13 hours for barges in tow. It will enable them to avoid the dangers of 90 miles of ocean navigation along a coast line noted for fogs, storms and rocky shore. There would be four locks, two at the Hingham end and two at Taunton.

"Governor Foss in his inaugural address expressed his belief that the building of the so-called Weymouth canal from Fall River through the Bridgewaters and Brockton is among the first undertakings that should be inaugurated.

"Colonel Abbott estimates that the cost of constructing the Hingham route will amount to from $31,488,000 to $60,950,000, depending upon the route followed by the canal and the specifications used.

"The cost will be considerable and the only question is can it be made to pay? There are those who studied the subject who have great faith in the project, and if its ability to meet the conditions can be demonstrated, there should be no hesitation. By means of it the commercial importance of Boston would be greatly advanced, and whatever has that effect is of benefit to the Commonwealth."

SIRES AND SONS.

Oscar G. Murray, the railroad president, began as a ticket agent in Galveston.

In addition to being aristocratic Senator Lodge is also literary. In fact, lawyer though he is and Harvard graduate, too, literature is his profession.

W. W. Asquith, elder brother of the prime minister of England, has just retired from the position of master at Clifton college, which he has held for thirty-five years.

M. A. Nayland, aged seventy-one, of Kansas City, who gave $60,000 to charity recently and then went into seclusion to escape praise, reappeared at his home afterward. Asked why he gave three-fourths of his fortune away, he said: "I had a little money. I saw so many people worse off than I that I wanted to help them a little. That's all."

BASKET BALL VICTORIES

Quincy Y. M. C. A. Teams Generally Successful

The Y. M. C. A. had a day of victory in the gymnasium on Saturday. Only one of the four games was lost and that was because a Quincy man played on the other side. The 1st team had a runaway victory from the Fairmount A. C. of Hyde Park with a score of 67 to 10.

During the first of the game the visitors played a scrappy game but they weakened before the first half was completed and were not in the running during the remainder of the game. Jenkins playing at left back for Quincy shot 19 basket which is believed to be the best record of the season for an individual player. After the first few minutes of the second half it became merely a question of the size of Quincy's score. Gourlie and Claflin appeared in the lineup of the first team for the first time. Gourlie did not have his eye for the basket but did some good blocking and passing. Claflin played a strong game at centre and got 9 baskets.

During the las few minutes of play, Jenkins was resting after his record breaking feat but his services were not needed to insure the victory and he could safely walk round. Dackers, the other back had tough luck in shooting baskets but his defensive game was excellent. Dave Morris was prevented from shooting more because of his man, Levange who stuck to him like a burr. It looked like the finish of a Marathon when Dave would lead him for a couple of laps round the floor and then take him for a little cross country to the basket.

The summary:

QUINCY Y.M.C.A.	FAIRMOUNT A.C.
Gourlie, rf	lb, Nestor
Morris, lf	rb, Levange
Claflin, c,	c, Rogers
Dackers, rb,	lf, Mulhern
	lf, Carroll
Jenkins, lb,	rf, Tegg

Score—Quincy, 67; Fairmount, 10. Goals from floor—Jenkins 19, Claflin 9, Morris 3, Rogers 2, Dackers 1, Mulhern 1. Goals from fouls—Mulhern 4, Gourlie 2, Dackers 1. Referee, Parker. Time 20 minute halves.

BRAINTREE DEFEATED.

The Second team had little difficulty in defeating the Braintree Quintet, with a final score of 36 to 12. The visiting team played with two substitutes however and thus were not as formidable as when they faced the Intermediate team two weeks ago. Every one of the Quincy men contributed toward the total number of baskets. Trask led with four, Newcomb who played only in the second half scored 3. Miller Rich and Dineen also had 3 each to their credit.

For the visitors, Ness was the star man with 4 goals shot, Minchin was given a lesson in brotherly love by Rich and did not get much chance. Furthermore he had played a hard game in the afternoon and was probably more or less tired. "Tooty" Dineen played a exceptionally good game at back and Trask at left forward was conspicuous. The basket he shot from the side was one of the longest and cleanest seen this season. All men played well and there were no especially prominent stars. Miller played a heady game at centre and Rich and Newcomb showed up well.

The summary:

Y. M. C. A. 2nd	Braintree Quintet
Childs, rf	lb, Wood
Newcomb, rf
Trask, lf	rb, Wilson
	rb, Smith
Miller, c,	c, Davenport
Rich rb,	lf, Minchin
Dineen, lb	rf, Ness

Score—Quincy 36; Braintree, 12. Goals from floor—Trask 4, Ness 4, Newcomb 3, Miller 3, Rich 3, Dineen 3, Childs 1, Minchin 1. Goals from fouls, Trask 2, Ness 2. Referee, Parker. Time 15 minute halves.

EMPLOYED BOYS.

The Employed Boys had an easy proposition in Alpha Mu 2nd of Winthrop. The visitors looked good in their new blue and black uniforms but it was evident early in the game that they had not played together very much and at no time during the contest were they in the running. Booth was the star man for the Quincy team with a total of 8 baskets to his credit.

All the Quincy men shot at least one basket with the exception of Kenn, and he was especially strong on the defence. Becker of the Winthrop team played a good game and shot 3 clean baskets, one of them a long and difficult shot. The Employed Boys showed good knowledge of the game and good team work.

The summary:

EMPLOYED BOYS	ALPHA MU
Thomas, rf	lb, Kirkpatrick
Yates, rf
McDonald, lf	rb, Stedfast
Summers, lf,	rb, Hall
Booth, c	c, Richardson
	c, Poole
Kenn, rb,	lf, Nichols
O'Brien, lb	rf, Becker

Score—Quincy 34; Alpha Mu 8. Goals from floor—Booth 8, McDonald 4, Becker 3, Thomas 2, Yates 1, Summers 1, O'Brien 1. Goals from fouls, Nichols 1, Becker 1. Referee Parker. Time 20 and 15 m halves.

AFTERNOON GAME.

The afternoon game was interesting and the players were good natured. E. Prout of Quincy played centre for the Braintree team in the absence of their regular man and contributed materially toward the victory by shooting 4 baskets. Minchin playing at back was the best shot and netted 5 baskets. For the Intermediates Findley, Tirrell and Sam Prout did the heaviest scoring. Robertson showed up well at back in the first half. Trask did not exert himself in this game owing to the coming struggle expected in the evening. He played only in the second half.

The summary:

BRAINTREE	INTERMEDIATES.
Neal, rf	lb, Tirrell
Smith, lf,	rb, Robertson
	rb, White
E. Prout, c	c, Estey
	c, Trask
Minchin, rb	lf, S. Prout
Small, lb,	rf, Findley

Score—Braintree 24; Quincy 21. Goals from floor, Minchin 5, E. Prout 4, Findley 3, Tirrell 3, Neal 2, S. Prout 2, Trask 1 Smith 1, Robertson 1. Goals from fouls, S. Prout 1. Referee LaRose. Time 15 m. halves.

Between the halves, the All Stars, Capt. LaRose defeated the Invincibles, Capt. Parker 27 to 24. The game was played in championship form as the names of the teams might suggest. The teams lined up as follows: LaRose, R. Cranshaw, Swanson, R. Prout and Randall on the All Stars, Parker, W. Cranshaw, Safford, Gearwar and White on the Invincibles.

THE WRESTLING CARD.

At the wrestling matches last week it was announced that Young Gotch would be one of the attractions on Tuesday evening of this week, but he cut his hand severely a few days ago while skating on ice in Eagleville and will not be able to enter any contests for two weeks. Martin Rock, the French champion at 135 pounds, will be here however to meet Bob Somerville, and Berger Kirlstone of this city will meet "Young Sampson," the strong boy. There will also be other good bouts tomorrow night at the Coliseum.

THE TRANSITORY AND THE IMMUTABLE.

Apropos the coming in of a New Year, the following is taken from an editorial which appeared last week in a Canadian paper, the "Port Hood Greetings," sent in by a reader of the Daily Ledger who desires to see it republished in Quincy. Viewed as philosophy or as literature it will well repay perusal. The diction is excellent.

"There is a sublime solemnity in the slowly moving yet never varying tide of years. Man has marked its course into hours, days, weeks, months, years, centuries, yet it rushes on, on and still on, utterly unmindful of the puny marks raised to measure the tide that never tires. Dynasties rose, flourished and decayed; cities have sprung up from fertile plains and then sank beneath the desert's drifting sands; continents have reared their lofty brows above the ocean's trackless waste only to return to the coral caverns from whence they rose; races have risen to the noon of splendor and have become lost in the depths of night, but time, patient, plodding, tireless time sweeps on with the same regularity as when it first issued forth from the hollow of God's hand to the chant of the morning stars that proclaimed Creation's dawn.

"And yet time is but the image of eternity, the shadow of a shoreless sea, the type of a duration for which all the pages past and the ones to come would not make nor constitute the first faint flush of the first streak of the dawn of its second morning. "Eternity! thou pleasing dreadful thought!" That never ending reign succeeding the crash of matter and the wreck of the worlds, suns and systems.

"Intelligence has achieved triumphs, it has read the stars of heaven and can foretell to a second when the great fiery sun will be hidden in partial or total eclipse, it can read the history of creation in the rocks of nature and unfold the secrets hidden by God in the bowels of the earth, but when it attempts to grasp the significence of eternity it stands abashed and dumbfounded at its inability to comprehend an infinite plan."

SUNDAY SERVICES

CHRIST CHURCH.

The sermons at both morning and evening services were on the subject of the day, the Epiphany.

The Sunday school and Galahad Brotherhood met at noon with good attendances.

The last meeting of the 1910 vestry will be held in the Rectory this evening at 8 o'clock. Every member is urged to attend as important business will be discussed.

The Junior auxiliary will meet at 3.45 on Tuesday.

The Boys' club will meet Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock for business and a social with games and refreshments.

St. Margaret's Guild will hold its regular meeting Friday evening at 7.30.

The annual meeting of the Reapers Circle will be held at the home of Miss Sevil, Saville avenue Friday evening at 7.45.

The annual meeting of the Parish will be held Wednesday evening, January 25.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presyterian church preached at Bethany church Sunday morning in exchange with the pastor. His text was from 1st Kings 6:7—And the house when it was in building was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither." He drew an analogy between the building of Solomon's temple and God's spiritual temple; first, the firm foundation; second, material from a distance; third, material made ready before brought to site; and lastly in completeness and grandeur. There was a place for everyone in Gods temple; have you given your heart to God.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was led by Miss Grace Fisher. The service was well attended and it proved to be one of the most inspiring meetings held by the society this season.

Sunday evening the pastor gave an illustrated lecture on the life of Christ to a large congregation. The pictures were reproductions of paintings by William Hole, and most of them new to Quincy people. It was an instructive and interesting address.

FIRST UNIVERSALIST.

Rev. Donald Flower of White River Junction, Vt., occupied the pulpit at the Universalist church Sunday morning, and preached an interesting sermon. Music was furnished by the quartet.

A meeting of the missionary circle was held this afternoon in cuhrch parlor.

Y. M. C. A.

The meeting for older boys was held at 3.30 Sunday afternoon. J. A. Sedgwick gave a very helpful talk on a vital subject. The meeting was well attended.

The men's meeting had an attendance that was very encouraging. The speaker Dr. Walter Calley, gave a very excellent address on the subject "Cobbler or shoemaker."

MANY LARGE BEQUESTS.

The will of Mary L. Peabody of Milton, which has been filed in the Norfolk probate court, makes bequests totaling $700,000 to churches and charities. Among the bequests are $5,000 to the selectmen of Milton, the income to be distributed annually to the poor at Christmas. A codicil gives $25,000 to the trustees of the will to be used in erecting a rectory for the parish of All Saints church, Dorchester.

WINTER BASEBALL CHAT

The Pirates will try out sixteen new players during the spring training campaign. Half of this number are pitchers. Clarke will try to develop a first baseman so that he will not have to shift Wagner from his favorite position at shortstop.

Though considered one of the fastest outfielders in the pastime, Hofman of the Chicago Cubs showed the poorest record of any regular gardener in the game when it came to stealing bases. In 105 games last season Hofman pilfered only six bassocks.

President Charley Ebbets of the Brooklyn Nationals has repeatedly been criticised for his niggardliness in paying for new players. To show that he means business next season Ebbets says that his actual outlay in cash for fourteen new players for 1911 has been $25,400.

A new "hope of the white race" will be seen in a New York American uniform next season—that is, of course, if this recruit makes an impression in the preliminary workout in the spring. The youth is Shortstop Priest, who admits that he is only eighteen and stands six feet four inches in his stockings and is growing rapidly. According to a wit, Priest will be quite a credit to his folks when he attains full size.

MAGNATE MURPHY SEEKS TO OUTDO COMISKEY.

Charley Murphy, owner of the Chicago Nationals, is getting wise. He finally tumbled to the fact that no matter how much the Cubs outclass the White Sox and no matter how poorly the Sox stand in the American league race, the south side fans flock to the White Sox's park because of the tremendous personal following that is owned by Charley Comiskey. Ever since he has been established as a magnate in Chicago Comiskey has sought to make himself popular, and he has succeeded in no small degree. In many ways he could give pointers to the cleverest politicians in making friends.

On the other hand, Charley Murphy held himself rather aloof from the general public and the smaller baseball personages. But that is his system no longer. A year ago he attended the meeting of the minor leagues at Memphis and made a big hit. Recently at Chicago he was again Johnny-on-the-spot, and, taking advantage of the absence of Comiskey, who was away on a hunting trip, he acted as host in an informal way to the hundred or more of minor league magnates and managers who were in attendance at the meeting of the National association. Like a bee who flits from flower to flower, Murphy hustled from magnate to magnate, from manager to manager, from player to player, always extending the glad hand, buying now and then and taking an apparent deep interest in the deliberations of the minor league business sessions.

When the meeting was over every minor leaguer was willing to agree that Charley Murphy was a mighty good fellow who had been greatly maligned.

KISTLER YALE SAMSON.

Fullback on 1910 Eleven Makes Remarkable Strength Tests.

Dr. Frank J. Born, medical examiner at the Yale gymnasium, stated recently that Eric O. Kistler, the fullback on the Yale football team, had broken all the strength records at Yale and, according to the strength tests, has wrested the championship as Yale's strong man from Johnny Kilpatrick, who has held it for two years. Kilpatrick took the title from Ted Coy.

Kistler's home is in Denver. He underweighs Kilpatrick by seven pounds and Coy by fifteen pounds. In every strength test he surpasses both Coy and Kilpatrick except in the push up, where both made better records, and in the lung test, where Coy made the record of 430 cubic inches to 350 for Kistler and 328 for Kilpatrick. In total number of points Kistler is 607.5 ahead of Coy and 453.1 ahead of Kilpatrick.

The following table shows the records Kistler made in the several tests in comparison with those made by Kilpatrick and Coy:

	Kistler.	Kilpatrick.	Coy.
Height	70.5 in.	70.2	70.8
Weight	175 lbs.	182	190
Breadth of shoulder	18.8 in.	17.8	17.5

Pull up	12	10	12
Push up	11	13	12
Total strength in points	2270	1816.9	1662.5

Yale has had five strong men during the last decade—Charlie Chadwick, the Yale football captain who held the record until Charlie Carver, Yale, 1906, broke it; then Coy, Kilpatrick and Kistler.

TEMPORARY LOAN ORDER OF $500,000 PASSED

Taken from Finance Committee and Considered by Committee of the Whole

Councilman Branch Appointed Chairman of the Finance Committee--Standing Committees Named

An important meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. The principal business of the evening was a discussion of the order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow $500,000 in anticipation of taxes. This order was recalled from the Finance committee and thrashed out by the Council as a committee of the whole, and then passed.

There was considerable interest in the matter of committee appointments but President Bryant kept them in suspense until just before adjournment, when he announced them.

All members were present.

WATER ORDER.

A communication was received from the Mayor with enclosure from the Commissioner of Public Works, requesting an appropriation of $30,000 for the extension of the water system and $10,000 for the purchase and installation of water meters. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Nowland offered the necessary order. Referred to Committee on Water Supply.

APPOINTMENTS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing John Weeden as a constable, Peter T. Fallon, William J. Williams, and H. P. Reardon as public weighers; and John Robbie and James Robbie as weighers of coal and measurers of wood. Confirmed.

TAX REFUND.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Assessors recommending the refund of 55 cents to Ida B. Stewart on sewer assessment, $7 in taxes to Wilton A. Dunham, $50 to Emma L. Rice and $60 to Sarah E. N. Edwards. Referred to Finance Committee.

TEMPORARY LOANS.

A communication was received from the Mayor with inclosure from the City Treasurer giving the list and amounts of bonds, interest and temporary loans due in January and February. The Mayor in his communication recommends the necessity of passing the usual temporary loan order of $500,000. The amounts falling due are as follows.

Bonds—January $11,500, February, $4,000, March $2,000.

Interest—January $6,169.59, February $7,026.10, March $2,650.50.

Temporary loans—January, $95,000, February $175,000, March $100,000.

Total—January $112,609.59, February $186,026.10, March $104,650.50.

Laid on the table until later when it was taken up with the temporary loan order.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received from the Electric Light Co. for a location for poles on Liberty street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received from the Gas Co. for permission to lay mains on Arthur, Bicknell and South streets, Glover avenue, Norfolk street, Palmer street, Rock Island road, East Howard and East Squantum streets Hancock and Chubbuck streets and DesMoines road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

TEMPORARY LOANS.

Councilman Bolster moved the temporary loan order be taken from the Finance Committee and considered by the Council as a committee of the whole.

Councilman Richards objected. The order should first be considered by the committee. The Council was not prepared to act on a matter of such magnitude. He objected to railroading the order through the Council

Councilman Cherrington asked the City Treasurer if it would embarrass the city if the loan was not passed for two or three weeks.

City Treasurer Curtis replied that he could not get along over two weeks.

The motion to withdraw referred to the committee prevailed.

The second part of the motion which was that the Council resolve itself into a committee of the whole, was in order.

Councilman Richards thought it a good policy to go slow.

By a rising vote of 15 yes and 6 no the motion to consider in committee of whole prevailed.

Councilman Branch was appointed chairman and George T. Magee elected clerk of the committee of the whole

President Bryant speaking from the floor said. This order is the usual one. From Oct. 1 to Jan. 1 we collect about 65 percent of the taxes. From Jan. 1, until the budget is passed, we have no money to pay the running expenses and the law says we may borrow in anticipation of taxes. Between now and April 1 we have $403,000 to meet, and we must have money to live on until the taxes come in. We are obliged to provide for the payment of our debts when due. He had practically decided on his Finance committee, but in fairness to all he believed it better to discuss the question in the committee of the whole.

There is no question but what we must have $403,000 between now and April 1. The loan will be issued as needed. The lawyers and bankers prefer a lump sum order.

Councilman Richards—As a matter of fact a certain amount has got to be paid. His figures made the total $295,000. He only objected to the method of precedure in this matter. He believed the order should first be considered by the Finance Committee. It looked to him a little like railroading the order through. He moved to amend by making the amount $400,000.

Councilman Bailey said he had tried to memorize the city charter, and had made a study of the figures given in the reports of the City Treasurer. It seems there in $403,000 coming due before April 1, and he did not see why it was not a safe proposition to pass the order. He agreed however, it should go to the Finance committee.

Councilman Bolster said we have got to have the money, and it was not railroading the order.

Councilman Gardner was pleased to see the order considered in this way. We all get an understanding of it and we save time.

Councilman Craig believed 23 men could consider the question better than seven.

President Bryant moved the committee rise and report that the order ought to pass.

Councilman Nowland asked the CityTreasurer how much of last years temporary loan was floated before July 1.

City Treasurer Curtis replied $445,000.

Councilman Nowland—What is done with the money borrowed for school houses.

City Treasurer Curtis—Placed on interest at two per cent.

Councilman Nowland did not see why this money could not be used instead of the temporary loan. Why should we keep $120,000 at interest drawing two per cent when we are paying four per cent for temporary loans?

President Bryant—The bonds for the $120,000 loan have not been issued as yet. When the contract is signed the loan will be floated. That sum therefore did not enter into this proposition. There are $408,000 in temporary loans due before April 1. The $500,000 is for that purpose.

Councilman Cherrington did not intend to criticise anyone, but it appears when we get through Dec. 31, we are

SAD ACCIDENT AT WOLLASTON

Woman Killed by Falling Down Cellar Stairs

Mrs. William T. Loughead of 30 Brook street was instantly killed last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Gray of 9 Newton street. The occasion was the regular meeting of the Dorothy Q sewing circle of Odd Ladies' and it had been a very enjoyable evening up to the time of the accident, it being generally conceded that Mrs. Loughead was the life of the party. Just before the guests were to sit down to the dining table Mrs. Loughead went to the rear of the house unnoticed. She mistook the door leading to the cellar for another door and fell headlong down stairs. It was some minutes before she was missed, when a search was instituted. She was found at the foot of the cellar steps in an unconscious condition.

Mr. Gray carried her upstairs unassisted and Dr. Johnson responded very promptly. But death had been almost instantaneous from a fractured skull, not living over twenty minutes. Mrs. Loughead was familiar with the house, and it was surprising that she should have gone to the wrong door.

She was the wife of William T. Loughead, 62 years of age, and leaves two daughters; Mabel, who lives at home, and Lillian, wife of John Newcomb of Dorchester. She was a member of Paul Revere Women's Relief Corps.

LUNCHEON PARTY.

Mrs. Charles T. Baker, of Safford street, gave a pretty luncheon party on Friday, Jan. 6, to celebrate the eighty-second birthday of her mother Mrs. M. E. Merrill. Near and dear friends were present from Dorchester, Wollaston, Quincy and Whitman.

Mrs. Merrill had many birthday remembrances including quantities of beautiful flowers. She was born in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, January 7, 1829 and came to Wollaston in the summer of 1876. In the thirty-five years of her residence here she has won for herself, through her genial and kindly disposition, a host of loyal friends both young and old. They wish for her continued good health and many just such happy birthdays.

TENNIS DANCE.

When the members of the Wollaston Tennis club arrived at Wollaston hall on Friday evening, Jan. 6, to take part in their second dancing party of the season they found that owing to an accident to the heating apparatus the hall could not be used. Repairs were immediately made and the postponed dance was held on Saturday evening. A large number were present, music being furnished by Campbell's orchestra of Nepenset. The committee in charge consisted of Messrs. Charles E. Barker, Dr. F. S. Andrews, Roy C. Baker, D. W. Bond, A. B. Hillman, Marcus Chase and H. H. Albee. The next of the series will be held on February 10.

THIRD DEGREE TONIGHT.

The third degree will be exemplified tonight at Braintree Town Hall on 25 candidates of Ave Marie council, Knights of Columbus, the new West Quincy council. The work will be performed by Charles J. Brady, district deputy supreme knight, and suite. A large number of visitors are expected. Special cars will leave the hall for West Quincy after the work of the evening.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Henry Newman, aged 79 years, was found dead in bed Sunday morning at the residence of his daughter, with whom he made his home at 273 Beach street, Wollaston. Mr. Newman was formerly employed as a janitor, but retired from active life some years ago. He retired Saturday night in apparent good health. Heart disease is given as the cause of his death. He leaves two daughters. Funeral services were held from his late home this afternoon and were conducted by Rev. Carl G. Horst.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

At Annual Meeting of St. Chrysostoms Parish

The annual parish meeting of St. Chrysostom's church was held Monday evening in the parish rooms, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra the rector was in the chair.

After the clerk Theodore Parker had read the warrant, and minutes of the last meeting, John W. Atkins read the treasurer's report, which showed a deficit on account of the extensive repairs of the past years. The amount was quickly made up by pledges of five, three and one dollar taken by Percy L. Davidson.

Reports of the different organizations were given by secretaries and treasurers, Miss Marion Orr for the Junior Auxiliary; Mrs. Howard D. Fowler, for the Girls' Friendly society; Miss Louisa Allison Ross, for the Altar Guild; Mrs. David L. Jewell, for the Missionary committee; Mrs. Herbert H. Albee for the rummage bag fund; Mrs. Herbert L. Packard, for the Woman's Guild; John L. Hamilton for the Men's club; George J. Poch, superintendent, for the Sunday school. All were most encouraging.

The Girls' Friendly society has set an example by adding $25 to the parish house fund, and it is hoped that all of the organizations will add to that fund during the year.

The rector, gave an account of funds received in the missionary envelopes, the communion alms, and subscriptions for the calendar. He made mention that the calendar was being printed at cost by one who had recently come in the parish, Miss Weeks of the firm of Weeks & Doten.

MAYOR SHEA HAS THREE BILLS

One Would Eliminate Party Designation from Candidates at Municipal Election

One for Sewerage Construction and One for Scavenger Work

Mayor Shea is preparing three petitions which he will present to the Legislature this week.

One of these is for a bill that will make amounts due for scavanger work a lien upon the property. Under the present law a non resident may order certain scavanger work done on his property in Quincy, and then neglect to pay the bill, and the city has no way of collecting the bill except by civil suit, which would entail too great an expense. If however the law allowed such work to become a lien on the property, the same as for gypsy and brown tail moth work, the city would be able to collect for work done.

Another petition is for the enactment of a law eliminating party designations for candidates to be voted for at Municipal elections. The Mayor does not ask, however, that the legislature make this compulsory, but that the question of whether such designations shall be eliminated may be submitted to the voters for them to decide at the election next November. Practically this same petition was before the Legislature last year, and developed considerable opposition, and was eventually killed.

The third petition is for authority to borrow a sum outside the debt limit not exceeding $200,000 for completing the sewerage system of the city.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Talk about economy. The Cruiser Detroit, which cost $1,233,000, has just been sold for $20,000.

Aviation may be all right as a sport but there seems to be as many broken bones as broken records.

That Greek bootblack who was recently made vice consul to Aberdeen certainly worked from the ground up.

Never before in the history of this part of the country did the water wagon start off the new year with so copious a supply of the raw material.

Governor Dix rolls up his sleeves and pitches in as if he were going to show New Yorkers what a working Governor can do.

Just about the time a lot of fellows have climbed on the water wagon it is announced that there is 639,763 gallons of fine rum in storage at Jamaica.

Wizzard Burbank finds California women and Eastern men the most perfect types, but this isn't likely to result in any San Francisco-New Orleans weddings yet a while.

Chief Justice White is reported to go to bed at 1 and get up at 6, on account of his work. The old J. P. who used a white bean for the plaintiff, a black bean for the defendant and a spotted bean for the intervener had a quicker way of deciding cases.

When it was announced some days ago that Senator-elect Lorimer had been given a clean bill of morals with reference to his election as Senator, there were many who said, "How will Col. Roosevelt feel now for refusing to sit at table with him and having the refusal published over the world?" but now that the Senate has refused to approve the clean bill prepared by Senator Burroughs and others and proposed to take up the matter again, it is quite possible after all that history will justify ex-President Roosevelt's action.

When our fathers made Congress, they hardly supposed its grind would be so exhausting as to require two weeks' vacation after working three. The austere old patriots would imagine every representative at his desk, like a sentinel on his beat, till the last bill was acted upon.

They would see him absorbing the dustiest and mustiest statistics, that he might lay broad and deep the foundation of wise laws. They could not anticipate the up-to-date statesman hustling in just long enough to get leave to print a campaign speech in the Record.

The legislators coming back last week may feel like doing a stroke or two of work, as it is the last chance for Republican legislation before 1912. But the session will produce more fodder for campaign orators than laws for statute books.

The Democratic congressmen have avoided one serious pitfall in the understanding that the next speaker shall not name committees. Of course this curbing of the speaker should not mean return to endless filibustering when a man could read articles out of the encyclopaedia to keep the House loafing.

The makers of the constitution never dreamed that the speaker of the House would acquire an authority second only to the president's. In the simple old days when there was time to act on every measure, legislation stood on its own merits in open debate. Today with the journals flooded, the most effective weapon is not oratory and statesmanship in open debate, but the deadly pigeon hole.

It is a weapon of silence and secrecy, controlled by one man who owes his chance of election to but one district.

Some 15,000,000 American voters want some say about it, if he is to wield alone this thunderbolt of the dark.

Let all sides remember that fat pigeon holes and thin statute books lead to the extension of many political graveyards.

DRIFT OF OPINION

The close of the first half of the fiscal year finds the treasury deficit about half as much as it was a year ago. That is a decided improvement and it is to be hoped that it will continue for the rest of the year. There is a chance, though, that the country will go deeper into the hole before June 30 arrives. If the corporation tax cases go against the government the tidy sum of $27,000,000 will have to be paid back, and that would mean just that amount added to the national debt, as one-year certificates to raise the money must be sold.—Framingham News.

It is rather early to express any opinion, as the Selectmen do, with regard to the Greater Boston federation scheme of the Chamber of Commerce, for the reason that thus far there has been nothing but mere preliminary discussion of this plan by its advocates, the problem now being in the hands of a special committee, the conclusions of which cannot be predicted. When that report is made public there will be something to comment upon. Till then, everyone of course is free to express his views on any aspect of the subject that may interest him, but all the views that we have seen expressed thus far strongly savor of the quality of snap judgments. To our mind there is a very strong probability that the advocates of federation, whether of the "loose" or "close" form will be unable to make out a strong case for that change in the government of Boston and suburbs. Nothing short of the merit of its principles can carry through the movement to success, and the public has nothing to fear from a thorough airing of the subject by those who believe in federation as something necessary for the general welfare of the Metropolitan district, let alone this particular municipality. —Brookline Chronicle.

The Mansfield Board of Trade at a recent meeting passed a resolution in favor of the government's continuing printing on envelopes and selling them to the public. The resolution is to be sent to Senator Lodge.

The News asks: "Why didn't the Board include in the resolution that the government go into the chocolate business or the jewelry business or the foundry business for the hat business; in fact, why didn't the members ask Senator Lodge, through the resolution, to do his utmost to have the government compete with every Mansfield business, banking, real estate, stores and the like? For years the government has printed a business card on envelopes at a loss and sold them in competition with the printer.

If the postoffice department wants to enter the busineses world let it do so on a business basis. No printer can sell at a loss even if the government can. We growl at the millions of deficit each year, then ask for a continuation of business along the same lines. Just as the public is benefited by the low prices of printed envelopes, just so would the public benefit, if there were governmental competition along other lines.

It is surprising how widespread is this desire on the part of business men to get "something for nothing" when it does not affect their own interests. Competition may be the life of business, but competition which does business at a loss and makes up with some other line is hardly upon the right thing especially when the government engages in it.—Natick Bulletin.

TRANSPORTATION NEEDS.

Of New England—The Empire of the Southwest—How New England Is Throwing Away Millions of Dollars Every Year.

D. O. Ives, director of the transportation bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, certainly got down to facts in regard to New England needs in transportation in a recent speech before the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston.

Mr. Ives said in part: "The Boston Chamber of Commerce has now in hand cases covering comprehensively the subject of freight rates between New England and every State and district in the country; it has brought to a successful conclusion the question of rates West on imported goods, and is about to open the question of export rates. In connection with the campaign for better terminal facilities, a very strenuous effort is being made to get better transfer facilities for freight which originates in any part of New England and is transferred at Boston for shipment to any other part of New England or the rest of the country; but the great crying need, or at least the need which has most strongly impressed itself on the Chamber, because it seems such a glaring omission of golden oportunities, is the matter of a steamship line to that great Southwestern empire, Texas. Texas sends to New England 500,000 bales of cotton, and almost as much comes from Oklahoma, the two furnishing about 25 per cent of New Englands' requirements of cotton. New Mexico and Arizona send great quantities of wool to Boston, and the Southwest also furnishes as meat products, rice, oil, fruits, vegetables, hides and lumber. On the other hand New England manufactures innumerable commodities of which the great Southwest is a large consumer; and the lamentable state of affairs is that all this traffic is forwarded through New York and the Gulf, and New England shippers must pay the added charge of the haul between New York and Boston over what New York manufacturers pay, because the all-rail rates are absolutely prohibitive except in rare cases of high cost articles. Boston was once a great seaport, and in handling New England business, yielded first place to no other; but today New England takes no part in carrying any of this great business—its own commerce. New York gets all the benefits and what is the result? Figures show that New England trade is steadily on the decrease in the Southwest; we are in the habit of thinking of NewEngland as a great shoe centre, but New England furnishes Texas less than 5 per cent of its shoes.

"The opportunities for the expansion of our trade in the great Southwest are greater than in any other section for three reasons. We of the Atlantic seaboard are, in transportation units, nearer the heart of Texas than is any other great centre, not excluding St. Louis, New England and Texas are commercial complements of one another; they produce what we use and we produce and manufacure what they use; and while there has been phenomental growth in many parts of the country the Southwest has outstripped all other sections. The awakening of Mexico, the wonderful development of the new State Oklahoma, the opening of the Panama Canal, the almost fabulous possibilities in Texan agriculture, the great and constantly increasing cotton acreage and the enhanced value of cotton; all these are real reasons why our trade with the great Southwest should be multiplied many times. One great obstacle stands in the way and prevents any possibility of our taking any part in this development—we have no ships, and New England is hesitating about risking a million dollars in such an enterprise."

SAYS ELECTION WAS INVALID

Gist of Minority Report Seeking to Oust Lorimer

INTRODUCED BY BEVERIDGE

Owen Has Similar Resolution and Is First Recognized, Beveridge Securing the Floor Only After a Parliamentary Tangle In Which Vice President's Ruling Is Reversed—Lorimer Takes Floor In Own Behalf

Washington, Jan. 10.—Republican and Democratic leaders jockeyed for position when the William Lorimer case came up in the senate yesterday, for the evident purpose of reaping what party advantages might result from being first to attack the right of the Illinois senator to his seat, on the allegation that it had been obtained through bribery.

Mr. Lorimer himself relieved the senate of any embarrassment it might have felt in bringing up the subject by addressing the senate before anyone else had spoken a word. Senator Owen of Oklahoma had been scheduled to open the proceedings, but he yielded at once to the man who is now virtually on trial before the senate for his political life and his honor.

Mr. Lorimer spoke clearly, slowly and in a firm voice. He referred briefly to the passage of the resolution of inquiry relative to the charges of bribery and corruption in the Illinois legislature and stated that "after considerable time and a thorough inquiry," a report had been made by a majority of the committee on privileges and elections.

"I feel because of what I know of my election," said Lorimer, "and I know I was not elected by bribery and corruption and no person was guilty of corrupt practice in my election. I feel obligated to my state and to myself to be present in this chamber during this discussion. At some later time I shall reserve the right to discuss the statements made along with the reports. I hope my presence will not embarrass any senator who may want to discuss this matter, as their presence will not embarrass me."

Senator Beveridge, by virtue of being a member of the committee on privileges and election which investigated charges of bribery against Lorimer, gained a tactical victory by filing a minority report attacking the position of his colleagues on the committee who voted to exonerate the Illinois senator.

Senator Owen, however, introduced a resolution to declare the election of Senator Lorimer to have been illegal and void, but he was not permitted to address the senate in its support. The senate held that the resolution under the rules would have to go over until today. Beveridge then submitted his report, the conclusion of which was:

"That this election was invalid under any possible view of the law. If the senate so concludes it is our duty so to declare. Therefore I submit the following resolution:

"Resolved, that William Lorimer was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of the state of Illinois."

The parliamentary tangle in the senate as to who of the two senators desiring to open the attack upon Lorimer should have precedence was not settled until after an appeal had been taken from a ruling by Vice President Sherman and he had been reversed.

Mr. Owen was first recognized. He presented a resolution similar to that which Beveridge had incorporated in his minority report. It was read and Owen was prepared to speak upon it when Beveridge demanded the regular order, which was the introduction of morning business.

The vice president ruled that the Owen resolution was of highest privilege and that Owen having been recognized had the right to the floor. Promptly appealing from the chair, Beveridge was supported by a majority of the senate in his contention that the Owen resolution would have to lie over one day under the rules. This permitted Beveridge to submit his report and have it read openly.

The Beveridge report reviews the testimony bearing upon the alleged acceptance of bribes by four members of the legislature and the testimony of these men that the bribes had been paid by three other members. The minority report declared that it is an undisputed fact of conclusive force, although the majority ignores it, that the confessed bribe takers were shown to have had in their possession, in bills of large denominations, unusually large sums of money soon after the dates when they swore to having received the alleged bribes. This statement is made in reply to the contention of the majority that the men who confessed to having received bribes were not to be believed.

BRAINTREE TOBOGGAN CLUB.

Braintree has a new sport this winter. Through the courtesy of George O. Wales, a toboggan slide has been built on the hill in the rear of his residence. The construction work extends 800 feet down the hill toward Cedar street and the toboggans will debouch onto the level ground back of Mr. C. F. Howe's new house.

The cost of materials was about $100 and the chute was built by local members of the club at an added expense of hammered thumbs, wet feet and stiff backs. The sides average one foot in height and are supported by uprights either driven into the ground, or attached to horizontal studding connected to the uprights with diagonal braces. The work has been thoroughly done and the slide is strong and safe.

The entrance is through a break in the stone wall on Cedar street over land owned by Henry Knight and is marked by a large sign. Double-wicked torches on six foot red poles lead from the entrance, at intervals of fifty feet, to the top of the slide, and the stand at the top is surmounted by four of these torches. The chute is insured against fire and all trespassers will be vigorously prosecuted.

A few inches of snow will be sufficient to put the chute in condition as arrangements have been made to have it shovelled in and packed down.

Anyone wishing to join the club may do so by the payment of a fee of $1.00 for entrance and $1.00 dues. Toboggans can be bought through the club at wholesale rates, the eight foot toboggan costing $3.35.

Checks should be sent at once, as the membership will be limited, to the treasurer, Mr. A. W. Kirkpatrick, Vine street, Braintree.

John Galbraith, district superintendent of the Boston District of the Methodist church was present at the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church on Friday night, Jan. 6th and led the prayer meeting after which he held the fourth quarterly conference. Reports were read from the church, the trustees, the Sunday school, the Epworth league, the Junior league and the Ladies' Aid. All showed improved conditions over last year.

Mr. Herbert O. Cassidy, Mr. Morris E. Kilpatrick, Mr. Haverlock J. Kilpatrick, Mr. Arthur R. Poquett, Mrs. Elizabeth Burr, Mr. Henry Larson and Mrs. Arthur R. Poquett were appointed stewards for the next year. The trustees appointed were Mr. Theodore L. Pariee, Mr. Morris Kilpatrick, Mr. Herbert O. Cassidy, Mr. Henry Larson and Mr. Arthur R. Poquett. The music committee will consist of Mr. Herbert O. Cassidy, Mr. Harry B. Howe, Mrs. Arthur Keeler, Miss Mabel Florence Burr and Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook.

The Board unanimously requested the return of the Rev. John Louis Garand as pastor for the coming year. Rev. Dr. Galbraith stated that the church was in the best condition it had been in since he had taken charge of the district five years ago.

TO MEET AT SPOKANE.

Morton MacCormac of Chicago, president-elect of the National Commercial Teachers' Federation, representing 20,000 instructors in the United States and Canada, which will have its next convention in Spokane in July, 1912, has sent the following telegram to the Spokane chamber of commerce:

"The fathers of business education builded better than they knew. They sewed the seed which is today ripening into the flower of the most practical sort known in the history of the educational world. The business college has widened its influence until today we are a cooperative body of business schools, high schools, colleges and universities, organized for the sole purpose of strengthening courses of study along the lines of commerce.

"We are not only interesting the high school and college graduate but also those who have been lax or uninterested in regular public school work, and, in addition, provide them with a salable education, which is a passport to the best commercial enterprises and positive insurance against disaster.

"We stand for continued uplift, for progressiveness and for thorough cooperation among all the forces of education, whose aim and desire is to make practical and valuable our educational system. Originally the universities were the fathers and their offspring the college and the high school. Today we find the influence emanating from the business training school dominating the future policies of our universities. The age is one of common sense practicability education The united efforts of our committees will be exerted along the line of making the coming Spokane convention an epoch in the American school."

POSTAL CLERKS' ANNUAL BALL

Tuesday Evening, February 7, at Mechanics Hall

The nineteenth annual reunion of the Boston Post Office Clerks' Mutual Benefit Association, which is to be held at Mechanics hall on Tuesday evening, February 7, bids fair to be one of the most brilliant social affairs of the season. Preparations have all been made, and a record crowd of friends and associates is expected.

The association is composed of post-office clerks in the Boston postal district, and has for its object the provision of comfort for its members durin gtime of sickness and assisting their families when the grim hand of death puts an end to the career of a post-office clerk.

The death benefit has recently been increased to $1,000, through the efforts of President T. J. Callahan and Secretary W. H. Driscoll.

Every member of the association has been made a member of the reunion committee with President Callahan as chairman; William H. Driscoll as secretary; and J. A. Barry as treasurer. The chairmen of the various committees are as follows: Executive, Terence J. O'Donnell; reception, John P. Scanlon; press, William F. Curley; printing, John F. Ryan; catering, P. J. Mahoney; badges, E. P. Ledwith; music, James P. Smith; transportation, Charles O'Brien. Foor Director, Charles Daly.

Mechanics hall will be beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and emblems of the service, for the occasion. A concert will be given by the Letter Carriers' band from 8 to 9. At the latter hour the grand march will be started.

MANY NEW STEAMSHIPS

Would Be Required If New Subsidy Bill Passed

Senator Gallinger introduced in the National Senate on Tuesday, a revised ocean mail subsidy bill, which eliminates from present consideration all trans-Pacific lines and applies only to the establishment of ocean mail service on routes to South America, south of the equator—that is to Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, China and Peru.

As in other bills presented, it is proposed that the postmaster general shall be authorized to pay for ocean mail service on vessels of the second class on South American routes the same rate per mile ($4) as is now paid for service on vessels of the first class between the United States and European ports.

A provision which is new in subsidy bills forbids the award of any contract for an ocean mail line to any bidder engaged in competitive transportation by rail or in the business of exporting or importing merchandise. Moreover, the postmaster general is directed to cancel any contract, the performance of which shall "rest within the control of any competitive railroad company, or any person or persons in control of the same through stock ownership or otherwise." The postmaster general is directed also to cancel any contracts held by any person who gives undue preference or advantage to any particular person, corporation or locality or any particular description of traffic.

The total expenditure in any one year under the bill is not to exceed $4,000,000 and shall not, in any case, exceed the amount of revenue received from the foreign mail service over and above the amount otherwise paid for such service.

These new services would require the construction of from 20 to 30 steamships, capable of a speed of at least 16 knots an hour and with a gross tonnage of from 8000 to 12,000 tons, built on designs approved by the navy department.

Under the terms of the contracts the ships would have to be turned over to the use of the government in times of war. Not one American steamship is now running on any of the routes covered by the bill.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gardiner parents of the bride and Mr. and Miss Lothrop, brother and sister of the groom assisted in receiving.

The parlor was decorated with blush roses and the library where was stationed a four piece orchestra was a bower of blush pinks and maiden hair ferns. The decorations in the dining room were blush and white pinks. A bounteous collation was served during the evening by Dale, the caterer.

The bride's dress was white bride's satin trimmed with princess lace with silver and pearl garniture. Mrs. Frank Gardiner wore grey silk, Miss Lothrop white lace over cream satin.

Many handsome and valuable presents were displayed in an upper room among which was a large piece of Japanese tapestry, three mahogany chairs and a seven branched silver candlestick and a dinner set.

Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop surprised their guests by announcing that they had been married the seventh of December at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Boston by the Rev. Mr. McCoughlin in the presence of their immediate families.

Among those present from Atlantic were: Mr. John Duggan, Miss Fanny Duggan, Miss Clara McClure, Mrs. Arthur Priest, Miss Georgie Priest, Mrs. Olin A. Holbrook, Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook, Mrs. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Gardiner, Mr. Frank Gardiner and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Poquett.

Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop have taken a trip to Chicago and New York.

"Doctor," said the solicitor, "I wish you would do some advertising with our paper."

"Couldn't think of it sir. The idea is preposterous. It's against the ethics of our profession. By the way, here's an item about a man I attended this morning. Take it down to the office, will you? And be sure to see that my name is mentioned."

WILD ANIMALS OF COUNTRY

Address by President Shield at Quincy Mansion School

Pupils, faculty and a large number of favored guests from Quincy and Wollaston enjoyed a most interesting stereopticon lecture at the Quincy Mansion school on Monday evening by G. O. Shields, president of the League of American Sportsmen, upon the wild animals of the United States.

The views, results of 30 years' hunting of wild animals with the camera, with welcome additions by friends, showed the animals in their native haunts and were of marked clearness and beauty. They contained many striking poses at near range, obtained only after exercise of great patience and knowledge of woodcraft.

Mr. Shields prefaced his lecture with a few remarks on the economic value of insect eating birds, in which he deplored the rapid extinction of many of the species. The farmers, he said, are losing one billion of dollars each year from the ravages of insects simply because the birds are being killed off.

The slides opened with pictures of eagles, coveys of quail, squirrels, grouse and wild geese. In connection with the last the speaker told an interesting incident of a Colorado farmer who fed a flock on one of their Southern flights, and for the last seven years the geese have returned in ever increasing numbers growing tamer with each season. How much better this is, said Mr. Shields, than wantonly murdering a few and scaring them so that they will never return.

Speaking of bears he told an exciting experience with a family of three grizzlies in which he and his companion miraculously escaped. He related a tale of a wise old beaver with his foreleg cut off, carrying a crutch. The latter story however, he would not vouch for.

The Yellowstone and the Flathead valley buffalo reservation were described at length while deer, panther, wolves, elk, beaver and hordes of other animals followed in interesting succession.

Mr. Shields closed his lecture with descriptions and views of the vast snow slides that yearly take place in the Selkirk mountains of British Columbia. At its conclusion his audience felt that hunting with a camera yielded far greater satisfaction than the thoughtless slaughter of our wild friends, the denizens of the field and forest.

Reign of the Dandies.

In the matter of dress we have fallen upon a decline since the days when the Duke of Wellington was refused admission to Almack's because he was wearing trousers instead of breeches and silk stockings. Even Almack's, however, had to admit trousers within its closely guarded portals the following year. When Gladstone was "up" at Oxford the reign of the dandies was in full swing. When late in life he revisited the university to lecture to the undergraduates on Homer he was asked by G. W. E. Russell whether he noticed any difference between his audience and the men of his own time.

"Yes," he replied, "in their dress an enormous change. I am told that I had among my audience some of the most highly connected and richest men in the university, and there wasn't one whom I couldn't have dressed from top to toe for £5."—St. James' Gazette.

A "Fast" Train.

"Speaking of railroads," said the truthful man, "the ultimate word, in my experience, was a certain 'limited' on which I traveled last summer. At a point where we were making our greatest speed a man stood at the side of the track with a moving picture machine. I leaned out of the window and called to him, 'How are you getting on?'

"He stopped turning the crank and spoke with an expression of deep disgust.

"'It don't seem to be no use,' he said. 'Hold your head still, please. I want to get a time exposure.'"—Everybody's.

The Burglar's Prayer.

Sir Herbert Risley, speaking of the castes of eastern Bengal at a meeting of the Royal Anthropological institute, said a curious system of religious worship prevailed among a caste who were professional burglars. They made a space in the ground, and a man then cut his arm and prayed to one of the earth gods that there might be a dark night and that he might succeed in obtaining great booty and escape capture.—London Standard.

Character Lessons to Train Youth

By JAMES TERRY WHITE.

[Copyright, 1909, by the Character Development League.]

IX.—Perseverance.

JAMES T. WHITE.

A YOUNG girl sat singing at the piano. "Sing it again," said the singing teacher, and the tired girl sang it again and again. "But you do not sing it properly, and I question if you will ever make a great singer." But the little girl tried hard and practiced the next day and the next, the next week and the next, the next year and the next. One day she stood before 5,000 men and women, and she sang till she seemed to take them out of themselves and to carry them up into the clouds of enchantment, over seas of melody, into an ecstasy of delight, until the people wept from the excess of their emotions. That girl was Lillian Nordica.

Anything worth doing is beset with difficulties. Perseverance consists in continuing at any cost. Somebody says, "It is the first step that costs, but is it the last step that counts?" It is a pertinacity of purpose that overcomes all obstacles. It is the hinge of all virtues. Perseverance means the steady pursuit of a plan.

Excessive difficulties should least of all discourage, because the things best worth achieving are surrounded by conditions the most difficult to surmount. We must overcome a stubborn fact by a stubborn will. The difficulty frequently measures the worth. It also incites us to the improvement of our methods.

Perseverance is the grindstone saying to the ax, "You are hard, but I am harder and will wear you away." It is said of Marshall Field that when a boy he went to a great merchant and asked, "Do you want a boy?" "Nobody wants a boy," replied the merchant. "Do you need a boy?" the boy persisted, nowise abashed. "Nobody needs a boy," was the reply. But the boy would not give up. "Well, say, mister, do you have to have a boy?" "I think likely we do," replied the merchant, "and I rather think we will have to have a boy just like you."

To know how to wrest victory from defeat and make stepping stones of our stumbling blocks is the secret of success. The difference between perseverance and obstinacy is that one comes from a strong will and the other comes from a strong won't.

Some of the helps of perseverance are: (a) Be sure that while striving you are gaining good habits and getting something far better than what you strive for. One gets this in elementary work in schools and trades. (b) A knowledge that each year of faithful perseverance will transform you into an abler person and that you can then do easily what is impossible to do today. (c) Be sure that if the work were not difficult at the start it would not be interesting. Few satisfactions are keener than that of perseverance patiently exercised. Miss Willard says, "First, then, I would give this not at all startling bit of advice: Keep to your specialty, to the doing of the thing that you accomplish with most of satisfaction to yourself and most of benefit to those about you. Keep to this whether it is raising turnips or tunes, painting screens or battle pieces."

LILLIAN NORDICA.

Practice.—When called upon to shell peas, sweep the house or do similar tasks let each child make up his mind that, however tiresome, he will keep on working until the work is accomplished. When apparently insurmountable difficulties arise determine to overcome them all by oneself and note the satisfaction.

Literature.

The sun set, but set not his hope.
Stars rose, but faith was earlier up.
—Emerson.

No rock so hard but that a little wave
May beat admission in a thousand years.
—Tennyson.

The exaltation, the divine
Insanity of noble minds
That never falters nor abates,
But labors and endures and waits
Till all that it pursues it finds
Or, what it cannot find, creates.
—Longfellow.

Climb on! Climb ever! Ne'er despond,
Though from each summit gained
There stretch forth ever heights beyond,
Ideals to be attained.
Life's rescript simply is to climb,
Unheeding toil and tire.
Failure hath no attaint of crime
If we but still aspire.
—James Terry White.

It is not the worst thing in the world to fail; the worst thing is not to try.—Unidentified.

Drudgery is as necessary to call out the treasures of the mind as harrowing and planting those of the earth.—Margaret Fuller.

THE SLEEVE WATCH.

She Wears It Now on the Cuff of Her Coat.

THE BUTTONHOLE TIMEPIECE.

Nowadays one does not have to fumble in one's belt or in an inner coat pocket for the watch. It is carried conveniently in sight in the oddest place—milady's cuff. The watch is specially shaped so that the dial may be slipped through a buttonhole, the body of the timepiece remaining in the little hidden pocket inside the cuff.

The natty suit pictured, which is made of satin backed cloth bound with black braid, has a watch buttonhole worked in the sleeve, and the time may be told at a glance.

Girl's Evening Frock.

Evening frocks for young girls are very simple and dainty this season, and many quaint and old world effects are turned out by smart dressmakers for the debutante. The frock seen in the illustration is a charming model in white spotted tulle and charmeuse trimmed with malachite green bead embroidery. The skirt is narrow, but not extreme by any means.

The Quality Girl.

She is none other than the strictly up to date business woman. C. D. Larson, writing in the Progress Magazine, says:

It is necessary to be attractive as well as competent, and to be both you should aim to be a quality girl. Many a faithful girl has been left in the rear because she neglected her personal appearance, and many a girl whose appearance received the best of attention has failed to realize her ideal because she did not give expression to her best. Your appearance depends largely upon what you put on, but real quality comes from what you are, how you act, how you conduct yourself, how you express yourself and how you have improved all those things in your nature that can be expressed. To be a quality girl, therefore, in the truest sense of that term, it is necessary to do your best, be your best and appear your best.

Thousands of good positions are open to the quality girl, and thousands of desirable young men are looking for just such girls to become their wives. Be a quality girl and you need not be disturbed about the future. You may have good positions in the world's work as long as you like, and you may have a worthy husband and good home whenever you like.

GRANDMOTHER'S WAY.

Marian tossed off her wraps and dropped with a weary sigh into the big chair in grandmother's room.

"Was that a shopping sigh?" grandmother inquired, sympathetically.

"Not much—a little—I don't know," Marian replied. "I guess it was a looking ahead sigh. I wish that girls would not get engaged and married and things all in a bunch. There's Corinne's engagement tea tomorrow and Lucia's Horn's bridesmaids' luncheon the next day, and the linen shower for Alice Day, and the kitchen shower for May Andrews and Jessie Peters' wedding—all the first of next week."

"It does seem too bad," grandmother answered slowly. "They must lose so much."

Marian, forgetting her weariness, sat up in the big chair.

"Why, it's loads of fun, grandma!" she exclaimed. "Nobody would miss it for anything."

Grandmother smiled—a curious little smile; and suddenly Marian remembered that forty-seven years before—

"Grandma," she asked suddenly, "what did you and the girls do when you were engaged?"

Grandmother put down her work; her soft, faded eyes seemed to be looking back down distant tender years.

"What did we do?" she repeated. "I don't believe we did anything especial. The girls used to come over afternoons and bring their work—most of us were doing some special sewing then—and we'd go out on the veranda with it. It was real sweet and cool and shady out there.

"About 5 o'clock we'd put away our work and go out in the garden awhile, and then we'd have supper, and Henry would come over and maybe we'd all go for a walk in the moonlight; or maybe it would be just Henry and me, and we'd go down the road to the new house.

"I went in to Boston once and stayed two days. I bought three dresses, and felt like a millionaire. The wedding one was made over four times and I wore it twenty-five years. Lydia Hastings always fixed it over, and we had such good times talking about the time we bought and made it—Lydia was my dearest girl friend.

"I guess I'm not telling much, child; there doesn't seem to be anything to tell. Somehow, we never thought of having 'fun' over a wedding. But as I look back, it seems all sunny afternoons, an dthe scent of the honeysuckles blowing up and down and the robins singing in the elms. Somehow I don't feel as if I'd missed anything."

"I don't believe you did, grandmother," Marian said, softly.

—H. L. Schutt, to show how a salesman should make good, told the story of a chameleon a negro gave his "gal" Caroline. It turned white when placed on white, red when placed on red, etc., and afriend who had seen Caroline told the donor that he didn't see the chameleon on her. "Well," was the response, "Caroline had on a Scotch plaid waist when ah gave it to her, and ah put it on her shoulder and it busted itself tryin' to make good." That, he said, is what a salesman should do.—Boston Record.

Atlas and His Load.

Strictly speaking, "atlas" is a misnomer for a map book, since it was not the world, but the heavens, that the "atlas" of mythology upheld. Mercator, the famous Dutch geographer, who made globes for Emperor Charles V. of Germany, was the first to use the name in this connection, choosing it as a convenient and in some sort an appropriate title, because Atlas, the demigod, figures with a world upon his shoulders as a frontispiece of some early works on geography.

Atlas, it was said, made war with other Titans upon Zeus and, being conquered, was condemned to bear heaven upon his head and hands. Later tradition represented him as a man changed by means of Medusa's head into a mountain, upon which rested heaven and all its stars.

In any case, Atlas was always associated with a heavy burden strongly borne. Thus Shakespeare makes Warwick say to Gloucester:

Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight.

It is not difficult to see how by an association of ideas this came to be chosen as the name for a book of maps which upholds and exhibits to us the whole world.

Marshal Tureen and His Soup.

There is a quaint old shop in London which still bears the name of Samuel Birch, the first purveyor of turtle soup in the English capital. Amid all the changes of the city Birch's shop in Cornhill survives in the guise it wore when its owner was lord mayor of London in the memorable year of Waterloo. Samuel Birch achieved distinction in many fields. He was an orator and a patriot; he was colonel of the city militia and accepted with great good nature his nickname of Marshal Tureen; he was a man of letters, produced plays that held the stage and books that were readable, though now seldom read. One of his plays, "The Adopted Child," was popular long after its author had killed his last turtle. His daughter married Lamartine, and one of his sons, a fine classical scholar, begat a family of scholars. Yet Birch's claim to fame rests most upon the fact that he was the man who made turtle soup popular. City merchants, templars from the inns and dandies from the west end all flocked to Cornhill, the turtle house of all London.—Argonaut.

Figurantes.

The man fell in love with her figure,
The woman in love with his.
They married, and now their figures to keep
The chief care of both of them is—
She with massage, with stay and with pad.
He in the street, plunging like mad.
—Puck.

Women's Long Hair.

An average woman's long hair has a total tensile strength of more than five tons, which can be increased one-third by twisting or braiding the hair.

How Is Your Weight?

While it is true that too much weight is not to be desired yet the fact remains that many men and women are thin to the point of danger. This danger lies in their having no reserve force or nerve power to combat deadly diseases. A little extra flesh is needed by all to feel well and to look well, and this calls up the question of how best to increase the weight. Physicians and chemists, by experiments have solved the problem of increasing the white and red corpuscles of the blood, by the administration of 3 grains hypo-nuclane tablets, and this is always followed by an increase of weight. Obtain in sealed packages, and take for a period of several months according to directions with package.

PORTER CHARLTON.

Center of Interest In American-Italian Extradition Case.

CHARLTON GETS DELAY

Necessary Documents Not Yet Produced by State Department

Trenton, Jan. 10.—Failure of the state department to comply with the writ of certiorari and produce documents yesterday afternoon caused further delay in the habeas corpus proceedings of Porter Charlton, who is fighting against extradition to Italy to stand trial for the murder of his wife.

Judge Rellstab, in the United States court, postponed the hearing two weeks.

FURTHER ARRESTS SAID TO BE NEAR

Lawrence Graft Scandal May Assume Large Proportions

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 10.—Fred L. Snow, stone contractor, and James H. Horsfall, overseer in a mill, arrested on charges of the larceny of $1279 from this city through graft, were arraigned before Judge Mahoney. The cases were continued until Jan. 19, the bail of $3000 being continued in each case.

The arrests of Snow and Horsfall are declared to be the starters in the uncovering of a scandal that will involve not only contractors, but aldermen, heads of departments and officials in this city. It is intimated that more than a dozen more arrests will be made.

The state police assert that the $1279.80 mentioned in the warrants on which Snow and Horsfall were arrested is not one-tenth of the amount actually involved in their cases.

He was born in Dudley, Mass., March 24, 1841, and from a youth of comparative poverty he rose to a position of wealth and power. He is survived by his widow and two sons.

The contestants are ten nephews and nieces of Salem, Worcester, Boston and one in California, all of whom are laboring people.

Mgr. Griffin died on Dec. 14 of last year, leaving an estate valued at about $40,000 to various charitable institutions.

FOELKER IS THREATENED

Made Enemies Because His Vote Passed Anti-Gambling Bill

New York, Jan. 10.—Attempts to kill Congressman Foelker, whose vote, when senator in 1908, resulted in the passage of the Agnew-Hart anti-gambling race track bill, were brought to light by the arrest of two men for loitering in the vicinity of Foelker's home in Williamsburg.

The prisoners answer the description, it is said, of two men who attempted to enter Foelker's room by means of a rope ladder while he slept. An alarm was given by the congressman's aunt, and the men fled, leaving the ladder behind.

Mr. Foelker declares that he has received thirty threatening letters since the passage of the Agnew-Hart bill. The epistles all contained the threat that he would suffer for depriving many persons of their means of livelihood.

SCHENK TRIAL IS BEGUN

Defendant Aids Her Counsel In Selection of Jurymen

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 10.—A jury was selected yesterday, the first day of the trial of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, who is charged with administering poison to her wealthy husband, John O. Schenk.

Mrs. Schenk showed great interest in the examination of the talesmen and frequently suggested questions to her counsel. She appeared satisfied with most of the jurymen, the majority of whom are young married men.

When the jurymen had been impanelled the attorneys made their opening statements to the court and the taking of testimony will begin today.

MISSING BROKER IS ADJUDGED BANKRUPT

Davies' Debts Estimated at $400,000 to $500,000

Boston, Jan. 10.—Robert E. Davie, the missing stock broker, was adjudged bankrupt by order of Judge Dodge in the United States district court. Notice of the proceedings was at once sent to Referee Gibbs of the bankruptcy court and he requested counsel for the petitioning creditors and counsel for the bankrupt to furnish schedules.

As soon as they are in the possession of the bankruptcy court, notices will be sent to all known creditors of Davie of a first meeting for the election of a trustee and the transaction of whatever other business may arise. The meeting is likely to take place some time this month.

Isidor Fox is acting as receiver, having been appointed by Gibbs a few weeks ago.

It is estimated that Davie owes between $400,000 and $500,000, and assets in the possession of the receiver at present amount to little.

MUST STAND TRIAL

Federal Court Refuses to Admit the Plea of Packers

Chicago, July 10.—Judge Carpenter, in the United States district court, denied the motion of the indicted meat packers that criminal prosecution against them be forbidden. Their plea was made on the promise that if they were guilty of conspiracy to restrain trade they then were violating Circuit Judge Grosscup's injunction against such a practice. Contempt proceedings, argued the packers, were the proper method of attack by the government.

Judge Carpenter gave the packers two days for any further preliminary motions they might desire to make, before pleading to the indictments.

ELKINS IS SWORN IN

He Succeeds His Father as Senator From West Virginia

Washington, Jan. 10.—Davis Elkins was sworn in as senator from the state of West Virginia. When he took his seat he represented the third generation of his family in the upper branch of congress, being the eldest son of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins and the grandson on his mother's side of former Senator Davis.

Incidentally, he is the "baby" of the senate, being just 35 years old, men younger being ineligible to assume the senatorial toga.

ROBIN APPEARS ILL AT EASE

Pleads Not Guilty to Charge of $207,000 Larceny

SISTER GOES TO THE TOMBS

Indicted on Perjury Charge After Declaring That Aged Couple Were Not Her Parents—Run on Banks Affiliated With Carnegie Trust Company Prevented by Action of Powerful Group of Financiers

New York, Jan. 10.—Unattended by counsel, Joseph G. Robin, the banker whose financial operations are alleged to have resulted in the closing of the Northern bank, entered a formal plea of not guilty to eight indictments charging him with the larceny of $207,000 from the Washington Savings bank, of which he was president.

Robin appeared ill at ease when called upon to plead and answered that in the absence of counsel he hardly knew what to say. Finally he pleaded not guilty. Mr. Jerome, Robin's counsel, later explained his absence from the courtroom by saying that no one had informed him that Robin was to be arraigned. It is reported that three alienists who examined Robin have found him sane.

Aside from progressive work of reorganization and reconstruction in affected institutions, which will necessarily extend over the week, New York's banking situation is normal. Timid depositors are reassured, the stock market is optimistic and Joseph G. Robin, whose operations set off the string of financial fire crackers, is still in the Tombs.

Another member of the Robin family entered the Tombs yesterday afternoon. Dr. Louise Robinovitch, sister of Robin, was indicted for perjury and remanded in default of $2000 bail.

She had sworn, in an effort to have Robin committed to an asylum and his estate taken over by a committee, that she and her brother Edward, generally known as Edward Robinson, were his only heirs at law. But investigation disclosed an aged couple which the prosecution contends are the parents. On this discovery the indictment is based.

After Dr. Robinovitch had been indicted, she was arraigned in the court of general sessions, where she entered a plea of not guilty. As her counsel, Mr. Jerome argued that if perjury had been committed by his client it had been done without criminal intent, and if she had sworn falsely that the aged pair were not her parents she might have been influenced by her social standing, with no bearing on the case of Joseph G. Robin.

With powerful financial interests behind the Twelfth Ward bank and the Nineteenth Ward bank, and with the absorption of the Madison Trust company by the Equitable Trust company, these three institutions whose integrity had been questioned because of affiliations directly or indirectly with the Carnegie Trust company, which was closed as a result of Robin's operations, weathered the day, not only successfully but with such aggressiveness that there were no runs and almost normal deposits.

Some uneasy depositors were out yesterday to get their money, but Sunday night's conference of financiers had laid a strong ground work, which proved adequate to avert any serious complications.

During the day, Andrew Carnegie issued a statement denying any connection with the Carnegie Trust company, and reissued a letter published in 1906, objecting to the use of his name by the institution.

They cure kidney ills.

James P. Daugherty, Hammond Place Quincy, Mass. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let other sufferers know what they have done for me. I was bothered a great deal by backache and had but little strength or energy to get through with my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures, but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at the Cox Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified by the prompt way in which they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better in every respect. I would go to considerable trouble to get anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have so much confidence in their merit."

UNEXPECTED HOUSE FIGHT

Fuller Attempts to Have Rules of Last Session Reversed

TO PREVENT FILIBUSTERING

Illinois Man, In Introducing Resolution, Says Majority Cannot Express Its Will Until "Joker" Is Knocked Out—Speaker Decides Against Him and Is Sustained on Rollcall—Mann Is Criticised

Washington, Jan. 10.—An unexpected fight against the rules of the house was precipitated when Representative Fuller of Illinois introduced a resolution designed to prevent filibustering under the new rules.

The rules adopted at the last session provide that motions to discharge a committee shall have preference over a motion to suspend the rules. Fuller's resolution seeks to reverse the rule. In discussing his resolution, Fuller charged that the house will be able to do business and a majority able to express its will "when members cease to sit like bumps on a log." He also criticised members on both sides of the house who vote aye and may without regard to the merits of any proposition under consideration. He charged that Representative Mann was obstructing legislation by putting on the calendar a bill which it required several days to read and also 107 other bills for the purpose of blocking legislation.

"If this is not stopped," said Fuller, "we will go on from now until March 4; in fact we could remain in session day and night for two years before getting a chance to suspend the rules. A majority of this house cannot express its will until we knock this joker out of the rules."

Mr. Mann declared that he was willing to play the game according to the rules. The difficulty with Fuller was that he had a private bill he wanted considered. He admitted that the rule to which Fuller objected was an absurdity and that it could not aid legislation at a short session.

Representative Underwood of Alabama said that the Fuller resolution should not be sent through in the same manner as the Norris resolution of a year ago, when the house overruled the speaker. He said the committee on rules probably would amend the rules at this session, and if it did not a Democratic committee would do so in the next congress.

Representative Fitzgerald, in opposing the Fuller resolution, declared that he voted for the Norris resolution and against the speaker a year ago only because he could not afford to risk his reputation at a time when his vote for the speaker would have been misconstrued. He declared that he would vote against consideration of the Fuller resolution.

Ruling on Fuller's resolution, the speaker held that the action taken by the house last spring when his power was broken after the famous battle over the Norris resolution was "not a precedent but a revolution."

This defiance was answered by an appeal from the decision of the chair. This called for a protracted rollcall. The house sustained the speaker by a vote of 233 to 53. The insurgent Republicans voted to overrule the speaker, but got little Democratic support.

Mr. Mann introduced fifteen separate bills providing for the placing of a long series of articles of food and other products on the free list. No one has ever accused Mann of being a free trader, or even with being "progressive" on the tariff. The votes on the tariff will show that he did not try to have these articles put on the free list when the tariff was under consideration. Mann would be very much disappointed if they did go to the free list; for these are nothing more than "popgun" bills, introduced for the purpose of making trouble for somebody, somewhere down the short vista left of the present session. No one takes the bills seriously and no one expects action on them.

CHICAGO

IDENTIFIED BY CHILD

Negro Suspected of Having Murdered Providence Woman

Providence, Jan. 10.—After being twice positively identified by 8-year-old Annie Balkovitch as the man she had seen in the store where Minka Fine was murdered, Clifford Thompson, 23, a negro, was put through a grilling examination that lasted until midnight, in an effort by the police to wring a confession from him.

At times the negro wept. Again he murmured his innocence. But he told contradictory stories, and when confronted with defects in his alibi seemed on the verge of collapse.

The police are confident that he is the man who killed the widow in her Ambrose street store, with a brutality that is without parallel in the criminal annals of the state.

GOT BUSY TOO SOON

Undertaker Halted In His Work by Man He Thought Dead

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Owing to a misunderstood telephone message Edward Chevalley, the proprietor of a roadhouse between this city and Albany, came to his senses just in time to ask an Albany undertaker who was busy on his body what all the trouble was.

It seems that Chevalley has been suffering some time from illness, and his condition became worse. His mother was called on the telephone in Albany and told that he was dying. Misunderstanding the message, she thought her son was dead and sent an undertaker to the house. While the man was busy with him Chevalley sat up in bed and demanded an explanation.

DOUBLE POISONING TRACED TO WOMAN

Several Arrests Expected In the Twigg-Elosser Case

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10.—The source from which the poison was obtained which ended the lives of Charles E. Twigg and Mary Grace Elosser on the eve of their wedding is believed to have been found. J. C. McKown of Paw Paw, W. Va., said that last summer he sold Twigg four pounds of cyanide of potassium, presumably for spraying in his own orchard.

District Attorney Robb, disturbed by questions why he had not brought out at the inquest the fact that Twigg bought the cyanide of potassium which caused the deaths of himself and Miss Elosser, said:

"My investigations have gone further than most persons have reasons to suppose. I not only have traced the poison originally to Twigg, but I have traced it past him to a woman who was in love with him and whom there is every reason to suspect of having administered the cyanide to the couple.

"In a case of this kind the greatest speed is made by going slow. When I have my case properly rounded up, there will not only be one arrest on the charge of murder, but several others on charges of perjury."

ELLIS GETS FIVE YEARS

Part of Charge Against Hotel Robber Is Nolle Prossed

Boston, Jan. 10.—George Ellis, 24, who made an early morning call at the Hotel Westminster on Dec. 26, during which he held a revolver at the head of Jerome J. Carey and relieved the clerk of $40, was sentenced to five years and one month in the Concord reformatory.

Ellis was indicted on the charge of robbery in the night time while armed. This charge carries a compulsory life sentence, no lesser punishment being allowed by the statute. When he pleaded guilty, however, so much of this charge as related to the presence of the revolver was nolle prossed.

"HEART, BODY AND SOUL"

Mortgaged by Two Negro Women For $80 Worth of Dry Goods

Gadsden, Ala., Jan. 10.—Roxie Parker and Annie Warden, negro women, mortgaged "heart, body and soul" to W. L. Lampkin, a negro merchant, for $80 worth of dry goods purchased by them.

The mortgage was filed in the clerk's office of the probate court here. No other security is mentioned in the paper. Although such a mortgage is not legally binding, all parties to the contract appear perfectly satisfied.

London Short of Eggs

London, Jan. 10.—The English hen is falling in her duty, and London is face to face with an egg famine. Since 1907 the Italian egg supply to England has diminished by one-half, as have also the egg imports to this country from Austria and Hungary.

Taft Names New Envoys

Washington, Jan. 10.—The nominations of Elliott Northcott of Huntington, W. Va., to be United States minister to Nicaragua, and H. C. Howard of Paris, Ky., to be minister to Peru, were sent to the senate by the president.

A MODERN CONVENIENCE

By EDITH V. ROSS

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

"I'll call you up and let you know," said Joslin.

"You can't do that, because I haven't a telephone in the house."

"Haven't a telephone? How do you get on without one?"

"Couldn't get on with one."

"Explain. I can't see any reason in what you say."

"Well, last summer, when my wife went to our summer cottage, she thought it would be a nice thing to have a telephone in the house that she might have one handy to tell what was going on. We have three little children, and there's usually something the matter with one of them. My wife is timid, one of those women who look under the bed every night before they get into it, and as I only went down for Sundays she was alone five nights or six in the week. So we had a telephone put in beside her bed and one beside my bed in our town home.

"Then we thought that for the first time in our lives I would not be worried if letters were delayed and she would have me to rely on in case the children were sick or she found a man under the bed, though I admit that I couldn't yank the fellow out over a telephone.

"Well, the first night it was very pleasant. When I came in, before going to bed, I called my wife up. 'All nicely settled, dear?' 'Nicely, dear; the children are all asleep. Is your cold better?' 'A little better. This wet weather isn't good for it.' 'Well, don't go out without your rubbers. You'll find them in the hall closet.' 'All right, dear; good night.' 'Good night. Be sure about the rubbers.'

"Two days later my wife called me up while I was making a deal of great importance to say that Tommy had cut his foot on a tin can and from the way the blood was flowing she was sure an artery had been severed. If I had been there to see I would have known whether the matter was serious or not. As I was not there I couldn't feel sure that the boy was not bleeding to death. I was so upset that I broke off the negotiation I had on hand and lost $4,000 by doing so. Later a telephone message came to say that the cut was only skin deep after all.

"But the worst came in the finding of the man under the bed for whom woman has been looking since the days of their first Mother Eve. He was found one night when my wife was going to bed. He came not when she was looking for him, but when she looked into the room where two of the children were sleeping to see that they were all right. I was called to the phone while playing a rubber of whist at the club. I heard my wife's voice speaking faintly and consequently unintelligibly. 'Speak louder.' 'I don't dare; there's a man in the other room, and I'm afraid he'll hear me call you and kill us all.'

"I heard enough of this to get the meaning. From what she told me farther I made out that when she looked into the children's room she had seen the leg of a man sticking out from under the bed. At least I thought she said 'leg,' but she told me afterward she said 'foot.'

"Well, there she was, and there I was too. She had shut the man in with the children in order to send me word of the situation over the phone without his hearing her. I rushed back to the card table, reported the facts to my friends, and we resolved ourselves into a committee to consider the case. Our excited talk attracted the attention of the others in the room, who gathered around, and presently nearly every member was offering suggestions as to the best way for me to proceed. It was suggested that I telephone the police of the town where my country place was located, reporting the facts and asking them to surround the house and capture the burglar, if possible, before he could do any harm.

"This was quickly done, and I phoned my wife to keep up her courage, give no indication of her knowledge of the burglar's presence and within a few minutes all would come out right. I would wait at the telephone, holding the wire for news.

"Pretty soon I heard her say, 'I hear voices outside.' Then: 'They are forcing a window to get in. Oh, dear, I hope he won't fight them! If he does I know I shall faint. They are coming up the stairs, the back stairs and the front stairs.' Then there was a pause, during which I heard confusion of sounds over the wire, then a gruff voice saying:

"'The leddy fainted, sir, but she has come to herself. It's all right.' 'Did you get him?' 'Oh, it was a mistake of the leddy's, sir. The little boy in gittin' his gum shoes out of the closet pulled out one of your boots, and it laid just under the edge of the bed. The leddy took it for a burglar's foot.'

"I breathed a 'Thank heaven!' hung up the receiver and went back into the card room to see a crowd of anxious faces looking at me for news.

"'Waiter,' I called, 'bring champagne.'

"Then I told the story.

"The next morning I had the telephone taken out. I'd rather not hear of anything going on in my family that I can't see. Bad news travels fast enough without sending it by electricity, and haste makes waste."

The Yankee Knack

THE story of American industrial development has no more fascinating or impressive chapter than that devoted to the discoveries and improvements resulting from the extraordinary inventive genius of the New England workman.

He is never content with things as they are. He is forever experimenting—and successfully. He searches until he finds the soul of the machine, and, from this intimate acquaintance he begins to eliminate and improve. He accomplishes the paradox of perfecting a perfect article. If there is a practicable way to make one part do the work of two, if some added device will simplify a process or improve a product, he will not rest till he has worked out the problem.

This passion for invention has been from the first a vigorous characteristic of the New England mind. The early settlers were artisans rather than tillers of the soil; and when by a bitter struggle with an undeveloped country they had supplied their immediate wants, they naturally turned again to manufacturing; and this mechanical bent, stimulated to alertness by a vigorous climate, resulted in course of time in an almost incredible mechanical ingenuity—the "Yankee Knack."

This genius for simplification of processes, this wonderful knack of devising machinery which will do the work of the human hand, has multiplied the output of our factories: and this in turn has increased wages and decreased the hours of labor, and so brought a great uplift into the lives of our workmen; given them the power to provide better homes for their families, better education for their children, and greater leisure in which to work out a broader destiny for themselves.

As in the past, so in the present and the future, the "Yankee Knack," which long since turned New England into a vast workshop, is still at its age-long task—simplifying, improving; lowering cost of production, yet ever raising quality of product—and all to the end that the average American family shall enjoy today what were luxuries but yesterday, and gratify in their turn the yet undiscovered desires of tomorrow.

CLEAN SWEEP FOR RED SOX

Pirates of Makaria League Were Very Weak

In the Makaria Bowling league, the Red Sox handed the Pirates an overwhelming defeat Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. alleys, winning all four points and leading by over 200 pins in the totals. The first string was won by 67 pins, an increase of 90 was added by the second string, and the third contributed 58 more, making a total of 215 pins as a margin for the Red Sox. Lee Brooks was head and shoulders above all the rest on single string with 176, and on totals with 492. His father was the nearest competitor on totals, and he was 101 pins behind. The summary:

LOCAL SPORTS.

Wrestling tonight at Coliseum.

It is probable that Al Horne will not be able to meet W. J. Hackett in the 15-mile run at Weymouth Town Hall on Friday evening, Jan. 13, as his ankles are in bad shape. The management has been looking for another man to meet Hackett. Friends of Frank Bruce of the Italian-American A. C. of Quincy say he will not have to look far, as it is just the opportunity Bruce has been looking for, as he has repeatedly challenged Hackett. It is said that Hackett is willing, and these two rivals will probably run on the date named under the auspices of the North Weymouth A. A. It should be a great match, as Bruce finished ahead of Hackett in the Quincy road race last summer.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. will be represented by its indoor track team at the four cornered meet in Newton gymnasium, Thursday evening. Somerville, Brockton and Newton are the other teams which will participate. The events are practically the same as those in the Hyde Park meet.

The Boston association football league has been lying low during the past two months and in consequence there are many games to be played before the cup can be awarded. The grounds have not been in shape and in the very cold weather the players could not take part in the games without running a great risk of getting muscular rheumatism. Thus the 17 postponed games will not be played until the weather moderates. Fore River and the McGregors are the best teams in the league and the final contests will probably be narrowed down to the two Quincy teams.

Quincy High plays Rockland High at basketball this afternoon in the gymnasium. On Friday the team goes to Newton for a hard contest with Newton High school. Quincy will probably defeat Rockland by a good margin.

Martin Rock is always a drawing card at wrestling matches, and Bob Somerville will have his hands full to throw him at the Coliseum. Considerable local interest is also being taken in the bout between Kirlstone and Young Sampson.

Crystallized Nitrogen.

Crystallized nitrogen is one of the greatest chemical curiosities. By cooling nitrogen gas down to 307 degrees below the freezing point and then allowing it to expand solid, snowlike crystals are formed.

—The disasters in which so many firemen in Philadelphia, Chicago and elsewhere have lost their lives show the risks suffered by this class of public employees and their courage and daring. The greater part of the time of these men is spent in sitting about their engine houses engaged in such idle occupations as may best pass the time away, and the ordinary observer seeing them thus is not impressed with their qualities of manliness or their importance to the community. But when emergency comes and occasion requires they are ready for all demands—fearless, bold, faithful to duty, even at the risk of life. They are among the heroes of the common life and should be appreciated as such.—Indianapolis Star.

HARVARD VS YALE

Former Takes Two Games Out of Three and Totals

In the Granite bowling league, Harvard outrolled Yale on the Granite street alleys Monday evening, winning three out of four. The Crimson led in the first string by 29 pins, in the second string the Blue strailed the dust by 11 pins, but in the third she outdistanced the Crimson by 16 pins. On totals, Harvard was 24 pins ahead. Olsen was high man on single string with a pinfall of 96, and Wentworth led on three strings with 261.

AND THE NEXT DAY IT SNOWED.

She entered the room hastily.

He was awaiting her.

"I was afraid you would be thinking I had forgotten," she said.

"No," he responded, calmly, in the tone of one who is master of himself. "An engagement is an engagement with me."

She was a beautiful girl. A wealth of chestnut hair rippled below the wide brim of her bonnet. Her close-fitting tailored gown yielded to every movement of her supple form.

He was a bit above the average height, a clean-cut, square-chinned chap, whose every expression besoke self-reliance.

As he looked at her his glance was deferential yet not timid.

"It has been a long while since we saw each other," he remarked.

"Yes, nearly a year," she replied. "But do you remember when I left that time you said I would have to come back?"

"Yes. You should have come sooner than this."

"But I have been so busy—going and coming, dances, dinners, the theatre and all."

"I know. And you were married too?"

His voice did not tremble as he asked this, yet across her face there flashed a quick tinge of humilation.

"I—I would rather not speak of that," she observed, almost coldly. "That is all over. We—we—it was to be expected. The truth is, we were not meant for each other, so I—I—got a divorce."

"It was better so, no doubt," he responded, gently. "Won't you sit down?"

She took the chair he indicated, and as he looked down at her she flashed him a sudden smile.

"I was afraid of you the last time," she said, merrily.

"But—you are not afraid now?"

His voice seemed to give her assurance. She smiled again.

"No, indeed."

He put his fingers beneath her dimpled chin and tilted her bonny head back, then gazed at her earnestly. Her limpid eyes looked up at him trustingly. The rose-pink of her cheeks came and went fitfully. The white of her throat throbbed with each breath. He bent nearer to her, still with that fixed gaze. Her lips were parted.

He raised his head and she looked out of the window silently.

There was a pause. At last she spoke.

"What are you studying about? What have you decided?"

"I think I'll have to fill two of your teeth," he said, quietly. "The rest are all right. You have taken better care of them than most women do."—From Life.

"Do you know that Mr. Thompson I was just speaking to?" asked the lady at the tea party of the one standing next to her.

"Oh, yes."

"I suppose he says those sweet things to all the women he meets?"

"No, he never says them to me."

"Indeed! And you know him?"

"Oh, yes; I'm his wife!"

HOCKEY OUTLOOK IN NEW YORK

Annual Battle For Trophy Promises to Be Red Hot.

CRESCENTS APPEAR STRONG.

Return of Shirreff and Dufresne Make Half Mooners Look Very Dangerous. Champion N. Y. A. C. Team In Great Shape.

By TOMMY CLARK.

Judging by present indications, there's going to be a great fight on the ice when the big amateur hockey teams open the season in New York Jan. 3. The final struggle for the trophy will then be on, and every player now says that his team is sure to come out the winner. The Crescents and the New York Athletic club teams both have "two legs" on the cup, and this year's winner will become the permanent possessor of the trophy.

Shirreff Will Strengthen Half Mooners.

Now that the Brooklynites have regained the services of Jimmy Shirreff they say the winged footers will not gather in the trophy. The way that Artie Lifliton is playing the center of the ice in practice this fall and the splendid form shown by Dufresne, who is with them this year, are the main causes of joy in the Crescent's camp.

The New York Athletic club considered the loss of Shirreff a hard blow at the time he returned to the Crescents, but they have discovered a player in Mallen of Canada who promises to hold down Shirreff's position without any trouble. Another corking find for the New York Athletic club team is Bob Magor, who also hails from Canadian soil. Magor is one of the largest men playing the game of hockey. He is fully six feet tall, weighs about 190 pounds and is a powerfully developed man. Playing on the defensive, there is hardly a play that he cannot break up. He plunges through the line of defense like a huge grizzly bear.

St. Nicholas Must Not Be Overlooked.

While the Crescents and the New York A. C. teams are occupying the center of the stage the St. Nicholas team must not be overlooked. If both Brock Putnam and Tris Souther, the former Harvard player, decided to get into the game this year the St. Nicholas team will have a fair chance to win. Then there is Baker, who learned the game with the St. Paul school team. At forward he is a wonder, and he is sure to play with the St. Knicks this winter. The Hockey Club of New York team also appears stronger than last season.

Individually speaking they all look good, and the gloomy prospects which assailed the outlook of the Amateur Hockey league prior to the beginning of practice have been scattered and in their stead hockey experts are entertaining hopes of a hockey season fraught with good clean play and featured by fast and close games.

Badgers to Take Up Rugby After 1911.

Whether or not the conference acts favorably on the resolution of Athletic Director Ehler to substitute English Rugby football for the American game in the universities of the middle west, it practically is certain that the old game is doomed at the University of Wisconsin. The Badger school will not abolish the American game immediately, but after the season of 1911 English Rugby will take its place.

A TRAMP PARTNERSHIP

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

One summer's day as a lone widow was driving an emigrant wagon along the dusty highways of Colfax county bound "for Kansas or bust" she was met by Deacon Pegram, farmer. He ascertained that she had a few hundred dollars in cash and knew little about agriculture or soils, and after inviting her to his home for a stay of a week he sold her the very poorest farm in all that country, noted for its fertile soil.

One sunny day in March as she stood at her gate a tramp came slowly up the road and paused before her. Things looked poverty poor to him, and he had no thought of asking for anything to eat. He looked at the widow, and she looked at him, and he presently said:

"If you were a man you could turn tramp and do better than farming. I passed here last summer, and I saw you were having a hard time of it."

"Did you stop on purpose to tell me that?" was queried in reply.

"Oh, no. I just felt like chinning a little. You didn't know much about land when you bought this, I guess."

"And what do you know about the land yourself?"

"Well, a little bit. Mebbe I wasn't always a tramp. This farm was being worked a hundred years ago. The soil is exhausted and dead. It wants bringing back. Here's a ten acre lot that would raise near a thousand bushels of taters if treated right."

"An' the tarnel bugs would eat up every vine as soon as it showed above the ground," replied the grouchy widow.

"Um! Um! Woman, let's talk. Let's talk business. Let's talk of a thousand bushels of taters."

They talked for an hour. The widow had been cozened once and was very chary, but the tramp talked straight, and she finally became interested. From that she came to believe. There must be some money raised for working capital. She mortgaged the team of old horses and agreed to board the tramp for his work and divide any profits with him in the fall. It was to be ten acres of potatoes and nothing else but a little garden truck.

As soon as spring opened the ground was prepared. The tramp had a silver watch he had "picked up" somewhere. It went toward getting the field ready. The last of the widow's money went for seed. There were a great deal of laughter and ridicule over that partnership. That soil would grow mullens and thistles, but as for potatoes, nix, so all the passing farmers said.

The potato bugs came along in due time. It was the seventh year. Some farmers had forgotten the date, while others had laid in a proper store of paris green. The tramp had said that none would be needed on the ten acres. Not a pound was bought. Dire disaster was predicted. The bugs were numberless. They swept over half the state, and they hit Colfax county worst of all. Farmers drew the green powder for ten miles, and their women and children sowed it on to the vines by daylight and by moonlight, but the bugs seemed to revel in it. No vine got six inches above the ground.

When the word went forth that the tramp farmer was not using a single ounce of preventive and that not a dozen bugs could be found in his big field there were callers in plenty. He was offered as high as $50 for his secret, but he smiled and kept on with his work. When he made any reply at all it was that luck happened to be with him. With a hoe in her hand, the widow worked beside him, finishing her row at the same time he did. Sometimes they talked as they worked; again they had nothing to say for half a day at a time. They had said it was to be a business partnership, and they stuck to it.

In time that ten acre field attracted more public attention than the new county courthouse. Potatoes were only 30 cents a bushel before the bugs came. Then they went to 50. When the first were fit for market they sold for 75 cents. When it was known that the state crop was a failure the price jumped to $1. Then one day a speculator came along and offered a price for the tubers in the ground. It was accepted. It was a greater sum than any farmer in the state had made from all his crops put together. The widow could lift the chattel mortgage on the horses, renew and repair and no longer scrape the bottom of the flour barrel.

There was an even divide of the money at the kitchen table. The tramp took the $50 and put it away and laid the balance on the widow's pile.

"Fifty will last me for a hundred years to come," he said.

"But you must take your half," was protested.

"You can be my banker till I come this way again. I just wanted to see if I had become entirely worthless to the world and myself, and as a student of agricultural chemistry I wanted to experiment with old Mother Earth once more. I've got the wanderlust strong on me again, and it's goodby."

The widow wanted to say many kind words to him, for he had been considerate, strong and industrious and in every way reliable, but when she had prepared his supper and looked for him he was not to be found, nor did he come again with the passing years.

Starve a Cold.

Nature, as a rule, takes the appetite away when one is coming down with a cold or other infectious disease, and nature is wise. Don't coax Mary to eat when she has a cold. Don't allow the neighbors to tempt Johnny with calf's foot jelly or other dainties. When suffering from a cold the digestive organs are in no condition to care for food. The digestive juices are altered or entirely absent. One or two days' comparative fast will often assist in averting a severe siege of cold. A more convenient and enjoyable form of fasting would be to subsist for one or two days upon fruit or fruit juices perhaps, with the addition of a little toast. An exclusive fruit diet has all the practical advantages of complete fasting, while it satisfies the appetite and supplies sugar from which the liver can manufacture glycogen to sustain the white blood corpuscles in their continuous warfare against microbes.—William S. Speaker Walker Addresses Wollaston Unitarian Club on the "New Nationalism"

All the Great and Difficult Prob'ems Can Be Solved by Exercise of Important Duties of Citizenship

At the most largely attended meeting this season of the Wollaston Unitarian club, held Tuesday evening, Hon. Joseph Walker, speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, delivered an address upon "The old and the new Nationalism," Felicitously introduced by President Brigham, Speaker Walker said in part:

The government of the United States did not spring into existence full grown with all its powers fully developed as Pallas Athene sprang from the head of Olympic Zeus. The growth of the national power has been a steady development. The powers of the national government, as they are understood today, were not in the beginning fully recognized by the states or the people thereof. State sovereignty and state rights in the early days of the Republic bulked large in the public mind.

By a broad and liberal, but legitimate, construction of the Constitution, the sphere of national power has enlarged with the growing needs of the nation, until today the people regard the government at Washington as that of a great nation with full power within its sphere to do all things necessary or convenient to the ends of such national government. This development as applied to modern problems is still going on.

Ultimately, all those powers over national matters, which in the interest of the whole people, it is necessary for it to exercise, the national government will exercise. The demarkation between the sphere of the national government and that of the state is becoming more and more clear.

It is of utmost importance that the nation respects the rights of the states over local or state matters, and it is that the states turn over to the nation the control of matters which in their nature are national and beyond the effective control of the states. This is necessary to prevent conflict and confusion, to insure stability and effective self government, and to protect the liberties and rights of the individual.

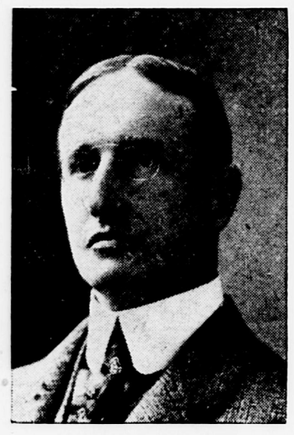
"Nationalism" is the word which expresses this ever expanding exercise of national power, to meet new national needs. The new nationalism of yesterday is the accepted nationalism of today. This development of national power has generally been brought about by legitimate judicial interpretation of the Constitution. Formal amendment of the instrument has played little part.



SPEAKER WALKER.

There have always been those who feared the extension of national power. So long, however, as the nation confines itself to the legitimate exercise of power over national matters, recognizes the right of local self government and leaves to the states the control over strictly state matters, the national power is not to be feared. Its firm exercise is necessary for the protection of the interests of the whole people.

At the close of the Revolutionary war the people of this country found themselves divided into thirteen separate sovereign states, but they were not separate nations as are the states of Europe. In essence they were one people, with a common language, common traditions, common law, common interests, common ideals and aspirations. It was inevitable that the people of America should unite. Since the days of the Revolution, inter-migration and inter-communication have done their work,

O'Brien of Rockland, State Deputy William J. O'Brien of Boston, Rev. John J. Coan of St. John's church, Rev. James McNiff of the Sacred Heart church, Rev. William J. Duffy of St. Mary's church, Rev. GRASS FIRE AT ATLANTIC.

The alarm from Box 61 at 6.53 this morning, followed immediately by the recall, was for a grass fire off Hancock street opposite the Sacred Heart church. The fire had burned over quite a space when seen by District Chief Nyhan. He immediately pulled in Box 61 to call out the Atlantic combination, and sounded the recall as soon as the box finished ringing so as to stop the other apparatus on the way. Chief Williams and the steamer got as far as City Square when the recall sounded and they turned back.

DISASTROUS FIRE TO CITY SQUARE MERCHANT

Loss of $1000 on Building and $3000 on Stock of H. Sarkin, a Dealer in Ladies Garments

Origin of Fire a Mystery and Will Probably Be Investigated by the State Fire Marshal

Box 26 which was sounded at 8.03 Tuesday night called the fire department and a large crowd of spectators to a spectacular fire in the ladies cloak house of H. Sarkin in the Central building in City Square, owned by Henry L. Kincaide.

The fire when discovered by two passers was apparently near the front door, and seemed of an incipient nature. Officer Bishop who the passers notified, telephoned to the Central fire station. A few seconds later an alarm was being sounded from Box 26, as other parties who had also seen the fire had run to the box and pulled the alarm.

When the department arrived the place was full of smoke, and smoke was pouring out through the roof and door. The fire then seemed to be in the rear of the store where the workroom is located, and there seemed to be plenty of it. Several lines of hose were quickly laid, and a stream was carried to the rear of the building, and the flames driven through the front of the store. By this time sheets of flames were shooting out through the front and making a spectacular scene that was watched by hundreds who had congregated in the square and who filled the windows of the Adams and Savings Bank buildings.

In addition to the hydrant streams there was a chemical line from the Central station truck which was also used to good advantage. It required but a few minutes after the department arrived to get the fire under control, and the last spark was soon out. The all out signal was given at 8.40.

The heavy black smoke from the burning clothing penetrated through into Kennedy's butter store and also into the shoe store of Heffernan. One of Kennedy's clerks was early on the scene and quickly opened the store door so that the smoke poured out and did but little damage.

Mr. Heffernan said that while his store was pretty well warmed up, and there was some smoke, he did not think that he had been damaged to any extent.

The upper part of the main building is occupied by the Sarkin family and they also got considerable smoke.

Smoke also penetrated into the nearby building occupied by Mr. Wheeler the dry goods man, but he suffered no damage.

After the fire Chief Williams estimated that the loss on the building would be at least $1,000. He said that there was a large stock of goods in the Sarkin store, all of which was practically ruined, and the loss on the contents was estimated at $3,000 bringing the total up to $4,000.

The cause of the fire is somewhat of a mystery and will probably be investigated by the fire marshal. When first seen the fire seemed to be near the front door and but little more than a spark. Then there seemed to be a big blaze in the rear part of the building where the workroom is located. More or less gasoline is kept there, as it is used for cleaning purposes, and the firemen had to work cautiously as it was feared that this would explode at any minute. There was no explosion noticed, however, but it is probable that the burning gasoline contributed to the spectacular effect.

Ex-Governor Guild enjoyed a laugh on the Quincy Women's club Tuesday afternoon when he addressed the club on "The history of our flag." The musical program which preceded Mr. Guild's lecture ended with America which brought everyone to their feet except Mr. Guild and later in his talk he told why he did not stand and why they should not. The tune of America is the national one for England and several other countries and American people should not stand when "God Save the King" is played. Our national hymn is "The Star Spangled Banner" and recognized by the government the army and navy and to that only should we stand. The beautiful Star Spangled Banner forever!

If you delay your special sales until February and March, you meet the objection that it is then too near the time for spring goods. Consequently the merchant must pay heavily at that time to clear his shelves of old stock. The public will demand lower prices as compensation for the probability of style changes, and for taking goods off your hands at an unseasonable time.

A dollar spent in advertising now saves several dollars lost in deep price cuts later.

The average housewife understands this situation. Hence she searches the newspaper advertising very carefully just now. By so doing she is continually asking the merchant what he has to offer her today. A failure to advertise adequately is to remain silent when your customers are putting these questions, ready to look and listen if you have interesting offers to make.

If appearances are to be trusted, something will be done at this session of Congress to prevent the influx of undesirable people from Europe. Surely if there is any choice in undesirables the Asiatics by way of the Pacific are less vicious than some who have been recently coming across the Atlantic. A deputation of American newspapers numbering thirty-two called on President Taft to protest against the hardships encountered by immigrants landing in this country. Their spokesman, Louis Hammerling, told the President that they objected to the suspicion with which immigration officers looked upon those arriving in this country. President Taft told them that he went last Fall to Ellis Island and remained there durin gthe forenoon listening to the cases presented to the immigration commissioners and that once or twice, moved by compassion, he intervened in behalf of immigrants whom the commissioner would have turned back, and that he had since followed those cases in which he had been influenced against his better judgment, but that he had to make the humiliating confession that the outcome vindicated the commissioner and showed that his experience was better than the President's compassion.

GRIT.

When Marcia Ellstree announced her intention of training for a nurse, all Hamilton showed its astonishment—and emphasized it. Marcia was pretty and popular, petted by her family and friends, the sort of girl who always seems to snatch with eager hands at every passing pleasure.

How was she, then, to endure three exiled years, years of rigorous hard work, of self-control, of self-effacement ,too?

"She'll be back in a month," predicted all Hamilton, wagging its head wisely.

Marcia heard it, and set about her preparations more resolutely than ever.

"Let her try it, Millie," urged Mr. Ellstree. "I'm not sure that it won't be the best thing in the world for our girl to learn what a little hardship means."

But the mother's eyes were blurred with tears as she packed the pretty blue probationer's dresses. To part for so long from one's only daughter! How could that be in an way "a best thing?"

So Marcia had gone to face an existence wholly new to her, and one day, as she stood at the window and looked across the wide sweep of greens to the solemn mountains that encircled the plain, she thought, "These hills fairly sit on my chest! I'd give anything to be at home again." She drew a letter from her pocket, and read:

"Marcia, dear, daddy's going to give me that birthday cotillion, after all. Can't you manage to get off just for this?"

It was from her dearest friend, and Marcia put it away with a sigh. After all, was it worth while? She thought of those endless corridors to be swept, the myriad sinks that she still must scrub!

"And I imagined I was going to stroke fevered brows and hold cold water to parching lips, and—and be a sort of ministering angel," she said, ruefully. "And it's this! Why should I stay, anyhow?"

Then she remembered she would wear her white nurse's cap, the badge of beginning success, for the first time tomorrow; remembered, too, what all her friends had foretold. She locked her lips in determination.

"They sha'n't say I hadn't grit enough to go on with it," she said, and when she went back on duty, resolution and courage showed in every step.

The end of her first year found her spending her holiday, her fortnight of peace, with her parents in a remote little camp, lovely, and very inaccessible to the world outside.

"I didn't know the days could be so still," she murmured, as she sat swaying in the hammock, and waiting for her mother to go for a walk.

But, suddenly, as if to mock her words, came a quick cry, the sound of a fall, and Marcia ran in to find her mother lying on the hall floor, her left arm crumpled under her.

What was worse, rapid investigation showed that the broken bone had splintered and caused a hemorrhage.

"Get the nearest doctor at once, father!" commanded Marcia, with firm, pale lips; then she quickly tore a linen sheet in strips, and bandaged the arm directly above the break.

As she worked skilfully, she thanked heaven that there had been just such another emergency case in the women's ward the month before.

The doctor came,—in time,— and as he left the room he turned to Marcia and said "You've saved your mother a great deal of suffering, and I congratulate you. You'll make a good nurse. You have courage and coolness, but neither would have helped you today had you not known how."

Marcia, looking far into the quiet night world beyond ,thought again, "Oh, if I hadn't stayed!"—Youth's Companion.

SPEAKER WALKER

and have knit the people of this nation more and more closely together.

It was John Marshall, the great chief justice of the Supreme court who first conceived the full meaning and signficance of the Constitution, as the fundamental law of a great united nation. From the beginning he was accustomed to think of the United States, not as a union of sovereign states, but as his country.

From the time of John Marshall to the present day, this nation has been going through a process of becoming and the process is not yet completed. The questions of nullification and secession were, for many years, very live questions even here in Massachusetts. It required a great Civil war to settle the question as to whether state sovereignty was above national sovereignty.

The contest between those who believed in a strong central government and those who laid the emphasis upon state rights; between those who believed in a liberal construction of the constitution, and those who believed in its strict construction, began with the birth of the nation and as applied to modern problems is still going on.

We must always bow, however, to the Supreme court of the United States and its decisions. When it becomes apparent that, in the interests of the whole people, power must be given the national government, beyond that given by the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court, then that additional power must be given in an orderly way by an amendment of the Constitution. This is necessary to a reign of law and order.

Time, and the march of events alone, can determine finally the extent of national power. The scope of national activity is enlarging year by year to meet the national needs, but this does not mean that there is any infringement of state rights.

The control of corporations, for instance, is exercised by the nation under the power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations and between the several states" one of the greatest and most elastic powers granted by the Constitution.

Experience proves that the states cannot exercise adequate control of those corporations whose operations extend into all the states. The necessity for adequate control is becoming more and more apparent and so the nation has been obliged to assume control.

The Interstate Commerce commission has been established to control and regulate railroads, their rates, service and safety appliances. A special commission of which President Hadley of Yale is chairman, is now studying the important question of the control of their capitalization. The Elkins Law was passed to abolish rebates and compel uniformity and fair dealing with all shippers.

A more

is the control, and regulation of those great industrial corporations doing an interstate business called "trusts." The evil lies, not in the mere size of these companies, but in their power often exercised to monopolize— that is, crush out competition, to control output and fix prices arbitrarily. Congress has attempted to deal with this problem by forbidding all combinations in restraint of trade, and making all monopolies illegal.

The attention of the country is today centred on the Standard Oil and Tobacco Trust cases now before the Supreme court. It is the common opinion that in these cases, also, the contention of the government will be upheld. The business and financial world is becoming alarmed.

The significance of these decisions is appreciated when we realize that the whole tendency of modern business is toward the substitution of combination for competition. Competition is wasteful and frequently destructive. Combination within proper limits and free from monopolistic practices, is economically sound.

The Sherman Anti-Trust law seems to have brought this country to an impass between business and law. What is to be done about it? In the case of railroads, which within limits, are natural monopolies, it is proposed to permit reasonable rate and traffic agreements, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce commission.

In the case of industrial companies it is proposed to permit or compel national incorporation. This will permit big companies to do a big interstate business without state interference and at the same time will prevent monopoly and monopolistic practices.

The

includes the conservation and development of natural resources, supervision of the food supply, the preservation of health, and the protection of the safety of the people, so far as all or any of these things are national necessities. Their right solution requires the best intellect and highest character in our legislative halls.

Above all the decision of legislators, both national and state, must not be influenced by corporations whose interests are involved. There can be no control of corporations if corporations control legislators. Corporations, therefore, must go out of politics and the use of corporate funds for political purposes must be absolutely prohibited.

I have faith to believe, said Speaker Walker, in conclusion, that all these great and difficult problems can be solved if the men of America will perform the simple but all important duties of citizenship. See to it then, that we have in our halls of legislation the right sort of men; men of character, of ability, of sincerity of purpose, men who are independent in thought and action, and above all, men who can be trusted.

Applause long and loud, greeted the close of the address, after which as is the custom, questions were asked the speaker. The club adjourned with a rising vote of thanks to the guest of the evening.

ALL LANGFORD'S WAY

Makes a Chopping Block of Jeanette In Boston Bout

Boston, Jan. 11.—Whatever aspirations Joe Jeanette of New York may have cherished as the legitimate opponent of Champion Jack Johnson were rudely shattered at the Armory A. A. last night, when Sam Langford of Boston handed Jeanette the most savage trouncing that members of the big club have ever witnessed.

The biggest crowd that ever pushed within the doors of the big arena went there with the expectation of seeing a boxing match, but what they witnessed was little less than a slaughter.

From the start to the finish it was all Langford. For the first ten seconds, when Jeanette scored with a straight left, it looked as though there might be some semblance of a contest. But after that the scene changed and Jeanette never had even a look in.

ROBIN'S SISTER GETS BAIL

She Breathes Free Air After Spending Night In the Tombs

New York, Jan. 11.—A bail bond for $3000 for Dr. Louise Robinovitch, sister of Joseph G. Robin, the indicted banker, was given by a surety company. Justice Swann allowed Miss Robinovitch to depart from the Tombs, where she had been held over night on an indictment charging her with perjury in swearing that she and her brother, Edward Robinson, were Robin's only next-of-kin in this country.

Denials made by Dr. Robinovitch and her brother, Joseph, of the statement made by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Robinovitch, the aged couple claiming to be their parents, so far have baffled Mr. Jerome, their counsel, according to an interview attributed to him.

CRAWFORD TAKES SHOT AT LORIMER

Thinks Illinois Senator Knew of Events at Springfield

Washington, Jan. 11.—In an exhaustive and carefully prepared speech, Senator Crawford of South Dakota denounced the alleged methods employed by agents of Senator Lorimer in the legislature of Illinois and declared it his conviction that Lorimer was not entitled to retain his seat in the upper branch of congress.

In the face of Lorimer's repeated protestations of innocence, Crawford flatly charged that the latter was cognizant of the questionable practices of his lieutenants.

"I regret to say it," declared Crawford, with emphasis, "but I am personally convinced that Mr. Lorimer knew enough about what was going on at Springfield to put a reasonably prudent man upon inquiry; that Shurtleff and Browne were his political agents and that he ratified their acts and accepted the fruits of their corrupt practices, of which he must at least have had some knowledge—and that he was not legally and duly elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of Illinois."

MONOPLANE IS WRECKED

Latham Uninjured After Drop of Three Hundred Feet

San Francisco, Jan. 11.—Hubert Latham, the young French birdman, had a remarkable escape from death on San Francisco's aviation field. He encountered adverse wind conditions that forced him to descend suddenly after he had attained a height of about 300 feet.

Alighting, he crashed into a fence, completely wrecking his Antoinette monoplane. The boatlike body of the craft was smashed into three pieces, breaks occurring just in front and behind the driver's seat. Latham sat tight and escaped without a scratch while his machine splintered about him.

Two Score Killed by Landslide

Castro Urdiales, Spain, Jan. 11.—Forty persons were killed and five injured here when a landslide overwhelmed a gang of laborers, burying them all beneath a mass of earth and rock.

Emir of Bokhara a Plague Victim

St. Petersburg, Jan. 11.—Advices from Bokhara say that the death of Said Abdul Ahad, the Emir of Bokhara, a Russian vassal state in Central Asia, was due to bubonic plague.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

About fifty members were present Monday afternoon in First church parlor to enjoy the Alliance meeting. After the devotional service Mrs. L. H. Sturtevant sang a cradle song, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Joseph Evans. The song was beautifully sung, with the sweetness and sympathy that makes Mrs. Sturtevant's singing always a pleasure.

During the business session reports were given by the secretaries and treasurer. Mrs. John W. Sanborn was appointed a delegate to attend the meeting of the N. E. Associate Alliance at Arlington. Mrs. Marsh, president, told of the great success of the Children's Christmas party. Mrs. Saville brought back a report of the neighborhood meeting of the Wollaston Alliance. An especially interesting report was that of the Cheerful letter work by Mrs. W. B. Nichols. It was encouraging and showed appreciation of letters and literature received.

Mrs. E. C. Butler who attended the religious congress in Berlin this summer told most entertainingly of a day and night in Cologne, which kept the delegates pretty busy they were so much entertained at banquets and speeches by the people of that city.

After another song by Mrs. Sturtevant the speaker of the afternoon was introduced, the Rev. William H. Ramsey of Louisville, Kentucky, whose subject was "Woman's work for Civilization." As the subject was a large one and time was short Mr. Ramsey spoke more particularly of the work in Kentucky. He said when called to Louisville he immediately investigated the public schools as he wished to enter his children. He found the schools a half century behind the times. He found money enough was expended but through mismanagement and graft the children were not getting the education they were entitled to. He preached sermons which stirred up a hornest's nest. The newspapers investigated and took it up, then the women's clubs became interested and results followed, as is always the case when women make up their mind to right a wrong.

Not only in Louisville but all over the state the women have worked for the good of Kentucky's fair name, not only for education but for the child labor cause, equal suffrage. For years no effort had been made by the men to remedy the evils but the work of the Kentucky Federation of Women's clubs was remarkable.

Mr. Ramsey said if anything was to be accomplished in social work it must be done by the women and was being done by organized efforts of women's clubs and associations. Woman's work for civilization in the South was wonderful. Her progress in social reform may seem to react on the ideals of the church. Women are more conservative than men and when convinced of a truth are more courageous and go ahead regardless of consequences to themselves. They look to the health and life of a child in a factory rather than to the commercial value. Men get hardened in material concerns of life, the rush and competition.

In religious matters the churches must aligne themselves with the movements in which women are interesting themselves, for as are the women so is the church. If women are weak and ignorant then the church administers to it. Women make up the church, well balanced women—a well balanced church. The intellectual discipline of woman has accomplished much. Keep in touch with the bigger life and believe that today is better than yesterday, tomorrow better than today and it will give you a glorious outlook on life.

So much was Mr. Ramsey enjoyed that members regretted that he had to condense his talk.

The hostesses during the social hour were Mrs. Bixby and Mrs. Crocker, who served hot cocoa, crackers and olives. The tables were decorated with white and pink pinks.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large attendance Tuesday afternoon of club women at the clubhouse to meet ex-Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., the speaker of the afternoon. It was the first meeting at the clubhouse since Thanksgiving and was therefore all the more cordial and enjoyable.

The president Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney was in the chair and called the meeting to order for the business session. After reports by the secretaries and treasurer the following committees reported:

Mrs. John D. Mackay, Education, spoke briefly of the Twelfth Night Revels which proved a jolly good time and also a financial success.

Mrs. Charles Bickford, Art and Literature, called attention to Current Events lectures by Mrs. May Alden Ward and also to methods of visiting the Art Museum in Boston.

Mrs. Edward S. Tenney, Arts and Crafts, said her committee was happy because it was able to present $15 toward Visiting Nurse's salary and $10 to the Tuberculosis camp. The Exchange had closed for the year but more classes were forming in china painting and jewelry, dressmaking, etc. A series of four lectures had been arranged at a nominal cost to be given at four o'clock on the third Tuesday of each month, the first one on Jan. 17. The hour was arranged to suit the teachers in the schools. The subjects and lecturers: Pottery—Miss Newman; work for the blind—Miss Wright accompanied by blind musicians; good designs, etc—Mr. Whitney; practical interior decoration—Mr. Jennings.

Miss Mary L. Hinkley, Home Economics, called attention again to Mrs. Tyler's lecture at the clubhouse on Jan. 31 and urged members to be present.

Mrs. William H. Doble, Music, announced that the doors at Alpha hall would be open for the club musicale on Jan. 24 at 1.30 P. M.

Mrs. E. E. Jameson, Custodian, requested members who were not to use their guest privilege for the musicale to send their name to her that other club members might have the use of the tickets.

In the absence of Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Philanthropy, a letter from her was read by the secretary telling of the play and Christmas party given by the committee at the Quincy Home and also work accomplished by organized charity and the hope of permanent organization in our city with a secretary.

Mrs. John T. Conway spoke of the Food Exchange.

Mrs. John F. Welch, Visiting Nurse, acknowledged the receipt of $15 from the Arts and Crafts committee, $50 from Unity Circle of King's Daughters and $200 fro mthe club, and hoped individual members would feel drawn to contribute as none had done so thus far this year.

Mrs. H. W. Tirrell, corresponding secretary gave notice of the play "The Spanish Gypsy" by George Eliot to be given by the Boston Wellesley College club at Jordan hall, Friday evening, Jan. 20 and Saturday afternoon, Jan. 21, for the benefit of the Wellesley students building.

In appreciation of the work in Quincy by the social service department of the Massachusetts General hospital it was voted to send $25 to help in the work.

The club sees the need of a committee to keep in touch with legislative matters and will add a legislative committee to its list.

The State Federation is to hold a literature and library etxension conference at the Boston Public library on Wednesday, Jan. 18; morning session 10 to 12 and afternoon 2 to 4 o'clock and Mrs. Gurney urged members to attend and take part in the discussions. There would be good speakers.

A musical program followed the business session Mr. Doane rendering Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" on the mandolin accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Clarence Burgin and a group of Patriotic airs in compliment to the speaker of the afternoon. They were finely played, well marked and with pleasing rythm, which called forth a hearty encore.

In introducing the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Mackay chairman said:

All that is worthy in the history

COPYRIGHT BY CHICKERING.

CURTIS GUILD, JR.

and ideals of a nation is expressed in its banners; all that is choicest in secular literature has a flag for its center-piece or subject. The banner may take one of many forms from the crude fiery cross of the Celt to the elaborate flag of a modern nation, but the ideas expressed are always the same,—the ideas of sovereignty and loyalty to a common cause; and when you analyze the subject further the cause has its fullest expression in the banner. This is perfectly plain to the student of history and to any one who is observing of present day government either here or in other countries.

Loyalty to the flag is an expression that is misunderstood by many well-intentioned people. It is not an attempt at worshipping a material object. When the school children salute the flag they are in reality expressing their approval of those doctrines of equality and justice on which our American government is supposed to rest. When the soldier risks his life to carry the flag to an extreme point, he is in effect extending or attempting to extend Americanism, although for the moment he may not be able to reason it out.

A thorough understanding of this subject should be part of the education of every American citizen. We are to have this afternoon an address upon "The Origin and Changes of the Flag of Massachusetts and of American Flag." It is to be delivered to you by one, who while Governor of Massachusetts for three years, did more perhaps ,than any other governor to give expression (through the passage and enforcement of wise laws— such as the child-labor laws and others) to that fine justice for which our flag stands. Whatever he may have to say to you will be interesting and of educational value. It is with great pleasure that I introduce to you Hon. ex-Gov. Curtis Guild.

Gov. Guild first arranged his collection of flags in chronological order. He began with the peoples of the ancient world and showed how the symbols on their banners expressed their ideas and their grades of civilization; he explained about the banners and emblems of all the great monarchies of the ancient world and showed their relation to the flags of later days. He covered briefly the period from the early Egyptians with the bunch of hay tied to a standard to attract attention to the banner of the Romans after the conquest of Greece. He continued with the invasions by the barbarians down to the time of Charlemagne through the historical changes of the modern world to the treaty of Verdun, from which issued the three kingdoms of Italy, Germany and France. He explained the changes in standards and emblems as they were caused with the march of civilization until the time of the council of Clermont when all Christendom was exhorted to lift the cross against the crescent.

The origin of our American flag was the next step. He went back from the present day to the time of the Crusades; he digressed long enough to explain that the flags of Denmark and Holland are older than ours. He reviewed hastily the Hundred Years' War and the Thirty Years' War with the struggles for religion's sake and the consequent significance of their banners.

He then took up the English and Scottish flags; beginning with James I's combination of the English and Scottish flags he traced the origin of the Union Jack to the present day flag. He told the difference between the commercial flag used for trade purposes and the proper national flag. He exhibited the flag carried at Bannockburn and he also showed the portion of the English flag which represented St. Patrick or Ireland.

The flag of the Puritans and the flag carried at Bunker Hill were held up and their growth and development commented upon. The Confederate flag and its likeness to the northern flag and mention of the battles in which it played a part came next in order and then the Betsey Ross-designed flag, the first stars and stripes combination was freely discussed.

The flag of Spain was shown and the meaning of its colors explained. The pretty story of the bloody fingers drawing the red stripe through the yellow body of the flag was repeated.

The state flag of Massachusetts was then held up. The figure of the Indian upon it was minutely described and the motto explained. The appearance of the pine-tree on the flag was accounted for and the persistence of its re-appearance for so many years explained.

Which was our national air was then discussed. That "America" was not distinctive enough the audience were assured. Gov. Guild explained that "God Save the King" was sung to the same tune and that a great many other nations sing their national hymn to the tune of "America."

"The Star Spangled Banner" is the truly national song and should be treated as such. When the late King Edward saw the stars and stripes he lifted his hat to the flag as a token of respect, the President of France does the same thing, and Americans can at least show their respect by doing as much as heads of foreign nations.

Gov. Guild's lecture was scholarly and intensely interesting. It was delivered without notes in a delightful conversational manner. Everyone was entertained and instructed. Besides the talk upon flags there were many little suggestions about good literature. If the books which he mentioned were secured and circulated at the club there would be a pleasant winter's reading for the club members.

Prolonged applause followed Mr. Guild's talk which only in part showed how thoroughly club members had enjoyed it and their appreciation of knowledge gained about flags and our flag in particular by his clear description and illustration by many flags which he displayed.

The program closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" with Mrs. Frank J. Moore as soloist.

The hostesses for the social hour were: Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield and Mrs. Frank A. Emery. Miss Alice Gertrude Coe, Mrs. William O. Wellington and Mrs. F. S. Andrews presided at the coffee urns and there were many club members assisting.

There were several men present to greet Mr. Guild and they were given a cordial welcome by the club.

A DOLL PARTY.

A charming little entertainment of a juvenile order was planned by a mother for her daughter.

All the guests were little girls, and the basis of the fun was a doll hunt arranged like a cobweb game.

The cobweb, consisting of gayly colored ribbons, was arranged in the centre of the parlor. To the end of each string was tied a card having a female name upon it, and this name was understood to be that of the doll which was to reward the searcher at the other end of the ribbon.

At the end of half an hour of winding and unwinding each little maid came upon a pretty, though inexpensive, little doll.

After discovering the dolls the cobwebs led away once more to the dining room, and here the children found a miniature clothes line, upon which was a frock for each doll, each clearly labeled.

While they lingered in the dining room some light and attractive refreshments were served, each child finding her place by means of a paper doll with her name on it. The souvenirs were funny dolls of gingerbread.

Stranded.

Sat on a tuffet,
Eating some curds and whey.
Although she was sprightly,
She was hobbled so tightly
That she simply could not get away.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Late Winter Styles Less Pronounced, Fabrics Rough.

Velvets and Satins Still Popular For Dressy Wear.

At the beginning of the year women look forward to changes in the fashion and ask each other, what next? They have ar ight to feel perturbed this season, for if one judges the near future by the immediate past there is trouble ahead.

To tell the truth, we are growing weary, even the most capricious of us, at the kaleidoscopic changes that we are asked to observe and follow. It was rather interesting at first, for a good many seasons had passed without any special revolution, and we looked upon the novelty of rapid changes as a relief from stagnation. If one takes the liberty of growing psychological about this matter then one wonders if this eagerness on the part of the buyers did not inspire the designers to twist everything around.

It is hard to understand just why the revolutions of the last two years have taken place. They must have more than whimsical caprice back of them. There must have been some worked out plan, some co-operation, or the many changes that have occurred could not have been so easily carried out.

While it is true that the French designers who arrange and project new styles are jealous of each other and guard their gowns as one would crown jewels, yet them meet in a friendly way and agree upon some general plan among themselvees.

They know long before they put scissors into cloth whether skirts are to be narrow or full, whether waists are to be short or long, whether sleeves are to be tight or loose. The manufacturers have already met before the designers come together, and they agree upon the withdrawal of certain fabrics and the institution of others; they know that broadcloth will be dropped and velvet taken up. Otherwise there would be so much commercial confusion that the shopkeepers would be in despair.

It is patent to any onlooker who takes the trouble to look behind the surface of things that there is a concerted plan, otherwise we would not see throughout the shops the withdrawal of some fabrics and emphasis placed on others.

If only one manufacturer had invented ratine and produced velvet instead of cloth, how could all the fashions of the world have been supplied? There would not have been enough velvet to go around this year, for if one with a good head for calculation would take the trouble of adding up the miles of velvet that have been sold this year the result would resemble the number of breaths you take in a month.

The woman who looks forward to getting some new clothes at once need not trouble about fabrics. She will know by this time what has failed and what has proved successful since September.

The fashions in this respect have shifted little since the beginning of the season. There has rarely been a six months in which the materials invented have proved so satisfactory. The public has greeted them with approval and worn them with satisfaction.

The condition is helpful to the woman who is starting out tomorrow to invest in some new clothes. She may like broadcloth and have watched for its return, but as that has failed, and there is no promise of it for this year, she can dismiss it from her mind and go straight to the counter where they keep rough suitings.

With the exception of satin and velvet no surface is smooth now. Everything that is hairy and rough receives instant acceptance. Every-day suits for the street are made of mannish suitings that are especially appropriate forthe open and for our rough weather in winter.

They are also economical for every woman knows that smooth surfaces will spot with dust and moisture faster than they can be cleaned; that one must always go around with a whisk a worsted cloth, and a bottle of cleaning fluid.

The mannish suitings do not gather either dust or spots, and all they need is a thorough shaking and a smart brushing. This in itself is an immense help to the woman who has not many suits, and must herself look after what she has.

Apart from this the rough suiting never quite goes out of fashion. Women who have taste, as well as style, make a point of never wearing anything but suits of such material in the street. They recognize the fact that they are copying a man's suit, and they would no more appear in a coat and skirt of smooth surface in the morning than he would appear in a broadcloth suit in business hours.

If you are going to the tailor's this week to choose the fabric for a suit, or going to the shops to take advantage of the excellent holiday reductions, then it would be wise to look at the two-toned gray suitings, the solid browns, that look like old leather, the gun metal grays that have an unbroken surface, and that real taupe that has a shade of purple in it.

Avoid the purples, garnets, magentas, and pale browns, but choose any of the deep rich shades of green you like. Remember if you take any of these conspicuous colors, even green, you will tire of it sooner, and your friends will know it longer, than if you wore the neutral grays and dark blues that are fashionable.

The plaid materials that are widely offered are not suitable for suits, except for young girls and for those who have a variety of street clothes and who have opportunities for country life. The woman who has invitations to spend the week-ends in the country will find that a plaid coat and skirt with corduroy cuffs and collars and metal rimmed buttons looks immensely well out there where she is leading the informal life.

This same suit on the street in a city is not so effective and is not appropriate. The material of it is excellent for a loose top coat with a Consulate collar and brass buttons, but it, too, should not be steadily used in town.

If one is not looking for a street suit, but for a gown or even a coat and skirt, for occasional afternoon wear for a card party, a tea, a luncheon, or a wedding reception she wants to go to the counter where velvet and velveteen are kept: These fabrics have taken the lead for all clothes that are to be used socially between 2 and 7 in the afternoon.

Both are made into coat suits, but the latter is the choice. The velvet is an infinitely soft chiffon variety and is built into one-piece frocks for indoor wear, which can be covered when going to and fro with any kind of a top coat.

Black is the leading color in both weaves, although a number of women to whom black is unbecoming, or who would prefer a gayer note struck in their festal costumes, may choose royal blue, myrtle green, or copper brown, which has the appearance of bronze in some lights.

A good design for such frocks is the one that prevails this winter, and it makes velvet especially becoming. The skirt is simply cut and droops a bit on the floor at sides and back. There is a box plait at the back of the belt which is not stiff, but hangs free to the hem. This is a decided improvement on the skirt with a panel back, or the one that has the stitched box plait, as it gives more freedom to the knees and does not curve in under the corset.

This is mounted on a one-piece slip that does not fit the waist line, but only suggests it. There is a sash of satin which is tied after the Turkish fashion one end is drawn through the girdle part and dropped over on the outside. Mind you, these sashes are very important. They play a large part in the indoor costumes of the day, and they are also put on the handsome long coats of velvet, which open from the neck to the waist and are kept on at receptions.

If one does not wish the broad sash of satin then a novel touch is to have one of fur. Any kind of pelt may be used so it is not too longhaired or unattractive in color. The pelts with a smooth surface like seal, mole, chinchilla, and muskrat are among the ones used.

A still newer sash is of two heavy silk cords placed about an inch above the normal waist line, and with the skirt slightly gathered under the lower one. These cords are knotted at the left side with ends that hang to the knees, and are finished with thick tassels.

The velvet of the skirt does not go far beyond the waist in this gown. It is cut out heart-shaped, back and front, to reach a low top piece of net, lace or chiffon cloth. Sometimes all three are used. The trick of the day is to put flesh pink chiffon as a foundation to this bodice and cover it with white chiffon, or silver or gold gauze, then net. This is cut out low at the neck, has kimono sleeves and shows white lace above and below.

Women who do not care to have the black brought so near to the face omit the net, and have the outer covering of white chiffon run with tiny ruffles of gold or silver lace or of fine white lace. There are all kinds of ways of making these bodices brilliant and becoming.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

The season of indecision is past. The shops have been visited, the dressmakers harassed and interviewed innumerable times, and at last the moment has arrived when vacillation must crystalize into definite results in the shape of one's winter frocks.

Many have no doubt spent the last month in an antagonistic state of mind. But that will not help. The present styles are established,and will surely last until spring. Grumble as one may, one must conform.

But why grumble? When the best is said and done the present styles are charming. It is true that they don't suit everybody. But when was there ever a fashion that did?

The silhouette rather than the styles is the real point upon which discontent is focused. The styles in themselves have never been lovelier. The trouble is that they show to advantage only on the woman who has arrived at a state of attenuation which throws the comfortably housed woman of flesh into a state of envy merely to contemplate. It is a mistake to think that the new styles have nothing in them for the woman of robust proportions. The peasant blouse, with its modified kimono sleeve suits her admirably. It is far and away more becoming to flesh than the tight bodice with sleeves put in the armhole snugly.

The graceful line at the shoulder is equally as effective for stout or slim women. And the collarless blouse is infinitely more attractive on the woman whose neck is prone to be too full than on the woman who has a scragginess of neck, which is the result of a too studied effort to attain the attenuated silhouette.

Shallow yokes also add their quota to becomingness to the woman of undesired pounds. Every one admits the empire waist line, if properly handled, carriès satisfying results for the women who find the present silhouette beyond their attainment.

So the narrow skirt, in the last analysis of the situation, is the real waterloo of the stout woman. Yet even it may be turned into a partial victory by the adaptation of its present style to the need of the wearer.

A narrow skirt does not necessarily mean one of grotesque absurdity. A growing desire for a moderate skirt has made itself felt. The average woman is not anxious to bring upon herself the comment and embarrassment that sometimes result from a too rigid adherence to this style.

KEEPING HEALTHY.

Keep cheerful. Hunting trouble ruins more nerves than trouble when it arrives.

Keep alert. Mental ruts make more hyochondriacs than does overwrought imagination.

Keep physically active. The inert girl who hates to move is usually the greatest growler about her health.

Keep clean. The close connection between the pores of the skin and good health is not considered carefully enough.

Keep interested. There is nothing like a fad or an object in life to put aches and pains into the background.

Keep busy. The Satanic mischief provided for idle hands is better known than the physical mischief that hounds the woman with time to think about her health.

Keep normal. The girl who lets her emotions run away with her, who lives on her feelings, is close to the line of hysteria.

Keep your feet warm. More cold is taken through the ankles than in any other way, so do not run in low shoes all winter.

Keep away from drugs. Most girls deserve all the slandering they get for the dosing habit. Walk more and take medicine less.

Keep a curb on your appetite. Overeating is the menace of the age. The girl who stuffs between meals pays for it in bad skin and ruined digestion. Perhaps not now, but her time comes.

Keep out of debt. There is nothing like money troubles to worry one to death. Care will kill the nine-lived cat and what gives more care than a unch of debts with no money to settle.

Keep smiling. For:

"No matter how things go,
To remedy sickness and blues,
You find one rollicking Ha! Ha! Ha!
Is worth a thousand boo-hoos."

Points For Mothers

The custom of taking children to funerals is being denounced by many preachers and persons who make a special study of children. They argue that the child mind is especially sensitive and it should not be subjected to thoughts of death and tragedy unless absolutely necessary, because the impressions the child receives give an undesired twist and turn to the development of the mind and have a lasting effect toward morbidness. The Rev. Gerald G. Fanshawe, vicar of Godalming, England, has taken up the subject with much energy. He writes: "The clergy have frequently noticed that young children, sometimes in considerable numbers, are to be seen at funeral services at the cemetery. They are not the children of the bereaved family, but those of neighbors and occasionally of persons who merely come and watch out of morbid curiosity. It cannot be a good thing that young lives should be thus early familiarized with all that is sad and somber. Joy and brightness should be associated with childhood, and as far as possible they should be shielded from anything which is gloomy and depressing."

The Rainy Day.

"Rain, rain, go away, little Willie wants to play; come back some other day," need not be the sorrowful dirge of the children on the wet days if the mother of the house be of tactful kind and knows how to make good use of the indoor weather.

In the first place, a rainy day is a good time to teach the children some of the old stories of the Bible or of the good pieces of literature which would find them restless when the sun demanded that they go outside. The mother will find that the children take more readily to little sewing lessons and to little instructions in housekeeping on wet days than on the other times when such lessons would be wasted. If a mother be wise she will save up her strength and her little talks on good behavior for the rainy days, and she will have the necessary results from patient children, who really appreciate the home's coziness of a rainy day.

Tidiness and the Schoolgirl.

Tidiness is one of the most attractive of feminine qualities. It is also one of the rarest. Early and persistent must be the training which carries the girl into womanhood with her "bump of neatness" well developed. Unless inherently fastidious during school days she is liable to drift into careless habits which she never outgrows.

One girl may have a trick of leaving shoes about her rooms. As a child she was permitted to do this, and as she grew older the untidy custom never was abandoned, for the simple reason that she did not notice anything unusual about it, and probably nobody else took the trouble to correct her. Another slovenly habit is leaving a bunch of combings in the comb or on the dressing table. Constant vigilance on a woman's part is necessary in these small matters if she would be thought really tidy.

If You Care For Your Son.

Do not give him plenty of spending money.

Do not permit him to choose his own companions without restraint or direction.

Do not give him a latchkey and allow him to return home at any hour without question.

Do not fail to make inquiries as to where and with whom he spends his leisure time.

Do not fail to have him understand that manners are not a substitute for morality.

Do not fail to teach him that he must not expect pay for every act of helpfulness to others.

Judicious Petting.

You can smooth out many a nervous, feverish headache and untangle many a snarled thread in a child's makeup by a little loving, judicious petting, for when you are petting him your advice counts for double what it does when you are chastising.

Count always, however, on his reciprocity and make him feel that, even though a child, he can make life easier and less tired for you by little acts of consideration in return for the care and tenderness lavished on him. And this will insure his not being spoiled.

Nursery Window.

Open the nursery window to its widest extent and the door also directly the children leave the nursery, so that a thorough draft may blow through it. Nothing so quickly purifies the room as this method. When the children are in the room the air can often be freshened if the door is opened and swung quickly backward and forward.

Making of a Man.

A tired mother who had been occupied all day with an active and very troublesome boy as she sat down in the evening and thought of the numberless details in which her strength had gone said, "After all, it is a day toward the making of a man."

PEAKED HILL BARS CLUTCH

Fastens on Coal Barges With Loss of Seventeen Lives

BROKE ADRIFT FROM A TUG

No Boat Could Have Lived In Tumbling Seas and Life Savers Watch Men Go to Their Death In Ship Graveyard Off Cape Cod, From Which No Vessel Has Ever Been Know to Have Escaped

Highland Light, Mass., Jan. 11.—The tragic history of Peaked Hill bars received a substantial addition when three coal barges were driven on its dreaded sands at the knuckle of Cape Cod, and seventeen lives were lost.

The barges were the Trevorton, Captain F. A. Brown of Lincolnville, Me., and six men; Corbin, Captain C. M. Smith of Philadelphia, and four men; Pine Forest, Captain M. W. Hall of Provincetown, Mass., and four men. The Trevorton was bound to Portland, Me., the Corbin to Portsmouth, N. H., and the Pine Forest to Marblehead, Mass.

It was from the tug Lykens that the barges broke adrift just as the doubling of the cape was almost accomplished. Three miles more and the Lykens would have had her tow around Race point and heading into Provincetown. But the gale, which the Lykens and her tow had not felt as long as they were under the lee of the upper part of the cape, whipped up to fifty miles an hour when Highland light was passed, and, hauling well into the northward, made the ten miles of shore around this point to the Race the worst kind of a lee shore. The Lykens staggered on, but finally the tow lines snapped and a few minutes later the barges were in the breakers.

On the beach stood three life saving crews, powerless to aid the men, who could be seen clinging to the wreck of the Pine Forest. Stretching out for 800 yards, was a seething mass of tumbling seas in which even a lifeboat could not have lived; while the distance was too far for a shot from the life-gun. Even the tug, which hovered in the offing, was unable to run in very close for fear of grounding also.

The bodies from the three wrecks came ashore quite rapidly after the tide had turned, and as fast as they were recovered they were taken to a temporary morgue at Provincetown.

Peaked Hill bars, directly opposite Provincetown and practically on the tip of Cape Cod, have been the scene of more wrecks and loss of life than any other part of the cape. Their tragic history runs back more than a hundred years and includes some of the ablest of the coasting fleet. No vessel once in the clutch of Peaked Hill bars has ever escaped, while in many case, destruction followed fast.

One of the most famous of the early wrecks at this point of the cape was that of three Salem ships, all of which were thrown ashore with the loss of a greater part of their crews. It was generally believed that the steamer Portland was either wrecked on these bars or broke up not far off, as the greater part of her wreckage came ashore in that vicinity.

Scores of fishermen have been lost—have laid their bones there—and many a stanch coasting schooner has met her fate on the long hidden stretches of sand that make out from the knuckle of the cape and that shift with every tide. The Cape Cod canal, if completed, would have obviated the necessity of their longer going near this graveyard of ships.

JEALOUSY THE MOTIVE

Police Say Boarding House Proprietor Admits Killing a Man

Portland, Me., Jan. 11.—Senblice d'Andrea, a boarding house proprietor, rushed into the police station and notified the officers that there was trouble at his house. Later he confessed, the authorities say, that he had trouble with Marcaino Vittoreano and killed him, when he thought Vittoreano attempted to draw a weapon. Jealousy was the motive.

D'Andrea was held on a charge of murder and his case continued until Jan. 16. He was committed to jail without bail.

MACHINE GETS BAD BEATING

But One Democrat Successful In Boston's Election

TWO TO ONE FOR LICENSE

Combination of Forces Representing Reform Element Elect Two Councillors and Both Its Candidates For School Committee—But Sixty-One Percent of Total Number Qualified to Vote Exercise the Privilege

Boston, Jan. 11.—Mayor Fitzgerald and the Democratic machine in this city sustained a crushing defeat and the Good Government association-Municipal League-Public School association combination won a decisive victory in yesterday's city election.

With one exception all the candidates with whom the mayor tried to beat the reform combination went down to defeat. The exception was Councillor Timothy J. Buckley, who led the ticket by nearly 1000 votes.

Thomas E. Mansfield of East Boston, whom the mayor selected for the third place upon the slate of the Democratic leaders, finished in last place.

License was carried, 2 to 1, winning in eevry ward in the city except Ward 23. The vote was: Yes, 36,682; no, 18,213.

The Municipal league won with two out of its three council candidates, Ernest E. Smith and Daniel J. McDonald, while the third, Joseph A. Sheehan, ran a close fourth in the contest.

The Public School association won with both of its candidates, Thomas F. Leen of Ward 11 and Michael H. Corcoran, Jr., of Ward 15; the former leading the ticket by about 3009 votes and the latter defeating William J. Gallivan of Ward 14 by about the same number of votes. Mrs. Julia Duff ran last in this contest by about 2000 votes.

The Good Government association, too, won a notable victory, adding two more members to its representation in the city council. In the next city council seven of the nine councillors will be Good Government men. This is the largest proportionate representation the association has ever had in the city government.

The victories of the reform candidates were all the more noteworthy in view of the fact that the Republican machine leaders declared war upon them early in the campaign and many of them announced that they would support the greater part of the ticket of the Democratic leaders.

The league men, however, got the greater part of the Republican vote. The Republican leaders supported Smith, and it was because he ran ahead of his ticket in most of the Republican wards that he won.

It was the lightest vote cast in Boston in many years, and was proportionately the most slimly attended election in the history of Boston. But 57,679 men voters out of a total of 110,681 on the voting list went to the polls, while but 5410 women out of a total of 11,269 registered, cast their votes.

But 61 percent of the total number qualified to vote did so, this figure being 1 percent less than in the famous "off year," 1904.

The biggest surprises of the election were the defeat of Gallivan for the school board and the election of Smith, the young Back Bay athlete, to the council.

WILL ENFORCE PROHIBITION

New Sheriff Promises Dry Times For Aroostook County

Houlton, Me., Jan. 11.—In the opinion of Elmer G. Bryson, the new sheriff of Aroostook county, the discharge of the Sturgis deputies and the repeal of the enforcing law cannot eliminate prohibition in the Pine Tree State.

"I wish at this time," says the sheriff, "to notify the public in general, and especially those who have been and are engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors, that the prohibitory law will be rigidly enforced in Aroostook during my administration of the office of sheriff. To those engaged in illegal sales let this warning be their notice to quit. A word to the wise is sufficient."

The bill adds about $45,000,000 a year to the pension roll.

SIMS IS REBUKED BY THE PRESIDENT

Result of Naval Commander's "Blood Ties" Speech

Washington, Jan. 11.—President Taft has decided that Commander Sims, the United States naval officer who, at a recent dinner given in London by the mayor of that city, declared that if Great Britain ever were seriously threatened she could depend on "every man, every dollar, every drop of blood" in this country, should be publicly reprimanded.

"His offense has been so conspicuous," said the president, in his letter to Secretary of the Navy Meyer, directing the reprimand, "that the action of the department in reproving it should be equally so."

Commander Sims, who is in command of the battleship Minnesota, aroused the suspicions of the German people by the tone of his speech, which was made at a dinner given to the American bluejackets at Guildhall on Dec. 3.

TRIUMPHS OF MAN

Andrew Carnegie Declares That There Is No Limit to Them

New York, Jan. 11.—"I should like to live long, so that I might see what is to come; and what is to come will be an improvement on the past. There are no limits to the triumphs of man and no limits to his character. In my opinion, we live on this earth to serve our fellow man."

These sentiments were expressed by Andrew Carnegie in an address at the medical college of New York university. The occasion was the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the work of the Carnegie laboratory and the formal opening of the new Carnegie laboratory extension, toward which the steel master gave $75,000.

M'LEAN DEFEATS BULKELEY

Mr. McLean will be formally elected by the legislature next week. The unofficial vote was: McLean, 113; Bulkeley, 61.

PEARY'S DASH TO THE POLE

Discussed Before Committee on Naval Affairs

ROBERTS APPEARS IN DOUBT

Thinks White Man Should Have Accompanied Explorer to End of Journey So That His Story Could Be Verified—Peary Did Not Feel That He Was Called Upon to Divide Honors After His Years of Labor

Washington, Jan. 11.—For the first time since he began his testimony before the house committee on naval affairs, Captain Peary showed emotion. Representative Roberts of Massachusetts, who has opposed the proposition to make Peary a rear admiral as a reward for his discovery of the Pole, demanded that Peary tell the committee why he did not take a white man to the Pole "so that there could be some creditable corroboration of your statement that you discovered the Pole."

"I have no objection to answering that question," said Peary, evidently moved by the manner in which he had been interrogated. "With one exception I have always made my final spurt with one man and the Eskimos. That one exception was when Lee crossed the Greenland ice gap with me.

"The reason I took Henson with me on the last expedition was that he was more effective for the extended work necessary than any white man I ever saw. In addition to that the Pole was something to which I had devoted my life. I had expended something of myself, my money and my life. I did not feel that I was called upon to divide my honors with any man, however able or deserving, who had put only a few years of his life into the work and who did not have the same right to the honor of discovery that I felt I had."

"Bartlett wanted to go, didn't he?" demanded Roberts.

"Yes and no," replied Peary. "No man on the expedition had any reason to believe that he would go to the Pole. Each man was distinctly told before he left New York that he could not count on it, although circumstances might be such that I might have to call upon one of them. On the last march we made together Bartlett said: 'Commander, I would like to go all the way.' I said: 'Bartlett, there is no man in the world I would like to have with me more than you, but I would rather have you turn back at the next camp.'"

"In selecting your men for the expedition was there any injunction of silence as to what they saw or heard on the trip?" asked Roberts.

"They were under contract not to write or lecture without permission," replied Peary. All of the members of the party are now authorized to lecture about the trip."

Captain Peary's testimony developed the fact that there is probably no way in which his journey to the Pole could be traced or verified. He said it would be possible for him to plot out on a map the courses he followed from Cape Columbia to the Pole, but that the success of a party attempting to follow that course would depend almost entirely upon the excellence of the equipment, previous experience in Arctic work and the determination to reach the goal, together with favorable conditions.

Captain Peary called attention to the fact that his last expedition was not an isolated effort. He said it represented twenty years of concentrated effort in that direction and that it was an organization dearly bought by experience and great attention to details.

With regards to the great speed made by his party on the return trip from the Pole, Peary said that his own experience was not unlike that of the return journey of the supporting parties. The records kept by the individual members of the party showed McMillan made four return trips over seven outward marches; Borup covered twelve of his outward marches in seven return marches; Bartlett covered his twenty-two outward marches in thirteen on the return trip and Peary himself covered his twenty-seven outward marches in sixteen when his dogs were pointed toward the Roosevelt.

PINS FAITH TO COOK

Schley Still Believes That the Doctor Reached the Pole

New York, Jan. 11.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook received a letter from Rear Admiral Schley, U. S. N., president of the Arctic club, under whose auspices Cook made his expedition to the north, in which the admiral said:

"I have never varied in the belief that you and Civil Engineer Peary reached the Pole. After reading the published accounts daily and critically of both claimants, I was forced to the conclusion from their striking similarity that each of you was the eyewitness of the other's success.

"I believe that both are entitled to the honor of the achievement."

CROWD AT SCHENK TRIAL

Crush So Great That Women Are Knocked Down and Trampled

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 11.—Excitement within and without the courthouse marked the first day of taking testimony in the trial of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, charged with poisoning her husband.

Within the courtroom the almost irrepressible crowd of women had to be constantly rapped to order by Judge Jordan, and without the crowd stampeded in efforts to force a way into the courtroom.

In one rush women were knocked down and trampled. Mrs. Amelia Kixen was taken to a hospital after the police had beaten back the crowd.

William Wolfe, who had traveled in Europe with John O. Schenk, the alleged poison victim, testified to Schenk's good health during the European trip and, in detailing a conversation with Mrs. Schenk, quoted her as saying:

"Billy, I don't think John will live long."

INTACT FOR FIVE YEARS

Elkins Estate Will Then Be Divided Between Seven Children

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 11.—Under the terms of the will of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins, filed here for probate, the estate, which is valued at about $20,000,000, is to be held intact for five years. The estate is then to be divided equally between the seven children.

The widow is bequeathed the home in Washington, as well as "Hallehurst," the home here. In the event of the death of Mrs. Elkins, "Hallehurst" goes to Davis Elkins, the eldest son, and upon his death to the next eldest son. If an individual member of the family desires to purchase the home, with the consent of the others, $50,000 may be deducted for it from the purchaser's share of the estate. An income of $25,000 a year is provided for Mrs. Elkins.

ENTERTAINMENT INSTEAD OF STUDY

Germans Find Fault With Crown Prince's Doings In India

Berlin, Jan. 11.—The alleged frivolity of the crown prince in India is becoming a question of first rate political importance. Radical and socialistic newspapers daily print bitter comment, and declare that the prince could have learned more about India if he had stayed at home and read useful books.

A morning paper heads its comments, "Royal tiger tour," and prints a diary of the prince's doings since he landed in Ceylon, from which it appears that the royal tourist's whole time has gone either in sport or festivity. The attitude of the British Indian administration is ironically commented upon.

According to German nationalist opinion, England does not desire the prince to learn too much about India, and has therefore purposely provided him with so much entertainment that he has no time for study.

PROTESTS HIS INNOCENCE

Negro Is Formally Charged With Murder of Providence Woman

Providence, Jan. 11.—Although Clifton E. Thompson, the negro who has been in the custody of the police for two days on suspicion of being concerned in the brutal murder of Mrs. Minka Fine, the Hebrew storekeeper, Saturday evening, still vigorously protests his innocence, he has failed to convince the police, and it was decided last night to arraign him on the charge of murder.

A warrant was sworn out by Coroner Lincoln and Thompson was formally arrested.

Another attempt to obtain information from Thompson was made yesterday, but although the man was broken in spirit and frequently moved to tears, he had little to say other than still to continue his protestations of innocence.

PRIZE CUP HELD UP

Post and Hawley May Not Get Long Distance Flight Trophy

Paris, Jan. 11.—The International Aeronautical Federation has decided that it has no authority to award the long distance flight trophy, the James Gordon Bennett cup, to Augustus Post and Alan Hawley, the American aeronauts who traveled in the America II from St. Louis to the Saguenay district, Quebec, in the international contest in October, 1910.

The two men claimed to have traveled 1355 miles, breaking all records.

Held on Murder Charge

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 11.—William J. Albert, 50 years old, who shot and killed his wife and then put a bullet into his own head, was arraigned on a charge of murder. He waived examination and was held without bail for the grand jury.

Suicide Leaves Note Behind

Winter Harbor, Me., Jan. 11.—Leaving a note telling of her intention, Eulalie Merchant, 17 years old, ended her life in the harbor here.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Meat Scallop. Make a tomato sauce with two cups of stewed and strained tomato, two level tablespoons of butter, one-quarter cup of flour and season with salt and pepper. Butter a baking dish, put in a layer of finely chopped, or ground, cooked meat, then a layer of the tomato sauce, and so on until all is used. Cover the top with buttered crumbs and bake twenty minutes in a quick oven.

Moulded Chicken Salad. Soak one-half tablespoon of granulated gelatine in one-fourth cup of cold water and dissolve it in three-fourths cup of boiling chicken stock, which has first been highly seasoned. Have ready one up of the white meat of boiled chicken chopped and pounded to a powder. Stir this into the hot stock and beat until the gelatine begins to stiffen; hasten the process by placing the pan in another of ice water. When beginning to thicken stir in carefully one cup of cream whipped till thick. Add salt and paprika to taste and turn into a mold. When ready to serve turn out on a bed of shredded lettuce, and cut in wedge-shaped pieces and serve with mayonnaise.—M. J. Lincoln.

Ham Balls. Into a double boiler put one-half cupful of milk and two tablespoons of fine, dry bread crumbs; cook, stirring occasionally, until it is a smooth paste. Add one-half cup of finely chopped cold boiled ham, one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley, ten drops of onion juice and the beaten yolk of one egg. Stir until thickened, then turn out and set aside until cold. Form into small balls, dip each one into slightly beaten egg and roll in fine dry crumbs. Place in a frying basket and plunge into smoking hot fat. When a golden brown drain for a moment on unglazed paper, pile on a dish on a napkin and garnish with parsley.

Curried Sardines. One small can of sardines, a little flour, a squeeze of lemon juice, curry powder to taste, and fingers of toast. Drain the oil from the sardines, thicken it with flour, season with curry powder and lemon juice. Place in a small saucepan and stir while it simmers for three minutes. Then put in the sardines, taking care not to break them, and let all get hot through. Serve on small finger-shaped pieces of tosat, and grate a little hard-boiled yolk of egg on each.

—The value of the annual granite output of Georgia, North Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, and South Carolina is now about $3,500,000, the States being here named as they ranked in value of production in 1908. Of course the annual granite output of Southern States falls far below that of the New England States, which is valued at about $9,000,000, but the granite industry is fairly well established in the South and gives promise of steady growth.—Scientific American.

Two good catches of runaway horses were made in City Square shortly before 5 o'clock Tuesday night. The first was made by Officer Murray, who stopped a runaway horse owned by Hugh P. Tracy that was attached to a buggy. The horse came up Washington street, and was on his way through City Square when Officer Murray grabbed him. QUINCY BUILT WARSHIPS.

Cruiser Des Moines built at Quincy is due at the Boston Navy Yard about Feb. 1. This ship, which has not been here for three years, has been under orders to come to Boston for more than one year. There has been so much demand for the Des Moines's services in connection with police work in Central American, West Indian and African waters that the cruiser has been kept busy until now. She is on the way from Liberia. Repairs will be made which will take several months.

Scout cruisers Chester, Salem and Birmingham, also built at Quincy, are expected at the Boston yard about Feb 1. The Chester and Birmingham have boiler and engine repairs to be completed, mainly work which was not finished when the ships were here last. The Salem has no repair work to be done, as far as is known.

QUINCY HIGH BY BIG SCORE

Defeat Rockland High at Basket Ball 53 to 9

Quincy High school won an easy victory from Rockland High Tuesday afternoon by a score of 53 to 9. Manning and H. Chapman were easily the star performers, shooting 11 baskets each. During the first half Quincy showed marked improvement in team work, but her shooting eye was not quite up to the standard. In the second period, Manning got 10 baskets, H. Chapman 6 and Prout 1. Most of the shots were comparatively easy and were made without any interference. The game was in marked contrast to the one with Oliver Ames, since the members of both teams were good natured, and there was but little doubt as to the outcome from the first.

The Rockland men seemed to have a good eye for the baskets, but it was seldom that they got a shot at it. Foley, the right forward, shot two, one in each half and Dunn and Mansfield got one each in the first half. Aside from these and one foul, shot by Foley, Rockland was unable to score.

The game with Newton on Friday will be a much harder contest, but Quincy should return with another scalp if the team can find the basket. Manning showed signs of "coming back" in Tuesday's game and "Brutus" has seemed to be "the noblest Roman of them all' in all the games so far.

The summary:

Next week Thursday has been selected as the date for the banquet of the Quincy base ball club, in the Old Colony league. The pennant won during the season of 1910 will be presented at this time. President Shea expects a gathering of about 100 at A. O. H. hall on Franklin street.

D. L. F. Chase of Goffe street was on Tuesday evening elected one of the directors of the Massachusetts Rifle Association at their annual meeting and banquet at the Boston City Club. The directors will elect a president.

LOYAL LADIES INSTALLATION.

The installation of officers of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor took place in Clan McGregor hall Tuesday evening. Past president Minnie McNeil installed the following officers:

President—Margaret Stronach.
Past President—Margaret Gammon.
Vice President—Jennie McKay.

After the ceremony was concluded, the pianist entered upon her new duties and dancing was enjoyed for a time. Refreshments were served during the latter part of the evening.

NON SUPPORT CHARGE.

Sporting Notes.

The University of Washington in Seattle is to raise $1,200 for crew equipment next spring.

In England George Hackenschmidt, the famous Russian wrestler, is reported to be worth a million.

Miss May Sutton and Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, America's two greatest women lawn tennis players, are planning a visit to England in 1911.

The major baseball league magnates have spent $387,000 for youngsters that are to be given a chance to show whether they are fast enough for the big circuits next year.

THREE GOOD MATCHES

Bob Somerville Required 46 Minutes to Pin Martin Rock

The wrestling matches at the Coliseum Tuesday evening were the most interesting seen this year. All three contests were gamely fought out, and the gladiators were evenly matched.

Young Carlson and Joe Ierady were the first contestants on the mat. The latter pinned his opponent after 13 minutes of wrestling.

The second contest ended in a draw. Berger Karlstrom and Young Sampson, the tall man and the broad one, struggled valiantly for 30 minutes, but neither was able to get the decision.

Bob Somerville and Martin Rock were the opponents in the big match. Bob was the huskier of the two, but he found a stubborn opponent in young Rock, and the latter was pinned down in the first fall only after 46 minutes of first class wrestling. Somerville showed a superior knowledge of the grips and was a little "beefier" than Rock. The second fall was not as difficult as the first, although the smaller man gave a very good account of himself, and nearly had his opponent pinned down after 10 minutes of wrestling. Somerville got the decision in 20 minutes.

Next week's matches are sure to be the most interesting of the season. Bob Somerville will meet Young Gotch, and either Young Sampson or Karlstrom will wrestle with Prokos. There will be one or two other matches in addition to these. A challenge was read from Boyd Trask, Mohawk A. C., Quincy, in which he challenges any 115-118 pound amateur in New England for a match.

EX-MAYOR AS PRESIDENT.

The directors of the Boston real estate exchange held a meeting Monday afternoon at its offices, Appleton building, 4 Liberty square an delected Hon. Charles Francis Adams, 2d, formerly Mayor of Quincy, as president. Mr. Adams has been a director of the exchange since 1899, and his selection to its highest office gives the organization the benefit of his recognized abilities and of his large experience in real estate matters. The vice presidents elected are Henry M. Whitney, Francis A. Osborn, Moses Williams, Francis Peabody, Jr., John Mason Little, J. Morris Meredith, Henry Parkman, William A. Gaston, Joseph B. Russell, Arnold A. Rand, Alex. S. Porter, Charles S. Rackemann, Arthur P. Estabrook and Charles W. Whittier. Frederic H. Vaiux was reelected secretary.

SPEED LAWS OF 1816.

The outcry daily growing louder in England against the excessive speed of motor cars lends interest to the following passages from the Annual Register for 1816:

"A new coach was started in the spring to run to Brighton, a distance of fifty-two miles, in six hours. This, however, became alarming, particularly in the populous neighborhood of Newington, through which it passed, and the parish officers there caused information to be laid against the drivers for driving furiously on the public road so as to endanger the lives of his majesty's subjects."

The result of this is to be read in Mansard's "Parliamentary Reports," June 10, 1816.

"The attorney-general moved for leave to bring in a bill, the object of which was the protection of the lives and limbs of his majesty's subjects, by correcting the enormous abuses of stage coach drivers. Within these few days it would be hardly credible what a number of applications he had received on this subject.

"Some accounts were enough to freeze one with horror. A gentleman of veracity had informed him that on Tuesday, May 21, at 5.30, the Trafalgar and Regulator coaches set off from Manchester and got to Liverpool at 8.20, doing this journey in two hours and fifty minutes, at the rate of twelve miles an hour."—New York Sun.

The Battle of Barnet.

One of the greatest battles that ever took place in England was fought on an Easter Sunday—the great battle of Barnet, waged during the Wars of the Roses. The exact day was April 14, 1471.

Trial by Jury

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

"Jim Turnlee," said the colored judge, "yo' is cha'ged wid de killin' ob Mose Harkins. De persecutin' atto'ney mus' do eberything he kin to conflict yo,' an' yo' lawyer what de co't gib yo' has got to do eberything he kin to get yo' off. Mr. Persecutin' Atto'ney, open de case."

The prosecuting attorney rose and said:

"Jim Turnlee, wha' fo' yo' kill Mose Harkins?"

"I didn't kill Mose Harkins," replied the accused, much excited.

"Yes, yo' did; yo' know yo' did." Turning to the court: "We shall prove, yo' honah, dat de prisoner done de deed wid malice afterthought, on de impulse ob de moment. In de early mawnin' he heered a rooster crowin', an' he dreamed ob fried chicken fo' breakfast. Wid blood in he eye, he got up an' went to de fa'm ob Mose Harkins, opened de henhouse do', went in an' grab a chicken by de leg. De squawkin' roused Mose Harkins. He got out ob bed, frowed up de winder an' looked out. De dawn was breakin', an' Jim Turnlee, he bein' inside de henhouse, didn't see Mose lookin' out ob de winde'; but, hearin' de winde' go up, he staid in de henhouse to hide. Mose go way from de winde' an' git he shotgun an' shoot into de henhouse. Den Jim he shot, too, an' Mose drop back daid. Dat am de circumstantials ob de case. Jim Turnlee he done de murder, an' if he counsel prove to de contrary de jury won't believe 'im."

The state attorney sat down, and the counsel for the defense arose.

"Jim Turnlee!" he said savagely.

The prisoner started.

"Wha' yo' lookin' wild out ob dem eyes ob yourn fo'? Yo' hain't gwine to fight a rigiment ob wildcats; yo' gwine to prove dat you didn't kill Mose Harkins."

If this was intended to restore the prisoner's equanimity it failed. Jim looked more than ever as if he must defend himself by killing the judge, jury and spectators. His counsel proceeded:

"Jim Turnlee, tell de co't wha' yo' were on de mawnin' dat Mose Harkins was killed."

"I was in ma bed."

"What was yo' doin' in bed?"

"Sleepin'."

"Hold on dah," interposed the prosecutor. "If yo' was asleep how do yo' know wha' yo' were? Might 'a' been stealin' chickens."

The prisoner looked ready to break and run.

"Yo' honah," said counsel for defense, "de gen'lemen said in de openin' argyfyer dat ma client was dreamin' ob fried chicken fo' breakfast. How he know wha' ma client was dreamin' 'bout, I like to know? An' de persecutor said dat Jim was in de henhouse. If Jim was in de henhouse, how did Mose know it was Jim what shot him?"

"I didn't say Mose said Jim shot him. Mose was daid ennyhow."

"How yo' gwine to prove dat de nigger in de henhouse was Jim?"

"How I gwine to prove dat?"

"Yes. How yo' gwine to prove dat?"

"Yo' honah, hab I got to prove 'twas Jim in de henhouse when Mose was killed?"

The judge looked puzzled and finally said:

"Mose was killed, wasn't he?"

"S'tain, sure!"

"An' a nigger in de henhouse shot him?"

"Yes, judge."

"Den since Jim hearn de rooster crow an' dreamed ob fried chicken fo' breakfast de 'pinion ob de co't is dat Jim got up an' went to de henhouse fo' to git a chicken. Dat's wha' ebery nigger would 'a' done. An' if Jim was in de henhouse when Mose shot in dar berry likely Jim shot back. Ennyhow, I would if I'd 'a' been dar, yo' bet."

"Much 'bliged, yo' honah, fo' gibin' me ma line of argufyin'. De groun' on which ma client stands is self defense."

"How yo' make dat out?" asked the prosecutor.

"Ef a nigger was shootin' at yo' wouldn't yo' shoot back?"

"Yes—no."

"I leabe it to de gen'lemen ob de jury if dey was in a henhouse stealin' chickens an' de owner ob de chickens was shootin' at 'em wouldn't dey shoot back?"

The jury consulted, and finally the foreman gave their reply.

"De jury t'inks dat if dey was in de henhouse an' Mose Harkins was shootin' at 'em dey wouldn't need to shoot back, 'cose Mose couldn't hit a ba'n."

This decision was quite a backset for the defense, but the prisoner's counsel was equal to the occasion.

"Yo' honah," he said, "ef Mose couldn't hit a ba'n how cum de use ob Jim's shootin' back?"

At this juncture the widow of the murdered man came into court with some very special evidence, as was indicated by the expression on her face. It was this:

"Ma husban', hearin' some one in de chicken house, got up an' got de gun fo' to shoot. But it was so da'k, jedge, in de room dat he got de wrong end ob de gun agin de stomick, an' when he put de gun out ob de winder de trigger knock agin de sill, and dat's wha' killed him."

"De prisoner is discharged."

A Modern Shipwreck.

In an account of the wreck of the sailing ship Carnarvon Bay on King Island, Australia, it is related that when the vessel struck the captain calmly took a cigar from his pocket, bit the end off and lit it before ordering the boats to be launched. Even this display of lack of fear did not entirely prevent some degree of panic among the men, however, and seven men pushed off in the port lifeboat, leaving twenty-two to scramble into the starboard boat. In spite of the captain's orders the men in the port boat refused to come alongside, and those in the starboard boat shouted that if they did not put off the masts would fall on them. Instead of hurrying to the boat the captain strolled to his cabin and collected his papers. After he had entered the boat he transferred five men to the port boat and made for Tasmania, 100 miles away. He and the mates steered in turn, while the men bailed with empty biscuit tins, and forty-eight hours later both boats reached land.—Chicago News.

Oddities of Cecil Rhodes.

He possessed few intimate friends, and not even to all of them did he disclose his hand. Mere acquaintances disliked his moody silences, varied with fits of rather boisterous fun. They considered him exclusive, morose, rough and overbearing. And it must be admitted that he was a good hater, violent when thwarted and at times blunt to the point of rudeness. It is difficult to be sufficiently unconventional to shock a mining camp, but he shocked it. In dress he was almost disreputable. He seldom took pains to ingratiate himself with any one, and a man who too openly scorns his fellows must expect to suffer social ostracism and to have his character traduced. It would be idle to deny that for a time there were unfavorable rumors in circulation regarding him or that he was in many circles unpopular. But, like Gallio, he "cared for none of those things."—Sir Levis Michell.

An Eccentric Bishop.

Bishop Wilson of Calcutta had as housekeeper a venerable lady who remembered the duel between Sir Philip Francis and Warren Hastings on Aug. 17, 1780. On entering the cathedral on a Sunday morning, fully robed, lawn sleeves and all, and passing the pew where the old lady sat he would pause and give her the "kiss of peace" before all the congregation, and this although he had met her at breakfast.

His sermons, too, were racy. Preaching against dishonesty, especially in horseflesh, as one of the great English failings in India, he went on, "Nor are we, servants of the altar, free from yielding to this temptation." Pointing to the occupant of the reading desk below him: "There is my dear and venerable brother, the archdeacon, down there. He is an instance of it. He once sold me a horse. It was unsound. 'I was a stranger, and he took me in.'"

Never Too Late to Move.

The wolf was at the door.

"You're stung again, old chap," howled a neighbor's cat. "Nothing doing in your line at that house."

"How do you know?" growled the wolf.

"They flew the coop last evening after dark," replied the cat. "Better go and sympathize with the landlord."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Force of Habit.

"Yes, he's a very nice young man,
But always talking shop,"
The pouting miss protested,
"And I cannot make him stop,
For he's a car conductor,
And when calling on me he's Persistently remarking,
'Won't you sit up closer, please?'"
—Philadelphia Press.

An Apt Description.

"Ever see a mermaid, Jim?" asked Dusty Rhoads as he threw himself down on the sands alongside of a brother hobo.

"Yass," said Jim.

"What did she look like?" asked Dusty.

"Oh, I d'no'—rather like a lady cut decollety, with a hobble skirt around her propeller," said Jim.—Harper's Weekly.

In Which Case Anything Goes.

"Isn't it awful," said Mrs. Shadder, "to read that women's forms are getting to be like men's?"

"Not if that shape is the fashion, my dear woman," placidly answered Mrs. Leeder.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW CHURCH EDIFICE IN THE SPRING

Park and Downs Congregational Church Report Very Successful Year

Increase in Membership and All Bills Paid

The annual meeting and supper of the Park and Downs Congregational church held on Wednesday evening will long be remembered as an important milestone in the church's march to prosperity. In the first place, from the fact that for the first time in the history of the church every bill stood paid, and secondly because of the definite announcement that ground for the new church edifice would be broken early in the spring. The church is growing rapidly, 51 new members having been added during the year ending January 1 and 19 in addition since that time.

A large number sat down to the well prepared supper served by a committee consisting of Mrs. H. L. Forsyth, Mrs. Reginald Shaw, Mrs. Clarence Hunter, Mrs. Norman O. Northrop, Mrs. B. A. Banks, Mrs. Herbert Tucker and Mrs. F. M. Torrey.

With the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers, as moderator the meeting opened with the report of the treasurer, read by A. M. Barstow. This showed the church with every bill paid and a respectable amount in the treasury. This is the first time such good conditions have been experienced.

B. A. Banks, superintendent of the Sunday School, reported that large gains were being made in attendance by that department. The average attendance for the past year exceeded by 40 the average of 1909.

Reporting for the standing committee, Rev. William B. Ayers gave a most encouraging view of the spiritual outlook of the church.

Frederick M. Torrey as auditor declared the books to be in good condition, while the report of the clerk, Herbert Tucker, contained a decided spirit of optimism.

Rev. William B. Ayers, chairman of the church building committee reported the erection of the new church would begin in the spring. C. A. Boynton, the committee's financial secretary also reported, as did George A. Smith its treasurer.

The music committee was represented by George A. Smith, while Mrs. B. A. Banks reported that the Women's Missionary society had raised the amount of $450 during the year.

N. S. Sanford for the prudential committee reported the present financial condition of the church as excellent and gave an encouraging outlook for the coming year. He read the list of appropriations to be made.

At the meeting there were present 91 members with 8 absent members responding.

Following is the list of officers and committees elected for the ensuing year.

Deacon—George A. Smith.
Clerk—Herbert Tucker.
Treasurer—A. M. Barstow.
Sunday School Superintendent—B. A. Banks.

FIFTY INITIATED.

The Loyal Order of Moose initiated an even fifty new members into the Quincy herd Wednesday evening, and while it was the intention of the lodge to close its charter at this meeting, it was unanimously voted to keep the charter open until February 1, as fully one-half of the members present reported that there was probably 100 candidates ready to come into Quincy Lodge, if the charter could only be kept open until Feb. 1.

Reporting for the Sunday School, Herbert Marshall, its secretary, gave its average attendance for 1910 at 124, as against 122 in 1909. At present the school has a membership of 114 children, 16 teachers and 5 officers, with a primary department consisting of 50 children and 5 teachers, Mr. Marshall paid a tribute to Deacon A. A. Lincoln who recently passed away, and who was a teacher and first superintendent of the Sunday School.

Mrs. George H. Murray reported for the Women's Board of Foreign Missions, and Mrs. H. A. Kingman for tthe Ladies Benevolent society.

A most successful year with gratifying attendance and excellent speakers were among the things mentioned by Robert B. Locke in his optimistic report of the Men's club. He also spoke of the entertainments of the club which have come to be considered annual affairs.

Miss Dorothy Taylor gave the financial report of the Christian Endeavor, while Mrs. George H. Murray responded for the Sunbeam club, the Little Lights Mission band and the Cradle roll, all organizations of the little folk and doing well.

In place of Miss Ida L. Poore, Rev. Edward A. Chase read the first annual report of the Girls choir club. This is a live body of girls that endeavors to cheerfully furnish music when the occasion requires. Meetings are held at the houses of the members on alternate Wednesday evenings, guest night being held every other month. Mr. Chase also reported for the music committee.

Mr. Farwell proposed resolutions, which were heartily passed, on the death of Deacon Annes A. Lincoln, a respected and well loved member of the church.

George W. Stone for the prudential committee reported the budget for the coming year. Upon motion of Mr. Tobey this was accepted and adopted.

Mr. Stone offered a motion in reference to the transfer of a certain mortgage. This was seconded and carried.

Rev. E. A. Chase recommended that some definite action be taken regarding the missionary aportionment of the church. He suggested that a missionary committee be appointed to consist of the president and secretary of each missionary society in the church, one member from the executive committee and the minister.

Charles P. Hutchins was elected as delegate to represent the church at a missionary conference to be held next week at Dorchester.

A vote of thanks to the music committee and the Girls choir club was tendered upon motion of Smith B. Harrington.

The question of changing the night of weekly prayer meeting from Friday to Wednesday brought up some discussion, and upon motion of Mr. Tobey it was referred to the executive committee.

The meeting closed with the swearing in of the clerk by Rev. Rufus B. Tobey.

During the fiscal year just passed the church has contributed in missionary offerings the net amount of $1283.70, a gain over the previous year of $292.70.

REPORT OF WOMAN'S GUILD

Much Accomplished by Ladies of St. Chrysostom's

The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon in the parish rooms with a full attendance. The president Mrs. Percy L. Davidson presided. The secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Herbert L. Packard, read yearly reports giving a review of the year's work which included earning dollars for a new aisle carpet for the church, before the consecration services last February. A luncheon was given to the clergy on that day. A birthday party was given in May. In October the guild furnished luncheon for the South Shore branch of the Sunday School Union. A parish supper was held in November. All were successful affairs. During Lent garments made to clothe the girls at the Julia C. Emery school at Bromley, Liberia, and the annual Christmas box for colored work was sent to Boydton, Va.

THE FIRST OF MANY

Enjoyable Smoker of St. Stephens Chapter of Masons

The entertainment and smoker of St. Stephen's Chapter of Masons on Wednesday evening proved a most enjoyable affair, and drew together a gathering of over two hundred companions and brothers at the Masonic apartments. The regular convocation of the chapter was held at 7.30, the work of the evening being the most excellent master's degree. Meanwhile the brothers had been gathering in the banquet room where the entertainment was held.

Ex-Companion John H. Whitehead was the chairman of this part of the program, and after smokes had been lighted the program was commenced. It was one of unusual excellence and opened with a piano selection by Bro. E. A. Myers. Other numbers on the program included, vocal solos by Brothers J. W. Hendry, Herbert Y. Follett and J. L. Forest; mandolin solos by Bro. L. B. Doan; and humorous readings by Bro. H. P. Dowst. Between these numbers the brothers united in singing a number of selections from the Wollaston lodge collection of songs old and new.

An interesting number not down on the program came when the chairman introduced Companion James Duncan. Although not expecting to be called upon Mr. Duncan gave an exceedingly interesting talk on ancient Masonry in a manner that showed him thoroughly conversant with the history of the order.

Brief remarks were also made by ex-Companion John Morgan, who among other things said this was but the first of similar gatherings planned.

After the entertainment refreshments were served by Companion Henry P. Furnald.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Think of "Doc" Cook starting an Ananias club. This out Teddies Roosevelt himself.

China is borrowing money to strengthen her navy, and Brazil has a navy she would no doubt be willing to give away.

Sixteen pugilists have been killed in fights this year. Only sixteen? The pugilists are not doing their duty towards society; that's evident.

The John R. McLean boom for United States Senator in Ohio is almost as warm as the blizzard. John will spend one million for the prize if necessary, and money talks in Ohio.

Ex-Senator Smith, of New Jersey, appears to be having difficulty in getting things so arranged that his re-election to the Senate will be assured. Evidently he has not succeeded in getting all the Smiths to support him.

When you buy goods in another city that could be had as well at home, you miss the chance to make a business ally in your own town who sooner or later may be very useful.

If the mistress of a home on a swell street goes to the metropolis for her fine feathers, soon the wife of the clerk an dthe laborer will be sending their dollars to build up some congested center.

In colleges a passion of loyalty creates enthusiasm for athletic teams, leads to fervent backing of all common enterprises, and binds men together in after life.

Could we but get that feeling of loyalty to our home town, based both on the personal advantage of business reciprocity between individual citizens, and on real affection for the institutions and enterprises of the place we call home, our city would advance with the vim of college life.

Only one city in Maine has as large a population as Quincy, and that is Portland. Where Portland made a gain of 8,426, Quincy gained 8,743 Quincy compares with the Maine cities as follows:

	1910	1900
Quincy	32,642	23,899
Portland	58,571	50,145
Lewiston	26,247	23,761
Bangor	24,803	21,850
Auburn	15,064	12,951
Augusta	13,211	11,683
Waterville	11,458	9,477

All the other cities have less than 10,000 population.

It is also true of New Hampshire that only one city is larger than Quincy, and that is Manchester. Those of over 10,000 population are:

	1910	1900
Manchester	70,063	56,987
Nashua	26,005	23,898
Concord	21,497	19,632

Portsmouth	11,269	10,637
Laconia	10,183	8,042
Keene,	10,068	9,165

In none was the percentage of gain as large as Quincy.

President Bryant in his appoiutment of standing committees of the City Council has given a chairmanship to each of the members at large, and the other four to Wards One, Four, Five and Six. All the chairmen have had one or more years of service. Chairman Branch of the Finance committee is probably better equipped for the position than any other member, because of his service in the Council and his knowledge of municipal affairs in general. Ward Six is the only ward not represented on the Finance committee, but this was because all the ward councilmen are entering o ntheir first year of service, and no new men were appointed.

A majority of the Committee on Streets are new men, but Chairman Gardner is serving his third year in the Council. Richards was ranking member, but is not on the committee this year. Sandberg and Ericson served on the same committee last year.

Councilman Nowland continues at the head of the Water committee, and Councilman Cherrington at the head of the Fire Department committee.

The Public Building committee has a new chairman and four new members, but will find it difficult to appropriate money for new schoolhouses if the bonds are dated in 1911.

The License committee also has a new chairman in Councilman Cherrington who has not in the past favored a small number of pony express licenses. With the exception of Messrs. Cherrington and Richards all the members are new Councilmen.

Councilman Bolster has moved up to chairman of the Health committee, but it is said he wanted chairmanship of the Finance committee.

SENATOR HUGHES DEAD

Colorado Statesman Succumbs After a Long Illness

Denver, Jan. 12.—United States Senator Charles J. Hughes, Jr., senator from Colorado, died in his home here following a general breakdown.

Mr. Hughes had occupied his seat in the senate for less than two years. He gave especial attention to legal and public land questions, and during the last session devoted much time to the railroad bill.

Woman Convicted of Usury Forfeits Her Bail Bond

Hartford, Jan. 12.—Doris Griffiths, at one time an agent for D. H. Tolman, a money lender, and who was convicted in the superior court of violation of the state usury law, and sentenced to pay a fine of $6000 and to serve sixty days in jail, has forfeited the $8000 bond furnished by her when she took an appeal to the supreme court of the United States, after the state supreme court had affirmed the sentence.

When the appeal was taken, Miss Griffith gave the bond for her appearance here to serve sentence if her appeal should result adversely. The United States supreme court decided against her, but she did not appear. Instead the state attorney received a check for $8000, the amount of the bond.

TARIFF COMES UP AGAIN

Newlands Speaks In Senate and Hobson Has a New Measure

Washington, Jan. 12.—The tariff fight was resumed in the senate, the Lorimer battle being temporarily laid aside. Senator Newlands spoke at length on the Cummins resolution providing for amendment of the tariff schedule by schedule, declaring that the country is dissatisfied with the Payne-Aldrich bill and with the methods pursued by congress in tariff revision.

Representative Hobson of Alabama introduced in the house a tariff revision bill. The bill provides for an automatic reduction of the entire tariff schedule of 25 percent, but this reduction is to be made gradually, so that manufacturers may prepare for it without interfering with contracts.

GOOD TOBACCO SCARCE

Justice Harlan Has Been Unable to Get a Satisfactory Chew

Washington, Jan. 12.—Before the supreme court of the United States, while W. B. Hornblower was presenting his argument in behalf of the Imperial Tobacco company, the British ally of the American tobacco trust, Justice Harlan, whose love of good tobacco has been the basis of many amusing incidents around the court, asked if any explanation could be advanced as to why he was unable to get any chewing tobacco that was not unsound or rotten or adulterated.

The attorney couldn't help him, he said.

METROPOLITAN IN SCOPE

Recommendations of Directors of Boston--1915 Movement

Quincy people should have an eye to the work of the Boston—1915 movement which is distinct from the Real Boston movement.

The syllabus of the city planning conference was submitted and approved at a meeting at the Parker house Boston, Monday evening of the board of directors of Boston—1915. It is the result of months of study by a committee consisting of Arthur A. Shurtleff chairman, Harry J. Carlson, Richards M. Bradley, F. E. Cabot, Philip Cabot, Ralph A. Cram, Edward T. Hartman and James H. Eustis.

Of particular importance to the fulfilment of the plans of the committee is the recommendation that "the planning and execution of the metropolitan improvements suggested be entrusted as soon as possible to properly constituted permanent state or metropolitan authorities, using as far as possible authorities now in existence, but giving additional powers and creating new authorities where necessary."

In its report the committee says:

"The following recommendations are based upon the assumption that only by following a comprehensive plan of development can our metropolitan district provide the best attainable living and working conditions for all classes."

The syllabus is as follows:

"The rapid transit and steam railway system should be coordinated so as to make a unified system of passenger transportation between all parts of the district, and give ample and equitably distributed accommodation to the out-skirts and avoid congestion at the center. These improvements evidently would be metropolitan in scope.

"All freight lines should be intimately connected with one another and with the water front. Freight yards should be distributed in a way to avoid long teaming hauls and to provide modern methods of transhipment. The dependence of every community in the district upon the efficient handling of freight marks this problem as metropolitan.

"A scheme for additional modern docks should be prepared, these docks to be built as required. They should be connected with one another and with all railway lines. The dependence of all the portions of the district upon the port of Boston evidently marks the dock problem as metropolitan.

"The system- of radial thorough fares should be perfected. The circumferential thoroughfare system should be completed to allow circulation independent of radial movements between all parts of the district. All these main thoroughfares of travel should be of ample width and of easy gradient. Since their control is now divided among the 39 cities and towns individually, coordinated development can only be accomplished by metropolitan action; at the same time the powers of the local street boards throughout the metropolitan district should be strengthened to enable the cities and towns to plan and to execute convenient street systems.

"Adequate watersheds should be safeguarded to provide the entire district with a water supply sufficient to meet all reasonable requirements. A system of trunk sewers with proper outfalls should be completed for the entire district. Contamination from drainage outflows should be eliminated.

"The existing policy for the reservation of lands and building sites for public uses should be continued and perfected in order that the public needs may be adequately and economically met.

"Building and sanitary laws should be perfected and made uniform in their requirements and enforcement throughout the metropolitan district. The inequalities at present existing discourage investing capital and cause slum conditions in the lax localities.

"A system of restrictions should be devised to control the distribution of residences, business, manufacturing and transportation in a way to allow each comunity of the district to develop to the best advantage. The pending constitutional amendment should be passed, extending the right of eminent domain under proper safeguards so asto allow excess condemnation.

"It is evident that many of the above improvements affecting the 39 independent cities and towns of the district can only be accomplished economically and effectively by methodical planning and by coordinated effort on the part of the community as a whole."

ABSENT-MINDED

Mr. Discobble's wife says that he is the most absent-minded man in the world. She finds it necessary to look him over every morning before he leaves for the city, lest he should appear at his office in his pajamas some day. Possibly affairs are not as bad as she thinks, but on the day that she entertained the Woman's Higher Culture club Mrs. Discobble took great pains to caution her husband not to forget to purchase the bridge favors.

"Now," she said in the morning, as he was about to leave for the day, "do please try and remember to go to Johnson's, next door to the office, and get twenty-five of the handsomest favors in the store and send them out here with a boy the first thing after dinner. I might send a messenger boy to get them, but I am afraid that he wouldn't know what to select, and you, dear, have such good taste! Now, don't forget to buy them—and pay for them. Don't have such a small bill charged."

Mr. Discobble promised faithfully to remember and probably forgot all about the matter until he reached the office. Then his eyes lighted on the string his wife had tied about his finger.

"Great Scott!" he cried, "those favors!"

Half an hour later, as he was opening his mail, he came across a letter from his wife.

"Don't forget those favors," it read, " and be sure to pay for them."

"H'm that's all right," muttered Mr. Discobble, abstractedly. "I did nearly forget them."

Shortly after his receipt of the letter his wife called him up on the telephone.

"Have you got those favors?" she inquired.

"By Jove!" answered her husband, "I did almost forget them!"

At noon Mr. Discobble left the office to be gone the remainder of the day. At 6 o'clock he walked up the path to his home tired but happy in the consciousness that his day's work was over.

At the door of the house his wife met him, in a plainly wrathful mood.

"Wretched man!" she cried.

Mr. Discobble surveyed her amazedly for a moment, then an awful thought pierced his mind.

"Why," he stammered, "I didn't forget those favors after all, did I?"

"No," she cried, 'but three times this afternoon you sent a boy here with twenty-five of them each time!"—Lippincotts.

HEALTHY LOS ANGELES.

Los Angeles, as all the world knows is one of the most healthy as well as one of the most beautiful places on earth. Apropos of the healthfulness of Los Angeles, Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, recently said:—

"The town has, for its population, an unprecedented number of octogenarians, nonageniarians, even centenarians. The other day a hale, but very aged, couple boarded a train out of Los Angeles.

" 'Going to do a little traveling?' said, the conductor.

" 'Well, no; not exaxctly,' said the old man. 'My wife and I, you see, have about our share of life. I'm 111 and my wife here is 106, and we're going down to San Francisco to die. You can't die in Los Angeles.' "—Washington Star.

—Six big disasters will occur in the United States in 1911. This is not the prediction of an astrologer but of the American Red Cross, the organization which conducts a larger work of relief among people stricken by great calamities than any other agency in the world. Experience has led the Red Cross to expect an average of five or six disasters in this country every year. It does not know where or when they will occur, or whether they will be caused by storm, or fire, or flood, or earthquake, or explosion. But it is sure that they will happen, just as one may be sure that 15 persons of every thousand now living will die in the next 12 months.—Medford Mercury.

CHARGED WITH MAIL FRAUD

Head of Investment Company is Placed Under Arrest

IS CAUGHT IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Action by Postoffice Inspectors Simultaneous With De Champlain's Removal as President of Concern at Special Meeting of Stockholders—New England Mill Operatives Said to Be Out More Than $500,000

Boston, Jan. 12.—The activity of the postal authorities in running down alleged swindlers who have been operating through the United States mails has led to the arrest of Joseph de Champlain of Montreal, who is alleged to have defrauded Canadian mill operatives in New England out of more than half a million dollars through the sale of stock in half a dozen different corporations which he was promoting here.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the New England Investment company at Providence yesterday De Champlain was deposed from the presidency.

De Champlain, who was arrested as he stepped from the Montreal express at Manchester, N. H., was arraigned before United States Commissioner Crawford in that city on a charge of using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud and was held in $4000 bail pending a hearing Monday.

The arrest of De Champlain was brought about by Postoffice Inspectors Robinson and Stone, who had been directed to make an investigation of the numerous complaints which Chief Letherman of the Boston corps has been receiving for some months past. Letherman says that about $660,000 was sunk in De Champlain's schemes and it is doubtful if the stockholders will be able to realize anything on their investments.

By means of the New England Investment company of Manchester, N. H., De Champlain, it is said, promoted the following concerns which the New England company was supposed to own or control: The American Kaolin Putty company of Salem, capitalized at $100,000; Dunstable Granite company of Dunstable, capitalized at $50,000; Le Revell Publishing company of Manchester, Lowell and Lawrence, capitalized at $100,000; Laconia Coal and Ice company of Laconia, N. H., capitalized at $50,000; Manchester Coal and Ice company of Manchester, N. H., capitalized at $25,000; Belknap Mills corporation of Laconia, N. H., capitalized at $300,000, and the American Publishing company of Providence, capitalized at $60,000.

The New England company, which was a holding company, it is said, for the rest, was originally organized as the Automobile Pneumatic Lining company on June 11, 1905, and incorporated under the laws of Rhode Island with a capital stock amounting to $100,000. On July 3, 1906, the name was changed to the New England Investment company.

On Feb. 19, 1908, the capital stock of the New England company was increased to $500,000, with 3731 shareholders. There are now 356.598 shares outstanding, which cost the investors $668,608, at from 50 cents to $3 a share. The property, according to a report made to the stockholders on Oct. 5, 1909, was valued at $231,230.

The property was recently placed in the hands of receivers in the courts of Massachuetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

De Champlain, it is alleged, used the receipts from the sale of stock to pay dividends and advertising bills.

NEGLECTED YOUNG WIFE

Youthful Husband Who Plays Marbles Promises to Do Better

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 12.—Elebristo Gonzales, the 16-year-old husband of Margarita Gonzales, 14 years old, got a hearing in the juvenile court, charged with failing to support his wife.

The children were married several months ago in San Miguel, Mex. An officer of the humane society said the young husband has done little since he reached the city except to play marbles, winning the title of champion in that game at the Alameda courts.

Judge Wilbur released the boy on his promise to attend to his duties.

Torpedo Boats In Collision

Santa Barbara, Cal., Jan. 12.—The torpedo boat destroyer Paul Jones rammed and nearly sank her sister ship, the Steward, during mimic war tactics in the Santa Barbara channel. The Steward's bow was cut almost off, the watertight compartments alone saving the little vessel from sinking.

Battleship Michigan Disabled

Washington, Jan. 12.—The battleship Michigan of the Atlantic fleet was partially disabled by losing her port propeller and tail shaft. She was detached and has started for Hampton Roads.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

Shortly after two o'clock one bitter winter morning a physician drove four miles in answer to a telephone call. On his arrival the man who had summoned him said:

"Doctor, I ain't in any particular pain, but somehow or other I've got a feeling that death is nigh."

The doctor felt the man's pulse and listened to his heart.

"Have you made your will?" he asked, finally.

The man turned pale.

"Why, no, doctor. At my age—oh, it ain't true, is it? It can't be true—"

"Who's your lawyer?"

"Higginbotham, but—"

"Then you'd better send for him at once."

The patient, white and trembling, went to the 'phone.

"Who's your pastor?" continued the doctor.

"The Rev. Mr. Brown," mumbled the patient. "But, doctor, do you think—"

"Send for him immediately. Your father too, should be summoned; also your—"

"Doctor, do you really think I'm going to die?" The man began to blubber softly.

The doctor looked at him hard.

"No, I don't," he replied grimly. "There's nothing at all the matter with you. But I'd hate to be the only man you've made a fool of on a night like this."

Y. M. C. A. NIGHT SCHOOL.

An event of importance took place Wednesday evening in the vestry of the Finnish Congregational church on Buckley street where 100 men gathered for the opening of the Y. M. C. A. evening school. Secretary Gay had charge of the class in this opening session, and went over the first lesson with the men.

Beginning next Monday evening the five teachers will take charge and conduct a ten weeks' course with the pupils enrolled. Eighty six men put down their names on the opening evening, and in all probability many more will be enrolled at the next session.

This school has been instituted by request, since the city night schools are closing, and the need for instruction among the Finnish people in our city is great. There are over 1,600 Finns in Quincy, practically all of them day laborers who will have little chance to rise unless they get a better knowledge of the language. Mr. A. Romansky of the Lawrence post office department said: "Speaking from my own experience and personal observation, every foreigner, regardless of his education in the old country, has to go to work in a factory. Working from early in the morning till late at night, it is impossible to learn the language."

Sociologists tell us that these new races must be assimilated and a movement in this direction is on foot all over the country. An effort will be made to teach the Finish people the English language in a scientific and practical manner. The most up-to-date text books will be used, and competent instructors will have charge of the teaching. Beside giving them a good working knowledge of the language, the teachers will endeavor to give their pupils an insight into the principles of American manhood.

Different cities have different nationalities to deal with. In Brockton, the Y. M. C. A. has done good work among the Lithuanians. One of the pupils, Peter Gregas, president of the Brockton Lithuanian Educational society, has said: "The club has derived great benefit from instruction in English and hygiene given by the Y. M. C. A."

Many other testimonials from all parts of the country could be cited telling of the great good the course has done. The text books used here will be the same as used in Brockton, Lynn and all over the state and the country. The cost of the course will be ten cents per pupil for the ten lessons. This will cover the cost of printing the lesson sheets used in instruction.

Rev. John Lillback, pastor of the Finnish church, will have general supervision of the work. H. L. Fenner, F. P. Wadwell, C. L. Hudson, Harold Newcomb and T. De V. Martin are the instructors. Two more teachers will be needed to get the best results in the course.

Both advanced and elementary classes will be conducted. The beginners text book to be used was edited by Peter Roberts, Ph. D., of the International committee. For advanced pupils "The Civic Reader" edited by Meyer Bloomfield will be used.

By opening this school just as the evening schools in the Willard and Adams buildings are closing, the good work may be carried on and supplemented, and many other Finns will be given an opportunity to begin a study of the language.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The Sophomore meeting announced for Monday was postponed because the nominating committee had not met to decide upon nominees for the Junior reception committee.

A number of the High school students will attend a dance given by Thayer Academy students in Braintree on Saturday evening.

Miss Cheever was unable to meet her classes on Monday. Miss Lennon took her place for the day.

Edwina Sweetland is recovering rapidly from her recent illness.

The Juniors defeated the Seniors in a basketball game of one half Tuesday afternoon. When the Juniors had scored one goal the game had to be called off so that the regular game could proceed. Final score 2 to 0.

Frederick Blanchard, ex'14, has been elected president of his class in Sawin Academy, Sherborn.

A Junior class meeting was held on Tuesday to elect an assistant business manager of the Golden Rod, and to choose a motto.

* * *

The basketball team is improving. This statement is not made because Rockland was defeated so easily, but because there was evidence of better team work and more accuracy in shooting baskets. There is plenty of room for improvement on long shots yet, and in order to win the Newton game on a strange floor, Quincy will have to play a stronger game then it has yet.

* * *

The pupils who formerly sat in room 7 have been distributed among the other freshmen rooms. Those scholars who came in late were placed in room 7 regardless of alphabetical order. As the number in the other rooms was reduced somewhat the pupils from room 7 were placed in their regular seats. At the opening of the new term it was found that all could be accommodated in their regular alphabetical order. Miss Ames, the domestic science teacher, had charge of the room before the pupils were distributed among the other rooms.

* * *

Miss Hunter of Allston, a former assistant at High school, was a visitor at the school on Wednesday.

* * *

Mr. Kimball of Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, was to have spoken to the pupils of the High school Monday morning, but his train was wrecked and he was unable to arrive in time. Mr. Kimball will be at the school on the morning of January 30 to talk on "Thrift."

The Senior and Junior girls met in the asembly hall Wednesday morning for a rehearsal of the cantata "Joan of Arc."

The Girls basketball teams had the use of the gymnasium on Wednesday for practice under the direction of Miss Kirmayer.

An event of interest to the athletes in the school will be the banquet of the College club at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday evening. Kilpatrick of Yale, Fisher of Harvard and Sprackling of Brown will be the guests of the evening. H. Trask is president of the club and H. Sutermeister chairman of the committee in charge of the banquet.

The first baseball game of the year was played by a group of High school students known as the Hancock A. C., on Wednesday afternoon. The personnel of the team may be detected by noticing the number of sore arms among the boys during the rest of the week.

GRADED SCHOOLS.

The Wollaston school reopened Monday morning with an attendance of about two thirds of the total enrollment. The doctors examined all the pupils and pronounced everything all right. It is expected that next week will bring out a larger percentage of the scholars. A few have not fully recovered from the effects of the disease and many others are timid about returning to the school.

* * *

The Lincoln and John Hancock school soccer teams played a tie game, 1 to 1, on the Old Colony grounds last week. Mr. Cameron was the referee.

The new method of spelling has been introduced into first and second grades in all the schools. The "New World Speller" a book published by the Teachers' college of New York city, will be the text book used. This has been found very satisfactory in the Horace Mann school and other well known educational institutions.

The Houghs Neck children, who are housed at the Coddington school, will probably go to the Atherton Hough school Friday afternoon. All arrangements will be made so that they may start in with the regular work Monday morning.

A new gift was received at the Massachusetts Fields school this week. It was a square piano manufactured by Gorham and Co., of New York. The instrument has been placed in the corridor beneath one of the new electric lights.

The older boys of the Washington school have resumed soccer football at recesses. No outside games have been played, but seventh and eighth grade teams have had numerous contests.

* * *

Miss Fannie French, the teacher of sewing is able to meet some of the pupils but once in seventeen school days, and it is surprising she accomplishes so much. The working of good buttonholes is one of her requirements.

* * *

The Parents and Teachers association of the Massachusetts Fields school is preparing an entertainment which will take place sometime in February. The proceeds will be used for purchasing pictures for the school.

* * *

Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, the physical director of the schools, is holding a series of meetings in the High school building with the grammar school teachers. Dr. Smith is telling them about the system of physical education he is adopting for use in the schools and explaining the means by which the teachers may cooperate with him in carrying out the idea successfuly.

* * *

Miss Anne Cahill one of the Willard school teachers was absent Monday and Tuesday on account of illness.

Basketball teams have been organized in the two eighth grades of the Willard school and the boys are putting in strenuous practice in the school hall. James O'Connor is captain of one team and Sigurd Almquist of the other. The prospects are good for two seventh grade teams and a series of matches wil be played in all probability. The girls of the school have also caught the fever and the outlook is bright for two teams of girls.

In a special report of an investigation made at the direction of the Legislature of last year, the State Board of Education recommends that the State give to towns establishing agricultural schools the same assistance it now gives to those maintaining industrial schools; and it advises against the establishment of a farm school in the city of Worcester, holding that the general provision is sufficient to meet the needs of that city.

Pupils of the Worcester public schools are about to compete for a series of money prizes offered for the best essays on the Worcester Art Museum and its contents, eleven topics being suggested by the trustees, and each subject requiring study, while several call for somewhat elaborate comparisons. "What suggestions have the collections to offer a dressmaker or a housekeeper? is, for instance, a question that comes very close to practical affairs. Others ask for studies of famous painters, pictures that tell a story, portraits, landscapes, Greek pottery and other features. Probably in many cases the results will not be very illuminative. Yet progressive educators approve the policy of linking a public library to the school and the home, and, if a library, why not an art museum also.—Boston Transcript.

President Butterfield of the Massachusetts agricultural college in his annual report states that the attendance of students of college rank exceeded that of the previous year by 68, and aggregated 320 four-year men, 12 unclassified students of college grade and 18 graduate students. There were 260 in the various short courses, making a total attendance of 610.

In a recent lecture at the Technical High School in New York, Dr. Wiley said of the cheap candies and ice cream sold to school children: "I have no objection to the children eating or drinking any of these things when they are pure and wholesome, but before you let your babies spend their money in the drug store or little candy store for such things, go there first yourself and be sure of what they are getting. The dealer can get pure fruit juices and candies if you make him. The public must be awakened against letting the child go to the drug store to drink so-called temperance drinks. They are sweet because $1 worth of saccharine will sweeten as much as $5 worth of sugar." Saccharine, he says, is of the coal tar family, of which there are 800 or 900 all but four or five of which ought to be in the penitentiary.

A Doctor's Luck

By FRED L. YOUNG

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

My friend and family physician, Dr. Parmeter, was trying to jolly me out of an attack of liver trouble or something of that nature the other day, and we got to talking of the difficulty of young professional men getting their start.

"There was a time," said the doctor, "when experience was considered the great desideratum and no doctor that hadn't a bald crown and white whiskers had much of a chance. But of late years such discoveries in the medical world have been made that what a doctor needs is to be kept up in his profession. I started in the day when old age was essential, and since I was very young and looked like a boy I had no show at all. Did I ever tell you how I got my start?"

"No."

"I set myself up to practice in a suburban town where a very rich man—a Mr. Billington—had his residence. I met him once on the train going out of the city, and, with a view to impressing him with my medical erudition, I talked a blue streak about toxins and antitoxins, transfusions and germ colonization. He seemed very much interested, but that was when Pasteur was just beginning his investigations, and Pasteur was the father of the whole business. I was foolish enough to hope that Mr. Billington would be so impressed with the interest I took in the new field I saw looming up that if any of his family became ill he might call me in. Whether he didn't understand what I was talking about or was wedded to the experience theory of a doctor's value I don't know, but the same old coot continued to be his family physician.

One day my heart leaped in my throat when Mr. Billington's butler came to my office and asked if I could find it convenient to call. The fact is I was finding it very inconvenient because I didn't make calls. I went at once, but what was my chagrin to be taken to the stable. There were Mr. Billington, a veterinary surgeon, a groom and a coachman standing over a $1,500 horse, who was lying on his side, evidently ready to give his last kick.

"I hope you won't feel insulted, doctor," said Mr. Billington, "at my calling on you to save a horse, but he's a valuable animal, and my veterinarian here has given him up. Don't you think you can help us out?"

"I wanted to say, 'Why don't you call on your old baldhead, who is doubtless making a thousand or two a year out of you?' but I didn't. I have a natural beat for making people feel easy about their sick and a special aptitude for bolstering up the sick themselves. I put on the wisest look I could and felt the animal's heartbeat. I didn't need to tell him to put out his tongue, for it was hanging out already, and meanwhile I was thinking of some experiment to make. As for knowing what was the matter with the horse, who couldn't tell me a single symptom, I hadn't the remotest idea. Presently an idea occurred to me.

"'I must run over to the drug store,' I said.

"'Tom will go for you,' said Mr. Billington.

"'I must go myself. I don't know what they've got that I want, and I must find out.'

"Off I started for the drug store, and when I got there I said to the druggist: 'Give me something that's rather bulky and harmless. I don't care what it is. I must have it right off.'

"He looked about him, and, his eye catching some coarse bags, he said, 'I don't know of anything unless you take one of those bags of bathing salt.'

"'The very thing,' I said. 'Give me one at once.'

"Fortunately there was nothing printed on the bags to give me away, so I seized one of them and hurried back to Mr. Billington's stable. When I got there I found that the veterinarian had pronounced the horse dead and had gone away in high dudgeon because a real doctor had been called in, which he considered a professional insult. I looked at the horse and had no more doubt myself that he was dead than that I was alive. Nevertheless, taking a handful of the salt from the bag, I sprinkled it on his tongue.

"It wasn't a minute before that tongue began slowly to move. It was drawn into the animal's mouth, the salt was swallowed, and the tongue was put out again. I dropped another handful on it, and again it was withdrawn and the salt swallowed.

"Well, sir, I kept on feeding the horse salt, which happened to be exactly what he needed, till he got up and stood on his feet.

"Everybody was astonished, including myself, but you can bet my astonishment didn't appear on the surface. Billingham wrote me a check for $1,000, and I was then and there appointed his family physician.

"Those were the days when the doctors worked everything at haphazard. It's different now; there are things they know as exactly as two and two make four. Then there are other things they know pretty nearly. But I'm sorry to say that the bulk of their treatment is still guesswork, but that part grows less every day."

Parmeter's income is now some $30,000 from his profession alone.

State Lines.

California, where nearly everything that grows can be raised, gets nearly $2,000,000 out of a crop of 9,000 tons of walnuts.

In the decade from 1898 to 1908 the antelope of Colorado, according to estimates of the state game warden, decreased from 25,000 to 2,000.

Arizona has some of the grandest scenery in the world, the famous Grand Canyon of the Colorado and the wonderful Chalcedony, with trunks four feet thick, cracked into exquisitely colored blocks, being prominent.

Giving Him Carte Blanche.

A few years ago John Kendrick Bangs, the humorist, told a number of his Broadway literary confreres that he felt particularly elated over an order he had just received from Henry W. Savage, the theatrical producer, for the libretto of a musical comedy. The play was produced a few months later. During the long period of rehearsals so much of Bangs' material was eliminated and so much other material inserted in its stead that when the curtain went up on the first night not more than half a dozen of the original lines remained.

About a week later a friend, meeting Bangs, asked him if he was writing any more plays for Savage.

"Yes," replied Bangs. "Only an hour ago I sent him 500 blank sheets of paper and told him to go as far as he liked."—Irvin Cobb in New York Tribune.

Scientist Who Couldn't Light a Fire.

Lord Kelvin, like Lord Morley, once amused a Scottish audience with a display of ignorance. At a lecture in Edinburgh, with Lord Kelvin in the chair, the Duke of Argyll was taken suddenly ill. "When the aged peer was carried down to one of the anterooms," said a local paper, "one of the first things to be thought of was the lighting of a fire, and this task was tackled by the duke's host, Lord Kelvin. But instead of placing some paper in the grate and some wood on that in the orthodox manner he amazed the onlookers by desperate efforts to kindle a handful of sticks at a gas burner. Ordinary mortals may be pardoned for taking some satisfaction in the fact that even so great a philosopher as Lord Kelvin did not know how to light a fire."

Their First Quarrel.

"Why is it," asked the bride, "that the humorists take delight in writing paragraphs about Mrs. Youngwife's biscuits? I can't see anything funny about them."

"Neither can I," answered the meek and lowly half as he struggled with one.

Then she got mad.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

BRIEFS

The beam trawler Ripple, the last of the trawlers launched at Quincy, brought into Boston Tuesday night 81,000 pounds of haddock, cod and hake.

Members of Wollaston Lodge 174 A. B. S. are looking forward to their next meeting on Thursday Jan. 19 in Odd Fellows hall where they have planned many social times for the winter.

Torpedo boat Perkins, built at Quincy, was given a spin in the harbor Wednesday to test her machinery and adjust compasses. She went down below Boston light, returning to the navy yard late in the afternoon.

The report that Engineer Nyhan pulled the alarm for the grass fire at Atlantic was incorrect. Engineers do not pull boxes for grass fires. Mr. Nyhan was in his house when the alarm sounded, but promptly put in the recall.

It has been rumored around Wollaston that there is scarlet fever at the Massachusetts Field school. The report is not true, the child in question is a son of Howard D. Fowler of Phillips street, who has been examined by the family physician who says he has not got scarlet fever.

TELLS STORY OF HIS CRIME

Thompson Pleads Guilty of Murder of Mrs. Fine

ALMOST COLLAPSES IN COURT

Says He Did Not Go to Widow's Store With Object of Robbery and Did Not Mean to Kill Her—Saw Vision of His Victim Every Time He Looked at Stolen Money, So He Burned It

Providence, Jan. 12.—Clifton E. Thompson, the negro who confessed to the police of the murder of Mrs. Minka Fine, Saturday night, pleaded guilty to the crime when he was arraigned before Judge Gorham on a charge of murder.

The charge was that Thompson "did feloniously kill and slay, with malice aforethought and intent to commit murder, one Mrs. Minka Fine."

Judge Gorham, while the negro wept freely and hung limply to one side, adjudged Thompson probably guilty and bound over without bail for the next session of the grand jury in March.

If he had been weak before, Thompson seemed weaker when the judge had concluded. He almost collapsed, and as the court officers approached, he could hardly support himself. He had to be half carried out of the courtroom.

Thompson, who is a young negro of shiftless character, was questioned persistently by the police, who had gathered damaging evidence against him. He finally broke down, wept and admitted that he had committed the crime. He persisted, however, that he had not gone to the store with the object of robbery and that he did not mean to kill the woman.

"I went to the little store on an errand for Laura Tossett to get some oil and when I went in she (Mrs. Fine) dropped her money bag. I couldn't help trying to get it.

"She grabbed me while I bent over and I hit her, but I only hit her with my hand. She fell down, then got up again and went at me again. We fought all the time and she pushed me into the little back room. She was all the time trying to get the bag away from me. I had no idea of hurting her. I hadn't thought of stealing anything either until I saw her drop the bag.

"She put up a stiff fight. I just tried to make her let go. She got hold of my throat something terrible.

"Then I hit her again. I can't remember anything after that. I carried the knife in my outside coat pocket. When we were scrapping I pulled it out. I think I stabbed her three or four times before she went down. I didn't know how badly hurt she was when I left the store.

"I thought if I killed the woman I'd get a vision of her every time I saw any of her money. It looked awful to me. Every time I pulled it out to count it I could see her. I think there was about $45, so I threw the whole business in the stove.

"She lay awful still on the floor after I stabbed her. There was blood on everything. I ran out. I didn't see any little girls at all and nobody came to the store while were were fighting. I kept seeing her all still and bloody every time I looked at that money.

"I took along the oil she had got for me and carried it to Laura Tossett, and then went home and washed my hands and fixed up some.

"I wasn't drunk at all. It was just when I saw the money and stooped to pick it up the thing started. I am telling the truth now? Nobody else was in it.

"I've often went to the store, and she always had money, but mostly in small change."

QUIZZED BY ALIENISTS

Former Banker Robin Acts Queerly During the Bombardment

New York, Jan. 12.—Joseph G. Robin, to whose financial operations, it is alleged, the closing of three banks of this city was due, faced a three-hour mental examination by alienists.

In the midst of the bombardment of interrogation directed at him by the doctors Robin suddenly sank back in his chair. His eyes were closed and his body was motionless. For several minutes he remained inert, then straightened up, and the examination proceeded. The doctors made no comment.

BONILLA IN HONDURAS

Revolutionary Forces Appear to Be Rapidly Advancing

Washington, Jan. 12.—An expedition of General Bonilla's forces landed on the northern coast of Honduras near Truxillo and communication between that port and Tegucigalpa, the capital, has been interrupted. This information was received by the state department in a dispatch from United States Minister McCreery.

An official dispatch from Ceiba, Honduras, states that great excitement prevails in the city over the approach of Bonilla's revolutionary army and that the booming of the Hornet's guns can be heard. Business is suspended throughout the city, according to the report. The dispatch adds that Generals Bonilla and Christmas, with an army of 5000 men, have occupied points along the coast. Bonilla is reported to be moving rapidly toward Ceiba.

RURAL DECREASE SHOWN

Fewer Farmers In New Hampshire During Past Ten Years

Washington, Jan. 12.—According to census statistics for Maine and New Hampshire the latter state is one of the few whose rural population during the last ten years decreased in number.

While in Maine the rural districts held their own in comparison to the municipalities, the thirteenth census indicates that the rural sections of New Hampshire lost more than 5200.

New Hampshire's total increase in population, 18,948, during the decade, was contributed entirely by the municipalities having a population in excess of 5000.

POINT FOR DEFENSE IN SCHENK TRIAL

Doctor Uncertain to the Symptoms of Poisoning

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 12.—The defense scored yesterday in the trial of Laura F. Schenk, charged with having attempted to poison her husband, John O. Schenk, the millionaire pork packer.

Dr. Hupp, who reported the alleged poisoning to the authorities and was considered the star witness for the state, was under cross examination at the hands of Attorney O'Brien practically all day.

Among other things drawn from Hupp was the statement that he was not sure the symptoms exhibited by Schenk, even after the removal of the latter to the hospital, were due to arsenical poisoning until a mineral water used by Schenk was analyzed; that the discoloration of the packer's gums probably was due to their diseased condition and the fact that "Shenk did not use a toothbrush," rather than to lead poisoning, and that Schenk was at no time, either before or after his removal to the hospital, actually confined to his bed at all times.

It has been generally supposed that Schenk was for weeks at the point of death. Hupp also said he was first summoned by Mrs. Schenk, who asked if her husband should not have a trained nurse.

SMELL STAYS WITH US

No Way to Get Rid of It In Limburger Cheese

Milwaukee, Jan. 12.—Limburger cheese will always make itself known. Swiss cheese will always be porous. So says Secretary Baer of the Wisconsin Cheese Makers' association.

"We have tried experiments," continued Baer, "but they never proved a success. We thought we had a cheese that contained all the flavor of limburger, minus the smell, but it was a decided failure.

"Then again we had a cheese that looked something like the Swiss variety, but it was solid, no holes or eyes. But the taste was far from being Swiss. It cannot be accomplished."

Good Form

Hostesses at dinner must put guests of honor at the right of themselves and the hosts even if the usual sitting places are changed to suit the occasion. When a married woman entertains at dinner she puts at her right the husband of the woman whom they so wish to honor, and the wife must be at the right of the host. To place the guests of honor in any other position is to deprive them entirely of the distinction intended.

With a round table the matter of seating guests becomes simple, for there is no head and no foot, and the desired position arranges itself without change. Frequently the hostess does not have a seat directly opposite to the host, but in a circle this is not conspicuous.

With an oval or square table and eight guests the arrangement becomes complicated. Three persons on a side means that the hostess must abandon her usual place or she will have two women together and two men, than which nothing could show greater ignorance. There is nothing for the hostess then to do but to change her position, leaving her husband in that which he always occupies.

The woman guest of honor then goes at his right, and, if possible, the husband is put at the right of the hostess on the side of the table. When all the guests are married couples even the husband of the honor guest cannot be at the hostess' right, though she has abandoned her regular seat.

An English Custom.

The very sensible English custom of mentioning the date of departure in writing invitations for visits has become almost universal in this country, the exception being in the homesteads south of Mason and Dixon's line. There a friend or relation is asked to come and stay as long as convenient, and the stay sometimes stretches over months or years. There are always relations who are disposed to overlook any little discomfort that such a visit brings as well as the positive inconvenience they may be causing their hosts, and such is the courtesy of the people of this part of the country that the visit only ends at the visitor's will. Instances could even be given in which the visits of poor relations or friends have lasted the rest of their lives, the greatest courtesy and consideration being shown to them by host and hostess even where they became helpless invalids.

At the Dance.

A woman waits to be sought by her partner. When the music for the dance which she has promised him strikes up should he fail to seek her out she may expect an apology and plausible explanation for his delinquency.

If a man is doing duty as an escort on coming from the cloakroom he awaits his companion's appearance somewhere outside the ballroom door, at the head or the foot of the stairway or in the hall, having agreed with her beforehand just where they are to meet.

Before he fills his dance program with other names he asks a dance or two of the woman in his charge. He also holds himself in readiness to accompany her to the supper room if he sees that no one offers to serve as escort in that capacity.

On Letter Writing.

The girl who has a correspondence of about half a dozen or so of her schoolmates has formulated the following rules concerning her letter writing, to which she adheres:

Write name and address legibly and correctly on each envelope.

Write your own name and address in the upper left hand corner.

Place on each the correct amount of postage.

Before sealing see that in each envelope you have inclosed the correct letter.

Keep as close a duplicate of every letter as it is possible to do.

Never write personalities.

Clever Idea.

A girl who has just returned from a long visit, during which she collected a number of spoons which are souvenirs of the various places visited, recently made them the key to a table talk at a little luncheon. Beside each plate were two spoons bearing pictures or seals of various cities, and during the luncheon the guests were asked to tell some interesting fact about that particular city. All the guests declared that it was not only a unique method of directing the conversation, but the means of making the occasion most interesting.

Hint For Speechmaking.

The frequent reason of failure in so called impromptu speeches at wedding breakfasts is the fact that the speaker is not brief in what he says. It is far better to utter only a few sentences, stopping while the others would have a person go on, than to occupy much time in which guests might be talking to each other were they given the opportunity. Then, too, if there are other speakers to follow the evening grows boresome if all talk for many minutes.

MILE FROM THE POLE

Where Expert Places Peary on Climax of Journey Northward

Washington, Jan. 12.—The house committee on naval affairs completed its examination of Captain Robert E. Peary on his claim to attainment of the North Pole, and Hugh C. Mitchell, a skilled computer of the coast and geodetic survey, testified that he handled Peary's observations.

Mitchell said that he had figured that Peary, when he made his farthermost camp, was less than five miles from the Pole and that in his marches on that day of the climax of his trip he passed within one and one-sixteenth of a mile of the actual Pole. He did not fix Peary actually at the Pole. He believed that Peary's observations could not be "faked."

The committee will hear Admiral Chester today and review the testimony in the case at an early executive meeting with a view to passing on the bill proposing Peary's retirement as a rear admiral.

AUTO HORN MONOPOLY

It Is Enjoyed by the Kaiser as Far as Relates to Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The federal council of the empire has decided that the inventor of an automobile horn which sounds four notes may sell his invention wherever he wishes outside of Berlin, but that in the capital it will be an offense for any one save the kaiser to use the horn.

The horn was invented three years ago by a musical instrument maker at Markneukirchen, Saxony. To advertise it he made one of pure silver and sent it to the emperor. The kaiser was so pleased with it that he gave orders against its use by any one except members of the royal family.

RESPONDS TO LURE OF THE FOOTLIGHTS

New York, Jan. 12.—It is learned that Mrs. Bernice Golden Henderson Heinze, wife of the Fritz A. Heinze, who in happier days was known as the king of copper, is about to return to the stage.

Mrs. Henderson-Heinze is now at Mount Clemens, Mich., a specialist is devoting hours of his time to her ills each day, and she is accompanied by her mother and her 9-year-old daughter, Katherine Henderson.

Mrs. Heinze is to return to the stage via London. James A. Fagan is now engaged in writing a play for her, to be called "Bella Donna."

Heinze remains at his handsome suite of apartments in this city, and through his attorneys professes lack of knowledge of any plans his wife may cherish of returning to the stage.

ELEVATOR BOY'S COOLNESS

It Prevents Panic Among Girls During Candy Factory Fire

Boston, Jan. 12.—Nearly a hundred girls, many of whom dared not delay to secure their outer garments, rushed or were led from the candy factory of the Aldrich-Clisbee company, 21-33 Portland street, when a fire was discovered which threatened to destroy the entire five-story brick building.

The coolness of Leslie McLean, an elevator boy, prevented a serious panic, and undoubtedly saved many lives. While the damage to the building is not great, Charles A. Simpson, manager of the factory, said that his stock, which is insured for about $55,000, will be practically a total loss.

SENATOR UNDER FIRE

Stephenson of Wisconsin Implicated In Alleged Corruption

Madison, Wis., Jan. 12.—The committee of the state senate appointed by the legislature to investigate alleged corruption in the election of Isaac Stephenson, the multi-millionaire lumberman, to the United States senate, filed a report charging Stephenson with violation of the corrupt practices act, and many specific irregularities.

The committee recommends that a copy of the report be submitted to the United States senate and that that body investigate Stephenson's election.

KICKER AND GROWLER.

There is a word of difference between the man who kicks and the man who growls.

The man who kicks—who truly, earnestly and honestly kicks—is a good kind of man to have about. He kicks because things are not as they should be, and he proposes to correct them. The man who growls is merely a negative quality. He may know that things are not going right, but he hasn't any idea of trying to do anything about it. He just sits around and complains.

You remember Mark Twain's story about the kicker and how successful he was in securing everything that belonged to him. He was a producer in the best sense of the word, just as every man who kicks in the right way is certain to be. You probably know just such men—men who are chronic kickers. Let anything go wrong and they go "up in the air" in a minute, but you can depend upon it that that particular thing will never go wrong again if they can prevent it.

A kicker may not be the most agreeable person to have around, yet he is a healthful factor in almost any establishment. He has his faults, but it is possible to overlook them for the sake of the productive value that he represents.

As to the growler—there seems to be no place for him in the work of the world. He may complain loudly and whine and talk about other people, but he remedies no faults, he repairs no leaks—he just makes trouble.

That is the difference between the kicker and the growler.—Natick Bulletin.

Hammond Files Report With Inspectors of Steam Vessels

STORY OF CAPE COD TRAGEDY

Vain Search Was Made For Barges Which Were Wrecked—Conclusion That They Dragged Together After Bitts Had Been Pulled Out of First One In Tow—Five of the Seventeen Victims Identified

Boston, Jan. 12.—Captain Francis E. Hammond of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad tug Lykens made an official report to United States inspectors of steam vessels for the port of Boston, in which he told all that he knew of the loss of the barges Trevorton, Corbin and Pine Forest, which broke loose from the tug before daylight Tuesday morning and were ground to pieces by breakers on Peaked Hill bar. Seventeen bargemen lost their lives.

"Shortly before 4 o'clock I awoke and went on deck and at 4:20 the seaman who was watching the tow line on the after deck reported that signals were being made with lights on the forward barge," said Hammond. "I went out myself, but could see no signals. Five minutes afterward a sudden lurch of the vessel, together with increased speed, indicated that we had parted from the tow.

"We slowed up, but were obliged to increase speed again in order to get steerage way and to get the hawser aboard. Twenty minutes elapsed before we got the hawser aboard. The hawser and bridle were all right and this indicates we had pulled the bitts out of the barge.

"We cruised back again to the southward to search for lights, but could not make them out. Later I saw a stationary light, but could not determine whether it was afloat or ashore, as the searchlight showed the beach close at hand.

"We cruised between Race point and Peaked Hill bar until daylight. I saw the barge on Peaked Hill bar, but it was impossible to go to their assistance. I thought it possible the others had gotten up sail and worked off shore, so I cruised off shore in search of them.

"Finding no trace of the missing barges I put into Provincetown, where I heard that wreckage from the Trevorton and Corbin, and bodies of the crews of both, had been washed ashore. I concluded they had dragged together and sunk each other."

Captain Carleton of the local steamboat inspectors went over the report with Hammond and verified the course on the chart and says that present knowledge indicates that no blame attaches to Hammond. He will so recommend in his report to Washington.

Five of the seventeen victims of the triple wreck have been identified at Provincetown, where fourteen bodies were washed ashore. The sea still holds three others.

The first identification was that of Captain Monroe W. Hall of the barge Pine Forest, which still lies on the bar. Hall lived in Provincetown and his face was recognized.

On the hand of another victim was found a seal ring, bearing the monogram "C. E. S." The body is believed to be that of Charles E. Smith, the son of Captain Smith of Philadelphia, of the barge Corbin.

Papers indicated that another of the victims was John Gardas of Philadelphia. He was one of the crew on the Pine Forest. On another body was found the naturalization papers of Andrew Elsson. He was from Philadelphia and was a member of the crew of the Corbin.

Victor Sanstorw of Philadelphia, a member of the crew of the Trevorton, was identified by his marriage certificate.

Lisbon, Jan. 12.—Ex-Premier Franco has left Portugal an exile. He was conducted to the frontier by a government representative and he is now at Biarritz.

GIACOMO.

Two days before Christmas Giacomo was in his little boarded off room counting his money. It was because of this money that Marguerita called him "the rich one." Marguerita was his cousin, daughter of the padrone. She went out each day with a tambourine as an accompaniment to his organ.

A lady who had seen the two together said that an artist friend of hers would like Giacomo for a model, the boy's black eyes, white teeth and curly hair appealing to her. Marguerita tossed her head; the compliment should have been bestowed upon her father who was a model parent and uncle as well as a model friend—for was not he also a "banker," taking charge of the money of his friends?

Despite the fact that his uncle was a banker Giacomo did not deposit his earnings with him, for Giacomo remembered how the padrone had managed his mother's olive farm till a man claimed it for money loaned on it unknown to the mother, and the padrone, taking Giacomo with him, sailed for America.

"A miser," the padrone sighed. "The son of my dead brother, and a miser!"

Marguerita scarcely considered her cousin a miser, for he had given her a pair of beautiful long earrings from the stock of her father's friend, the Jewish gentleman who let her father have things for a mere nothing on account of his admiration for the padrone. The padrone explained that the dark spots on the earrings were caused by the extraordinary richness of the gold of which they were composed, ordinary gold being of a uniform yellow.

Giacomo was pleased that Marguerita appreciated this extraordinary richness of the metal. As for himself, at home, in Italy, about this time of the year, just before Christmas, he had often gone with his mother to the church where stood the Blessed Lady with the Christmas crown of uniform yellow gold on her head, and he believed he liked that kind of gold better. Marguerita told him he did not know anything about it, and he said maybe that was the case.

Of course, Giacomo bringing in more money than any other one of the lodgers the padrone feared for the boy's safety in carrying a large sum about his person and sighed for his hard-heartedness in not trusting his relative with it. Yet, Marguerita did not altogether consider her cousin hard-hearted, for there was that time when he gave his supper three days to the rebellious Palermo boy who at first refused to go out bare-footed and tell the ladies and gentleman that he was the sole support of an invalid mother and several young brothers and sisters.

Giacomo would have said that he was neither a miser nor hard hearted, but that he had decided to go back to his mother when he had saved up enough money to take her from the old work she was doing now that the olive farm was gone—Pietro, who came over last year, told him she was doing such work and that she had let her son accompany her husband's brother here in order that the boy might not see her engaged in labor so far beneath her.

Giacomo meant to buy another olive farm, a little one which his mother and he could manage between them, and Pietro told him that many such a farm might be had for the equivalent of three hundred dollars.

At first this was a tremendous sum to contemplate, but in about three years it might be saved even though the padrone allowed but little for the work with the organ and charged four dollars a week for board—the padrone said that four dollars was nothing for a boy who ate four times as much as the old violin man without teeth who brought in a fair sum through his ability to weep easily.

Only one more year to wait!

Giacomo took the canvas belt from about his waist and fell to counting his money. Two hundred and ten dollars, there it was. He should see his mother in a little year. Two hundred and ten dollars?

He heard a groan. He always made sure the door was fastened before counting his money—could it be his uncle out in the entry trying to make him think of burglars? He turned out the light. But again that groan! Then he laughed; for he knew now what it meant—it was the old signora in the room that was partitioned off from his. She had come last month, a mere wisp of a woman, pale and with a cough, shivering as though she were always cold. She had once been a dancer, Marguerita said, and the padrone let her have the room on condition that she teach Marguerita the way to use her feet, for in the winter the theatres wanted young dancers and paid well for them, so why should not Marguerita earn money that way?

Satisfying himself that it was only the old signora, Giacomo went to bed. He lay there planning as usual what he should do once he had the three hundred dollars. He thought how he should go to Italy, his mother not told of his coming, and maybe he should find her at Christmas time in the church where was the Bessed Lady with the crown of gold upon her head, and where his mother used to take him every day after his father died and making him kneel beside her got his hand in hers and told him to be a good man always and an honest one.

How astonished she would be to see him; how she would cry out and throw her arms around him? And what would she say when she saw his belt with the three hundred dollars in it, his Christmas gift for her!

"Mother! Mother! I want you all the time! I—"

Listen! That was the padrone quarreling with the old violin man without teeth who was forever complaining of the hard bread and the tough meat. The old man was groaning—no, that must be the signora in the next room groaning again.

He had heard his mother groan like that the day his uncle told her the olive farm was lost. His mother had been sick that day. Was the old signora sick?—no one would go near her if she were, no one noticed anything in this busy house. He rose and went to the door that separated his room from hers. He listened but there was no further sound, so he went back to bed.

At daybreak he was aroused by a fumbling at his door that led out on the hall. He knew the meaning of that, it was his uncle who of late had taken on a habit of trying his door now and then. For the padrone said he feared fire and did not like the doors of the house to be locked in case of a sudden blaze.

Giacomo laughed and felt at his belt. Just then the old signora gave a groan. He went to her door and flung it open. The old woman sat in a chair white and gasping.

"You are sick?" he asked her.

"I am starving," she said. "Think of thy own mother! I am starving."

He knew what it meant; the padrone let her have the room, but food was not included in the bargain. He also knew there would be little use in appealing to his uncle, so he hurried out and purchased food and brought it to the signora. It frightened him to see her eat it so ravenously. Then, her hunger appeased, she spoke to him.

"The padrone-banker took the earnings of my dancing class., she said, "and he tells me he invested it for me and the investment proves a failure. I was saving the money to take me into a Home where I should be cared for, for I am weak and old and friendless. But bless thee for thy goodness to me, caro mio."

Giacomo went down to breakfast where all was hurry and bustle, his uncle scolding the people and getting them off to their work. At eight o'clock he was grinding his organ.

"Ah," pined Marguerita, jingling her tambourine," such a resplendent ring as my father sees in the Jewish gentleman's stock. It would exactly match my earrings, rich one. Make it a Christmas gift to me."

The rich one nodded his head pleasantly. All day he turned the handle of the organ, and had nothing to say. Even when he and Marguerita rested at noon and dined off their bread and uncooked tomatoes he was silent, though Marguerita talked incessantly of the resplendent ring. In the afternoon Marguerita refused to beat her tambourine, and frowned. At eight o'clock they were at home again, and Marguerita complained to her father.

"Stingy, as well as miserly and hard-hearted," sighed the padrone, "and the ring but five dollars."

Giacomo went to the artist's class at the studio and posed till ten o'clock. He then returned to his room and locking the door leading to the hall sought the old signora. She seemed better than she had been in the morning. "Bless thee, child," she said.

Giacomo had come to hear her story over again, and she told it as before. "Though do not mind me," she said. "I am old, but thou—the world is all before thee, so what of thee?"

Giacomo told her of his ambition to purchase the olive farm for his mother. Then he left her.

"My uncle has done this, "he said to himself, as he went down the stairs to see the padrone. But the padrone was out, he had taken Marguerita to the theatre to witness some dancing which she might learn from seeing it, though the old violin man who cried so easily was in.

"Does the padrone save money for you?" He asked Giacomo. Before Giacomo could answer him he clutched the boy by the arm. "Go from here," he whispered, "The people doubt the banker, and as his nephew you may suffer. Ah," and he broke into smiles, "the illustrious one!" for the padrone had entered.

"Giacomo," demanded the padrone, "why are you out of bed so late? To your room! And your door must remain unlocked. I insist upon it. Suppose there should be fire?"

Giacomo went to his room and locked the door. Soon his uncle came and tried the knob. "Unlock the door," he said from the outside. "I insist. Suppose there should be fire?"

Giacomo unlocked the door and sat up all night, his hand on his belt. Before going down stairs in the morning he went to the old signora.

"I need nothing," she said. "How could I eat?—the padrone has been here to say he can get money for this room, and that I must go, and tomorrow Christmas Day! Old and friendless, what will become of me!"

Giacomo went out with Marguerita and the organ.

"Think of thy own mother! Old and friendless!" He heard the words all day long, as though they were the sounds given forth by the organ. "Think of thy own mother! Old and friendless! And over in Italy his mother worked in the fields, and she was growing old, and maybe but for him was friendless—and in a little year he should have the means to make a home for her! "Think of thy own mother! Old and friendless!"

"Giacomo," Marguerita suddenly broke in as they were ordered away from a house before which they had paused to play, "my father needs money. He knows that you distrust him, so he hesitates to mention it to you, though he has gone to your room several times lately to tell you his troubles, and you have locked him out. Many of his speculations have turned out badly, and the people are pressing him for their savings. You will lend him what you have?—for he is your uncle."

"As you say," returned Giacomo, "he is my uncle."

On reaching the house that evening Giacomo found the padrone with his head clasped in his hands: "It is no wonder that I grieve," he said, "I cannot pay those who have had confidence in me. And I am such an honest man." His emotion getting the better of him, he pulled his handkerchief from his pocket and applied it to his eyes, while Marguerita ran to him and embraced him.

A paper had fluttered to the floor when he pulled out his handkerchief, and as he and Marguerita were busily bewailing their sorrows Giacomo found it possible to examine the paper unperceived. It was a ticket for the passage for two persons to Genoa, his uncle's birthplace.

Giacomo went up to his room. There the old signora stood in the doorway.

"It is farewell," she said. "And I shall always remember thy goodness to me. I leave tonight, the padrone desires it."

"Where do you go?" asked Giacomo.

"The police station tonight," she answered. "Probably the poorhouse tomorrow."

She entered her own room and closed the door.

Giacomo seated himself at his window.

"Think of thy own mother! Old and friendless!"

Though his mother was not yet old, and so long as she had him she was not friendless even though she might be thousands of miles from him. As he sat there he grew drowsy, his long day's tramp with the organ and the lack of rest the night before made his eyelids heavy. "Old and friendless! Old and—"

He woke with a start. Was some one at his money belt? He jumped to his feet and struck a match. No one was there. His door was open, however, and he ran out to the hall. There was his uncle.

"I was coming to you, "said the padrone, "to tell you that if you are going to the art-class tonight it is time for you to start. You go there?"

Giacomo nodded, and his uncle turned away.

All the time he posed that night Giacomo seemed to hear the sad refrain, "Think of thy own mother! Old and friendless!"

When he was ready to leave the studio he turned to the artist, who understood the Italian tongue.

"The Poorhouse?" he asked, "is it good for the old and friendless for Christmas?"

"Why," the man laughed, "do you think of going there, Gecco, for your holidays?"

"Ah, it is not a good place," said Giacomo, "eh? And how much is it for the Home for the old and friendless?"

The artist explained some things to him, a few of which Giacomo understood. It ended in Giacomo stripping off his belt and counting out two hundred dollars.

"I am—thinking of my own mother," he said, and hurried from the room.

He was aware of what he had done; he knew how many months the giving away of the money would keep him from his mother; but would she not say, if she knew of it, that he had done right? Only he felt that something choked him all the way down the many stairs to the street.

In the doorway stood his uncle.

"I feared for your safety," he explained, "knowing that you carry a large sum with you. I will see you home."

Giacomo had nothing to say. At the house he fairly flew up the stairs.

"Signora," he said, "come with me. It is late, and you leave the padrone's room, for you have your bonnet on."

He had her in the street, hurrying her on. He took her to the studio. There the artist made it clear to him that the signora would be cared for till morning, when it would be seen if she might find a place in the Home. Then Giacomo returned to his uncle.

"So, the padrone said, "you help the signora away. Let her dare to accuse me! let her dare! And that large sum of money of yours—I must and will take care of it for you."

Giacomo darted from the house. He walked a long way trying to elude his uncle. And how far off was the olive farm now! how far off the day when he should see his mother!

"But she will understand," he told himself, "and maybe I did what was good, as she used to tell me to do in the church where is the Blessed Lady with the crown of gold upon her head"

All at once he found himself in front of a huge hotel opposite the studio building where he posed. From the hotel portal a flood of light poured out. A package lay in his path. He kicked it, and it opened and disclosed a great pile of banknotes.

He stooped to examine it, when a hand closed over his.

"It is mine," hoarsely said the voice of the padrone in his ear, "I dropped it."

"It is neither yours nor mine," cried Giacomo. "And you followed me, thinking of the money in my belt."

Giacomo was felled to the ground, but he held on to the bundle of notes. Blows were rained upon his head, his face, still he held to the money. Then his uncle's voice rang out.

"Help! Help!"

A dozen people ran from the hotel, and Giacomo was pulled to his feet.

"My money," the padrone was saying excitedly, "he has it in his hand, and he has more of it in his belt, all mine, my money!"

"It is not his," Giacomo panted, wiping the blood from his face. "I found this package—it is some one else's, not the padrone's or mine. It is some one else's, and I keep it for that one," and fell in a heap to the sidewalk, for his uncle's blows had been heavy.

When he next opened his eyes he was in a bed in the hotel. A hand stroked his. He looked around, and saw the old signora bending over him, and beside her was the artist for whom he posed.

"Gecco," said the artist, "the doctor says you will soon be well again. Your uncle has disappeared. He had intended to go to night at any rate, and will sail for Genoa tomorrow, his daughter with him, unless some of the men he has defrauded put a stop to the plan. Now give me the money," for Giacomo still held the package of bank notes tight in his hand. "The signora here has told us what you have done for her. I had just sent her here for the night, and it was she who identified you and ran and brought me here. The money belongs to the gentleman over there by the window—he dropped it not five minutes before you found it. The signora has told us your story, and the gentleman wishes to reward you, to help you a little you know. Gecco, start next week for your home and your mother, the gentleman will see that you get the olive farm, while you will have some money left. It is his Christmas gift to you."

"But the signora," said Giacomo, "does she go to the Home?"

"Yes, caro," came the answer, as the signora placed her cheek to his, "Thy Christmas will be as happy as thou hast made mine."

"You are not old and friendless," smiled Giacomo. "And I—I thought of my own mother. Mother! Oh! mother!" he cried out thinking of his old home and almost seeing his mother waiting for him in the church where was the blessed Lady with the Christmas crown of gold upon her head. And not far away was the spirit of the gentle day that had, unseen, been with him in his pity for the old signora.—Robert C. V. Meyers.

Automobiles.

It is bad practice to run the engine on full throttle for long periods. On the level and downhill give it a rest by advancing the spark and nearly closing the throttle.

When a rundown battery refuses to produce an efficient spark the engine may sometimes be made to fire enough to take the car a few miles by vibrating the trembler by hand.

Always see that the spare parts carried on the car, especially the valves, are of the proper size for the engine, so that there may be no annoying delay if they should be suddenly called into requisition.

Anthony Trollope's First Earnings.

A literary man recalls Anthony Trollope's little gloat over the first fruits of his pen. "I send you a copy of 'The Warden.'" he wrote to Lord Houghton in 1866, "which Mr. Longman assures me is the last of the first edition. There were, I think, only 750 printed, and they have been over ten years in hand. But I regard the book with affection, as I made £9 2s. 6d. by the first year's sales, having previously written and published for ten years without any such golden result. Since then I have improved even upon that." Trollope, of course, "improved upon that" in no uncertain fashion.—Westminster Gazette.

A Natural Query.

"My little dog has fleas!" the woman cried.

"Do give me something that will cure them, please!"

And then the puzzled drug store clerk replied,

"What seems to be the matter with the fleas?"

WEAK KIDNEYS MAKE WEAK BODIES

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of Quincy People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill. Quincy cures are the proof.

Mrs. J. Boyle, 8 Marsh St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can say they are unequaled for curing kidney disorders. They built up my system and in six weeks, freed me from kidney complaint from which I had suffered for a long time."

BRIEFS

Rev. Henry T. Grady of St. Marys church was sub deacon on Wednesday at the mass for Rev. Philip J. Gormley, rector of St. Patricks church at Lynn.

This is the month of society installations and hardly a night passes but what several new boards of officers are installed into office. The city has scores of secret societies and other organizations.

Copies of the large flashlight picture taken of the party that attended the Inauguration day banquet at Young's hotel have been received. Most of those present show up well in the picture.

The mild weather and rain has practically ruined the skating ponds. The ice men are as usual having hard luck, but are in hopes to get some cold weather before the month is out.

Charles Francis Spear, who was born in Quincy in 1863, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital on Tuesday. He was a resident of Hyde Park, a lawyer by profession, and leaves a widow and two daughters.

It is reported that the stock of Mme. H. Sarkin that was destroyed by fire Tuesday night was insured for $1,500 although she carried a much more valuable stock, all of which is ruined. It is expected that the insurance adjusters will be in town today to adjust the insurance on the building and contents.

PICKWICK CLUB.

The 38th anniversary of the Pickwick Club was celebrated Wednesday evening by a dinner at the Parker House, Boston. Mr. Gurney presided as toastmaster. All the members were called upon to tell what the Pickwick club meant to them. Miss Whiton as pianist gave several delightful solos, and Mrs. Tirrell added much to the enjoyment of the evening by vocal selections. Unique charades, illustrating a full course dinner, were taken part in by each one present. The company finally dispersed after singing "Auld lang syne."

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued cases of William C. Eaton for breaking and entering and for non-support at Quincy were heard. The first complaint was placed on file. On the case for non-support he was sentenced to six months in the house of correction.

Peter Carlson was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Hefferman the shoe man is having a smoke sale and offering some good bargains. His stock was not damaged by fire in Tuesday night's fire but his goods were somewhat smoked which does not effect their good wearing qualities.

ASPHYXIATED IN BOSTON.

Word was received at the police station this morning from police headquarters at Boston asking them to look up the son and daughter of Michael Wall, the latter being asphyxiated at his boarding house early this morning.

Investigation by the Quincy police brought out the fact that Wall was a stone cutter, but that he had not resided in Quincy for several years. They were able to locate his son, who resides on Trafford street, whom they notified. The son went to the North Grove street morgue this noon to identify the body.

It is reported that Wall's wife is dead, but that he had a son and two daughters one son and daughter residing in Quincy.

HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATES.

A meeting of the Houghs Neck associates was held Wednesday evening at which the policies to be carried out by the associates during the ensuing year were discussed informally. The officers are going to use every effort to get every resident of the beach to unite with the associates, believing that if they are thus banded together many ofthe things desired in the way of needed improvements may be secured. Before the meeting adjourned a commitee on membership was appointed. This committee will see every resident not now a member of the associates and urge them to become members.

TRAINS DELAYED.

The engine on an outward bound work train broke down at 10.30 this morning, about 100 yards below the Norfolk Downs station. Outward bound passenger trains were delayed about half an hour and many of the Quincy passengers took the electric cars. The engine was repaired sufficiently to be sidetracked and a new engine was sent out from Boston.

QUINCY MAN PRESIDENT.

William M. Marden, court officer of the District court at Quincy, was re-elected president of the Massachusetts Court Officers' association at their annual meeting and banquet this week. In addition to the election there was a discussion on the proposed bill to be presented to the Legislature to extend the vacations of court officers from 14 days to 30 days. The meeting and dinner was held at the cafe Bova, Boston.

WHERE HONOR IS DUE.

"I see," said the man at the corner desk, "that they've got old Brown at last."

"Who's got him?" said the bookkeeper.

"The suffragists. Here's a newspaper notice that proves it. The stork left a girl at his house the other day, and the announcement reads, 'Born to Mrs. and Mr. Brown.' Take notice of that? Mrs. and Mr. That's the suffragists' way of spreading the news."

PRIVATE MEAT TRUST.

Seven-year-old William had become the proud owner of a pet pig, and insisted upon having all the care of it himself. After a few weeks, as the pig did not seem to thrive, his father said to him:

"William, I'm afraid you are not feeding your pig enough. It does not seem to be fattening at all."

"I don't want him to fatten yet," William replied, knowingly. "I'm waiting until he gets to be as long as I want him, then I'll begin to widen him out."

EMPTY TITLES.

William J. Bryan once joked about our American fondness for titles.

"You all know of the colonel," he said, "who got his title by inheritance, having married Col. Brown's widow? But I once met a general who got his title neither by inheritance, nor by service, nor by anything you could mention.

"'General,' I said to him, 'how do you come by this title of yours, anyway?'

"'Why, sir' said he, "I passed my youth in the flour trade, and for 27 years was a general miller.'

"I know another titled man, Judge Greene.

"'Are you, sir,' I once asked him, 'a United States judge or a circuit court judge?'

"'I ain't neither' he replied. I'm a judge of hoss racin'.'"

—"New England climate makes the best apples and the best men," said Dr. Frederick W. Hamilton of Tufts College at the December dinner. "Nowhere in the world can such apples be grown as are grown in New England. And I see in the history of New England a race of men so sturdy that they can cope physically and mentally with the men of any climate on the face of the earth."

RECORD BREAKING WHIST SCORE

In 25 Hands, Progressive Whist, Mark L. Read, Jr., Won 48 and Lost 6

Which Gave Him a Percentage of Over 88

As has been previously stated, scores at the Granite City club whist tournaments this season have been unusually high, but that made by Mark L. Read, Jr., Wednesday evening reached the high mark, his score of 88.88 percent being the highest ever made in the club rooms. In the twenty-five hands played he lost but four times. On three of these his losses were one point each, and the other time three points, making his total losses but six points. His total points won were 48.

The second high score was made by T. G. Smith with 72 per cent, while James A. Claflin was a good third with 71 per cent. There were quite a few others who scored over 60 per cent and of course there was the usual number who only got small scores. Ten tables were in play. Tom Smith served a dutch lunch after the tournament.

Mr. Read's score by hands was as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Hand 1	2	0
Hand 2	0	1
Hand 3	3	0
Hand 4	1	0
Hand 5	5	0
Hand 6	1	0
Hand 7	2	0

Hand 9	3	0
Hand 10	4	0
Hand 11	2	0
Hand 12	1	0
Hand 13	3	0

Hand 21	2	0
Hand 22	2	0
Hand 23	2	0
Hand 24	3	0
Hand 25	0	3
	48	6

Mr. Read's score up to the last hand was 48 points won and 3 lost, or 95 plus per cent. His loss of three points on the last hand however reduced his per cent by 7.

LOCAL SPORTS.

Dr. W. G. Kendall was as usual reelected captain at the thirty-third annual meeting of the Boston Bicycle Club this week. The Boston club is the oldest cycling organization in the world and instituted the sport in this country in 1877.

Weymouth High was defeated at basket ball on Wednesday by Abington High 27 to 15.

The Dorchester Yacht club held its annual meeting Wednesday evening and elected Hjalmar Lundberg as commodore.

Charles B. Wheelock is the new commodore of the Corinthian Yacht club. He is the owner of the Amoret.

THREATENED TO BLOW UP.

Littleman made up his mind that he was not going to be ruled any longer by his wife. So when he went home at noon he called out imperiously—"Mrs. Littleman!"

Mrs. Littleman came out of the kitchen with a dishcloth tied around her head and a rolling-pin in her hand

"Well, Sir," she said, "what will you have?"

Littleman staggered but braced up. "Jane, I want you to understand"—and he tapped his breast dramatically—"I am the engineer of this establishment."

"Oh, you are, are you? Well, William, I want you to understand that I," and she looked dangerous, "I am the boiler that will blow up and throw the engineer over into the next county. Do you hear the steam escaping, William?"

William heard it, and he meekly inquired if there was any assistance he could render in the housework.—Monthly.

—It is coming more and more to be recognized that business training and understanding are absolutely essential to the proper administration of public affairs.

CASEY'S PICTURE.

Casey decided to go into business, so he bought out a small livery stable and had a painter make a sign for him showing him astride a mule. He had this sign placed in front of the stable and was quite proud of it. His friend Finnigan happened along and stood gazing at the sign.

"That's a good picture of me, ain't it?" asked Casey:

"Sure it looks something like you," said Finnigan, "but who the devil is the man on your back"—National Monthly.

BIRDS HATCHED IN PAIRS.

New Zealand Is Making Efforts to Obtain Specimens of the Huia.

The New Zealand government is making final efforts to obtain living specimens of the huia, one of the many unique features of those unique islands. The birds are becoming extinct because of the fact that they can live only in pairs and because of the desire of the Maoris to use huia feathers as ornaments.

The huia sets a good example to humankind, for the birds, forced to pair off by nature, live in peace and harmony and divide their work exactly as nature intended they should. The male has a short, strong bill, while the female has a slender, long, curved beak. The man bird of the family uses his bill to tear the bark from dead trees, while the good wife bird extracts the grubs.

The female could not tear the bark loose with her slender bill, while the male could not stick his short, stout bill into a hole after a reluctant grub

MALE AND FEMALE HUIA.

By working together the birds easily gain sustenance, and observers say that the female, who might easily retain a larger share of the morsels she picks from holes, always divides evenly, and there are never causes of complaint. When one of the birds dies or is killed its mate dies of starvation.

The huia is jet black with a white band at the end of its tail feathers.

Poe's Short Stories.

There are in the best of Poe's brief tales a constructive skill, a command of design and a gift of decoration rare in any literature and almost unknown in English, which is ever unduly negligent of form. And no one need wonder that Poe's short stories wandered swiftly out of our languages into French and Italian and Spanish, into German and Scandinavian and Bohemian, into strange tongues where no other American author, except Fenimore Cooper, had ever before penetrated. His weird psychologic studies have influenced later writers as unlike as Maupassant and Richepin, Fitzjames, O'Brien, Robert Louis Stevenson and Rudyard Kipling. His tales of a mystery solved at last by observation and deduction have been imitated by Dumas and Sardou, by Gaboriau and Boisgobey, by Wilkie Collins and Conan Doyle. And Sherlock Holmes, the only fictitious character to win international recognition in the final years of the nineteenth century, is the reincarnation of a figure first projected by Poe.—Brander Matthews in Century.

Making a Cake With the Bible.

The following unique recipe for Scripture cake is copied from an old English cookbook. For the ingredients and directions for making the cake you must refer to the Bible, in the chapters and verses given herewith. It may be added that by carefully following the directions you will be able to make a most delicious cake—the very best thing for a Sunday afternoon tea:

Four and a half cups of I Kings iv, 22; half pound Judges v, 25; two cups Jeremiah vi, 20; two cups Nahum iii, 12; two cups I Samuel xxx, 12; two cups Numbers xvii, 8; two teaspoonfuls I Samuel xiv, 25; to taste, II Chronicles ix, 9; six Jeremiah xvii, 11; one and a half cups Judges iv, 19; two teaspoonfuls Amos iv, 5; one pinch Leviticus ii, 13; directions, Proverbs xxiii, 14; bake one and a half to two hours. Baking powder may be used instead of yeast or leaven, as it is termed in the Bible.

The Handkerchief Came From Italy.

A writer in a French review points out that the handkerchief does not come to us from China, as has been generally believed, but from Italy. It is only 300 years ago that the handkerchief of a Venetian lady was considered a great curiosity. The handkerchief crossed the Alps and was received with great favor at the court of France. Handkerchiefs were then made of cambric or lawn and bordered with Venetian or Alencon lace. Under Henry III. of France the sachet was introduced. The handkerchief was taken into Germany a little later and was known as the "fazelletin," after its Italian name. Only persons of quality used it, and an edict in 1595 was published at Dresden interdicting the use of the handkerchief among the trading classes.—London Globe.

Fore River Company May Build Big Battleship

WOULD SAVE $1,700,000

Says Secretary Meyer If Battleship New York Was Built at Private Yard

Recommends That It Be So Constructed

A Washington special to the Boston Journal has good news for Quincy. It reads:

The recommendation of Secretary of the Navy Meyer on Thursday before the House committee on naval affairs that a private ship yard be allowed to construct the new battleship New York may result in the Fore River yard getting the big contract.

The secretary said if the battleship is constructed by the New York Navy Yard it will cost the government $1,700,000 more than it could be built in a private yard. He said he was favorable to the private yard contract on that account and the representatives of the Fore River Company here as well as those of other private yards believe Congress will adopt the recommendations.

TWO PLAYS AT WOLLASTON

"A Case of Suspension" and "Who Is Who"

Before a large audience in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry "A case of suspension" and "Who is who" were successfully presented by the Wollaston Dramatic club for the benefit of the Young People's Religious Union on Thursday evening.

"A case of suspension," a comedy of boarding school life, opens with a scene in one of the dormitories where the young ladies are secretly planning a spread to which are to be invited young men from a neighboring college. The faculty getting wind of it, Professor Edgerton has himself hoisted up to the window in a basket, the means of ingress used by the students. When half way up the deception is discovered and the professor is left hanging in mid air until he promises to keep the spread a secret. He is then pulled up and forced to join in the festivities, much to his annoyance.

Kathleen, the maid, and Jonas, the Seminary "man," assist the girls. Just as the merriment is at its height, in walks Miss Judkins of the faculty, much to the chagrin of every one in general and the professor in particular. She is finally cajoled by all to overlook the jollities for once and the evening ends in a round of merriment.

Taking the place of Miss Theodora A. Luard who through sickness was unable to participate, Miss N. E. Louden covered herself with laurels. She adapted herself to the part of the Celtic maid, Kathleen with a naturalness and finish truly professional.

Miss Ella Packard as Miss Ophelia Judkins of the faculty upheld the dignity of her office, while Willard E. Keyes, in his eccentric part of Professor Edgerton was simply immense. The young ladies and undergraduates played well while Leon D. Browne as Jonas a typical "hired man" played the part to perfection.

MUST SERVE SENTENCE.

Inspector Goodhue went to Boston early this morning and brought to Quincy, Clarence Blackstone, who had been arrested Thursday evening at 1144 Washington street by the Boston police for Quincy officers.

Blackstone was arraigned in court last September on the charge of larceny of $40 from Peter J. Williams. At the time of the hearing Blackstone was found guilty and sentenced to three months in the house of correction. At that time the sentence was suspended that Blackstone might make restitution at so much per week, the understanding being that if restitution was made that the case would be placed on file.

Instead of doing as ordered, Blackstone immediately left town and has not been seen since. A default warrant was issued for his arrest. Inspector Goodhue traced him to Cambridge, then to Providence, then back to Cambridge, where all t race of him was lost for a time until he was located at 1144 Washington street, Boston, where he was arrested Thursday night. He was brought to Quincy and his sentencee of three months in the house of correction was affirmed.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Dr. Wiley says the earth is cooling off. It has been cooling considerably in these parts recently.

Some men of course will not believe what they read about the all night subway cars without trying them.

Cleveland has a rooster that was hatched from a frozen egg minus its voice. Of course, it left that in cold storage.

The surprising thing is that a man of Dr. Cook's marvelous imagination should have found it necessary to leave Brooklyn in order to discover the North Pole.

The Harvard Crimson says it is absurd to ring the college bell at 7 in the morning because "many students find no occasion to rise so early." Yes, but how are the others to know when to go to bed.

If the bill for a new bridge over the Neponset river between Quincy and Boston called for an additional bridge either east or west of the present Hancock street bridge it might meet with more favor. The proposed boulevard from Columbia road near Calf Pasture at Crescent Avenue could be run on the ocean side of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. all the way and intersect the Quincy Bay Shore parkway in Quincy near the junction of Squantum street. This would give Boston people a popular shore ride into the country. Another route would be: Extend the Quincy Bay Shore parkway in Quincy over the railroad at Atlantic street, also across Hancock street, crossing the Neponset river into Boston near Sagamore creek. This route could be extended both to Columbia road boulevard at Calf Pasture, or to Talbot avenue, Franklin Field, and the parkway system of Boston, connection very much to be desired for pleasure riding.

The opening January 3 of one postal savings bank in each state begins the experiment of tempting money out of stockings and knot holes into the government strong box.

All bankers look alike to many immigrant newcomers, like the more ignorant Poles and Hungarians. If one of them gambles with the depositor's money, they all do. That was often good conservative business logic where they came from. There the only safe bank was apt to be a hole in the cellar bottom.

The green bank clerk feels like setting the dog on these tramp like creatures. But on $1 a week for a living, these are just the ones to have a fat and greasy roll. At home in trunks and mattresses, it is exposed to a thousand times the risks of the bank deposit.

Any of our bank men have had comical experiences dealing with these fellows.

"Russia government no get my name will he?" was the anxious query put to an official the other day by a former citizen of the Muscovite empire, who feared to sign his own name. It took all the way from oratory to brass tacks punctuated with far reaching gestures, to persuade the doubter that our bank men are not emissaries of the Czar spying on his truants.

No matter how suspicious of banks, these men trust the stability of government. They have seen their own autocracy minding fire, sword, and dynamite no more than a flea bite. Our government looks both permanent and friendly to them. They will trust it with money they fear to place elsewhere.

Many simple hearted native people also won't trust the banks, but they would put hoarded money in the hands of the government. In their shallow way, they argue that the institutions with the stateliest pillared fronts, the glossiest tile pavements, the shiniest brass rails, go under as quickly as the country bank over the grocery store.

Whether the postmaster's new job involves financial danger, time will tell. Surely it must turn a vast stagnant hoard into the stream of working capital.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The latest evidence of the new spirit of progress that has taken possession of the people of St. John, N. B., is found in an agitation for the adoption of the commission plan of city government. At present the city is governed by a mayor and seventeen aldermen. Thirteen of the aldermen are elected by the ward system and four are elected at large. The Aldermen receive $200 yearly and the mayor $1,600. The system has outgrown its usefulness and there is now a general determination to bring about a change. The question was taken up by the advertising committee of the Board of Trade, which entered into correspondence with more than sixty cities in the United States having the commission plan of government, and received from these a mass of valuable information. This was carefully studied and the committee submitted a report to the council of the board, urging that steps be taken to have a vote of the people on the adoption of the Commission plan in St. John. The council of the board endorsed the report and sent it to the city council urging that authority be secured from the legislature to take a plebiscite at the time of the next civic elections in April. The city council this week agreed to ask for power to take the plebiscite. Several other schemes have been suggested including one for a board of control and another for a city council of smaller membership, but public opinion very strongly favours the commission plan. At all events there will be a general shaking up, and the citizens are giving more attention to the question of civic government in these opening days of 1911 then they have ever given in the past. It is essentially a business men's movement, aimed at providing a system which will facilitate the development of industry and growth of population.

The passage of the workingman's compensation act in its present form seems a rather dubious proposition. It certainly looks as though the measure, as now framed, would make it include not only the employe of a gainful business, but also the domestic servant and the driver of a hired cab. Those familiar with the working of the British act, on which the proposed Massachusetts act is modeled know that it is extremely hazardous for any one in England to hire the services of a private cabman, one who is not a cab company employe, simply because, if the horse of such a man falls down and becomes injured during the course of the temporary agency, even though without the slightest fault of the patron that patron becomes the insurer of the cabman from any loss. The exception to this would be solely in the case where the cabman was grossly guilty on his part—as by being intoxicated for example. For an "unavoidable accident" the passenger would have to bear the whole cost regardless of the question of negligence. If a serving-maid, without any negligence of the householder and being herself sober at the time suffers any injury in her employment, the householder is liable. The small farmer would stand in the same relation. And in no one of these cases is the liability so placed that it can be distributed adequately. Abstractly considered, there is no reason why this liability should not exist. Concretely, it is doubtful that the time is ripe yet to extend it so far. The idea of the compensation act seems right. Whether or not the exact form in which the proposed legislation is couched is wise and well adapted to the present state of our economy is doubtful.—Framingham News.

Negotiations are renewed between Secretary Knox and Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain, looking to a broader arbitration treaty, their success depends on whether the senate is more favorable to arbitration than it was in 1897 when the Olney-Pauncefote treaty was turned down.

Many people who would be willing to pay any money that an arbitration court would award, object to the possible chance that such a court might make a decision involving loss of territory or honor.

As far as territory loss is concerned, it should be easy to incorporate in a treaty the provision that both governments agree not to question the rights of either party in any territory now held by either in the continent of North America.

As far as honor goes, the nation ought to be governed by the same principles that would govern an individual.

The man who upon losing a suit in court, should load up with a gun and proceed to deposit some cold lead in the person of his successful antagonist, in order to protect his honor, would be called a fool. Even if he were assured that his crime would not be detected, the injury wrought to human society by such practices would be infinitely greater than the harm occasionally done by unjust court decisions.

The practical effect resulting from unjust decisions in our courts, is to make sensible people inclined to settle cases out of court. The result would be the same in national affairs.

War is the most important single cause of high cost of living. We are now paying a tremendous pension bill for past scrimmages, and a prospective war cost as measured in armies navies and fortifications.

The previous difficulty in getting broad arbitration treaties has probably been not so much any peril to Uncle Sam's honor, as the dislike of revered senators to part with any of their treaty-making powers.

The new reform rules are being used to tie up Congress . The chief purpose of the rules anyway is to divert congress' attention so that they shall forget there's business to be done.—Beverly Times.

WILL CONTRACT FOR FLEET.

A Washington dispatch to a Boston paper says: Bernard N. Baker of Baltimore, former president of the Atlantic Transport line of transatlantic steamers, is in Washington, and said Tuesday that if Congress enacts the Gallinger ship subsidy bill he will put a line of steamers from Boston to Rio Janeiro, Brazil. He says he has already secured the capital for a $10,000,000 steamship line and is prepared to award the contracts for a fleet of a dozen 6000-ton stamships to engage in the South American trade.

Lines of steamers, under the Baker plan, will be operated from Boston, New York, Baltimore and Norfolk to the east coast of South America, that from Boston touching at Charleston, S. C., and extending as far south as the Brazilian capital.

DIV. 5 INSTALLATION.

James F. Burke, representing the county president, assisted by Past President P. J. Ferguson of Division 5, and Past President Dennis J. Creedon of Division 22, installed the officers of Division 5, A. O. H., at Hibernian hall Wednesday evening. Delegations were present from all the Quincy divisions as well as all of the ladies auxiliaries. After the installation there was a banquet, followed by addresses by Mayor Shea, James F. Burke, Richard Barry, Miss Catherine Barry, Patrick J. Ferguson and Miss Myra Shea, county president of the ladies auxiliary. There were also songs by Denis S. Sweeney, Thomas Murray, Miss Ethel Lovell, and Daniel Scully and whistling solos by Matthew Fay.

WALLS IDENTIFIED.

The body of Michael J. Walls, formerly of Quincy, who was asphyxiated in a lodging house in Boston on Thursday was identified during the day by his brother-in-law, Robert Robertson of Quincy. Mr. Walls, who of late years has been living in Hardwick, Vt., was in Quincy on Wednesday afternoon and planned to leave for Vermont Thursday morning. He stopped at a lodging house at 51 Beach street that night. Thursday morning the landlady smelled escaping gas which was traced to the room of Walls. He was found unconscious and was removed to the Relief station where he died. He was about 44 years of age.

TWO GODS.

Sam Walter Foss.

A boy was born 'mid little things,
Between a little world and sky,
And dreamed not of the cosmic rings
Round which the circling planets fly.

He lived in little works and thoughts,
Where little ventures grow and plod,
And paced and ploughed his little plots,
And prayed unto his little God.

But, as the mighty system grew,
His faith grew faint with many scars;
The cosmos widened in his view,
But God was lost among his stars.

* * *

Another boy in lowly days,
As he, to little things was born,
But gathered lore in woodland ways,
And from the glory of the morn.

As wider skies broke on his view,
God greatened in his growing mind;
Each year he dreamed his God anew,
And left his older God behind.

He saw the boundless scheme dilate,
In star and blossom, sky and cloud;
And, as the universe grew great,
He dreamed for it a greater God.

—The fact that money gives one a distorted vision is well shown by the act of one "Jim" Scott, late of Detroit, in willing half a million dollars for a memorial fountain with a life-size statue of himself surmounting the memorial. Mr. "Jim" Scott's chief claim on fame was that he was rich, and yet he thought himself big enough to be set before the gaze of the public as long as bronze will last.—Barre Times.

Woman's World

Remarkable Book by Paris Sewing Woman.

MARGUERITE AUDOUX.

Marguerite Audoux, a Parisian sewing woman, has recently received the prize of $1,000 offered by La Vie Heureuse for the best book published in France during the year. The book, "Marie Claire," is for the most part autobiographical. It consists of incidents in the life of Mlle. Audoux, who did not begin writing until a few years ago, when she was obliged to give up sewing on account of threatened blindness. Mlle. Audoux confesses to little knowledge of French writers, but the novels of Charles Dickens and Charles Reade in their French translations were her favorite reading. She says that these novels and the Bible constituted her sole literary training. The book in France has already gone into its tenth edition and is soon to be translated into English.

Octave Mirbeau, a noted French critic, says: "Artistically it is the equal of any work by the great authors of France. Its exquisite charm lies in its fine simplicity and absolute sincerity."

Says Wife Should Aid In Business.

Lady Hope thinks a woman who helps her husband with his business is the ideal helpmeet. "A man's two ambitions," says she, "are his home and his career. His home is often the making of his career, if he has a tactful, restful wife of a cheerful and happy disposition. I cannot help thinking the ideal woman should be true to the first pattern. She must be a helpmeet to the man. 'It is not good for man to live alone' were the initiatory words pronounced on her introduction to this beautiful world. Today, though thousands of years have passed by since then, the same motto holds good, and men who have the truest views of life and its responsibilities will be found to concur in it. Woman finds her greatest rewards in life by maintaining her rightful position—that is, by being a good mother, a good daughter and a good sister and, above all, a good wife. Could any one estimate her influence too highly if she fills these positions well?"

If You'd Have a Handsome Gown.

It is said that the empire will be the coming style for street costumes this spring; but, be this as it may, it is certainly the accepted mode for winter evening frocks.

PEARY CLAIM APPROVED

Action of Committee Must Be Passed Upon by the Senate

Washington, Jan. 13.—Captain Peary, the Arctic explorer, was formally approved in his claim for congressional recognition at the hands of a sub-committee of the house committee on naval affairs.

The sub-committee, at an executive meeting from which the two principal opponents of Captain Peary, Messrs. Roberts and Macon, were absent, adopted a favorable report to the full committee on the Bates bill, which extends the thanks of congress to Peary and retires him with the rank of a rear admiral in the engineer corps of the navy.

The action, if approved by the house full comittee and agreed to by the senate, willl place him immediately on the retired list, with about the same pay—$6000—as he is receiving as a captain on the active list.

The report probably will arouse a lively discussion when it reaches the house.

PROTEST FROM JAPAN

Proposed California Laws a Subject of Deep Concern

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 13.—Japan's first official protest against proposed anti-Japanese legislation in the states comes in the form of a letter from Consul General Nagai at San Francisco to Senator Wright, chairman of the senate committee on federal relations.

"I think the people of this state hardly realize the deep concern felt in Japan on this subject," says the consul general. "Discrimination at this time would be particularly surprising to the Japanese people, in view of the efforts which have been made during the last two years to cultivate the good will of the American people and to prove to them the sincerity of Japanese good will.

"The tendency of the laboring classes to return to Japan is not diminishing," says Consul Nagai. He adds that Japanese emigration is rigidly restricted.

WOOD'S WAR "SCARE" BRINGS $1,000,000

Addition For Artillery In Army Appropriation Measure

Washington, Jan. 13.—General Wood's "scare," launched several weeks ago, impressed the house committee on military affairs sufficiently to impel that committee to increase its appropriation for the field and coast artillery branch of the army to the extent of $1,000,000.

This increase was carried in the army appropriation bill, which was reported to the house with a total appropriation of $92,812,031, which is $344,045 less than was asked for by Secretary Dickinson.

Aside from the additional funds authorized for the field and coast artillery, the bill is especially notable because of the absence of an appropriation for aeroplanes.

While the committee makes its increased appropriation for the field and coast artillery under the guise of adding to the equipment of the organized militia throughout the United States, the language of the bill is such that the equipment is really turned over to the militia for practice purposes, to be held in reserve for the regular army.

CHICAGO'S FIFTIETH BOMB

Hardware Store Wrecked and Occupants of Flats Shaken Up

Chicago, Jan. 13.—A dynamite bomb, the fiftieth in a series that has been attributed variously to gambling or labor influences, was exploded in the rear of a hardware store owned by Fred Werdell.

The store was wrecked and the occupants of four flats above were jarred. Several persons were thrown from their beds. Every window in the building was broken.

Werdell declares he knows no reason why the bomb had been directed at his store, and the police are unable to find any clue to the perpetrators.

LEAVES $50,000,000

Comparatively Unknown German Accumulated a Vast Fortune

Berlin, Jan. 13.—Comparatively unknown outside of his immediate neighborhood, Commercial Councillor Puricelli of Bingen-on-the-Rhine leaves a fortune of $50,000,000, mostly in vast vineyards and forests.

The bulk of the fortune will be inherited by a distant relative, Baron von Schorlemen, who is now Prussian minister of agriculture and is said to be a favorite with the kaiser for the imperial chancellorship in the future.

Chicago Woman Wins Waltz Prize

Berlin, Jan. 13.—Miss Fay Foster, a young Chicago woman, won the second prize of $500 in the international waltz composition contest, organized by a Berlin illustrated weekly.

Plague Raging In Manchuria

Pekin, Jan. 13.—Bubonic plague in Manchuria is spreading rapidly. Hundreds of persons are reported dying every day and the number of fatalities is increasing.

Recent Inventions.

A Pennsylvania man has patented a hammer the head of which folds into the handle for convenience in carrying.

A Frenchman has patented a process for making cigar boxes of paper pulp, treated with cedar oil or a chemical equivalent, for the sake of appearance.

A machine designed to prevent the alteration of checks or the forging of signatures to negotiable paper has been patented by a convict in a California prison.

The Clever Shoe Clerk.

At the cost of considerable time and labor one high grade shoe house is bound to protect its goods. On a rainy day a woman wearing wet shoes went in to buy rubbers. The clerk measured the width and length of her shoes, removed them and brought a new pair of the same size to try on. Visions of a depleted pocketbook caused her to exclaim, "But I don't want new shoes, only rubbers!"

"I understand," said the clerk. "I am only slipping these shoes on to fit the rubbers over. It soils the inside of a rubber to slip it on over a wet shoe. Then if it doesn't fit and the customer doesn't take it it is spoiled for the next customer."

"And the outcome of that experience was," said the woman, "that I bought the shoes as well as the rubbers and had them sent home C. O. D. Maybe that was what he was working for all the time."—New York Sun.

Oddest of Queer Fishes.

A queer fish that does not swim is the "sargasso fish," known to sailors as the "frogfish." It lives in that vast mass of floating gulfweed called the Sargasso sea, in mid-Atlantic.

Its pectoral fins are so modified and developed as to resemble arms, and it uses them for clinging to the weed. Very gaudily colored, it changes its hues to match the aquatic vegetation by which it is surrounded, and when the latter decays and turns brown it assumes a corresponding shade.

The fish lays its eggs in a jelly-like mass, which, absorbing a great quantity of water, becomes three times as big as the mother fish herself, assuming the form of a narrow raft three or four feet long and two to four inches wide.—New York World.

The Executive Calf.

The White House calf is now no more.
The veally blat is stilled.

35 TO 40 NEW STEAMSHIPS

Would Be Required If Gallinger Bill Passed

In the National Senate on Wednesday Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire spoke in favor of his ocean mail bill as follows:

"It is probable that if this bill is passed there will eventually be established three lines from our Atlantic coast to the east coast of South America—to Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina—one or more of these lines touching, as the bill requires, at least one port south of Cape Charles. It is also probable that there will be established one line from the Gulf coast to the east coast of South America, and one line from the Gulf coast through the Panama Canal to the west coast of South America, Chile and Peru, and one or two lines from the Pacific coast to Panama and South America.

"It is likely that there will also be established, not under the proposed bill, but indirectly as a consequence of it and of the general stimulus given by it to shipbuilding and navigation, a short line under the present rate of compensation from a Gulf port to Colon, a line from the Atlantic coast to Colon and two miles from the Pacific coast to Panama.

"To equip these new lines would require from thirty-five to forty steamships of from sixteen to twenty knots, ranging in size from 8000 to 12,000 gross tons, and costing each from $1,400,000 to $2,000,000. Maritime authorities say that no steamships like those requisite for such a service now exist disengaged in the United States, and that new ships must be built before the lines can be established. This work would take two or three years.

"Those new steamships would come under the general provisions of the law of 1891. They would have to be built on designs approved by the Navy Department with reference to prompt and economical conversion into auxiliary cruisers in time of war. They would have to be capable of carying batteries of high-power rifled cannon, and in case of need would have to be turned over to the Government. All of their officers, and in the first two years of a contract at least one-fourth, in the next three years at least one-third, and thereafter at least one-half of their men must be American citizens.

The ships must carry a certain number of American boys to be trained in seamanship. The wisdom and practicability of these requirements were proved in the Spanish War, when our entire fleet of mail steamships operating under the law of 1891 on the line to Europe and the lines to the West Indies and the Gulf of Mexico was taken over by the Government and found ready for immediate and efficient service. Unfortunately those auxiliary naval steamships were too few. The proposed bill aims to increase their number to a fleet more nearly equal to the needs of the United States.

"The bill is in no wise a 'subsidy' bill, but simply provides for increased mail pay for lines of steamships to the leading countries of South America, where the possibilities of trade conditions are such as to warrant a reasonable expenditure in the establishment of steamship lines under the American flag."

Senator Hale, who followed Senator Gallinger, was quite as enthusiastic in support of the bill. "The picture drawn by the senator from New Hampshire," he said, "is one to fire the imagination. The condition of our South American trade is a problem which has adways confronted the Senate. The Oriental trade is relatively unimportant compared to it. I hope that the Senate will give this question its immediate attention. We ought to pass the bill at least by the middle of next week."

DOLL CONTEST.

A very large dancing party was held in the hall of the St. John's school Thursday evening by the ladies who are to have charge of the Ward Three table at the coming fair. During the evening it was announced that Mrs. George Ferguson had given the committee a large and handsome doll. Mrs. Ferguson wrote to Mrs. Taft, wife of President Taft, requesting her to name the doll. A very nice letter of reply has been received from Mrs. Taft, giving a name for the doll, which is sealed in a separate envelope. There it will remain until the night the doll is disposed of, when the envelope will be opened and the doll awarded to the party who has guessed the correct name.

TWO PLAYS AT WOLLASTON

serve more than passing notice. In the song specialty "The girl with the brogue," with Miss Dorothy Packard as principal, and a chorus of college with her winsome and winning manmer.

men and seminary girls, the well executed dancing and appropriate "business" brought forth hearty applause. Miss Packard made a bonny colleen

Miss Elsie Moulton with the song "In Germany" done in the costume of a German "fraulein," deserved the hearty encores she received.

The cast follows:

Dorothy, college girl Elsie Moulton
Alice, college girl Dorothy Packard
Mildred, college girl Grace A. Parker
Harold, undergraduate John Norrie
Tom, undergraduate, Ernest Arnold
Jack, undergraduate Chas. Thompson
Miss Ophelia Judkins, of faculty Ella Packard
Professor Emilius Edgerton, of faculty Willard E. Keyes
Kathleen, a Celtic maiden Nellie E. Louden
Jonas, the "man" Leon D. Browne

During the intermission piano solos by William E. Weston and whistling solos by Miss Grace A. L. Parker found favor with the audience. The dances were accompanied by Miss Eva C. Hungerford.

The farce "Who is who" was one of high ridiculousness from start to finish. Bloomfield Brambleton a country gentleman is awaiting the arrival of a model young bachelor on whom he intends bestowing the hand of his daughter Cicely. A new valet is also expected. By error one is mistaken for the other upon their arrival.

Cicely the daughter is dressed for attending her plants, while it is Matilda Jane's "day out." As a result one is mistaken for the other by the new arrivals. Meanwhile the valet is treated to all the courtesies of an honored guest while the bachelor is ordered to black the masters boots.

Through a series of confessions of attachment of the bachelor for the supposed housemaid, the valet for the supposed daughter, the housemaid for the supposed bachelor, confusion reigns supreme. At last light dawns upon all, and the scene closes with all finding out "Who is who," and which is which.

As Simonides Swanhopper, the model young bachelor, Ernest W. Arnold was exceedingly good. Willard W. Keyes took the part of Lawrence Lavender, a valet from Mayfair, with an eccentricity that was highly amusing.

An excellent example of the old country gentleman with a certain dignity, but at times highly excitable, was the part of Bloomfield Brambleton, of Brambleton hall, taken by John Norrie.

Cicely, Brambleton's daughter was played by Louise W. Fleming with a naivete intensely refreshing. As Matilda Jane, "a superior 'ousemaid" Ella Packard shone and her "h'unmistakeable haffection" for the supposed young bachelor with "those whiskers" was highly amusing.

The entire farce was replete with funny mistakes and the most laughable situations were ever coming up. As a whole the two plays were given with no small success as the applause of the audience testified.

Y. M. C. A. MEET.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. felt the absence of McArdle in the four cornered meet at Newton on Thursday evening. Newton won the meet with 18 points, Somerville was second with 17, and Quincy and Brockton were tied at 5 points. With McArdle's ability in the high jump and the three broad jumps put to use, the local association would undoubtedly have scored at least 13 points. Claflin with a put of 43 feet won the 12 lb. shot and was the only man who scored for Quincy.

FITZGERALD COMING.

Mayor Shea has received definite word from Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston that he will attend the annual banquet of the Ward Four Improvement association which is to be held Thursday evening, Jan. 26.

At the wedding anniversary of a railroad magnate one of the guests, noticing a somewhat lonely-looking and rather shabbily attired man in one corner of the parlor, walked over and sat down near him.

"I was introduced to you," he said, "but I did not catch your name."

'My name," replied the other, 'is Swaddleford."

"Oh' Then you are a relative of our host."

"Yes," rejoined the poor relation with a grin, "I am his cousin, five hundred thousand dollars removed."

SLIGHT FIRE SOUTH QUINCY

Clothing Near Kitchen Stove Take Fire

The alarm from Box 37 at 9.45 this morning was for a slight fire in the house at 89 Franklin street, known as the Havahan property, and occupied by Joseph Marini. The fire was caused by some clothing taking fire which had been placed too near the kitchen stove. The fire worked behind the walls but was quickly extinguished by a chemical stream. The loss will not exceed $10.

MILTON

The crew at the East Milton hose house were kept busy all day Wednesday responding to alarms for grass fires. At about 8 o'clock in the morning a still alarm at box 67, and a telephone call for the vicinity of box 71, called the firemen out for fires set by sparks from a locomotive. One was near Pierce street and the other back of Mr. Carleton's on Squantum street. At 11.45 a telephone call came in for a grass fire off Churchill's lane back of Charles Maxwell's house. At 3.15 in the afternoon an alarm from box 73 called them out again for a grass fire on Granite avenue back of Mr. Shield's house, and a still alarm from box 71 was for a fire at the corner of Squantum street and Granite avenue. Both were set by the same locomotive.

Milton High school defeated Rockland High in the second league game last Saturday by a score of 25 to 13.

The hockey game with Melrose High scheduled for Wednesday was postponed by Milton High on account of the lack of ice. The game will be played this afternoon.

The Silent Five defeated Malden Y. M. C. A., but the Lynn Y. M. C. A. defeated the Milton Five 25 to 12, and the Midgets went down in defeat to a Plymouth team 22 to 7.

Wendell A. Harvey of Braintree spoke at the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting of the East Milton Baptist church Sunday evening.

The derrick has been removed from McGrath's granite works and taken to Bishop brothers quarry in Quincy.

The Cubs, a baseball club of High school boys was reorganized this week with the following officers: President—George Bearce; Vice President, Hugh Robertson; Secretary Roy Harvey; Treasurer George O'Hearn; Captain James Parks.

Milton High was defeated by Reading High Thursday evening 31 to 11, on the floor of the Reading High school. Carder was the best man for Milton.

Rehearsals for the carnival of the East Congregational church are going on steadily.

W. E. Beers made a clean sweep at the pet stock and pigeon show in Boston. With seven entries he obtained six firsts, one second, two specials and a silver cup. At Baltimore his chances were spoiled by the poor condition of the birds after their long journey. Even so, he got three seconds and a third.

Milton High will play Dorchester High at hockey Saturday afternoon.

Milton Academy opens its hockey season in a game with Cambridge Latin Saturday afternoon in Milton.

Interest in politics is already aroused and possible candidates for the different offices are being talked over. The election this year will include three selectmen, two auditors, town clerk, treasurer, two members of school committee, tax collectors, assessors, one member of the Board of Health, one park commisioner, three trustees of the public library, one member of trustees on cemeteries, one sewer commissioner, one water commissioner, two overseers of poor, and twelve constables. There will probably be a contest for the three selectmen, since it is rumored that seven candidates have already been mentioned. Three names have been spoken of for the two assessors positions. The East Milton Improvement association are considering candidates for different positions, although definite has been done as yet.

The Sophomore-Freshman reception at High school will probably be held on Feb. 3. A play is under rehearsal by members of the entertaining class to be given at the time of the reception.

"Bill" Clark has not recovered his dog yet although a painstaking search has been made. The dog was a valuable Irish terrier very much beloved by his master and the loss is considered a great one.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Rev. Willard E. Waterbury at Calvary Baptist

The special services which opened Wednesday evening in the Calvary Baptist church will be continued through this week and next, ending Sunday evening, January 22. Rev. Willard E. Waterbury of Boston is conducting these services with the assistance of the pastor, Rev. R. J. Davis. The opening services have been largely attended, and Mr. Waterbury has delivered powerful sermons on themes taken from a series entitled, "Notable Night in History." The themes used on Wednesday and Thursday were "The night vision of a runaway" and "The all night struggle with an unknown antagonist." "Jacob's vision and the revelation of God's prseence was the subject of the first, and his night of wrestling with temptation of the second, the main thought being God's knowledge of all our thoughts and actions, and his readiness to help.

The subject for this evening's address will be "The birthnight of a nation."

Mr. Waterbury is an eloquent and powerful preacher and one whose personality is sure to appeal to an audience. Meetings will be held every evening except Saturday, on week days at 7.30, and on Sunday at 7 o'clock. The Sunday evening service will be especially good. Mr. Waterbury will preach on the subject, "A night of revelry and doom." Miss Blanche Tilton of Boston, a well known soloist, will sing.

BOYS HEAR OF RACE.

The Wollaston Extension club met in the vestry of the Wollaston Baptist church Thursday evening to hear a very interesting talk by Edward J. Balch of Harvard, a member of the famous four-oar crew which defeated Yale last year. The attendance was the largest of the year, and Mr. Balch held the attention of the boys for nearly an hour telling about training and the race.

JOLLY SIXTEEN.

The Jolly Sixteen were entertained on Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Howe's of Cottage avenue, the occasion being the eighteenth anniversary of their wedding. Cards were enjoyed for one hour, the tokens being won by Mrs. Claflin, Mr. Smith, Mr. Merritt and Mrs. Johnson. A bountiful collation was then served. The host and hostess were assisted by their charming daughter, Irene. A social hour following, and at the close of this pleasant evening the club president in behalf of the members, presented the couple a box of silverwear, as a slight token of the esteem in which this couple are held by the Jolly Sixteen. Just as the hour of midnight sounded they separated, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Howes a great many more such happy gatherings.

Sixteen hundred women are working as laborers on the construction of the Debulzevo Schterovka extension railway, Odessa.

An electric trolley trip from New York to Milwaukee was recently accomplished by a curious traveler. The distance covered was 1,986 miles at a total cost of $33.50.

During the year ended June 30, 1910, the railroads of this country killed 3,804 people and injured more or less seriously 82,374, showing an increase over 1909 in killed of 1,013 and in injured of 18,454.

Industrial Items.

To designate the handling of a piece of work by machinery the word "mechanipulate" has been coined.

There are made in this country annually about 300,000 pianos. A set of piano hammers numbers eighty-eight, so to equip the pianos made here there are annually required somewhere about 27,000,000 piano hammers.

Spoiled the Solemnity.

Joseph H. Choate when ambassador to the court of St. James and Mark Twain were together in St. George's chapel, London, one hot day, both seemingly sobered by the solemnity of the place.

"What an awful thing it is"— Twain began in a whisper.

Mr. Choate leaned closer to catch some ponderously sad expression from the humorist.

"What an awful thing it is," Twain repeated, "to be shut up in a place where one cannot smoke."

Parnell.

I never saw a braver man than Parnell. The story of his downfall is one of the most pathetic in history. There is a rumor that Captain O'Shea said to Gambetta: "What are we gelug to do with Parnell? He is getting to be a great danger to the country." And Gambetta replied, "Set a woman on his track." And the woman, instead of betraying him, fell in love with this patriot, and that was his undoing.—"Recollections of Mrs. T. P. O'Connor."

What He Heard.

John is his name, and he lives in Newburg. Further personal details are not necessary. Now, John has a wife who is not as charitable as she might be, and she has a woman friend who has domestic troubles of her own and therefore can and does sympathize with John's wife. Just what time it was when John came in the other morning deponent knoweth not, but certainly it was no sort of time for a married man to be getting home, and his wife told him so, though he knew it perfectly well without being told.

Next morning after John had gone to his office his wife called up the other woman on the telephone and told about John. The other woman was all sympathy, and what the two had to say about the kind of husband John was was more than plenty. In the thick of it a friend of John's got on the wire—not intentionally, of course, for he thought John was a model, but he got there, and it sounded good enough to him to stay and listen. But not for long. Presently he coughed, and there was a sudden silence.

"Who's that?" inquired John's wife.

"It's John," responded the friend and hung up the receiver.—New York Press.

Thin People Need This.

If you are too thin; if you are pale and sallow; if what you eat seems not to strengthen you; if your lips and cheeks are colorless, it is because your blood is deficient in red corpuscles and disease can easily overcome you, as you have no reserve strength or nourishment to uphold you.

Pact With Northern Neighbors Hangs on Pulp Wood

DEMAND OF UNITED STATES

Restrictions Against Exportation Must Be Removed Before Way Is Cleared For Arranging Favorable Treaty on Fish Products—Must Be Concessions to Cheapen Cost and Break Monopoly In News Print Paper

Washington, Jan. 13.—The perennial question of pulp wood and white paper is cutting an important figure in the negotiations now going on between the state department and representatives of the British governments to the north.

With respect to Newfoundland at least it may be said that the success of a trade treaty will depend more or less upon the disposition made of the pulp wood and paper issue. It is understood in a general way that if Newfoundland would take off her restrictions against the exportation of pulp wood, the administration would favor free paper and pulp and arrange a favorable treaty on fish products.

Newfoundland prohibits the exportation of pulp wood, preferring to encourage the manufacture of pulp on her own territory. Quebec places a virtual export tax of 25 cents a cord on pulp wood and Ontario still prohibits the exportation of pulp wood cut on crown lands.

From information whose authority cannot be questioned, it is learned that the negotiation of a treaty with Newfoundland covering the fisheries would be a comparatively easy matter if the Newfoundland government could see its way clear to yield on pulp wood exportation.

The administration is not unmindful of the pressure of the United States for such a measure of free trade as will tend to cheapen the cost and break up whatever monopoly may exist in news print paper, hence it is disposed to insist that the British statesmen shall make some concessions that will point to this end.

One view of the situation is that such business readjustments as might follow free trade in these articles would be only temporary, relatively speaking, and that eventually the industry would develop along natural lines and in natural places in such a way as to work no hardship to any interest.

Nurse to Schenk Takes Witness Stand In Poisoning Case

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 13.—At Thursday's session of the Schenk trial Alma J. Evans, a professional nurse, recited on the stand her story against Laura F. Schenk and the circumstances that influenced her to suspect that John O. Schenk was being poisoned.

Miss Evans attended Schenk during his illness, and the state brought out that time and again Mrs. Schenk had instructed her, in case her husband died suddenly, to take from his pockets as soon as the breath left his body the keys to his safe deposit box in a local bank and notify her before his relatives knew of the death.

"You don't know these 'Dutch devils' like I do," the witness said Mrs. Schenk said on various occasions when referring to members of the Schenk family.

WILL GO TO RECEIVER

Over $100,000 Shipped by Closed Bank Is Seized In Transit

Cordova, Alaska, Jan. 13.—One hundred and one thousand dollars, consigned to a bank in Seattle by the Washington-Alaska bank of Fairbanks, which closed last week, was seized here by a deputy marshal, acting under orders of the United States district court for the Fourth division of Alaska.

The shipment, consisting of $76,000 in gold coin and bullion and $25,000 in currency, had been shipped by the defunct bank to cover securities hypothecated with a bank in Seattle. The money will be sent back to Fairbanks and turned over to the receiver of the bank.

Slayers Must Be Punished

Washington, Jan. 13.—Actuated by the determination that those responsible for the execution of the Americans, Cannon and Groce, during the Nicaraguan revolution, shall be prosecuted, the state department has asked Consul Moffat at Managua for a report on the situation.

Moroccans Honor Alfonso

Melilla, Jan. 13.—King Alfonso visited the Spanish positions at Hiddum and Yazanam. When he passed through the territory ruled over by Ab-el-Kader he received a great ovation.

Gale Sweeps British Isles

London, Jan. 13.—A gale of hurrican force, accompanied at many points by a heavy snow fall, broke over the British isles. Much damage was done both on land and at sea.

HEN IS NOT A BIRD

But Eggs Are Eggs, According to Decision of Customs Court

Washington, Jan. 13.—Eggs are eggs. Also a hen is not a bird. So says the United States court of customs appeals in a decision which seems to settle a question which has muddles the customs, perpleved the experts and finally called in the zoologists.

Eggs coming from China usually are broken out of the shells, packed in tin cans and frozen. Customs officials contended they entered this country in competition with home-laid eggs and assessed a duty of 5 cents a dozen.

The importer objected, claiming they should be imported free of duty under that section of the tariff which puts the eggs of birds on the free list, and contended that at most they were only albumen and dutiable as such.

The full bench of five justices agreed that the importers' claim that a hen is a bird lacked merit and that an egg is an egg whether in the shell or out of it.

THE ARKANSAS LAUNCHED

Great Battleship Christened by Congressman Macon's Daughter

Camden, N. J., Jan. 13.—Miss Mary L. Macon of Arkansas smashed a bottle of wne against the bow of a great mass of steel today and the battleship Arkansas, one of the greatest fighting machines in the world, was launched.

The ceremony took place at the yard of the New York Shipbuilding company. There were a number of prominent officials from Arkansas, for which the floating fort is named, together with members of the navy department and representatives of other powers.

The Arkansas will be of 26,000 tons displacement and have a contract speed of twenty knots, although it is estimated that the ship will exceed the contract requirements for speed. The ship will have a main battery of twelve 12-inch guns and twenty-one 5-inch guns.

COUNTRY DEMOCRATS SUSPECT "FRAME-UP"

Fail to Agree on Candidate In Opposition to Lodge

Boston, Jan. 13.—The Democratic members of the legislature conferred at the state house yesterday afternoon upon a candidate to oppose Senator Lodge. An informal ballot taken after two hours of controversy resulted in votes being cast for sixteen different men.

Seven members of the legislature refused to attend the conference. Of the 117 present, 21 left the committee room before the vote was taken.

Governor Foss was attacked by Representatives McGivern and Newton of Boston for "driving out of the field, by unfair methods, the only logical Democratic candidate, William A. Gaston."

It was by no means a united Democracy that gathered to select a choice for United States senator. The country Democrats were suspicious of a "frame-up" on the part of the Boston Democrats and said so.

NATURAL GAS EXPLOSION

Five Persons Killed, a Dozen Injured, and Store Wrecked

Cornellsville, Pa., Jan. 13.—Five dead and twelve more or less seriously injured is the toll of an explosion of natural gas which wrecked a well-filled 5- and 10-cent store here, setting fire to and destroying the building and damaging nine other structures.

The explosion blew out the front wall of the building, tearing down telephone, telegraph and electric light wires, which hung about spluttering and hissing fire, hampering all attempts at rescue work. Clerks and customers were burned in the collapse of the building, and those who were able to get out report thrilling experiences.

PERJURY IS CHARGED

Former Vice President of Northern Bank Indicted by Grand Jury

New York, Jan. 13.—The grand jury returned an indictment charging perjury against William L. Brower, former vice president of the Northern Bank of New York.

The jury is still investigating the affairs of both the Northern bank and the Washington Savings bank, which were alleged to have been wrecked through the operations of Joseph G. Robin and his associates, and further indictments are expected.

Assistant District Attorney Clark had a number of witnesses, mostly subordinate employes of the Washington Savings bank, before the jury yesterday afternoon.

The Japanese Umbrella

A Chinese Episode and Its Horrible Effect

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

A whole year passed after Nelson's return from Asia before he found himself again treading an oriental street and rubbing elbows with slant eyed, blue bloused Chinese. His present position in the custom house made it necessary that he should visit a well known silk importer, whose place of business lay in the heart of San Francisco's reconstructed Chinatown.

Jay Nelson had been glad enough to eliminate all memory of his last year in China. There had been one horrible incident from which he had fled, but whose shadow had lurked in the background of his daily life since his return to America. In broad daylight he had laughed at the fears that pursued his first sleepless, fear haunted nights. After awhile the fear gave place to a sense of security fostered by the practical workaday happenings of his busy life.

Today, however, as he passed along Dupont street and turned into a narrower thoroughfare there burst upon him the significant fact that this part of a great city was but a fragment of the old eastern world after all.

He had to pause once or twice and inquire his way, for the house of the importer was set in the heart of the web of streets and alleys. Then when his goal lay but a few yards ahead there sprang into sudden view, bobbing along in the crowd before him, a certain green and gold paper parasol, the meaning of which was all too clear to Jay Nelson. He had a vague realization that this emblem of an old horror might have been evolved from his own morbid fancy.

He pressed forward, eager to stretch forth his hand and prove that the Japanese umbrella was a thing of air, was an optical illusion. But always it danced before him like a will-o'-the-wisp, now showing a glint of gold and green and then melting into a dozen illusive tints.

Where it went there he too must follow until he could prove by actual contact with its surface that it was a creation of his fancy and not the dreaded emblem of the White Brotherhood.

It drew him on down into the very bowels of the earth.

The paper umbrella collapsed and was cast aside, while the bearer turned to confront Nelson. Then the latter awoke from his trance-like state and stared first at the strange face that confronted him, then about the small dungeon-like room, empty of furniture and reeking with foul odors and lighted by a single swinging oil lamp. Nelson's gaze came back to the face of the Chinese, and he shivered slightly, for the face was that of a member of the dreaded order—the sign was written on the man's brow.

Instantly Nelson whipped off his coat, holding it before him as a shield and backed to the stairway leading upward.

"Hold a moment," said the Chinese in the Cantonese dialect; "I am not alone."

"Who else?" demanded Nelson sharply in the same tongue.

"The brotherhood—at each stair head they await your coming if you contemplate flight," returned the Chinese imperturbably.

"What do you want with me?"

"Command of the big brother that you be brought before him for trial."

"He came on from Hongkong to seek me?"

The Chinese cackled shrilly. Then he spat contemptuously. "The brotherhood is everywhere, Captain Leeson—wherever there are offenders there also will be found a tribunal of the brotherhood."

"Why do you call me by Captain Leeson's name?" questioned Nelson warily.

"Because you are he."

"Suppose I am not?"

"You are!" asserted the man roughly. "The brotherhood does not make mistakes."

"You blunder this time. I am Nelson."

The other laughed derisively. "I was told you would claim that name Nelson died that night."

"Ah," cried Nelson suddenly, "you are the big brother! This is the tribunal. You are alone; you thought to fool me; see you later, Tai Laao!" He started to leap up the stairs and then stopped short.

Tai Laao made no move to arrest his flight. He merely folded his long claw tipped fingers into either capacious sleeve and smiled widely.

It was this smile that halted Nelson's departure, the smile and a certain hissing whisper that sang down the stairway and bore warning on its breath.

Again he turned to the Chinese. "Have it over with—this court of yours! Be quick, for I have business to attend to—matters of importance."

"Very good, Captain Leeson," commented the man called Tai Laao. "Follow me."

He led the way to a shadowy corner and pushed open a door into another dimly lighted room. At a long table sat seven men, three on either side and one at the end. At the farther end of the table there stood a wide armed empty chair. Except for a low swung lamp above the table the room was devoid of other furnishing.

"Captain Leeson," he announced in a low voice, "on trial for betraying secrets of the White Brothers."

"Captain Leeson died, as you all know," said Nelson sternly. "I saw him die, killed by your orders. He died in the street of"—

"Silence!" menaced the leader. "He claims to be Nelson, the one who died that night."

The seven nodded in unison, but did not remove their gaze from Nelson's angry face.

He kept silence now, briefly reviewing the strange events that had snatched him from the busy streets of the city into as dismal a den of murderers as one might hope to find along the water front of any Chinese city.

Before his eyes there flashed a picture of his last year in China. Then he had been in the diplomatic service of his country. Leeson, his friend, an Englishman in the British employ at Hongkong—inspector of health or something of that sort—had interested Nelson in his establishment of a leper colony down in Anam.

It was Leeson's ambition to clean out the lepers hidden in the city, to root them out from their places of concealment and transport them to the colony where preparations had been made for their segregation, where their cases should be studied and modern methods be employed.

It happened that the afflicted ones looked on the idea of banishment with distaste. They cared little to be herded together in a foreign province far from friends and familiar scenes. They cared nothing whatever for the benefits that might accrue to posterity through their segregation.

Leeson's efforts met with little success, and he brought the law to his aid. Thus he gained permission to capture the afflicted ones, and so his colony prospered for awhile. Then there was formed against him the society of the White Brothers, created to protect the lepers scattered throughout the city from Leeson's agents. Each one bore some mark of the disease, and they had some other emblem by which they might be known to each other if the mark of the disease was not plain enough. And this emblem was the green and gold paper umbrella, with its snaky twisting golden dragon coiling in and out of the green painted bamboo shoots.

Nelson remembered the first time he had seen them—that night of Leeson's carefully planned expedition into a suspected quarter. It was at night, and red lanterns had lighted the street down its crooked length. Suddenly there had burst upon them and the three agents who accompanied Leeson a hideous babel of cracked voices; a horrible spectacle of ghastly faces; a leprous mob that leered and jeered at them; that drove them point by point toward the end of the street of lepers; a yelling crowd that received the bullets from their revolvers and died noisily; a filthy crew that tried to touch them, that longed to render them as loathsome as itself.

Leeson had been killed, and Nelson tried to forget the sight as the rest of them got away. The next day he led a party back to the street, but it was deserted. Even poor Leeson's body had disappeared. After this outbreak the matter went under the supervision of a large medical corps, and the colony at Anam was augmented by several hundred cases. Nelson resigned from the service and went home, sickened of the whole dubious web of oriental life, thankful that he had escaped contact—that he was clean.

Now they had found him out they would take their revenge for his betrayal of their outbreak. It pleased them to call him by Leeson's name. As Leeson he would probably die in this hole in the ground under San Francisco.

Nelson determined to force some immediate action from the men who had sprung up in this faraway city to call him to account for his setting the hounds of law upon their trail. All his hideous dreams of the past year seemed to have been realized in the strange events of this day that would undoubtedly be his last on earth.

It had been a strange day, and even now, face to face with death—for the presence of these White Brothers meant nothing less—he seemed to be moving in a dream more frightful than anything his sleeping mind had conceived.

"Fire ahead," he said recklessly; "I'm not afraid of you. Come on, every devil's imp of you!" He flashed out the revolver he always carried just as they arose in a body and came at him, a ghastly company with stretching, clawing fingers and fiendish eyes.

Then Jay Nelson awoke. He sat up in bed, his brow dripping sweat and his heart pounding with excitement, for once more he had dreamed of the Japanese umbrella and the horrible band whose emblem it was. This was the worst dream of all, and he murmured devout thanks that it had been a dream.

Sitting there with the morning sunshine streaming into the room and a fresh breeze from the bay ruffling his hair, Nelson saw the early newspaper slid under his door. Eager to be in touch with the commonplaces of everyday life, he fetched it and read the headlines. After awhile, in a corner of the sheet, he read that the Hongkong authorities were satisfied that they had rid that city of its lepers. The White Brotherhood had been broken up, and most of its members were in Anam colony. The leader, Tai Laao, was dead. Captain Leeson's death had been avenged.

Jay Nelson went forth that morning a care free man to interview the silk importer in Chinatown. At last he was emancipated from fear. He would dream no more.

GREAT LEGAL BATTLE NEAR

Contest of Mrs. Eddy's Will Starts In New Hampshire

LARGE BEQUESTS TO CHURCH

Declared by Atorneys For Son and Adopted Son of Founder of Christian Science to Be In Violation of Laws of Two States—Ask For Injunction Against Disposition of Property Pending a Decision

Concord, N. H., Jan. 13.—The long expected struggle for the contest of the $2,000,000 estate left by Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy was begun here by the filing of a petition by William E. Chandler and other lawyers, the intent of which is that Mrs. Eddy's will is void in that her bequests to the First Church of Christ, Scientist, was against the law of New Hampshire.

In case the will is disallowed, the fortune would revert to George W. Glover and E. J. Foster Eddy, son and adopted son of Mrs. Eddy. The attorneys whose names are signed to the petition are supposed to be acting for these men and other heirs-at-law.

A law of New Hampshire is cited expressly forbidding the gift to a church of any sum the income from which exceeds $5000 a year. There is a similar law in Massachusetts. The Massachusetts law places the amount at $2000. Mrs. Eddy was at her death a legal resident of New Hampshire.

The petition filed here asks the court for a construction of Mrs. Eddy's will, particularly the clause relating to the residuary estate.

The petitioners also pray for an injunction against any disposition being made of the property in question pending the construction of the residuary clause. It is understood to be the plan of the attorneys for George W. Glover and E. J. Foster Eddy to try to have the question raised regarding the residuary legatee transferred from the superior court to the supreme court for a decision, making no contest in the probate court.

Another development in the case was a statement by Chandler that the heirs had agreed to the interment of Mrs. Eddy's remains in Mt. Auburn cemetery.

The attorneys for the heirs have been increased in number, the most notable addition being Hannis Taylor, formerly minister to Spain, and who was employed by the federal government in the Alaskan boundary dispute.

Mr. Taylor is a professor of constitutional and international law in George Washington university and has a worldwide reputation as a lawyer. The opinion on the will, although signed by several attorneys, was written by Taylor.

BITE OF AN INSECT

It Ultimately Leads to Amputation of Lucius Tuttle's Leg

Boston, Jan. 13.—Lucius Tuttle, for years president of the Boston and Maine railroad and holder of numerous other positions of trust, underwent an operation for amputation of his left leg yesterday afternoon. He is reported by his physician, Dr. Mixter, who performed the operation, as resting comfortably.

The necessity for the operation was brought about by a bad condition of Tuttle's blood. Some years ago he suffered from the bite of a strange insect. For a long time his leg refused to heal, although the sufferer received the best treatment that money could procure. A recurrence of the old trouble made the present operation necessary.

GIRL LOSES TWO FINGERS

Jury Awards Her One Dollar In Suit For $15,000 Damages

Cincinnati, Jan. 13.—After two days' trial the jury returned a verdict of $1 in a $15,000 suit for damages brought by Miss Lilla B. Hambrick against the William Glenny Glass company. She was working in the plant and her hand was caught in a machine, taking off the tips of two fingers of her right hand.

The small amount of damages has caused the attorneys to inquire as to the existence of an old law which compelled the plaintiff to pay the costs of the suit when the amount of the damages recovered was less than $5.

Dies Counting His Money

New York, Jan. 13.—John Cremett took leave of the world while counting his store of this world's goods. He was 77 years old and was found with his head bowed forward on a table. Before him lay $675 in gold and notes, and two bank books, showing deposits for a considerable sum. He had died of heart failure.

Spiritualist Leader Dead

Canaan, Me., Jan. 13.—Harrison D. Barrett, for the past eghteen years president of the National Spiritual association, who had covered the entire United States as a lecturer, died here at the age of 47 years. He had been ill for more than a year following an operation.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

It is claimed that not in twenty years has there been presented in America a drama with the intense gripping appeal of Madam X, which will be offered for the fourth week at the Majestic Theatre, beginning Jan. 16 by Henry W. Savage. It has been greeted with enormous audiences during its long run in New York and Mr. Savage states that it could easily have remained there for another year were there a theatre available to house it. Three companies are playing it daily in different parts of America, but the organization to appear here is the original one and includes Dorothy Donnelly, who made such an emphatic hit in the title role in New York, and William Elliott, who electrified the audiences by his wonderful appeal to the jury for his mother's life in the court room scene which is the sensational episode of the piece. In this court room scene, one of the most striking pieces of stagecraft ever devised, over one hundred people are seen in the dramatic ensemble. It is a faithful reproduction of a murder trial before a French Assize Court. An outcast woman, a drab of the street, is on trial for having shot and killed her lover, a worthless, blackmailing scoundrel. The audience know that she is guilty. They saw the crime committed. The helpless half-dazed creature refuses to enter a plea, she refuses even to give her name and because of this silence on her part is is entered upon the police blotter as Madam X. A young lawyer who has never before pleaded a case is appointed by the court to defend her. This young man is her own son whom she has deserted in infancy. He does not know his client is his mother and she does not know her counsel is her son.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" is such a triumphant success at the Castle Square that Mr. Craig has been forced by the public demand to continue it for another and fourth week beginning next Monday. It has broken all records at that house, and the advance sale of seats is of tremendous proportions. Its popularity can only be compared with that of "The Circus Girl," which enjoyed a run of nine weeks two years ago. All the familiar features, and several new specialties, will form a part of the production during the coming week. Mary Young will continue to appear as Jack, with Mr. Craig as Sinbad. Donald Meek as the Fairy Queen, George Hassell as King Cole, Kate Ryan as Old Mother Hubbard and a large chorus of thirty singers.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The appearance of Eva Tanguay at B. F. Keith's Theatre always means crowded houses at every performance, and this season has been no exception to the rule. In fact, not only in vaudeville has Miss Tanguay proven a tremendous drawing card, but in the legitimate production, for during the time she was with Ziegfeld's follies, that organization did bigger business than ever before in its history. It is not surprising, therefore, that she is held over for another week, when she will sing the most popular of her songs and introduce some new features. Miss Tanguay is now singing an entirely new repertoire of songs, and her costumes are both pretty and startling. One of the biggest features is the song called "Oh, You Money," in which she throws handfuls of coins into the audience. An unusual novelty during the week will be the International Polo Players, an expert company that plays a real game of polo on the stage, the men riding around on bicycles. This is one of the most exciting and successful features ever seen in vaudeville, and they are sure to be talked about. Jack Connolly and Margaret Webb will also appear in a splendid comedy feature called "A Stormy Finish," while newcomers will be the Hopkins-Axtell Company in a sketch full of humor in several scenes. The Alfazo-Bracco Troupe of European acrobats is one of the biggest and most sensational ever imported for the Keith circuit, and other features will be Kessler and Lee, dancers; and Yankee and Dixie, two remarkably clever dogs.

WITH THE ACTORS.

"The Rosary" a religious play with much comedy in it continues to attract at the Globe theatre.

Next week's attraction at the Colonial will be "The Dollar Princess."

"The Balkan Princess" is the coming attraction at The Shubert.

At the Tremont "The Follies of 1910" is having a big run.

The Bank Officers' Association attend the performance of "Judy Forgot" at the Shubert Theatre Monday evening. One-half ofthe house will be used exclusively by the members.

MUSICAL.

Mme. Liza Lehmann is to give a concert of her own compositions in Jordan hall Boston, Wednesday afternoon, the 18th. She will be assisted by a vocal quartet, Miss Blanche Toulin, Miss Palgrave-Turner, Hubert Eisdell and Julien Henry. The program will include five entirely new songs and selections from "The Persian Garden," "Daisy Chain," etc.

The program of the Boston Symphony orchestra for the concerts of next week will include Schubert's symphony in C major; Franck's symphonic poem "The Wild Huntsman," and Saint-Saens's symphonic poems "Omphale's Spinning Wheel" and "Danse Macabre."

Miss Carolyne Beebe, pianist, and Edouard Dethier, violinists, will give their second sonata recital in Quincering hall, Tuesday evening, the 17th. The program will be as follows: Frank sonata in A. Major; Bach, sonata in E minor; Ferrier, sonata in A minor first time in Boston.

Mischa Elman will give his only violin recital in Boston in Symphony hall Saturday afternoon, the 21st. He will play these compositions: Goldmark suite; Bruk, concerto in D minor, No. 2; Handel, sonata in D major; Schubert-Elman, Staendchen; Mousigny-Franko, Rigaudon; Martin-Kreisler, andantino Kreisler, "Schon Rosmarin";" Paganini, variations on "Di tanti palpiti."

The Waste of the Wind.

Every one who wants a cheap motive force has tried to harness the wind. Every child has made a paper propeller or a windmill. But can it be said that the possible uses of the wind have been as arduously investigated as such recently discovered forces as steam and electricity and gases? Is it not conceivable that the practical uses of the wind are underestimated just because they are so familiar?

We cannot help thinking that the wind will be more variously employed some day in the same way that probably the problem of laying under contribution the great physical fact of the tides will be solved. One would think that the wind could be used for electric lighting, yet there is no practical apparatus for the purpose. True, the wind is variable and occasionally absent, but as electricity can be stored one might suppose that this was the very case in which variability did not particularly matter.—London Spectator.

DENIAL FROM STEPHENSON

Senator Says Charges Against Him Are Without Foundation

Washington, Jan. 13.—Senator Stephenson, commenting on the news from the Wisconsin state capital that charges of violations of the elections law had been filed against him with the governor, gave out the following:

"The report of the majority of the legislative committee was made at the session of the legislature held two years ago. The committee after an exhaustive investigation exonerated me and all those connected with my campaign of all the charges.

"The report now made is by three of the old committee, who refused to concur with the majority. They did not then submit a report, but have waited until a legislature had been elected which they regard favorable to their plans. Two of them are no longer members of the legislature. I have not yet seen the report. So far as the charges have come to me they are without foundation and wholly false."

Boston's Mayor May Decide to Establish a Dynasty

Boston, Jan. 13.—"I can stay on this job just as long as I please," is the answer which Mayor Fitzgerald made to the talk that a recall movement is under way.

"I can get a majority of the votes of the people every time, and there is not a man in the city who can defeat me. I know the city and know what I am talking about.

"Now, if some of the gentlemen in this town who are trying to cast aspersions on my administration want to try it out, I do not know but I will make up my mind to continue longer than I had intended, just to give them their chance.

"I don't want to stay six years in office, but they are making it so I cannot do otherwise. I do not know but I might as well start the Fitzgerald dynasty and hold on till my son is old enough to take it."

The assault proved to be only a minor family squabble, and the court placed Kent under two months' probation to give the town authorities of Rowley, where the Kents reside, an opportunity to investigate and determine what it is that wrecks the bliss of the Kent household.

English Lord—I am going out for a moment.

Pouting Wife—Never to return, I suppose.

The wife's words were not heard, as at that instant the noble lord stumbled over the dog and fell headlong downstairs.

Part of wife's testimony in subsequent divorce proceedings: "He once threatened to leave me, never to return, and, going out, he kicked my pet dog most cruelly and then, in a fit of maniacal rage, threw himself downstairs."—New York Weekly.

E. O. Godfrey of 538 Washington street, Quincy Point, has the Quincy Daily Ledger on sale now each day, he having had calls for it in his neighborhood. WORLD ALMANAC.

All the phenomenal growth and development that have marked the progress of events throughout the world in 1910 are reflected and recorded in The World Almanac for 1911. To enumerate its new features would be to enumerate everything new and important that has taken place in the last year. Its great mass of statistical information on every subject in which any one would be likely to be interested has been revised and brought down to the last moment of the closing year, and so many new facts and figures have been added that apparently no information of value or importance has been omitted, while for accuracy The World Almanac has never been excelled. The completeness with which the subjects are treated is shown by the fact that fifteen pages are devoted to detailed facts concerning the new "Science of Aviation."

Careful of His Gun.

In one of the small mountain towns of Kentucky lived Dan, a half wit, with whom the boys often went hunting. On one of these trips Dan and the young man with him were between two hills when a rabbit jumped up in front of them and ran up the hill to Dan's right. The other fellow, being on Dan's left, did not wish to take the chance of shooting at the rabbit for fear of an accident, so he said: "There he goes, Dan! Shoot him, shoot him!" But Dan simply stood still and watched the rabbit disappear over the hill, and his partner wanted to know why he didn't shoot. After a moment's silence he answered, talking through his nose: "Did you take me for a fool? Do you think I was going to strain my gun shooting uphill?"—Judge.

Scientific Love

By WILLIS BEACH POTTER

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

A recent interview of a newspaper man with Mr. Edison, the wizard of Menlo Park, brought out Mr. Edison's statement that the living body is a mere machine, or, rather, that it is composed of millions of minute cells, each having its own individuality. He compares a man to a city containing an enormous number of people like London, New York or Berlin. The brain, according to this doctrine, is a complex camera or storehouse of innumerable photographic plates, each one of which has received an impression during the man's life to be used on occasion; that these plates are what we call memory.

This is a purely scientific view and does not pertain to the soul.

Lord Tenterton, an English nobleman, had a daughter who had been engaged to be married to a son of a merchant prince. This young man, Sidney Hough, died and left the girl disconsolate. Sir Percy Scarborough, a friend of Lord Tenterton, had a son who had gone through a similar experience. He had loved Rose MacAlister, the daughter of a Scotch laird, and lost her by quick consumption.

Now, Lord Tenterton was poor, and he desired to ally his family with the wealthier blood of England. Moreover, his lordship was a scientist with original ideas. He considered only the scientific part of love and, looking upon the brain on the Edisonian principle of innumerable photographic plates, conceived the idea of a gradual substitution of images on his daughter's brain to change her memory of her dead lover to a live one.

If this could be done with her it might be done with young Scarborough. Tenterton called on Sir Percy and proposed a scheme. Sir Percy was much disappointed at his son's failure to marry that the family might be perpetuated and was ready for any plan that would induce him to do so. But Hugh Scarborough, like Edith Tenterton, refused to be comforted and would not consent to take another mate. What Lord Tenterton proposed was accepted for trial, and the needful was supplied by the engagement of a portrait painter.

One day Lord Tenterton returned to his home from London with a portrait. His daughter, entering his study, saw it hanging on the wall. She was struck with its resemblance to her dead lover. She said nothing to her father, who pretended to be busy writing at his desk, though he was really watching her. He saw her gaze upon it for a long while; then she went out to conceal her emotion. The portrait was that of the man she mourned, yet slightly different. She believed it to be the likeness of some one who very much resembled him. Not long after this she came into her father's study again under pretense of asking a question, but really to look at the picture. It seemed to her that it had undergone a slight change; but, being in the same place and in the same frame as the one she had seen before, she thought she was mistaken. From time to time she visited the study to gaze upon the portrait, and every time she found some slight change.

The portrait had been painted by the artist employed to carry out the scheme, and he was gradually altering it from a picture very like her dead lover to a likeness of Hugh Scarborough. And while he was doing this he was changing a portrait of Rose MacAlister to one of Edith Tenterton. Sir Percy was imposing on his son these pictures, substituting one for another, just as Lord Tenterton was imposing on his daughter the dissolving picture of Sidney Hough. Finally after a long interval both portraits had been altered from the dead to the quick.

The Tentertons and the Scarboroughs lived in different shires. When the transformation of the portraits had been completed Lord Tenterton invited Sir Percy to visit him and to bring with him his son. Scarborough insisted upon Hugh's going with him, and when on the evening of their arrival Hugh and Edith met at dinner there was a scene of much interest to the two fathers. Hugh stood with wide open eyes gazing upon Edith, while Edith cast one glance at Hugh, blushed and lowered her eyes to the floor.

"Be seated," said Lord Tenterton, pretending not to notice this mutual impression, though while the young people were intent upon each other he winked at Sir Percy. Hugh and Edith had been assigned seats side by side and were soon engaged in a conversation more animated than either had taken part in since they had lost their loves. After dinner they were left alone by their elders, who went off together. During the evening Hugh made this remark to Edith:

"Did I not know you to be a living person I should believe you—so far as appearance is concerned—to be one who is dead."

"I have a similar experience in you," she replied. "Your likeness to one who is no more is something remarkable."

A month later the two fathers were congratulating themselves that the son of the one and the daughter of the other were to be married.

"I tell you, Scarborough," said Tenterton, "these Americans are a great people. They will before long analyze love and tell us how to bring about affinities in people the same as in chemistry."

"You bet!" replied Sir Percy.

MAYOR SHEA FOR SENATOR

Mentioned as One Upon Whom Democrats of Massachusetts Could Unite

May Be Possible Successor of Senaror Lodge

MAYOR SHEA.

Mayor Shea for United States senator to succeed Henry Cabot Lodge. That is the latest rumor in the air. The Democrats in the Legislature are all at sea as there are about as many candidates as there are Democrats. Up to the present time they have not been able to unite on any one candidate.

Yesterday it was whispered around the lobby of the State House that some dark horse would likely be the last resort. Some one on whom they could all unite. The dark horse mentioned was Hon. William T. Shea, Mayor of Quincy.

When seen Friday night the Mayor would not deny the rumor, but one of those broad winning smiles that shows his gold filled teeth illuminated his face.

Who knows but the mantle of Senator Lodge may fall on the shoulders of Mayor Shea.

AN EARLY AGREEMENT

Granite Cutters and Manufacturers Getting Together

It will be good news to the citizens of Quincy in general, to learn that the conferences between committees of the Granite Manufacturers' Association and Granite Cutters' Union, who are considering the readjustment of the agreement and bill of prices are going along harmoniously, and it would not be surprising to have it announced any day that an agreement had been reached. Certain it is that there will be no suspension of the granite business in Quincy on March 1.

It has been stated by those in a position to know, that practically every point of difference has now been settled except the minimum day wage, and but a few cents now separate the two committees. As it stands now, the cutters ask that from March 1, 1911, to March 1, 1915, the minimum wage shall be $3.25 per day, and from March 1, 1915, to March 1, 1917, the minimum wage shall be $3.28 per day.

The manufacturers it is said proposed that the minimum wage for the first two years of the five year agreement shall be $3.20 per day, and for the next three years $3.25 per day.

Frequent meetings of the two committees are being held, and with such a slight difference between the two committees, it would seem that an early agreement was assured.

COLLEGE BANQUET AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Sisson of Brown and Kilpatrick of Yale the Speakers of the Evening

Both Given Rousing Cheers by the Boys

The second annual banquet of the College club was held in the Assembly hall at the Y. M. C. A. last evening. About 50 young men sat down to an excellent supper served by the Woman's Auxiliary with the following menu:

Roast Turkey	Cranberry sauce
Mashed potato	Squash
Ice cream	Assorted cakes
Cocoa	Rolls

While the dishes were being cleared away a number of the High school students entertained with chords and discords.

J. A. Sedgwick opened the post prandial exercises by congratulating the banqueters on their bravery in gathering for a "feed" on Friday the 13th. After a brief but pithy address, Henry Sutermeister was introduced as toastmaster of the evening. He, in turn, introduced Mr. Sisson, centre on the Brown eleven, as the first speaker. Mr. Sisson spoke of football as a builder of character. "Most of the men who play college football," he said, "are gentlemen, and it is a very rare instance when there is a case of slugging." He believed that in football one can get a good foundation for a character if one plays the game right, in manliness, in determination, in obedience to the man higher up.

Mr. Kilpatrick, left end on the Yale football team and captain of the track team, was next introduced. He spoke of three great principles taken from his knowledge of football and college life which one could well carry through life out in the world. First, "don't be afraid of work," second, "play fair," third, "Grit your teeth in the face of obstacles."

The speech was in every way excellent, enlivened as it was by stories well told and backed by the personality of the man. In speaking of football in connection with the three principles, Kilpatrick said: "When a man wants to play football he's got to work and work hard. After a time you get so that you like to work. Every college man has a place to fill. In the athletic teams, the dramatics, glee club musical clubs, literary club, religious societies, all can find a place to work for the good of the college and for the good of his fellowmen. In football when a man begins to slug it is the same as throwing up a distress signal. He says to himself, you're a better man than I am (meaning his opponent) and if I can't stop you any other way I'll see what slugging can do. The opponent should take courage then if he was losing it before for if he is the right man he will charge so hard that the slugger will be driven off his feet and will soon be taken out of the game. The man who plays the game fair and hard is bound to win.

As you sit before the fire winter evenings what game is it that you like to think about? Is it the one in which you ran up a score of a hundred or more against some "dub" team? No! It's the one in which you had to work and fight for every inch of the ground. It's the game in which you were up against a team almost as good as you were, the game in which you had obstacles to overcome.

It seems reasonable that in life the same three principles may be applied with success. Work hard, play fair and don't be afraid of difficulties. Down at Yale before the season begins one of the coaches gets the squad together and talks to them something in this wise: "Men you are to represent the college on the football field this season. Before you is the page blank except for the date at the top. What kind of a page are you going to make it, one that the college will be proud of or one that will bring shame upon yourselves and the college."

You fellows have before you the blank page of your college life or your business life. What are you going to write on it? You'll have to write for yourself. No one can do it for you.

I want you to remember these three principles, work hard, play the game fair and be brave when confronted by obstacles and you apply them your page will be one of which you can be proud."

After the speaking was concluded, three rousing cheers were given for Yale and Brown and the company went down stairs. "Bob" Fisher had to send his regrets at the last minute since he was detained in Boston by a business engagement. Sprackling of Brown was expected to be at the banquet but he was unable to come and Mr. Sisson very kindly took his place.

Both of the speakers were fine fellows and showed good spirit by coming way up from Providence and New Haven to talk to the members of the College club and their friends.

The committee who had charge of the banquet consisted of the following ladies: Mrs. E. R. Johnson, chairman, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. Gilbert M. Miller, Mrs. A. E. Rhoades, Mrs. E. I. Beal and Mrs. H. B. L. Dimmick.

BURGLARIES AT WOLLASTON

Valuables Secured at Residence of Herbert H. Albee on Highland Avenue

Frightened Away at Residence of C. L. Seavey

Quincy was the scene of three burglaries last night. Two of these were at Wollaston and the third at West Quincy. The places entered at Wollaston were the residences of Charles L. Seavey, at 414 Highland avenue, and Herbert H. Albee, at 377 Highland avenue. At both of these houses there were no men in the house at the time and in both places the burglars were heard.

The break at Mr. Seaveys house was about 1.30 this morning. Mr. Seavey was away for the night, and the only parties in the house were Mrs. Seavey, her sister and children. Entrance was gained by forcing one of the kitchen windows. Mrs. Seavey was awakened by hearing some one moving about her room. She thought that it was her husband returning home and spoke to the man. At that the fellow ran down the stairs and out of the front door.

She saw the man go down the walk buttoning his coat as he ran. Going down stairs she found a quantity of solid silver piled up on the dining room table ready to be taken away, which the fellow had left in his hurry. She also found that he had burnt a tallow candle in his rounds of the house for the floor was covered with tallow.

Mrs. Seavey immediately called the police station, and Sergt. Barry got in touch with Officer Reiley who with Officer Phillips went to the house, and Officer Phillips remained there until morning. Mrs. Seavey describes the man as being short and slim and evidently a young man.

Shortly after 6 o'clock this morning Officer Halloran received a telephone from Mrs. Albee notifying him that her house had been burglarized in the vicinity of 2 o'clock this morning. In this case Mrs. Albee was in the house all alone, her husband being away for the night. The fellow gained entrance by forcing a kitchen window and rummaged about at will. Mrs. Albee heard the man about the house, and knew that it was a burglar.

As she was all alone she deemed it wise to keep quiet, which she did, and one may imagine her feelings when she realized that a burglar was carrying away her valuables and that she was alone and powerless to help herself. Mrs. Albee remained quiet, not daring to get up until 6 o'clock when she telephoned the police.

Investigation showed that the fellow had carried away a large quantity of silver. This he had taken from the sideboard, using one of the drawers of the sideboard to carry it away with.

The third place entered was the variety store of Bernard J. Donaher at the corner of Copeland and Common streets, and was evidently the work of boys. The parties carried away a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and crackers.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It's a wonder that the Hon. Charles Murphy of New York doesn't elect himself to the United States senate. He owns those Democrats.

The revolutionary pot is beginning to boil down in Cuba. It is not likely that Cuba will become a real republic until it has had a civil war and somebody gets a good licking.

The perversity of human nature is shown in the fact that though Dr. Cook is disposed to confess, no one will believe him. The doctor ought to have been given a "third degree."

The next house, it is said will have ninety majority for tariff reduction, including Democratic and Republican insurgents on the same side. But, queries a contemporary, will they all be for reduction in the same places. And a practical query it is.

General rumor has it that one of the prominent pastors of the city may resign at an early date. He intimated as much in his New Year's sermon, and some have taken it for a fact. If he heeds the wishes of his parish and the people of Quincy he will continue in this city. Through his efforts for fifteen years or more, the church has had a remarkable degree of prosperity, and is today one of the 300 largest churches of the denomination in the country. It is also one of the best organized churches, and has one of the best organized Sunday Schools. It is free from debt, and doing a great work, in fact no church of the city is more prominent in affairs of Quincy than this church, and all this because of its able, energetic and popular pastor. The annual meeting of the church occurs next week.

If all the water takers of Quincy paid 25 cents per hundred cubic feet for water, as is proposed in Dedham, there would be a handsome profit in Quincy in the Water department. In fact there would be if all paid 20 cents per hundred, but now Quincy has all kinds of prices. The rates at residences is 23 cents per hundred when in excess of a $16 minimum. Will some one please figure the rate where a household uses but $10 worth of water and has to pay $16 for it?

But there is too much secrecy in Quincy as to rates, and too many prices. Large manufacturers are paying one rate, and small manufacturers another, and residences another. Some houses pay at meter rates and more do not. The minimum rate in Quincy should be reduced, so that water takers will pay for what water they actually use.

The following rates are proposed for Dedham which is supplied by a private company:

"1. Water rates for the year 1911 shall be based on meter reading (where meters have been installed) with a minimum charge of $6.00 to each customer supplied through a single faucet and a minimum charge of $12.00 to each customer supplied through two or more faucets.

"2. The charge by meter for supply of water in excess of quantity paid for by the minimum rate shall be 25 cents per hundred cubic feet (748 gallons). This rate shall be uniform for all customers, irrespective of quantity of water consumed. All water supplied to customers through a hose shall first pass through a meter and the payment therefor shall be determined by meter.

"3. Bills shall be payable quarterly in arrears. But bills for the minimum charge for the year may be issued by the Company, on which bills a discount of 10 per cent. shall be allowed, provided these bills shall have been paid in full for the year, 1911, on or before March 1st, 1911."

—Thirty eight fortune tellers have been arrested in New York in pursuance of a policy to discourage this class of business. It is passing strange that none of them seems to have forecasted any shadow of the coming event.—Providence Journal.

NO CASES OF TARDINESS

Proud Record for John Hancock School with 317 Pupils

The average daily attendance at the public schools of the city for the month of December is reported by Supt. Barbour to have been above 5,000. The John Hancock had the best percentage with the Lincoln, Cranch, High and Willard above 93 per cent.

The John Hancock had the remarkable record of no tardinesses for the month. With 317 pupils and 634 chances each day to be tardy (12,680 chances in four weeks) it is a grand record of which the school may well be proud, that it had a clean slate. The report follows.

TO DEDICATE CHURCH.

Sunday, Jan. 22, has been decided on as the day of dedication for the new Memorial Congregational church at Atlantic. The morning service will be at 10.30, when Rev. Seelye Bryant of Springfield will preach the sermon. This service will be a commemoration service for the memorial windows.

The Sunday school will hold appropriate services at noon in which the superintendent and teachers will take part. The roll of the Sunday school will be called and every scholar will respond.

The dedication of the church will be in the afternoon at three o'clock. The Rev. W. W. Jordan, D. D., of Clinton will preach the sermon and addresses also will be made by Dr. E. N. Hardy of Quincy and Mr. Samuel Usher of Boston. The chorus has prepared music for the occasion and Miss Alice Gertrude Coe will sing a solo.

In the evening at 7 o'clock the Rev. F. E. Emrich, D. D., of the Massachusetts Home Missionary society will preach.

On Monday there will be a service at 7.45 P. M. It is a service of reception and inspection of the building. At that meeting there will be greetings from several pastors of Quincy and also from Rev. Asher Anderson, secretary of the National council of Congregational churches. Tuesday evening Young People's service of Christian Endeavor; Thursday evening at 6.30 there will be a banquet with several local speakers and Friday evening the regular prayer meeting.

Rev. Mr. Davison announced last Sunday evening that as they would Dedicate on the 22d he wanted the Campaign committee to meet and raise at least $1,500 the week of the 15th and the pastor reports that several have expressed their willingness to give, and he expects to get the necessary funds before the dedication.

All services are open to the public, and with the growing interest it is expected that the church will be filled three times on Sunday.

K. of C. INSTALLATION.

In connection with the regular meeting of Braintree Council No. 1462, Knights of Columbus in I. O. O. F. hall South Braintree last evening occurred the installation of the officers elect for the year 1911. The officers were installed in a most excellent manner by District Deputy E. J. Barry of Seville Council No. 93 of Brockton assisted by Warden Fred E. Barry and suite of the some council. Frank Tevlin as accompanist and James Moran as soloist of the evening were most satisfactory.

The entertainment was very pleasing and consisted of vocal solos by James Moran, Fred E. Barry, Walter Fouche, Edward Cuff and Lucien Gaudreau.

Bountiful refreshments were served and last but not least cigars were passed. A delightful feature of the evening was the recital of reminiscences of his college days by Rev. Andrew J. Fitzgerald of St. Francis church. The proceedings of the evening were in charge of Messrs Edward J. Sullivan John F. Madden and John Mulcahy.

BRIEFS

Rev. Donald Flower will preach at the Universalist church on Sunday.

Mrs. Daniel McNeil is reported as being greatly improved in health.

HOUSE FAVORS GIVING HONOR

Naval Committee's Report on Peary Is Presented

ROBERTS CHANGES HIS MIND

Converted by Testimony of Expert From Coast and Geodetic Survey That Peary Was Close to Pole—Explorer Will Be Made Admiral and Receive Thanks of Congress If Bates Bill Is Passed

Washington, Jan. 14.—Captain Robert E. Peary will be retired as a civil engineer with the rank and pay of a rear admiral and also will be given the formal thanks of congress for his discovery of the North Pole, if the house and senate accept a bill reported to the house from the house committee on naval affairs. Contrary to expectations, there was no opposition to this action on the part of the committee.

Representatives Macon of Arkansas and Roberts of Massachusetts, who have bitterly opposed all bills introduced for the purpose of rewarding Peary or recognizing in any way his claims to having discovered the Pole, absented themselves from the meeting of the sub-committee when the report on the bill introduced by Representative Bates of Pennsylvania was drafted, but Roberts was present when the sub-committee reported to the full committee, but did not oppose the report or indicate that he would file a minority report.

Mr. Roberts expressed the opinion that the testimony of James Mitchell, the expert from the coast and geodetic survey, who went over Peary's data, was so conclusive and convincing that had it been presented to the committee a year ago there would have been no opposition to an award for the Arctic explorer. Mitchell figured that the data submitted to him showed beyond any question that Peary was within one and one-half miles of the Pole.

The senate bill, which was introduced by Senator Hale, chairman of the senate naval committee, was passed last winter with rare promptness. It provided for the retirement of Peary as an admiral of the line. This honor the secretary of the navy and the president in conference approved as proper recognition of a remarkable exploit. As soon, however, as the line of the navy was aware of this, opposition was prompt and decided.

The house naval committee has now yielded and the senate bill has been amended so that Peary will be retired with the rank and pay of an admiral, but not actually as an admiral of the line. The difference lies in the ancient and cherished distinction that, while he may wear a prescribed uniform and have the same honors in ceremonies, he cannot be regarded as an officer who has had command.

If congress passes the Bates bill, Peary will go down in history as one of the few men who have received the formal thanks of congress. The records show that since the establishment of the government only twenty-two persons have been awarded the thanks of congress. The list is headed by George Washington.

Uncle of Fourteen-Year-Old Girl Shoots Her and Kills Self

The niece is dying. The uncle died from the burns received by setting fire to his oil saturated clothes, after he had wounded himself with the revolver.

The shooting took place in the presence of Mrs. Vienna, in a bedroom off the kitchen of the house, where Candido Vienna had been living for the past two months with his brother, the girl's father.

CATHOLIC FORESTERS.

The annual report of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, upon the governing board of which Mr. Cornelius M. Duggan of Quincy is high vice chief ranger, has just been issued from the office of the high secretary-treasurer, and shows the year just closed to have been one of unprecedented growth and activity in every department of the organization.

The increase in membership during the year is shown to be nearly 3,000 which brings the total membership up to nearly 32,000 men and women, scattered throughout every section of Massachusetts. All the new members are beneficiaries under the insurance obligations of the organization to the extent of $1,000 each. The gain in membership enables the organization to maintain the enviable distinction which it has enjoyed for some years past, as numerically and financially the largest and strongest fraternal body of its class in the United States.

The amount paid in mortuary benefits during the year is shown to be $326,000. The special emergency fund increased during the year to $350,-123.99.

The report deals at length with the social work of the order and the work of the various degree staffs, and shows that both of these features have given an appreciable impetus to the interest of the members in the affairs of the Order and to the increase in membership.

HOME TRADE WILL HELP QUINCY AND EVERYONE IN QUINCY

GOT HER MONEY'S WORTH

A Quincy Point young lady went into Boston this week to purchase a hat, and it is believed she got her money's worth. When she went to board the train for home it was impossible to get the band box through the door, and it was put into the baggage car. The box was claimed by the young woman in person when the train reached Quincy, since she feared for the safety of its contents in the hands of the baggage smashers. The baggage car was up in the front part of the train which was way down opposite the cemetery. It has not been ascertained whether some of the spinsters who have found repose in the old burial ground for a hundred years, turned in their graves at the vision, or not.

SCHOOLHOUSE BIDS OPENED

Several Bids for Heating and Ventilating Systems

Bids were opened b CCommissioner Bainbridge this morning for heating and ventilating the two new school buildings, one at Wollaston and the other at Montclair. A number of bids were received and it looks as though the firm of Stone, Underhill Co., of which Eugene R. Stone of this city is a partner, were the lowest bidders. They were the lowest bidders for the Montclair school, although one bid was received lower than theirs, but it did not comply with the requirements, as no check accompanied the bid.

On the Wollaston school there was one bid very much lower than all the others, in fact it was over $2,000 lower than the Stone, Underhill bid and $6,000 lower than the highest bid. It seemed to be the impression that the bidder had made a mistake in stating that the bid was for the Wollaston instead of the Montclair school.

The several bids were as follows:

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

Walter B. Ross,	$5,500
F. W. Zemier, (no check)	7,800
Stone, Underhill Co.	9,978
Edward O. Burrows,	10,098
Frank E. Woodward, Co.	10,340
Walker, Pratt Co.	11,525

MONTCLAIR SCHOOL.

Stone, Underhill Co.	$5,298
Huey Bros.	7,467
F. W. Zemier, (no check)	7,594
W. W. Campbell & Son,	7,757
J. J. Hurley & Co.	7,965

The bids were taken under advisement.

F. Carman, Past President, Mrs. Cora Carman, Lieutenant George Wardwell and Commander Harry Matthews.

At the close of the entertainment refreshments were servd consisting of sandwiches, coffee and ice cream.

SOUTH BRAINTREE.

Tuesday, Jan. 10, was the thirty-seventh anniversay of Harrie A. Simond's birth. In remembrance of the occasion about twenty of his relatives gathered at his home on Franklin street greatly surprising him by their presence. A most pleasant evening quickly passed. Whist and music were participated in and refreshments of ices and cake were enjoyed. H. Willie Simonds made the highest score at whist.

There is no foundation for anxiety concerning the so-called scarlet fever epidemic. There is only one isolated case and seems to be no cause for alarm. Although there are a number of scholars, both from the Noah Torrey and Pond street schools kept at home by their parents orders, this precaution seems no longer necessary. The Noah Torrey school has been thoroughly fumigated and the Rosedale scholars have been kept at home for the past week.

Friday evening, the home of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Parker of Hancock street was the scene of a pleasant family gathering. It was the thirty-third anniversary of their marriage and the immediate family were invited to assist in observing the day. Among the guests were noticed Mr. and Mrs. H. Willie Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. Percy W. Holbrook and children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parker of Brockton, the members of the household and a few friends who came to offer best wishes.

There was a large attendance at the dancing party held Thursday evening under the auspices of the Braintree club at the Town hall. Cuff's orchestra of five pieces was on hand and the beautiful night and good music called out many dancers. These dances are held for sociability's sake and are sure to be popular. The floor was in charge of Moses McGaughey, assisted by Seth Catlin and Edward P. Cuff. The committee in charge consisted of Moses McGaughey, Hugh Durwood, Norton P. Potter and John B. Dyer.

For Good of the Community.

"Have you ever done anything for the good of the community?" asked the solid citizen of the weary wayfarer.

"Yes," replied the weary wayfarer. "I've just done a month."

The Mason Bee.

The mason bee makes its nest of mud or mortar, something after the manner of the mud wasp. The female bee does all the work, sticking grains of sand and bits of clay together with her glue.

COCHATO CLUB BALL.

The annual Cochato club ball last night was "the best yet" and reflects great credit upon Mr. G. E. Williams who has the management in charge each year. The hall was transformed into a beautiful Dutch garden by professional city decorators. Mullaly's full orchestra were nearly out of sight upon the stage in back of a profusion of potted plants, flowers and other decorations. In front of the stage were seated the matrons, Mrs. Winfred L. Shaw, Mrs. H. L. Kincaide, Mrs. Gordon M. Keating, Mrs. William E. Field, Mrs. Charles A. Boyce and Mrs. William F. Kimball.

A reception was held from eight to eight-thirty the ushers being Dr. C.H. Gould, Dr. C. R. Marstin and Messrs George L. Anderson, Wilmont R. Averill, Arthur Davenport, William E. Field, Harold M. Gage, George H. Hamblett, Henry R. Holden, William F. Kimball, Delcevare King, Frank P. Rhoades, Chester E. Tenney and Col. Henry L. Kincaide.

Dancing was enjoyed until ten o'clock and then an adjournment was made to the banquet hall where a most appetizing supper was served. Dancing was resumed until midnight. The attendance was very large in spite of the disagreeable rain storm and Quincy and the near by towns were well represented.

The ladies were presented by Mr. Williams with valuable souvenirs, leather toilet sets, containing dance orders, mirror, powder tissue etc. All club members and guests are indebted to Mr. Williams for a most enjoyable evening.

SCHOOLHOUSE BIDS OPENED

Several Bids for Heating and Ventilating Systems

Bids were opened b CCommissioner Bainbridge this morning for heating and ventilating the two new school buildings, one at Wollaston and the other at Montclair. A number of bids were received and it looks as though the firm of Stone, Underhill Co., of which Eugene R. Stone of this city is a partner, were the lowest bidders. They were the lowest bidders for the Montclair school, although one bid was received lower than theirs, but it did not comply with the requirements, as no check accompanied the bid.

On the Wollaston school there was one bid very much lower than all the others, in fact it was over $2,000 lower than the Stone, Underhill bid and $6,000 lower than the highest bid. It seemed to be the impression that the bidder had made a mistake in stating that the bid was for the Wollaston instead of the Montclair schoql.

The several bids were as follows:

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

SOUTH BRAINTREE.

Tuesday, Jan. 10, was the thirty-seventh anniversay of Harrie A. Simond's birth. In remembrance of the occasion about twenty of his relatives gathered at his home on Franklin street greatly surprising him by their presence. A most pleasant evening quickly passed. Whist and music were participated in and refreshments of ices and cake were enjoyed. H. Willie Simonds made the highest score at whist.

There is no foundation for anxiety concerning the so-called scarlet fever epidemic. There is only one isolated case and seems to be no cause for alarm. Although there are a number of scholars, both from the Noah Torrey and Pond street schools kept at home by their parents orders, this precaution seems no longer necessary. The Noah Torrey school has been thoroughly fumigated and the Rosedale scholars have been kept at home for the past week.

Friday evening, the home of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Parker of Hancock street was the scene of a pleasant family gathering. It was the thirty-third anniversary of their marriage and the immediate family were invited to assist in observing the day. Among the guests were noticed Mr. and Mrs. H. Willie Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. Percy W. Holbrook and children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parker of Brockton, the members of the household and a few friends who came to offer best wishes.

There was a large attendance at the dancing party held Thursday evening under the auspices of the Braintree club at the Town hall. Cuff's orchestra of five pieces was on hand and the beautiful night and good music called out many dancers. These dances are held for sociability's sake and are sure to be popular. The floor was in charge of Moses McGaughey, assisted by Seth Catlin and Edward P. Cuff. The committee in charge consisted of Moses McGaughey, Hugh Durwood, Norton P. Potter and John B. Dyer.

For Good of the Community.

"Have you ever done anything for the good of the community?" asked the solid citizen of the weary wayfarer.

"Yes," replied the weary wayfarer. "I've just done a month."

The Mason Bee.

The mason bee makes its nest of mud or mortar, something after the manner of the mud wasp. The female bee does all the work, sticking grains of sand and bits of clay together with her glue.

COCHATO CLUB BALL.

The annual Cochato club ball last night was "the best yet" and reflects great credit upon Mr. G. E. Williams who has the management in charge each year. The hall was transformed into a beautiful Dutch garden by professional city decorators. Mullaly's full orchestra were nearly out of sight upon the stage in back of a profusion of potted plants, flowers and other decorations. In front of the stage were seated the matrons, Mrs. Winfred L. Shaw, Mrs. H. L. Kincaide, Mrs. Gordon M. Keating, Mrs. William E. Field, Mrs. Charles A. Boyce and Mrs. William F. Kimball.

A reception was held from eight to eight-thirty the ushers being Dr. C.H. Gould, Dr. C. R. Marstin and Messrs George L. Anderson, Wilmont R. Averill, Arthur Davenport, William E. Field, Harold M. Gage, George H. Hamblett, Henry R. Holden, William F. Kimball, Delcevare King, Frank P. Rhoades, Chester E. Tenney and Col. Henry L. Kincaide.

Dancing was enjoyed until ten o'clock and then an adjournment was made to the banquet hall where a most appetizing supper was served. Dancing was resumed until midnight. The attendance was very large in spite of the disagreeable rain storm and Quincy and the near by towns were well represented.

The ladies were presented by Mr. Williams with valuable souvenirs, leather toilet sets, containing dance orders, mirror, powder tissue etc. All club members and guests are indebted to Mr. Williams for a most enjoyable evening.

TALKED OF DIVORCE PLANS

"Man In the Case" Makes His Appearance in Schenk Trial

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 14.—The tedium of hypothetical questions and technical testimony was suddenly jarred in the Schenk case when the state brought into the court records the first intimation of scandal, in its prosecution of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk on the charge of administering poison to her husband.

Daniel Phillips was called. In no plans of the prosecution that have been given out had his name been mentioned.

Phillips told of long automobile rides with Mrs. Schenk at her invitation, covering a period of more than eighteen months before her arrest. During the last year, he said, Mrs. Schenk had talked to him about plans to procure a divorce and later talked almost constantly of the strong probabilities of her husband's death.

Phillips admitted that Mrs. Schenk on various occasions had given him many presents, among them a diamond pin and a smoking jacket.

IS PARTIALLY PARALYZED

Nervous Strain Has Made Czarina's Condition Extremely Critical

St. Petersburg, Jan. 14.—The czarina is again critically ill. All court fetes have been postponed. Partial paralysis has attacked her feet and is extending to her legs and arms. The doctors cannot give any reason for her condition, except nervous strain, nor can they suggest any treatment.

The czar is in constant attendance on the czarina, doing everything in his power to rouse her from the state of depression into which she has permanently fallen. She shows interest in nothing except the czarewitch, fears for whose safety haunt her day and night.

The court is again plunged into gloom, while the life of the imperial family is dull and sorrowful in the extreme.

HUMAN LIVES WERE NEEDLESSLY WASTED

Crew of Pine Forest Would Have Been Safe on Barge

Provincetown, Mass., Jan. 14.—The names of the three victims of the barge disaster on Peaked Hill bars last Tuesday whose bodies have not been surrendered by the sea became known last night when identification of the fourteen bodies recovered was completed. The men who rest in a watery grave are: Albert Sorenson, a deck hand of the barge Trevorton, and Clarence B. Burns and Emar Hjarth, both deck hands on the barge Pine Forest.

A trip to the barge Pine Forest, still stranded on Peaked Hill bars, developed certain indications that if Captain Hall and his four men had stayed by their vessel they would be alive today.

The decks of the barge are not badly damaged, although her hull is "hogged," and the rooms are comparatively dry. The cook's galley was entirely free from water, and the food was in good condition. The men's clothing hanging on the walls is perfectly dry. "It was a needless waste of human life," said one of the life savers.

AN ACT OF VENGEANCE

Famous Picture of "The Night Watch" Slashed In Amsterdam Museum

Amsterdam, Jan. 14.—Rembrandt's famous picture, "The Night Watch," was badly damaged by a discharged naval cook named Sigrist, who entered the Rijk's museum, and with a knife deliberately slashed the painting.

The cuts traverse the principal figures of Captain Frans Banning Cocq's company of arquebusiers, but art experts, who afterward viewed the work, expressed the opinion that the damage was not beyond repair.

Sigrist, who was arrested, declared that his vandalism was an act of vengeance against the state because of his discharge from the service in the navy.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING SON

Woman Takes Little Fellow's Life by Giving Him Acid

HE HAD ASKED FOR DRINK

Mystery Concerning Tragedy In Swamp Cleared Up by Arrest of Mother of Victim, Who Claims She Was Driven to Commit Terrible Deed Because of Poverty—Police Think Child Struggled For His Life

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 14.—Arrested, as she claimed her trunk at the New York Central station, Mrs. Edith Melber, a widow, who says she is 23 years old, of Schenectady, last night confessed, according to the Rochester police, that in a swamp near Albany, on Jan. 6, she gave her 5-year-old son George carbolic acid, from the effects of which he died.

She was locked up on a charge of murder in the first degree and will be taken to Albany today.

In explanation of the crime, the police say, Mrs. Melber asserts that she has been a widow four years, during which time she has had a struggle to care for herself and her child and that this battle for an existence drove her to take the boy's life.

She is an unusually attractive young woman and at the end of her examination was unnerved and weeping hysterically.

The police were able to make the arrest by keeping watch at the New York Central depot over a cheap new trunk that had been checked from Schenectady, which was believed to be the property of Mrs. Melber. When the woman appeared to get it she was placed under arrest.

Mrs. Melber at first maintained considerable composure and declared that she had given her child to an uncle who was going to take him to Chicago and care for him. When she made her confession, according to the police, she said that she gave the child the acid when he asked for a drink.

The police say there is a burn, as if by acid, on the woman's hand, and that other stains are on her clothing, which indicate, they allege, that the child did not take the acid without struggling.

Mrs. Melber says she left Schenectady Thursday afternoon and came to Rochester to look for work. She stayed at the rooms of the Young Women's Christian association Thursday night, and says that she spent yesterday looking for employment.

America the Best Country the Sultan of Sulu Has Seen

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Sultan of Sulu has written to President Taft giving him some of the impressions his recent trip to the United States made on his mind.

"America in general is the best country I saw on my tour," he says, "and I expect, if I live, to make another trip to the States, bringing other chiefs along to open their eyes as ours were opened on the trip. The trip did not cost half of what I thought it would." He says that he and his party "feel like new born."

He informs the president that he has "ordered the chiefs and head men of the district to be loyal to the government, and above all, send their children to school, for which I set an example by sending my brother's children."

TWO YEARS FOR INGERSOLL

Former Bank Treasurer Will Serve Time In County Jail

Saco, Me., Jan. 14.—Richmond H. Ingersoll, former treasurer of the York County Savings bank of Biddeford, which was closed on Aug. 12 last, was sentenced in the supreme court to serve two years in the county jail at Alfred. Ingersoll pleaded nolo to two counts of the indictment returned against him last faill, charging the embezzlement of $500 and $1000 respectively, and the other two counts were dropped. Sentence was imposed on the first count, the second being placed on file.

The closing of the bank followed the discovery that Ingersoll had been guilty of numerous irregularities, resulting in a deficiency of more than $300,000 in bank funds. Owing to his feeble condition, from illness and two alleged attempts at suicide, Ingersoll's trial was postponed until the present term of court.

CAUSE OF BIG STRIKES

Carnegie Places Blame Upon Shoulders of Employers' Assistants

New York, Jan. 14.—Nine out of ten strikes are due to employers' assistants, not to any question of the money involved, in the opinion of Andrew Carnegie. He so stated in addressing the delegates to the National Civic federation.

"The more capital does for labor, the more profit the employer makes," said Carnegie. "I have not had any strikes in twenty-six years. I have not let any one have anything to say about labor but myself."

Scotland has outstripped the United States in its protection for working men, said Carnegie. He thought, however, that the workingmen's compensation act was a step in the right direction, making toward closer relationship between employer and employe.

FOR ROOSEVELT AND WICKERSHAM

Taft Makes Appointments Not Pleasing to Congressmen

Washington, Jan. 14.—President Taft sent to the senate the nominations of two New York men against the wishes of practically every member of the New York delegation. The nominees are W. J. Youngs to be district attorney, and Van Vechten Veeder to be judge, both to serve in the eastern district of New York.

The nomination of Youngs was made without the support or recommendation of a single member of the New York delegation and the same is true in the case of Veeder. To members from New York, President Taft justified the reappointment of Youngs on the ground that it was a personal and urgent request from Theodore Roosevelt. In the case of Veeder, the president deferred to the wishes of Attorney General Wickersham.

Members of the New York delegation were consulted about both appointments, but none approved them.

A representative of the local branch was on hand when the mail arrived ready to receive the package. The package, however, had disappeared, and O'Neil has not been seen since registering it.

Quincy women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden Bachache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Quincy woman's words:

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, 39 Quincy avenue, Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement or an attempt to stoop, sent sharp pains through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition. When Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store, as I knew of many other people who had used them with success. The contents of three boxes convinced me that they were the best kidney remedy to be had. I am now in good health."

STANDARD OIL DISSOLUTION

Pleaded For by Kellogg In the Supreme Court

HAS RECORD OF OPPRESSION

Unequalled In Commercial History of Country and Hangs Over Us Like a Threatening Cloud—Milburn Admits Corporation Has Done Some Things In Strenuous Times That It Should Not Have Done

Washington, Jan. 14.—The government's side of the story of the Standard Oil corporation with all the charges of sins laid at its doors, was placed in part before the supreme court of the United States.

After a few words of summary by John G. Milburn for the Standard Oil, Frank B. Kellogg, special assistant to the attorney general, began an address to the court in an effort to show that the Standard Oil company of New Jersey should be dissolved in accordance with the decree entered by the federal court in Missouri.

Mr. Kellogg first referred to the rebates the Standard received "up to the time this suit was begun." He took issue with Milburn's position that before the passage of the interstate commerce law in 1887 it was legal for a big shipper to receive a lower freight rate than a small shipper.

"I have listened with admiration," said he, "to the charming story of growth and centralization of this benevolent institution. It was told as only a great advocate could tell it. It was a story of how the Standard Oil was the result of natural growth, guided by the master mind of Mr. Rockefeller.

"But I mean to tell the court the cold facts. And I say on my oath as a member of this bar, and I regard that highly, that the equal of this record in oppression is not to be found in the commercial history of this country. I distrust my ability to present these facts."

Then he added that the Standard was "born and reared in oppression and hangs today over the country like a threatening cloud. Mr. Milburn does not know this record as I do," he said. "He did not sit for 187 weary days as those 20,000 pages of record were being written."

The closing words of Milburn were impressive:

"Damned for everything but praised for nothing, is the way the Standard Oil has been treated by the government," said he. "In this record, covering forty years of business, everything the Standard has ever done is related. It has done some things in strenuous times that it should not have done. That was human. It has done nothing that goes to the issue here.

"The evil of the affirmance of this decree, it is needless for me to say, would be monstrous. It is fortunate that the case is left in the hands of a court that listens to reason and never hears the voice of passion and prejudice."

PARCELS POST FAVORED

Experiment on Rural Routes Is Recommended to Senate

Washington, Jan. 14.—A measure providing for a limited parcels post on rural free delivery routes was reported favorably to the senate from the committee on postoffices and post roads.

The measure provides, in substance, that for one year beginning April 1, 1911, the postmaster general may authorize postmasters and carriers on such rural routes as he shall select to accept for delivery by carrier, at such rates of postage as he shall determine, packages not exceeding eleven pounds in weight, containing no mail matter of the first class and no matter that is declared by law to be unmailable. The results of this experiment the postmaster general is directed to report to congress at its next session.

DIED OF NATURAL CAUSES

Finding In Case of Girl Who Was Thought to Have Been Slain

Boston, Jan. 14.—The body of a young woman found in the passageway on Central wharf, and who was at first thought to have been murdered, is believed to be that of Miss Maria Sumpter, formerly an inmate of the House of the Good Shepherd.

Medical Examiner Magrath viewed the body and pronounced death due to natural causes. Identification was made through the number "37" which was found on the young woman's corsets.

Perhaps Work of Firebug

Watertown, Mass., Jan. 14.—The state police are making a thorough investigation to determine, if possible, how the fire started Wednesday night that destroyed the mansion on the Adams estate here. Rumors are rife that the origin of the fire was of an incendiary nature.

Fire Destroys Pension Records

Washington, Jan. 14.—A fire of mysterious origin in the pension bureau building destroyed thousands of valuable documents and records in pension cases.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hubbite Pygmies Cast Mudballs across Charles Sumner's Grave—Old Steampipe, the Alligator, is Boston's Latest Curiosity—From Art to Artichokes in Copley Square—American Athenians Find Out "Who is Sylvia?" Mrs. Pankhurst's Second Daughter Appeals to Massachusetts Men for Justice to Their Women Folk.

From art to artichokes; from classic casts to modern French cooking. Many Bostonians are viewing with a little regret the rapid demolition of the historic structure in Copely Square which for many years did service as the Museum of Fine Arts to make way for an up to date million dollar hotel. The roof is already practically removed, and it will be but a short time before the ornate facade of the well known landmark will be only a memory. Many residents of the Hub feel very much as if this destruction of one of the three principal features of Copley "Square" sounded the death knell of the famous triangle. It is promised that the vast hotel to be erected shall be an ornament to the city, and it is hoped that it, at least, may not strike too discordant a note in combination with Trinity Church and the Public Library. One regrets incidentally the passing of the old art school room on whose walls are many and heterogeneous examples of the diversions of one-time students some of whom are now famous artists.

Although Boston's new zoo is not far enough along to receive exhibits as yet, a "steampipe alligator" is attracting considerable attention in the old town. This interesting reptile was recently consigned to the Animal Rescue League, since when the League's troubles have been materially increased. The name "Steampipe" originated in the fact that the alligator communes with himself in the privacy of his shallow tank at the top of the building in a manner resembling an overcharged steam radiator letting itself loose. Strong, loud, penetrating hisses, in prolonged gusts, lead the visitors to believe that the boiler room is located within ten feet and is about to blow everybody to eternity, or else that a thousand cats are spitting out their spite. Investigation proves that the sound emanates from a distance of several rooms and stairs, and that it is only Steampipe "phhh-hhngh-hh"-ing to himself, as a phonetically inclined newspaper man has interpreted it. The League admits that it could be induced to part with its watery guest, provided he was assured of a good home, and the future of Old Steampipe is a leading topic of discussion at its meetings. Anyone wanting a sound, well built alligator need not open his purse very wide.

"Pygmies throwing mudballs over the grave of Charles Sumner at a living giant" is a Boston newspaper's pat way of characterizing some of the speakers at the Sumner centenary which Boston has just been enjoying, if only for its truly Bostonese exchange of amenities and backhanded compliments. Against those orators who seemed to find that Sumner would have disapproved of some of the eminent services Mr. Lodge has rendered to the state and nation appeared the presentation of former Governor Guild of facts about the earlier Senator which are sometimes forgotten and which, while they do not detract from his essential greatness as a statesman, prove that he was quite as human as any of the abler men of today. To the Boston girl the circumstance, now recalled, that Charles Sumner could not get along with his wife or his wife with him appears to be a damaging confession of temperamental weakness.

Telling Boston men to look out lest they, too, may have to imprison tender young girls for stirring up civil war, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, a mere slip of youthful emininity, stood on the platform at Ford Hall, Jan. 11, and rehearsed the real story of militant happenings in her own country. Her audience, filling the thousand seats of the hall, applauded her at every turn. "Who is Sylvia?" asked, with reminiscences of a classic song, may an old time Bostonian when he heard that the second daughter of the British militant leader was coming here, while those of a younger generation hummed softly a music hall favorite of four or five years ago about "Sylvie," whose "bright eyes, like blue skies, shone out from golden hair." The visiting suffragette, as interviewed by several of the Hub's newspaper folk at the suffrage headquarters, 585 Boylston Street, proved not only to be personally as the songsters have sung but to have a grasp on her great subject that one would hardly expect of a girl of twenty-three. She has learned by doing, in the modern educational way, in the great rough and ready school of experience. Twice for disturbing the King's peace she has been in gaol (as the antiquated English prison is antiquely spelled.) In the noisome, unventilated prison cell, where sleep is difficult from the all night ravings and cursings of the dregs of humanity in other cells, where the food is bad bread and indigestible gruel three times a day, she heard and saw things which, when simply rehearsed in clear forcible English have made well meaning Britons throw up both hands in horror that in the twentieth century in a highly civilized country such things can be, and which have already led to a small measure of prison reform in old Albion. Miss Sylvia is an artist, trained in the art schools of Manchester, London and Venice; an author who has magazine articles and books to her credit, and an orator who possesses gifts similar to those of her brilliant mother. Truly a remarkable record of accomplishment for a modest, quiet, pink and white young person who has been in the hurly-burly of practical politics since her later teens. Her addresses in Boston and Cambridge were the second and third respectively in her American series, for she landed in New York only on Jan. 5. From New England she will go to the Middle West, explaining everywhere the true inwardness of happenings in Great Britain and conveying a message of hope to suffragists in a land where peaceful but vigorous education rather than the militant method is all that is needed rapidly to bring about truly democratic conditions of suffrage. The Massachusetts woman Suffrage Association has already brought to Boston and other cities of Commonwealth many extraordinarily clever women from the other side; it has never secured one whose personality was more delightful than that of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst.

Senator Bailey, Caught on Street, Telling Secrets of the Tariff.

OPPOSED BY BAILEY

May Be No Tariff Commission Legislation at Present Session

Washington, Jan. 14.—Tariff commission advocates were given something of a shock when Senator Bailey declared that there would be no tariff commission legislation at this session of congress. This terse statement is accepted as an indication on the part of Bailey and other senators to talk the tariff commission bill to death when it is taken up in the senate.

Senator Heyburn was protesting against the plan to give the tariff commission quarters in the senate office building.

"Oh," interrupted Bailey, "the senator does not need to worry about a tariff commission. There will be no tariff commission at this session of congress."

EDDY-FOSTER FILES SUIT IN EDDY WILL

Adopted Son of Noted Woman Wants Share of Her Estate

Concord, N. H., Jan. 14.—A new move was made in the conest over the will of Mary Baker G. Eddy when Dewitt C. Howe appeared in the United States district court and filed a bill in equity in behalf of Dr. Ebenezer J. Foster-Eddy.

Dr. Foster-Eddy is the adopted son of Mrs. Eddy. A number of years ago Mrs. Eddy and Foster-Eddy had trouble and from that time until her death there was no reconciliation. When the family settlement was read last spring he received $45,000 in full for his share in the estate.

The new bill in equity is similar to that filed by the son, George W. Glover, contending that the gift to the mother church in Boston is void on account of the statutes in Massachusetts and New Hampshire which limit the amount which can be given a church in a will.

FROM ALICE TO ALYS

Daughter of Secretary Meyer Sets New Style at Capital

Washington, Jan. 14.—Washington society has taken up phonetic spelling in rather an unique way. It all began with Miss Alys Meyer, daughter of the secretary of the navy, who, on her return from Europe, came back as Alys, although when she left Washington last summer she was just the old fashioned Alice.

Each one of the local newspapers was called up and given instructions that whenever the name of the eldest daughter of the secretary was used it must be spelled Alys.

The Meyer girls have always been leaders among the younger set, and now all the Alices in society are Alyses, if that be the proper plural.

WOMEN "MALE PERSONS"

Made So by Failure to Change Registration Oath In Washington

Seattle, Jan. 14.—Approximately 4000 women in Seattle have sworn they are "male persons." The form of vow adopted by law for administering to citizens the oath of registration states that the person being sworn is a "male person."

It has not been changed by legislative enactment, although women have been enfranchised in this state and those taking part in the present city registration have subscribed to an oath that makes them "male persons."

Girl Sentenced For Murder

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 14.—Rose Picchionne, 17 years old, convicted of manslaughter for killing her husband, was sentenced to prison for not less than 7½ years and not more than 11½ years. The girl hugged and kissed her baby while being sentenced and refused to allow the child to be taken from her.

SUPPER TO CHOIR MEN

Prof. Wrigley Serves All Bountifully—Good Fellowship

The men of Christ church choir and St. Chrysostom's church choir were entertained at a supper Thursday evening by Prof. Wrigley at his home on Coddington street.

The men arrived at the house at 7 o'clock. On entering the dining-room each man was told to find his place at the table. There had been placed around the table menus with each man's name on it. At the top of each menu card was a quotation one of which was, "Eat heartily—lest we think that thou didst dine before thou camest."

The table was daintily and bountifully set. There were several bouquets of pinks and sweet peas which added much to the attractiveness of it. Over the table was draped an American and an English flag.

The Rev. Frederick Steenstra of St. Chrysostom's church said grace after which the following men seated themselves around the table:

Prof. Wrigley, Rev. Frederick Steenstra, James Smith, Jr., P. S. Souther, W. S. Holmes, E. W. Newcomb, E. M. Chase, Albert E. Smith, A. W. French, William D. Purdom, F. Wrigley, C. H. Vanner, T. E. Furnald, Roy Prout, Noel Wrigley, George W. Holden, Charles C. Wrigley, George E. Allen, Walter Burke, J. E. Townsend, W. H. Haslett, H. D. Fowler, Charles P. Fox, A. E. Holland, H. Hooley, William Carter, George M. Hanson, A. H. Briggs.

The following menu was served:

Soup
Scotch Eggs
Turkey Roast Beef
Bread Sauce Yorkshire Pudding
English Plum Pudding Mince Pies
Tipsy Cake
Fruits Nuts Raisins
Cheese and Celery
Spanish Lemonade

Prof. Wrigley, who carved the turkey and roast beef, was very generous in his helpings. One of the men asked for a small order of turkey. When the young lady brought it to him he looked at it and said, "I thought I asked for a small order." She answered him by saying that that was one of Prof. Wrigely's small orders. Everything was served in the same generous manner. The English plum pudding was brought on the table with burning brandy poured over it.

The supper was interspersed with stories and anecdotes which brought forth much laughter and made it an occasion long to be remembered. When supper was over all stood up and sang the doxology.

Mrs. Wrigley was assisted in serving by the following young ladies: Mabel S. Wilson, Elsie S. Turner, Daisy F. Burnell, Anna C. McDowell, Lucy Atwood, Jean Whicher, Mary D. Braddon and Agnes Wrigley.

Master Cyril Wrigley started the evening's entertainment with a piano solo. He was followed by George E. Allen of St. Chrysostom's church who sang a solo entitled "Lindy Lou." All the men joined in singing the chorus.

A. M. French and William D. Purdmn told some interesting stories which were enjoyed by all. All the men sang the glee "Comrades in Arms" which was repeated by request.

The Rev. Frederick Steenstra was called upon for a speech. He said in part "that it was a great pleasure for him to be present at this occasion and that he was very much gratified at the splendid fellowship which existed between the church in Quincy and the church in Wollaston." He said it was such occasions as these which strengthened this fellowship. He thanked Prof. Wrigley for his generosity and kindness in bringing together the men of the two choirs.

W. H. Haslett was the next speaker. He said "it was a great pleasure for him to present to Mr. and Mrs. Wrigley in behalf of the men of Christ church choir a little token of their esteem. The little token was a handsome polished oak bookcase.

After the presentation Mr. H. W. French read a "Toast" to Mr. Wrigley.

The toast was followed by three long cheers for Prof. and Mrs. Wrigley. "Bill" Carter amused the crowd with a song called "Life is a Merry-Go-Round."

The men were next entertained with a piano duet by Elsie E. Turner and Mary D. Bragdon. Then a recitation by Daisy F. Burnell entitled "The little boys idea of the organist." The applause was so long and loud that Miss Burnell was forced to give an encore.

The entertainment was followed by a dance which included an old-fashioned Virginia reel. The party broke up late in the evening thanking Prof. Wrigley for the pleasant time they had all had.

REMARKABLE RECORDS.

At the annual church meeting of the First Baptist Sunday School of Wollaston, held this week, the secretary's report showed two rather remarkable records of Sunday school attendance, Miss Edna Rhodes having been present at every session of the school for eight years, while Miss May Critchley has a record of perfect attendance for six years. Twenty-three new members joined the school during 1910 and about $200 were subscribed for benevolences and missions.

BEN HUR LECTURE.

About 225 fellows were gathered in the assembly hall of the Y. M. C. A. this morning to hear the stereopticon lecture on "Ben Hur." This is by far the largest attendance of the season, and the attention of everyone was held throughout the lecture. BRAINTREE HIGHLANDS FIRE.

The large barn belonging to Michael Sullivan's place at the corner of Washington and Division streets was almost entirely destroyed by fire Friday. The fire started in the one story ell which connects the barn and house and is used partly as a laundry. It is supposed that the fire caught from the flue of the laundry stove.

The damage to the buildings, which is estimated at $3000, is covered by insurance, but there was no insurance on the contents, which included besides furniture, about ten tons of hay and a hundred dollars worth of grain.

All of the cows, sixteen in number were removed in time from the burning building and have been sheltered at the Bixby farm.

TWO LODGES ATTEND

Funeral of Mrs. James S. Dunstan at Christ Church

Funeral services of Mrs. Agnes R. Dunstan, who died at her home, 22 Jackson's lane, Thursday Jan. 12, were held at the Christ church, Sunday, at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. R. E. Armstrong, rector, officiating. At the close of the Episcopal service, George L. Gill Rebekah lodge, No. 146, held their funeral service, which was followed by the service of English Ivy lodge, No. 116, O. D. S. G., the deceased being a member of both lodges.

During the services the Granite City Quartette sang "Lead kindly light," "Nearer my God to Thee," "Shall we meet beyond the river" and "Good night." The church was well filled with sympathetic friends, a large delegation of members being present fromboth lodges. Several out of town relatives were also present, namely Miss Beatrice Grant, Miss Annie Tresidder and Mr. William Tresidder of Concord, N. H., Mr. Samuel Kain and Mr. John Storey of Hardwick, Vt., and Mr. and Mrs. William Mudge of Westerly, R. I.

Mrs. Dunstan was born in Scotland Feb. 7, 1847, the daughter of Elizabeth (Halladay) and John Kain. She came to America in 1873. She was united in marriage with James S. Dunstan in 1880 and had resided in Quincy 31 years. She visited England and Scotland in 1886.

She has been in ill health for sometime, and the death of her only son some six months ago was a terrible blow from which she never fully recovered. She was a devoted wife and mother, a good neighbor and friend, ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in need, to visit the sick and comfort the sorrowing. She was a charter member of George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge and English Ivy lodge, and won by her untiring efforts and interest, a great many friends. She leaves behind to mourn her loss a large circle of friends who will ever remember her constancy and faithfulness at all times. She is survived by her husband, one sister and two brothers.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful a silent offering of the sympathy that words fail to express.

APPOINTMENTS ARE EXPECTED

Mayor Shea to Forward to City Council Tonight

It is expected that Mayor Shea will forward to the City Council tonight the name of the gentlemen who will compose his official family for the year 1911. It is not expected that there will be any change from the officials now in office. It will be a regular meeting of the council and any business will be in order. No committee have met since the last meeting, and the business will be largely new business.

One of the matters that will come up will be the election of a member of Board of Managers of the Woodward Fund and Property. Nominations for this office were made at the first meeting of the City Council, and under the ordinance had to lay on the table for at least two weeks. The two gentlemen nominated were ex-Councilman George W. Abele and ex-Councilman Richard R. Freeman. Mr. Freeman served on the board last year as the member elected by the Council.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES

In Large Numbers Attend Vespers at St. John's

The Holy Name societies connected with the St. John's, St. Mary's and Sacret Heart churches of Quincy, St Francis of Braintree, Sacred Heart, St. Francis Xavier's and Immaculate Conception of Weymouth, and St. Paul's of Hingham, attended a solemn high vesper service at St. John's church Sunday afternoon in honor of the feast of the Holy Name of Jesus, which was celebrated by Catholic churches all over the world. The society from St. Mary's church marched from West Quincy, the line being headed by the pastor Rev. Henry T. Grady, Mayor Shea and James F. Burke, president of the Norfolk County Catholic federation.

Vespers was celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe of Atlantic, with Rev. Henry T. Grady of West Quincy as deacon, Rev. John A. Butler of South Weymouth as sub-deacon, and Rev. Andrew J. Fitzgerald of South Braintree as master of ceremonies. Music was furnished by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahan. The solos were "Alma Redemptoris" by Dennis S. Sweeney, "Veni Creator Spiritus" by Dr. Thomas R. Donovan, and "O Salutaris" by Edward J. Sullivan.

The sermon was preached by Rev. Neil Paul Brennan of St. John's church on "The power and saving grace of Jesus' Name." It was an appeal for greater respect for the name of Jesus and for an abstinence from profanity, cursing and immoral talk.

BURGLARIES REPORTED AT TWO STORES

Police Do Good Job and Arrest two Young Fellows on Boston Road

Both Held by Court for the Grand Jury

A good catch was made by the police department early Sunday morning when Officer Reiley arrested two young men on Hancock street near the corner of Beale street for breaking and entering lunch room of George Irwin opposite the car barn.

It was but a little after 3 o'clock Sunday morning when George Troup, one of the night men at the car barn, heard a glass smash and saw two men standing near the window of Irwin's lunch room. He thought at first that it was some of the car men fooling, and shouted to them. At that the two men came around the corner and started down Hancock street on the run toward Boston.

Troup telephoned the police station and Sergt. Hanson dispatched the police auto on the search for the men, and also notified the officers on the beats at Wollaston and Atlantic to look out for the men. Shortly after word came from Officer Reiley that he had arrested two men near the corner of Hancock and Beale streets.

The two were taken to the police station and locked up. Here they gave their names as William J. Mullaney, aged 20 years, Brackett street, Quincy, and John F. Hennessey, aged 23 years, of Prospect street, East Braintree.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The vote sellers in Ohio seem to have carried some precincts at the late election unanimously.

President Smith, of the University of Pennsylvania, says college yells are inspiring. Unquestionably, but what kind of feelings do they inspire.

What that New York man needs, who tried to shoot himself three times and each time ducked the bullet, is a good sure nerve tonic.

Harry Thaw has been discharged from Bankruptcy, but not from the custody of Aunt Mattie, the insane asylum matron.

Lieut. Vernon Boller says that 1,000 biplanes could transport an army of 10,000 men across mountains as high as the Alps in a day. We fear that not a few would prefer to scratch under.

The President has sent a message to congress urging fortification of the Panama canal. He wants five millions of dollars to start the work. Nothing will more quickly enlist sentiment in favor of earthworks and guns for the canal than the opposition which is appearing in the British and Japanese papers.

The moving picture show, that much discussed amusement scheme of the twentieth century is to be utilized in the fight against the great white plague. Films showing how the disease originates and is scattered and fought will be shown in thousands of shows at the same time. It is a grewsome object lesson but one which will be productive of much good as many millions of people will be prompted to assist in the fight against the dread disease.

Have you had the distressing cold, grip, distemper or whatever it is that is so prevalent just now? It seems to number many victims and while not especially severe in the majority of cases, still it is decidedly uncomfortable. There seems to be a good deal of sickness just now of one kind or another and it is a pretty good plan to be as careful of one's health as possible. How true is the old saw: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

People are prone to "kick" about the weather but here in New England especially at this time of year it would seem that there is variety enough to suit the most exacting. There are days when we have high and low temperatures, sunshine and storm, fair weather and foul and more changes in twenty-four hours than could reasonably be expected in a week. Well some people are never satisfied anyway and the weather is always a safe subject for conversation.

At this time, installation ceremonies are due in the various orders and societies of the town and the several officers-elect are inducted into office and admonished with many high sounding phrases to do their part well and reflect credit on their order. This is all very fine but the great majority of members who hold no office have a responsibility just as weighty. It is their duty to put their shoulders to the wheel, encourage their superiors by word and action and in short make themselves such necessary parts of the machine that it cannot be run without them. The officers cannot do all the work. Rally to their aid everybody and see if your own lodge doesn't show a substantial gain in all departments at the end of the year.

—A stocking social such as they have had in Brockton, where each lady is expected to contribute a certain number of cents according to the size of her hosiery, ought to produce considerable revenue in Chicago.—Somerville Journal.

DRIFT OF OPINION

An exchange expresses the belief that the legislative petition for the creation of New Year's day as a legal holiday will be favorably acted upon by the legislature. The News, for one paper, is quite as well satisfied in its own mind that the project will fail. There are in Massachusetts enough of holidays that are such in name only without adding further to the list. If another holiday were to be created, there is vastly more reason why the twelfth of February should be selected, in commemoration of the fame and services of Abraham Lincoln, than the opening day of the new year. One objection to thus honoring the martyred president is the fact that the twenty-second of February is a legal holiday, in honor of him who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." With Christmas a holiday, favoring the plea for a New Year scheme would bring two holidays within a week of each other. That is asking too much. Because some of the states have made the first day of the new year a day of idleness for people, in causing wage earners to lose a day's pay, and in casting a glamour upon legalized loafing, the Massachusetts legislature is under no stress to follow a practice open to serious objections from a number of standpoints.—Salem News.

The rush of bills, orders, resolves and petitions on Beacon Hill has set in, and the legislative hopper will soon be filled, as usual, to the bursting point. What are known as the "perennials" must be looked for, along with a lot of new propositions, upon which the various committees will not be required to waste much gray matter, in settling upon the best disposition to be made of them. What ever may be said of conditions elsewhere, the "divine right of petition" in Massachusetts is maintained in all its purity and majesty, and he that has a mission to promote or fancied remedies for various ills with which the body politic is afflicted or seemingly afflicted, has a broad road before him for the presentation of his appeal. From a cursory examination of many of the propositions thus far presented, it is easy to see that such committee reports as "inexpedient to legislate," "leave to withdraw," or "no legislation necessary," will become familiar as the session wears on.—Salem News.

The earth is slowly cooling and man will freeze, not starve to death in the distant future, according to Dr. Harvery W. Wiley, chief chemist of the department of agriculture, in an address before the Secular league at Washington. However, he added, there will be fuel for at least another million years. "In the future," he said further, "the air will furnish heat, fuel and power, and companies will be formed for utilizing it. This is not a theory, but an actuality of the future based upon actual conditions and natural laws."

STATE INSPECTOR HERE.

A test was recently made of the heating and ventilating apparatus which was installed last summer in the new Atherton Hough schoolbuilding at Hough's Neck, by State Inspector Burfitt.

After making a test of each room, the inspector found that the plant was supplying an average of 52 cubic feet of fresh air for each of the scholars accommodated in the building, and was exhausting an average of 59 cubic feet of foul air per minute for each of the pupils, while the State requires only 30 cubic feet of air per pupil per minute supply and exhaust.

He also found that there was a difference of only two degrees in the temperature in any portion of the class-rooms. This test shows what the apparatus is capable of doing, and with proper management, the pupils in the Hough's Neck district will receive the very best results in the way of heating and ventilation from this plant. State inspector Burfitt remarked that the test was very satisfactory to him.

BODY FROZEN IN ICE

No Clue to Identity of Girl Found In a Providence Pond

Providence, Jan. 16.—The ice in Leonard pond at the north end of the city has embalmed a mystery for nearly a month in the form of the body of a young woman, apparently refined and well dressed, which was discovered Sunday by two boy skaters.

Its icy surroundings had preserved the body against decomposition and the features were as plain as they must have been in life.

The identity of the young woman, however, is not known. Death was due to drowning, according to Medical Examiner Griffin, who said further that no signs of foul play were apparent.

He that is ungrateful has no fault but one. All other crimes may pass for virtues in him.—Young.

BOY POISON VICTIM

George Melber, Who Was Killed by His Mother

POLICE HIDE MURDERESS

Feared Angry Crowd Which Gathered to See Mrs. Melber

Albany, Jan. 16.—A ruse of the Albany police disappointed several thousand persons who crowded in and about the Union station to catch a glimpse of Mrs. Edith Melber, the young Schenectady widow brought here from Rochester to answer the charge of murdering her 5-year-old son, George.

Stories of the woman's confession of how she killed the boy by pouring carbolic acid down his throat, when he asked for a drink of water, and hid the body in swamp land near Schenectady, had collected a throng of such temper the police feared to risk taking the woman through it.

They had the train stopped at West Albany, three miles from the center of the city, where Mrs. Melber and the detective alighted. When the throng learned they had been duped they made rush to police headquarters, but were too late.

D'AULBY CONVICTED, BUT HE GOES FREE

Result of "Fake Art" Trial Involving Two Boston Women

Tours, France, Jan. 16.—"Count" D'Aulby de Gatigny, was convicted and sentenced to one month's imprisonment. As he had already spent more than a month in jail, while awaiting trial, D'Aulby was given his freedom. Under existing French law, time spent in jail before trial is credited against the sentence.

Countess D'Aulby, who also was on trial with her husband, but against whom the charge was abandoned by the prosecution, was acquitted.

D'Aulby was accused by Duchess de Choiseul-Praslin with fraud in connection with the sale to her late husband, Charles H. Paine of Boston, of a collection of pictures.

The defendant maintained his good faith in his dealings with the Paines, contending that if the pictures were not what he represented them to be, it was because he had been deceived himself. He also defended his claim to the title of count. His wife was a Boston woman, Francesca Lunt.

DISPLAY OF AVARICE

Sons and Wife of Tolstoi Seek to Gain Money Out of His Name

St. Petersburg, Jan. 16.—Russians are becoming outspoken in their dissatisfaction at the businesslike persistence with which the members of the late Count Tolstoi's family are making capital out of his name.

The youngest daughter, Alexandra, is an exception, but her brother, Count Ilya, acting for himself and his brother, has formally petitioned the government to purchase the estate at Yasnaya Polyana and make it national property.

They ask $500,000 for their share and their mother wants $500,000 more for hers. There is little likelihood that they will get anything from the government.

Cierva Mysteriously Ill

Madrid, Jan. 16.—While Senor Cierva, who was minister of the interior when Ferrer was executed and upon whom at attempt at assassination was recently made by an anarchist, was attending a banquet given by members of the senate he was taken violently ill. No explanation of his sickness is given.

A Defender of Santa Claus

Kansas City, Jan. 16.—Senator Robinson introduced in the Kansas legislature today a bill which provides a fine of not less than $600 for any adult person who tells a child that there is no such person as Santa Claus. It is the greatest tragedy of childhood to scatter such illusions, Robinson says.

AMES PUT IN ANANIAS CLUB

He Is Accused of Outrageous, Deliberate Falsehood

ROOSEVELT WIRES TO WALKER

Vigorously Denies That He Reprimanded Lodge For "Monkeying" With Purchase of Colliers, and Praises Senator's Honesty—Congressman Says He Has Not Overstated Case and Reiterates Charges

Boston, Jan. 16.—Congressman Butler Ames, Republican candidate for United States senator against Henry C. Lodge, was placed squarely in the Ananias class by ex-President Roosevelt in a telegram to Speaker Walker of the Massachusetts house.

Mr. Roosevelt brands as a "deliberate and outrageous falsehood" the statement made by Ames that Roosevelt had reprimanded Lodge in the presence of former Secretary of the Navy Newberry for his alleged attempt to force the purchase of two colliers by the navy department at a price of $500,000 in excess of their real value.

"The story told by Ames, reported in the newspapers, as to the alleged conversation between me, Lodge and Newberry about purchase of colliers is a deliberate and outrageous falsehood," Roosevelt telegraphed from Oyster Bay. "I never made any such remark, and no such conversation ever took place.

"During the twenty-six years I have known Senator Lodge he has on all occasions, and especially on every occasion when he dealt with public matters, or had any connection with anything in the government's behalf, conducted himself not merely with absolute honesty, but with the most delicate sense of propriety.

"I never had any talk with him about these colliers at all. It is shocking to think that Mr. Ames should invent such an infamous falsehood about a public man of such rigid integrity and probity, a falsehood for which there is not even the smallest foundation in fact."

The story in question was told by Ames Friday night. He said Lodge had fixed up an amendment to the sundry appropriation bill so that no colliers but those he wanted could be purchased; that Newberry protested against the purchase of those boats at the excessive price asked, and that when they saw President Roosevelt, he said:

"Newberry, can't you and my friend, Cabot, get together on this proposition?" Whereupon Newberry told the president the whole history of the transaction, after hearing which Roosevelt turned to Lodge and said:

"Cabot, I told you not to monkey with these things. Secretary Newberry is absolutely right."

Mr. Ames said Newberry told him the story and that it was common talk in Washington, but Newberry joins with Roosevelt in branding it a lie.

After learning of Roosevelt's comment Ames said:

"I am neither surprised nor disturbed at my initiation into the celebrated club. I have invented nothing and have not knowingly overstated or misstated the case. The fact that I should be initiated into the celebrated club before pains were taken to get an accurate statement from me was to be expected.

"I have given to the press what I believe to be a true statement of the facts in connection with these colliers. I was to some extent incorrectly quoted in the morning papers."

The latest statement to which Ames refers denies that he ever mentioned the particular words "calling down" or "called down" in reference to Roosevelt's conversation with Lodge. Otherwise his statement is practically as originally printed.

Senator Lodge's friends and campaign managers profess to be happy over the result of their week's hard work and claim that the senator will be re-elected in both branches of the legislature Tuesday and that a ballot in a joint convention on Wednesday will not be necessary. One hundred and twenty-one is a majority of the house of representatives and twenty-one is a majority of the senate.

Congressman Ames and his lieutenants scoff at the Lodge claims and state that besides a good sprinkling of Democrats he will have thirty Republican voters in the house and senate.

The combined Republican strength on a joint ballot is 153. If thirty Republicans should vote for Ames Tuesday and Wednesday it would mean that the legislature would be deadlocked on the senatorship.

A TEST FOR COWARDICE

By VERNON ARNOLD

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Asspciation.

A number of army officers in a garrison on the western frontier where they had nothing to do were discussing what constituted bravery. One declared that a brave man was born brave and a coward was born a coward; another that true bravery was resisting fear natural to all normal persons. One officer declared that bravery depended on the action of the heart, citing the case of Napoleon I., whose heartbeat even on the eve of battle was not over forty to the minute. A young lieutenant with a mild blue eye and soft voice remarked that Frederick the Great had said, "The man who has never felt fear has never snuffed a candle with his fingers."

The colonel looked at this speaker contemptuously and gave a grunt. Surgeon Bates observed the colonel's action, but went on smoking without expressing any opinion on the subject under discussion.

"What do you think about it, doctor?" asked the colonel.

"I think you are a coward, colonel."

If a bomb had come out of the doctor's mouth instead of words and exploded then and there it could not have produced more of a shock.

"Withdraw your charge, sir, at once or go to your quarters under arrest."

"I will only withdraw it after a failure to prove its truth."

"I have proved its falsity on many a battlefield."

"I will not deny that under excitement you have temporarily thrown off fear, but I deny that you can maintain your bravery while perfectly cool. If you will submit to a test I will prove what I say—that you are a coward."

"Proceed with your test. I have sat on my horse motionless while shell after shell burst over my head. There was no excitement in that. Members of my staff were so restive that they moved at every shot. Does not that prove I am no coward?"

"You may have stood that test so far as appearances were concerned—that is, you were able to control your fear. The test I refer to will eliminate everything except fear and show you what you are—a coward."

"Bring on your test, sir," cried the colonel angrily, "and if you fail to prove your charge be prepared to answer yourself the charge of conduct prejudicial to military discipline in this, that you have called your commanding officer a coward in presence of his subordinate officers."

Surgeon Bates while in the wild west had gathered a number of live specimens of animals of different varieties, one of them a rattlesnake that he kept in a five gallon demijohn divested of the wickerwork on the outside. The glass was transparent, so that the snake could see and be seen, air passed through wire gauze, used in place of a stopper. The doctor arose and, going into his office, returned with the captive, placing the demijohn on a table.

"Colonel," he said, "I have called you a coward. But, mind you, I have only applied the word to you in accordance with your own idea of what constitutes a coward. If you stand the test I am about to apply I will willingly submit to be tried by court martial for throwing discredit on my commanding officer. Step up to the table, colonel, and place your hand on the demijohn."

The colonel walked to the table and placed the palm of his hand on the glass. Quick as lightning the snake, vicious beyond measure, struck at the hand, and equally quick the colonel jerked his hand away. Mortified beyond measure, he put it back on the demijohn, and when the snake struck again he drew it away again.

"That will do, colonel," said the doctor. "You are welcome to prefer charges against me, but to substantiate your case you must be prepared to keep your hand on that glass while the snake strikes at you. But you are not the only man here who, according to your idea, is not brave. Not one of you can stand the test. Gentlemen, step up and try it. The snake can't hurt you; the glass is a perfect protection."

One after another of those present placed a hand on the demijohn, and at the snake's strike each and every man recoiled. Then Dr. Bates said:

"No man can keep his hand on that glass where the snake strikes at it for the simple reason that the nerves that direct motion act independently of the will. In this case before the will can be brought to bear the muscles have done the work."

"Then what is bravery?" asked the colonel.

"A brave man is one whose bodily machine is so constructed and adjusted in its different parts as to enable him to be brave.

"But the will," asked the major—"what part does it play?"

"In reply to this question I give you only my own idea on the will's part in bravery. If it is strong enough and other faculties are not too weak it may enable the man to stand up in face of danger till he gets back near enough to his brute nature to fight. In other words, his fear becomes paralyzed, leaving him what we call brave."

The colonel soon after this, leading his men against the Indians, showed the white feather. The surgeon's test had destroyed his confidence in himself. The blue eyed lieutenant was promoted for bravery.

New Colds Bad enough, to be sure. But old colds are worse. Better stop your fresh cold at once. Never hesitate to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Use it or not, as he says. He knows. J. C. Ayer Co. Lowell, Mass.

RESERVES CALLED OUT

Necessary to Protect Alleged Kidnappers From Menacing Crowd

New York, Jan. 16.—The menacing attitude of a crowd of nearly 1000 gathered on the sidewalk before a courtroom led to the calling out of police reserves during the trial of Felio Esposito and Vincezo Nicoza, charged with kidnapping 16-year-old Antoinetta Szambetta.

The witnesses in the case were white with terror, and even the detectives betrayed signs of alarm. A throng of angry men were forced out into the street by the police, and the trial began. Detective Santoso took the stand, but was interrupted by Nicoza, who sprang at his throat.

"You lie," screamed the prisoner, fighting off the bailiffs. "I will get you; and if I don't we will."

Nicoza was thrown back into the prisoners' box and the trial was adjourned.

FIRST READER DISMISSED

It Results In Split In Christian Science Church In Newark

Newark, Jan. 16.—Trouble that has been fomenting for several years in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Newark, reached a climax when it became known that twenty-two members of the congregation had resigned. The dissension is said to have been the result of the dismissal of Frederick W. LePorin, who was the first reader in the church.

What caused LePorin's dismissal could not be learned, but it is declared that his removal disqualifies him from becoming a reader of a second church which he proposed to establish in Newark.

Affairs in the congregation of the First Church of Christ now are said to be in much confusion.

SCIENCE LAWYERS CONFER IN SECRET

Plans For Determined Fight In Eddy Will Case

Boston, Jan. 16.—The rumors that a sensational contest may follow the probation of the will of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy at Concord, N. H., were strengthened by the appearance of the entire legal staff of the Christian Science directors, both of this state and New Hampshire, at a conference which was held at the law offices of Samuel J. Elder in this city.

The will of Mrs. Eddy and the petitions which have been filed in both the Merrimac county court and United States circuit court at Concord, N. H., for a construction of the law which the heirs of Mrs. Eddy claim are violated, were gone over minutely, and plans laid for a determined fight.

The counsel had a conference with the directors of the mother church at the Union club, following the meeting at the law offices of Elder. None present would state the full nature of the discussion.

LOWER PRICES FOR FOOD

Big Drop Due on Cold Storage Butter, Eggs and Poultry

New York, Jan. 16.—For the first time since the institution of the cold storage warehouse, people who profit by its influence on current market prices felt called upon to take the public into their confidence. Here are some of their confessions:

That they have sadly overplayed the market, and held it to prices it could not support.

That cheaper—much cheaper—butter, eggs and poultry is the immediate result.

That hereafter, when the jobbers call for stored eggs, poultry and butter, they will get these products at prices lower than have prevailed in seven years.

FOR PURSE OF $10,000

Johnson and Langford Are Matched For a Six-Round Contest

Philadelphia, Jan. 16.—As a result of Jack Johnson's sweeping defi, offering to fight any man in the world six rounds for a purse of $10,000, the champion has been matched to meet Sam Langford here within the next six weeks.

Johnson declared he was in splendid shape for a short bout and could enter the ring at almost any moment without preliminary training. He also asserted that when he gets Langford in the ring he proposes to knock off the head of the title chaser and prove that for once and all time Langford is making claims he cannot substantiate.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Large Congregations Are Reported Everywhere

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The story of Jonah, simply and graphically outlined, furnished the basis of the sermon which Rev. Carl G. Horst preached at the morning service of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday.

Attention was called to the fact that the book of Jonah is pure fiction, written probably by a man living many years later, who took Jonah as his hero, much as a modern writer might take some person, real or imaginary, and construct a story concerning him which should point some practical lesson in our own day, viewed from this standpoint the fantastic, unreal and unnatural details of this strange story became replete with interest to us; it becomes rich in meaning and suggestive of much which may be of use to us today. It is made the vehicle of a great truth, a protest against bigotry and narrowness, an inspiring declaration that God's mercy is world-wide, and confined to no small group of favored people. Dr. Lyman Abbott is credited with saying that the book of Jonah is the product of a vivid oriental imagination, that its satire is used as a strong weapon to strike with ridicule the narrowness of the heathen view of God and in the end all are saved and Jonah is compelled to declare God's great mercy and love. Do we today in our churches measure up to this ancient standard of the fatherhood of God and the large brotherhood of man? Do we find our churches vying with each other in curing universal ills; or are they too prone to set up for themselves a man-made creed and assent to a worn out dogma? We have one destiny, one brotherhood, one God, and the words of Malachi insistently recurred. "Have we not all one father? Hath not one God created us?"

Rev. Carl G. Horst attended today the quarterly meeting of the Plymouth and Bay Ministerial association (organized previous to 1780) which met with the Rev. Charles B. Ames of this city.

CHELSEA DEDICATION

Quincy People Among the Guests on Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Addison of this city, rejoiced in being among the special guests of Rev. R. Perry Bush, D. D. of Chelsea on Sunday. The occasion was the solemn dedication of the First Universalist church, known as the Church of the Redeemer, to take the place of the one reduced to ashes, on the memorable Palm Sunday of 1908.

Th services were opened by Rev. R. Perry Bush, assisted by the local clergymen, and nine others of the faith, including Rev. Edwin D. Bolles, D. D., of Tufts College, who preached the sermon of dedication; Rev. F. A. Bisbee, D. D. editor of the Universalist Leader, and Rev. F. W. Perkins D. D. pastor of St. Pauls Universalist church of Lynn.

It was intended to dedicate the church at the completion of the structure, but later it was decided by Dr. Bush to be more appropriate to wait until it was free from debt. Dr. Bush has labored unceasingly to bring about the desired result.

The progress of the church has been watched with much interest since the corner stone was laid in Oct. 3, 1908, with impressive ceremonies by Dana J. Flanders, grand master of Masons of Massachusetts, assisted by the Grand lodge.

A reminder of the old church that was burned in the never to be forgotten fire of 1908 was brought forth at the corner stone laying, in the shape of the original box and records, that were placed under the first cornerstone in 1861. These are now preserved in the foundation of the new church. The new church will always be held sacred as a monument to the work done by Rev. R. Perry Bush, D. D.

BURGLARIES

When searched at the police station Hennessey had 54 cents in coppers and 30 cents in silver. The two men also had a quantity of cigarettes in their pockets. It is said that they admitted they were the parties who attempted to break into Irwin's lunch room, but that they had been frightened away by the shouts from the men at the car barn.

It is also alleged that the two men confessed to breaking and entering the variety store of William B. Farr on Washington street. A visit to this store by the officers brought out the fact that the store had been entered and money to the amount of about $2 had been taken. As far as Mr. Irwin could discover, nothing was taken from his lunch room except possibly an orange.

In court both men were arraigned for breaking and entering and larceny from the store of William B. Farr, and for breaking and entering the lunch room of George A. Irwin. They pleaded guilty to the Farr charge, but not guilty to the Irwin break.

Mr. Irwin said that he found his money drawer open, but nothing was taken. There was some coppers in a bag in the rear part of the drawer which they did not find. Troup said it was about 3.15 when he heard a whistle at the lunch room, and started across the street when two young men came around the corner of the store and started on the run toward Neponset. He started to chase them, and then went back and telephoned to the police station.

The court held both men for the grand jury under $500 bonds each on the Irwin complaint, and $500 bonds each on the Farr complaint.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

John Quincy Adams who died Saturday in New York was a descendant of the old Adams family in this city, but not closely related to Adamses of this generation. He was a charter member of the Sons of the American Revolution and one of the founders of the American Flag House and Betsy Ross Memorial Association. He was a brother of the late Flora Adams Darling, a member of Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution of this city and well known in patriotic circles, being the founder of the society of the Daughters of the American Revolution and also of the society of the Daughters of the Revolution.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The Thomas Crane Public Library can look back upon a year of usefulness. A circulation of 64,325 volumes from the main hall, 22,186 from the children's room, shows an increase over the year 1909 of 5,160 volumes, exclusive of the newly opened branch reading room. Adding to these figures the returns from West Quincy, 8,068 we have a total circulation of 94,579 for the year 1910, or an increase of 13,228 volumes over the preceding year. This home use of the library, besides the use of by the schools, and the use of the reading room, which statistics are not included shows that the amount of work done has been by far the largest of any year in the library's history.

The number of bound volumes now in the library is 30,190 the additions very nearly keeping pace with the population of the city, which the latest returns give as 32,642.

The photographs now in the art gallery illustrate the country within 100 miles of Tokio, including the mountains of Fujiyama, Asamayama and Haruna.

BRAINTREE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

At the meeting of the People's Forum at All Souls' church, Braintree, Sunday afternoon, a large audience gathered to hear the address which was upon a most vital topic of the day. Mrs. Florence Kelley of New York was the speaker and her discourse was upon "Young workers and how we really pay them." She is the secretary of the National Consumers League which has as its object the betterment of labor conditions and concerns itself especially with child labor. She presented some pitiful word pictures of the results of the employment of children in factories, stores and the like and showed how difficult it is nowadays especially in the large cities for young people to live honest lives and support themselves on the absurdly small wages which are paid to them.

The truths which Mrs. Kelley presented were all the more convincing because of the facts that she has lived for many years among the poor people of New York city in order that she might more thoroughly study their circumstances and be better qualified to rouse thinking people to a knowledge of the evils resulting from poorly paid labor. Mrs. Kelley presented some startling facts and figurees concerning the inadequate child labor laws of the several states and the difficulty of making employers pay their employees a decent living age. She drew a most graphic picture of the misery and suffering due to tuberculosis and other dread diseases and showed them to be in many cases a direct result of the overcrowded and unsanitary methods of living made necessary because of the struggle for existence. Mrs. Kelley is thoroughly conversant with all points of her subject and held the close attention of her hearers.

At the close of the address there were many questions asked by interestd listeners and Mrs. Kelley answered them very fully and at length. Next Sunday afternoon James H. Hyslop of New York will address the forum on the general subject of psychic research and its problems.

BRAINTREE IMPROVEMENTS.

Plans for the improvement of Storrs square and adjacent property and the square and surroundings in front of the South Congregational church were shown at the executive committee meeting of the Improvement association Tuesday night of last week. They were drawn by Herbert J. Kellaway, the well known Boston landscape architect from surveys made by President Wetherbee.

Both plans will be exhibited by the stereopticon at Mr. Hartman's lecture in the town hall, Monday evening, Feb. 6th. Mr. Hartman will comment on the changes contemplated. They include the planting of shrubs and erection of drinking fountain directly in front of Arnold's store, the making of a lawn surrounding the First Congregational church and the creation of an oval lawn plot in front of the church, extending to the trolley line and, in length, equal to the width of the church. Also a circular driveway in the rear of the church for coaldelivery and extensive shrub planting around the edifice. Similar improvements appear on the other plan.

A committee reported that foliage and evergreen plants had been placed in the Braintree station but that agents in the other stations advised against them as the light was insufficient.

It was voted to hold a civic conference beginning Sunday, Feb. 5th, in the Town Hall. In addition to Mr. Hartman's address, it is probable that Frederick C. Howe of Cleveland will speak on taxation on Sunday, and some other equally distinguished expert on Tuesday night.

In future the executive committee meetings will be open to the public on the second Tuesday of each month.

Harold M. Gage, Secretary.

The scenic investure will be fully adequate and all who attend the performance at Music Hall, this evening, will be sure to witness a thoroughly enjoyable performance. The prices for this engagement will be 25 and 35 cents with a large number of unreserved seats at 15 cents.

FOR ANOTHER WOMAN.

It was not that Mary Harrison was by any means unattractive. Indeed she was still quite good looking, but, as she herself was compelled sadly to admit, she had been considerably better looking 10 years ago. It was not that she had lacked lovers. They had come, and they had gone, many of them. But Mary Harrison, since she came of age had had 500 pounds a year in her own right, and that income, though in part a blessing, was also in part a disadvantage. It freed her from the necessity which pursues some girls of marrying for the sake of board and lodging. But it also rendered her suspicious of the motives of her lovers. She could never entirely convince herself that any given man wanted her for herself alone, and she was fully determined that she would never be married for her money, and so her girlhood and youth slipped pleasantly away, and her 35th birthday found her still living by herself in a comfortable little flat in the neighborhood of Sloane square.

She had plenty of friends—men who took her out to evening parties or to the theatre, drove her back to her flat, shook hands, and went on to finish the evening at their club. But gradually it began to dawn on her that they no longer hinted of love, much less of marriage; that they treated her as a good friend, who amused them, interested them, and so forth, but who was finally decided to remain single. It was just this discovery that her friends expected her to remain single that brought her face to face with the fact that such a prospect was abhorrent to her.

One evening she came home from the theatre with Edward Bellamy. Saying good night to him at the door, she passed into her flat. For the first time in her life the sight of her empty sitting room filled her with a sense of loneliness—of desolation. The remembrance that she stood by herself, that there was no male arm on which she had the right to lean for protection, filled her with sudden fright for the future. She went into her bedroom, and slowly got into a dressing gown. Then she paused before the glass, as she loosened her hair, and scanned her face critically—impartially.

"It is true," she murmured, "I am growing old."

And then she bent her head upon her hands, and the tears dropped through her fingers.

There is probably no woman who has passed the prime of her beauty without going through some such scene as this; but with Mary Harrison the scene did not last long. She was a sensible woman, and to her a fact was something to be dealt with, not something to be shirked. She went back to her sitting room, and sat down before the fire to consider the situation.

"One thing is certain," she said to herself, "I do not want to waste my love on—on the poor, and cats, and things like that. I will not be an old maid. It is true, I have refused more than one, but that was some time ago now; and, besides, the right man has never asked me—or, at least, the men who asked me did not seem to be the right men. That is probably much the same thing. I wonder whether it matters very much, after all, who it is one marries so long as he is a gentleman!" Mary Harrison ran over in her mind the men of her acquaintance.

"I do not really think it matters much," she reflected, "unless—unless it were Mr. Bellamy. He is 10 years older than I am, but he is quite delightful, and he is—safe."

The picture of Edward Bellamy sitting in the easy chair opposite her own rose before her mind's eye and it was a very pleasant picture.

"But he will never ask me," she said to herself. "He has had every opportunity for the last seven years or more, and he has never seemed to want to be more than a friend; and yet—I do not know, I have sometimes thought—still, he has never said so."

Mary Harrison beat her hands together in her perplexity. The case was getting desperate. And then it occurred to her that it was leap year. The remembrance first crossed her mind in the form of a jest. How funny it would be if she could realy go round to her male friends and propose to them until she found a husband. Of course, there was nothing in leap year really, and even if there were, she could not think—and yet why not? Could she not manage to wrap up her declaration somehow, in the disguise of a jest, or otherwise so that a retreat should be left open in a laugh? The more she thought the question over, the less absurd the proposition sounded. Desperate cases, require desperate remedies, and Mary Harrison knew that she could no longer afford to throw away a chance. When she rose from her chair to go to bed, she had determined that, somehow or other, she would propose to Edward Bellamy.

"It is unconventional, unmaidenly and perhaps I should be ashamed of myself," she reflected as she went to her room. "I should certainly be ashamed for anyone else to know of it. However," she murmured a quarter of an hour later, as she laid her head on her pillow, "perhaps it is better to be unmaidenly for five minutes than to be an old maid for the rest of one's life."

Edward Bellamy was a man of regular habits. For the last 15 years he had occupied chambers in the Albany. Every morning at 10.30 he had emerged into Piccadilly and walked quietly down to his government office. Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening he had played whist at his club. And Mary Harrison knew that on Thursday afternoons, at about five o'clock she could count on hearing Edward Bellamy's ring at the outer door of her flat. It pleased her sometimes to think that he came to her on Thursdays because he knew it was not her afternoon at home, and he was sure of finding her alone.

Before the next Thursday arrived, Mary Harrison had thought a very great deal over her project; indeed, she had thought of little else. And the more she thought of it, the more desirable did its accomplishment appear. Only the details of its execution would not arrange themselves satisfactorily in her mind.

It is one thing to decide how to do it and yet not appear unconventional; for after all, it is a thoroughly unconventional thing to do, and there are no precedents to guide the woman who determines to do it. And so Thursday and Mr. Bellamy arrived before Mary Harrison had selected finally any one of the many plans which had occurred to her.

Edward Bellamy sat down where he always sat—in the easy chair on one side of the fireplace. Mary Harrison sat down upon the other and poured out a cup of tea for her visitor.

"Delightful spring weather, isn't it?" said Edward Bellamy, as he sipped his tea. "The older one grows, the faster the seasons seem to come 'round again; at least, that is how I find it. Of course, you— well—you,—"

Mr. Bellamy sipped his tea reflectively. Mary Harrison lay in her chair, and half veiled her face behind a big Japanese fan. She had taken care to put on her prettiest tea-gown; she had done her hair just a shade lower over her forehead; and she had added a mere tinge of blush-rose to her cheeks. She knew she was looking her best. And she knew, also, that every gun in her battery was required. How was she to make her proposal? How was she even to begin so long as Mr. Bellamy talked of the weather?

Edward Bellamy stretched out his hand mechanically and reached a cigarette.

"I may smoke?" he said.

"Of course," said Mary. "You are at home here."

Edward Bellamy lit his cigarette thoughtfully.

"That," he said, "is why I find it so pleasant to drop in here in the afternoon. You make me feel just as if I were at home; just as if—" He paused, and Mary Harrison saw her opening. Her breath came quicker, as the breath of the man who stands poised on the end of a diving-board, and knows that the moment for the plunge has come.

"I have often wondered, Mr. Bellamy," she said, in a voice which could not conceal a tremor, "why you do not have a home of your own."

"I have a—a sort of home," said Mr. Bellamy.

"Yes—yes—but you know what I mean," said Mary, "I mean a real home. I think, as a man grows older, he must feel the need of a—well—of somebody to—I mean—why don't you marry, Mr. Bellamy?"

Mary lay back quietly in her chair; but her heart was beating wildly, Mr. Bellamy, on the contrary seemed calm. He knocked the ashes from the end of his cigarette, and contemplated the burning end for a moment. Mary watched him eagerly. She felt she would willingly give 10 years of her life to be over the next 10 minutes—safely.

"There are cogent reasons," said Mr. Bellamy, after a slight pause, "why I should not ask a woman to marry me."

"But," said Mary, with a slight nervous laugh, "you surely do not forget it is leap year, and a woman may ask you to be her husband?"

Edward Bellamy turned his cigarette in his mouth and crossed his legs. "I have been through—let me see—six leap years since I was of marriageable age," he said, "and no woman has proposed to me. And I am certainly not so attractive now as I was 10 or 20 years ago."

"But why should you not ask a woman to marry you, Mr. Bellamy?" Mary leaned slightly forward. "You are still a comparatively young man; and there is—there is more than one woman who would be proud to be your wife."

Mary Harison grew more and more nervous as she came nearer to her declaration.

Edward Belamy threw the end of his cigarette into the fire, and looked across straight into Mary's eyes, as she sat watching him. "I will tell you the honest truth, Mary" he said. It was the first time in these years of friendship that he had called her by her Christian name, and she started at the sound of it. "I ought to be fairly well off by this time," continued Edward Bellamy. "And I should be, had I only myself to think of. But I have more than myself to think of. I have a widowed mother and two maiden sisters. The consequence is—"

"Well?" said Mary.

"That I could not provide for a wife the comforts that a wife should demand. For myself, I am happy enough, I have my chambers, and my club, and so on. But for a wife—"

"Supposing,' said Mary, "that the wife had some money of her own."

"That would make no difference, it should make no difference, said Edward Bellamy. "I am an old-fashioned man, and I think that the husband should provide for the wife."

"But," said Mary Harrison, with her heart in her mouth, "what if the wife would be—oh! so glad to—now I—"

Edward Bellamy looked up at her. Mary Harrison had reached the fence and shied. There was a silence for a moment. Then Mary rose and stood by the mantlepiece looking down on Edward Bellamy.

"I know a girl—a woman," said Mary, " a true good woman—who loves you, and she has commissioned me—It is leap year, you know—to say that she—she will marry you if you like."

Mary had found a gate and avoided the fence, but she had no idea whither the gate led.

"You know—I have told you—it is impossible.'

"But the woman has money— 500 pounds a year—which she would gladly share with you."

"That makes it the more impossible."

"Do you not see, Edward, that a time must come to all of us when we long to have some one who belongs to us, whose hand, we may hold, who—who loves us?"

Edward Bellamy looked up inquiringly.

"Now this woman—the woman I am speaking of," continued Mary, "loves you. I know she loves you, and she is a woman whom I am sure you might love. She would make you, oh! so happy. I should so much like to see you happy for the rest of your life. Will not you let me—",

She was looking down at Edward Bellamy, and he was looking up into her eyes. Then Edward Bellamy rose suddenly and clasped her hand. She quivered as he clasped it, but did not draw it away.

"Mary,' he said, "why do you plead for another woman like this? Why do you make it so hard for me? I have known you all these years. Cannot you see—do you not understand——"

"What?" said Mary Harrison, breathlessly.

"That I have loved you all the time," said Edward Bellamy. "That every time I saw you I longed to clasp you to my arms—so."

She nestled her head upon his shoulder, and that is how Mary Harrison made her leap year proposal.—Woman's Home Journal.

FALLS UNDER AUTOMOBILE

Youth Killed While Trying to Learn to Ride Bicycle

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 16.—Falling from the bicycle which he was just learning to ride in front of an automobile in which were two Boston physicians, Dr. William R. McCausland and Dr. George W. Morse, Giuseppi Marotta, 19 years old, was killed here.

The two physicians were formally arrested and charged with manslaughter at the instance of the police, but later were absolved of all blame.

The automobile, with Morse driving, was proceeding at a fair speed down Water street, while Marotta was coming up the street on his bicycle at an uncertain angle.

Nearing the machine, he wavered, lost control, and toppled off his bicycle under the front wheels of the automobile. The bicycle fell to one side and was not damaged.

FOUND DEAD ON FLOOR

Animals Romped Over Corpse of Man Who Cared For Them

Cranston, R. I., Jan. 16.—With puppies and kittens romping together in friendly play over his body, as it lay on the kitchen floor of his home in South Auburn, William Taylor, aged 70 years, was found dead by the police, a victim probably of pneumonia.

Taylor, with his wife, who died from pneumonia a week ago, kept a boarding house for pet cats and dogs. He had twenty felines and thirty-two canines, including several prize winners, among the "star" boarders.

From the appearance of the place they were allowed full swing and, contrary to the popular belief of a "cat and dog life," they lived together in harmonious companionship even when their keeper lay dead on his kitchen floor.

Nurse Tells of Plot to Kill Schenk With Poison

ASKED $5000 TO DO THE JOB

Millionaire's Wife Offered $1000, Which Nurse Agreed to Accept, but Accused Woman Refused to Sign Paper Showing She Was to Settle When She Came Into Widow's Rights—Weakened at Last Moment

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 16.—Testimony to the effect that Mrs. Laura F. Schenk had offered her $1000 to administer a poisonous pill to John O. Schenk while he lay painfully ill at the North Wheeling hospital last November, was given by Elinor Zorekler, a detective nurse, who had heretofore appeared in the public print as Mrs. Klein, a professional nurse.

The attempt to induce the "nurse" to give the poison to Schenk, witness testified, was made while the two were riding in Mrs. Schenk's automobile.

Mrs. Schenk, declared Miss Zorekler, said to her: "John treats me like a dog. When Miss Evans (another nurse in the Schenk case) calls up from the hospital and tells me that my husband is dead I will be the happiest person in the world. I feel at times like I could kill that man."

"'Why don't you?' I asked.

"She turned around and said: 'Well, you do it for me.'

"'That is another thing,' I told her.

"'What will you take to give him a pill?' she asked.

"'I will take $5000,' I replied. 'I need money awful bad. I have my mother and a child to keep.'

"Good Lord!' replied Mrs. Schenk. 'I haven't $5000, but I will give you $1000 if you will make it that.'

"I told her that it was a very risky business, but I finally agreed if she would give me a paper showing she was to pay me when she came into her widow's rights.

"Mrs. Schenk promised to give me the money, but objected to giving me any written promise. She said that would be dangerous.

"'I will never be happy until that man is dead,' she said. 'If he dies I will wear a double veil, so they can't see me laughing behind it.'

"Mrs. Schenk weakened," said the witness, "when the time came to deliver the poison."

Witness freely admitted that she had been brought here and put on as a nurse in order to work herself into the confidences of Mrs. Schenk and to finally trap her in an attempt to take the life of her husband, or to secure an admission that such was her purpose.

HYDE HAS RETURNED

New York City Chamberlain Calls Graft Probe "Bosh"

New York, Jan. 16.—Charles H. Hyde, New York's city chamberlain, who had been missing thirty-eight days, came back to town from Florida Sunday, jaunty, calm and smiling.

Of the closing of two banks containing $800,000 in city funds, of which he was the custodian, he would say nothing.

Of the graft investigation, now adjourned, he talked freely. Briefly, as far as he was concerned, it was all "bosh."

The committee, it will be recalled, desired Hyde as a witness, other witnesses having testified that he was present at a meeting where it was alleged a $500,000 corruption fund was raised in an attempt to defeat the anti-betting bills at Albany.

EXPERIMENT ON PRISONERS

How Harvard Professor Would Solve Food Preserving Problem

Boston, Jan. 16.—Professor Otto Folin of Harvard university, in a lecture yesterday at the Harvard medical school on "The Use and Abuse of Preservatives in Food Products," stated that the chemical poisons so used should be tried on life term prisoners in penal institutions to determine their effect on the human body.

He suggested that the poisonous chemicals be given in small amounts over a long period of time, and says he believes that the experiment would be mild and humane as compared with the unrecorded experiments made on the public by manufacturers.

TAFT INDORSES PEARY

Would Have Been Rewarded Long Ago by Any Other Nation

Washington, Jan. 16.—Emphatic indorsement of Captain Robert E. Peary as the discoverer of the North Pole was voiced by President Taft in a speech at the annual banquet of the National Geographical society.

The president expressed the opinion that had Peary been an Englishman, a Frenchman or a German, he long ago would hae been amply rewarded. He said he hoped congress was taking "sure steps, though slow," to recognize Peary's achievement.

FROCKS & FRILLS IN NEW YORK.

A New Philanthropy—A Plan That Stretches The Resources of One's Wardrobe—Some Festive Frocks.

A woman who rarely says or does the obvious thing was asked what form of philanthropy would appeal to her most if she could indulge in it. "Buying party frocks for girls who need them" was the half earnest, half whimsical answer that set everyone smiling, though memories of girlish disappointments and heart burnings, hard to bear, made us realize that there was something to be said for Mrs. A.'s plan after all. It is hard for a popular girl to meet the demands made upon her party frocks at this time of year, but the fanciful styles that prevail help out considerably. A few yards of veiling will transform a worn frock and give it quite a "strut-ty look," and January odds and ends that can be had at little prices will supply the veiling, or material for a whole new frock for less than half its cost a month ago.

GOOD PLANNING.

Haphazard ordering and buying are responsible for half the difficulty experienced in making ends meet in the dress allowance. Take the most becoming color for the predominating tint in the outfit, unless it is too delicate or too garish for the purpose. In that case select a neutral tint with which it will combine successfully. By this method all one's small belongings, shoes, gloves, hats, etc., harmonize not only with the wearer but with one another and produce an effect that would strain the purse strings if matching accessories were procured for every costume.

MATCHING SETS.

Another scheme, very fashionable just now, is to have sets that may be worn with almost any frock or suit. Hat, scarf, muff and bag of any becoming and desirable sort of satin, velvet, chiffon, lace or fur, or of combinations of these which are so modish this winter. The fur ones of course head the list. "Handsome thy habit as thy purse can buy" is especially good advice with regard to furs, for these last over from season to season as do few other belongings, and give an inimitable touch of style and becomingness to any costume. The girl with Christmas money not yet spent can not make any better investment, for notwithstanding the enormous holiday sales first class furriers like C. C. Shayne still show an enticing assortment of handsome garments and sets that anyone would be pleased to wear. Of the less expensive furs Australian Opossum closely resembling Chinchilla in color and texture seems particularly attractive especially as a trimming for coats of broadtail and other furs.

PARTY DRESSES.

At one of the recent dances for debutantes a very pretty frock was of a white silk crepe material banded with pale rose chiffon velvet, topped with a band of "tailless ermine" ostensibly though "I hae me douts that Bunny furnished the pelt." Anyway the dress was charming. The velvet bands on the waist circled the figure just above the raised waist, the sleeve bands continuing the line of the bodice. In the back a large butterfly of velvet with a centre of fur finished the band. The skirt was fulled at the waist, and the velvet band topped by a narrow fur one, held in the fullness just below the knee. A lace yoke outlined the wide high decolletage, and straps of fur held this in place at the shoulders.

AT THE RITZ.

Dining at the Ritz the other night a young married belle wore a pretty creation of brown chiffon over yellow satin. The under-skirt showed almost to the knee in front but was quite covered in the back. The hat of thin gold lace in a Chantilly pattern, was banded with fur and a spray of yellow satin button roses with green leaves, matched those that trimmed the waist of the gown. A beautiful mink coat lined with gold colored brocade was thrown back over the chair and made a lovely setting for the dainty wearer.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Honey Corn Candy. Cook two cups of sugar, one-half cup of strained honey and two tablespoons of water until when tested in cold water it will harden. Sprinkle rolled and sifted popped corn over a buttered pan and pour on the candy. Cut into bars when cool enough to show the markings.

Suet Pudding. One cup suet, one cup raisins chopped fine, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sugar, one and one-half cups flour, one egg, one teaspoon soda, one-half nutmeg, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves. Steam three hours.

Vanilla Sauce. Mix one cup of water with one cup of sugar and put over the fire; peel and core one apple, cut it into dice and put into the hot syrup and simmer gently until soft; take out the apple, thicken the syrup with one-half teaspoonful of arrowroot and cook five minutes; put back the apple and add a pinch of cinnamon and as much vanilla as needed to give the required flavor; simmer a few minutes longer, add one cup of rich cream and serve.

Entire Wheat Muffins. Two cups entire wheat flour, two level tablespoons sugar, one-half level teaspoon salt, four level teaspoons baking powder, one cup milk, one egg, two tablespoons melted butter. Sift together the dry ingredients; add the milk gradually, then the egg, well beaten and the butter. Beat well and bake in buttered gem pans 20 minutes.

Baked Apples. Select large, well-flavored apples. Remove the cores and fill the cavities thus made with sugar in which a small amount of cinnamon has been mixed. Place a bit of butter on top of the sugar. Bake in a slow oven until tender.

SUGGESTION TO KILL SELF

Ship's Officers Considered Sending It to Admiral Barry

DARK SCANDAL IN THE NAVY

Commander-In-Chief of Pacific Fleet Must Surrender Command on Demand of His Subordinates—Cannot Longer Tolerate Presence of Man Who Has Seen Forty-Six Years of Service—Asks For Retirement

San Francisco, Jan. 16.—A heavy scandal has cast its shadow over the navy with the enforced retirement of Rear Admiral Edward B. Barry, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, and the knowledge that his abrupt decision to yield his command was predicted upon the demand of his subordinate officers.

The demand was made upon Barry late Tuesday night, after an exposure of his conduct aboard his flagship, the West Virginia.

Last night Admiral Thomas arrived under urgent orders with the cruiser California. He had been dispatched from Santa Barbara so unexpectedly that he was forced to leave behind half his crew, which was absent on shore leave. Thomas is under instructions to assume command of the Pacific fleet today at noon.

Gossip in naval circles has for some time pointed an accusing finger at Barry, but his forty-six years of service stood him in good stead and these rumors were not seriously considered by the navy department at Washington.

Barry was to retire in October, and it is stated that the hope was entertained that he could be side-tracked without a scandal. The revelations of Tuesday, however, convinced the officers of Barry's command that his presence could no longer be tolerated.

On Tuesday evening, a meeting was held of the officers on board the West Virginia, at which it was proposed that a loaded revolver be sent to the admiral's room, carrying its sinister suggestion of one way out of the disgrace for the commander of the Pacific fleet.

The suggestion was put to a vote, and the decision of the majority was that the admiral be given an opportunity to resign from the service. The officers who were present at this meeting took an oath to secrecy on condition that Barry at once forward his resignation to Washington.

The admiral kept to his cabin. Instead of resigning from the service Barry forwarded by telegram to the secretary of the navy a request for his immediate retirement.

It was on Tuesday night that Ensign Taffinder, the officer of the deck at the hour, discovered an amazing state of affairs on the warship.

Ensign Taffinder summoned Lieutenant Comander Ziegmeir, the executive officer of the ship, and reported to him. Ziegmeir called Commander Blue, who is chief of staff under Barry, and the two entered the admiral's cabin, together with Captain Orchard.

The situation was unparalleled in the history of the United States navy. The admiral—he is 62 years old—was told by his subordinate officers that nothing short of immediate resignation would satisfy the honor of the navy. Confused, the admiral begged for mercy. He pleaded his years. He pleaded the honor of the service. The officers left the room in silence.

A formal official report was drafted in which the disgrace of the admiral was written. This report was addressed to the secretary of the navy. Following the ordinary course of military etiquette, the report was handed to Captain Orchard, and Orchard went with it to the admiral's cabin, placing it on the admiral's desk, with the request that it be forwarded to Washington in usual manner. But Barry quashed the report.

Learning this, the officers of the West Virginia have sent a copy by mail to the secretary of the navy.

The admiral made a long statement, endeavoring to show that, while circumstances might point to his guilt, he was nevertheless innocent.

FLEEING TO THE HILLS

Residents of Pennsylvania Town Fear Its Destruction

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 16.—Safe Harbor, with a population of about 700 persons, situated on the Susquehanna river, is slowly being swept away in the vanguard of a twenty-five-mile ice gorge which has begun breaking up five miles above the town.

The business portion of the town already has been submerged and the residents are taking to the hills.

Already ice and water stand six feet deep in the main thoroughfares. A rise of a few more feet will inundate the entire village and the water is rising steadily.

Fresh Air Cures Ailing Children

Chicago, Jan. 16.—How forty-nine children, predisposed to tuberculosis, were treated a year in the open air with gratifying results to mind and body is told in detail in a report of the Elizabeth McCormick open-air school.

TRIPLE LYNCHING BY KENTUCKY MOB

Murderer and Insulters of Women Meet Tragic End

Shelbyville, Ky., Jan. 16.—Fifty masked men stormed the Shelby county jail and lynched three negroes, two of whom were charged with insulting white women, and the third of whom was under sentence to be hanged for the murder of a negro woman.

The bodies of Gene Marshall and Wade Patterson have been found, but that of the third man, James West, is still unaccounted for, although he was seen in the hands of the mob with a rope about his neck.

According to Ernest Hornback, deputy jailor, the mob threatened to blow up the jail unless the negroes were given up.

Patterson, it was charged, insulted two white women during the holidays and knocked down both of them. West's alleged crime was that he had often been seen throwing kisses to white women. Marshall was sentenced to hang for beheading a negro woman.

Commodore Robbins of the Quincy Yacht club and Vice Commodore Drew of the Squantum Yacht club were guests and speakers at the annual banquet of the Winthrop Yacht club on Saturday evening.

Quincy was represented on Saturday in the B. A. A. bouts. The Globe says: William Volk of Quincy, national A. A. U. champion, represented Boston in the 135-pound class against William J. Adams of the Irish-American A. C., metropolitan champion. This was the best of the intercity bouts. It was fast and rugged, but Volk quickly found out how to box the rugged New Yorker. The latter did the forcing, but Volk met him with either stiff left jabs in the face, or rights on the jaw and face. Though there was a lot of sting to the blows, the New Yorker continued to bore in and occasionally he landed a stiff left or right on Volk's body and face. In the third round Volk staggered Adams with rights on the jaw, and was declared the winner. P. Duggan of Quincy won the first bout in the 145 class but was beaten by Peter De Luca in the final bout.

The basketball team of the Clapp Memorial association won Saturday from the Mystery club of Hingham 32 to 15.

The Milton Five defeated the Cleo Five on Saturday 38 to 18, while the Milton, Jrs., lost to the Revere High Midgets 15 to 10. Milton Midgets won from Sumner A. C. 17 to 14.

GREAT DAY FOR Y. M. C. A.

All Four Basket Ball Teams Were Victorious

Quincy Y. M. C. A. won four victories on the floor Saturday. All the teams except the Intermediates had games, and all the games were well contested and interesting. The first team gave the Somerville Y. M. C. A. team a defeat with a score of 36 to 21. Jenkins was the star man with 7 baskets, and Gourlie and Morris played better than in previous games, the former caging the ball three times and the latter twice. Dackers played his usual strong game at back and got three baskets from the floor. Rich appeared in the line-up of the first team for the first time, and acquitted himself well. For the visitors, Taylor was the best man with three baskets fromthe floor and five from fouls to his credit.

The summary:

QUINCY	SOMERVILLE
Morris, lf	rb, Duffy
Gourlie, rf	lb,Myers
Jenkins, c	c, Moore
Dackers, rb	lf, McFadden
Rich lb	rf, Taylor

Score—Quincy 36; Somerville 21. Goals from floor—Jenkins 7, Dackers 3, Gourlie 3, Taylor 3, Morris 2, McFadden 2, Moore 2, Rich, Myers. Goals from fouls—Taylor 5, Morris 4. Referee—Parker. Time—20m halves.

SECOND TEAM.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. 2nd team put up a strong game against the second team from Somerville and won very handily by the score of 26 to 16. The visiting team was much huskier than the home five, but they seemed to be able to find the basket very well. Newcomb was the star man for Quincy with a record of four baskets. Childs, Miller and Dineen shot two apiece from the floor and Holmes got one. With the exception of Miller the men on the home team were all short but they were also "hard as nails" and a pretty difficult proposition. On the visiting team there was no one especialy conspicuous, although Berry seemed to be doing the hardest work. Childs of the Quincy was especially good on shooting baskets from fouls. All four went through without touching the rim of the basket.

The summary:

QUINCY 2nd	SOMERVILLE 2nd
Newcomb, rf	lb, Fisher
Childs, lf	rb, Lawrence
	rb, Runnell
Miller, c	c, Berry
Holmes, rb	lf Fallis
Dineen, lb	rf, Martin

Score—Quincy 2nd, 26; Somerville 2nd, 16. Goals from floor—Newcomb 4, Childs 2, Miller 2, Dineen 2, Lawrence 2, Berry 2, Martin 2, Holmes, Fallis Fisher. Goals from fouls—Childs 4. Referee—Parker. Time—20 m. halves.

EMPLOYED BOYS.

The Employed Boys had little difficulty in defeating the team representing the Walnut A. C. of Neponset in the first contest Saturday evening. The visiting team were unable to find the basket, and although they played a fairly good game showed lack of practice. Thomas, McDonald and Booth were the best players for the home team and Rogers and E. Kelly played the best for the losers. Kenn and O'Brien, the Quincy backs were effective in blocking.

The summary:

EMPLOYED BOYS	WALNUT A. C.
Thomas, rf	lb, E. Kelly
Yates, rf	lb, Flanagan
McDonald, lf	rb, Rogers
Summers, lf
Booth, c	c, Whitmarsh
O'Brien, rb	lf, H. Kelly
Kenn, lb	rf, Roberts

Score—Quincy Employed Boys, 14; Walnut A. C., 5. Goals from floor—Thomas 3, McDonald 2, Booth 2, E. Kelly, Rogers. Goals from foul—Roberts. Referee—LaRose. Time—15 minutes halves.

The Y. M. C. A. Midgets journeyed to Malden Saturday afternoon and trounced the Malden Juniors 26 to 14. Robertson with six baskets and R. Prout with four carried off the honors for the Quincy team. Hunt and Gearwar each got one basket and Robertson and Hunt shot one foul apiece.

MRS. LITCHFIELD.

Several Wollaston people went to Whitman on the 12.53 train today in order to attend the funeral service of the late Mrs. George Litchfield for many years a resident at 201 Warren avenue, Wollaston. The funeral service was held at the home of a sister, Mrs. Bearce and Rev. Preston Gurney was in charge. There was a great abundance of flowers showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held. Those who knew Mrs. Litchfield will remember her as a bright, cheerful and self-forgetful woman in spite of her great sufferings from asthma and heart trouble.

COLDEST DAY OF SEASON

Three Degrees Lower Than on December 16

The temperature at noon today was 16 degrees above zero, which makes it the coldest day of the season at that hour. There were several pretty cold days in December, but on no day at noon did the temperature go below 19 degrees. What makes it more severe today is the cutting wind that prevailed all the morning. The coldest days of 1910 were on Jan. 4 and Feb. 7, on both of which days the temperature at noon was 12 above zero. The coldest day of the season previous to today was Jan. 6, when the noon temperature was 30.

The pastor preached at the morning service using for his theme "Jesus and the woman from Samaria." The male chorus rendered two fine selections.

The Sunday school session at 9.30 was well attended and the Pastor's Bible class which met at the same hour had its usual good attendance.

The evening meeting had an excellent attendance and was an especially good service. The pastor spoke on "Modern Idolatry" using as his texts Ex. 20:3 and I John 5:21.

The sermon in part was as follows:

Man is a dependent creature and has a God of some form or kind before which he bows. These gods or idols may have different names but they are just as truly objects of the worshippers' trust and love. The heathen have numberless deities each one a specialist in his line, the God of Rain, the God of War etc.

A Hindoo will tell you with pride that his supply is 330,000,000 gods. The Old Testament gives evidence again and again how easily the Jewish people were led astray by idol worship, Moloch, Baal and Mammon being most frequently alluded to. Anything that takes God's place in man's heart is my best definition of Idolatry. This is also the biblical view. If idolatry is limited to man's bowing down before some material form, my subject is very inappropriate, but if the definition just given is correct, the subject is most timely and the pulpit is altogether too tacit on the topic.

The four most prevalent forms of modern idolatry are these: 1. Man's might is his God. People do not trust the Almighty but trust to the strength of their muscles. So much is said of will-power that one might imagine it to be well nigh almighty.

2. Genius and Talent are worshipped and adored to extremes.

3. Reason and Science have become to many the Light of Lights in this day of ours, although far from infallible and God has been dethroned. These are God's divine gifts to Man but should never be put in his place.

4. Doubleheartedness in religion is possibly our greatest danger but even that is not new. Elijah, the zealous and rigid Old Testament prophet, found God's people running after Baal while pretending to belong to the God of Israel. "How long will ye haunt," he thundered on Carmel. We must choose one or the other and cling to him."

Our Saviour witnessed the same thing in his day. He found that people believed it possible to serve God and Mammon at the same time. But in words which could not be misunderstood, he showed them what a difficult task they were trying to perform. Paul, the true servant of the Lord, also found it necessary to remind the people of his time that their hearts could not be the shrine of idol worship and God at the same time.

Inviting the Lord to a second place in ones life and heart is but another way to deny him entrance and reign.

I do not know whether this sermon has discovered the idol of your heart but you know what it is. No one need be ignorant in that respect. Let God be the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last, the All in All in your lives.

CHRIST CHURCH.

At the morning service M. Gouverneur Hance founder of the St. Barnabas Home which is located just outside of Pittsburg, Pa., told of the work he is doing. Men and boys who are incurable and invalid are taken there and cared for without any expense. If fact no one is taken who can pay. The home is supported wholly by voluntary contributions.

LECTURE ON IRELAND

A Feature of the Men's Club Entertainment

A large number attended the concert and illustrated lecture given under the auspices of St. Chrysostom's Men's club in Wollaston hall on Monday evening. Much of the success of the entertainment was due to the committee of arrangements composed of A. Holland, chairman, Archie Briggs, H. Spooner, Theodore Parker, G. Vibert, W. Purdom and Thomas Musgrave.

The program opened with a piano solo by Clifford A. Fratus entitled "Dance of the Demons," and was followed by "The garden of roses" a vocal solo by George A. Smalley.

In his illustrated lecture on "Ireland" Daniel J. Dwyer told at length of many things about this interesting country. Opening with views of the bridges of the country he proceeded with a description of the many Celtic antiquities found in the Dublin museum. Mr. Dwyer told of the banshees and other sprites found in the old Irish folk lore. The gold work, weapons and costumes of the ancient Irish were described at length. Irelands natural features, its rugged coast and beautiful lakes were also mentioned while the speaker related the interesting legend concerning the Giants Causeway.

The lecture came to a conclusion with views of famous Irish churches, a description of coats of arms found in ancient Irish families and the history surrounding the old Irish warriors in their battles against the Danes.

During Mr. Dwyer's talk, "Down where the river Shannon flows" was effectively sung by Mr. Smalley, while Miss Mary E. Downing contributed the "Meeting of the waters" and "Lakes of Killarney." Readings by Miss Gertrude Ward were enjoyed consisting of "The battle of the Baltic," "Charge of the Light Brigade" and "A missionary call." A quartet composed of William A. Mann, Archie Briggs, Raymond Fowler and Louis B. Weston found great favor with the audience. Among its selections were "Just be happy" and "The merry ducks."

DEATH OF YOUNG MAN.

After an illness of some weeks. Roland Grant, son of Freeman W. Grant of 247 Washington street, died of typhoid pneumonia, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Graduating from the Coddington school in 1907 he entered High school but did not stay to graduate with his class. After leaving High school he went to work with his father at carpentering, and was employed with him up to the time of his sickness. Roland was well liked by all who knew him and his death will be mourned by a large circle of friends throughout the city. The funeral will be held from the home Thursday afternoon at 2.30. Relatives and friends are invited to be present.

CONGRESSMAN CURLEY.

Congressman-elect ames M. Curley left the Boston hospital, Sunday, where he has been confined as a result of an operation performed for an abscess on his leg. Mr. Curley left the hospital much against the wishes of the attending physicians. The wound has not yet entirely healed. Monday night he left for Baltimore and on Wednesday will attend the conference and banquet of the Democratic leaders of the house of representatives. Thursday he will attend the caucus to be held in Washington. He will then return immediately to Boston and again enter the City Hospital. Mr. Curley will be accompanied by Mrs. Curley.

NEW SCHOOL OPENED

Houghs Neck Children Happy in New Building

The opening of the new school building at Houghs Neck long anticipated took place Monday, and happiness reigned supreme among the parents and children of that section of the city.

School opened promptly at 9 o'clock, but for a half hour before that time children with books under their arms began to wend their way toward the building. No time was wasted in getting down to business, and half an hour after school opened regular school business was in progress and running as smoothly as though the school had been open for months. Supt. Barbour was on hand to see that everything started all right. The attendance Monday was about 130 children and it is expected that there will be 140 before the end of the week.

BOLD THEFT.

A young man had an experience at the Quincy depot this morning that cost him a pair of warm woolen gloves. He entered one of the toilet rooms and laid his gloves on the window shelf for a minute. Present at the time were two other men. Turning about to pick up the gloves he found that not only had the two men gone but his gloves had also disappeared. He later saw one of the fellows and grabbing him took him to where Officer Murray was. As he did not have the gloves, and there was no evidence that he took them, the officer could not hold him. The fellow who got away was doubtless the man who had the gloves.

PRETTY GERMAN.

A very pretety German party was held in Alpha hall Monday evening under the auspices of the younger set, the first of a series to be held during the season. About 50 couples were present to participate in the dancing. There were twelve regular dances, four Germans and four extras on the program. Wilson's orchestra furnished the music.

The committee in charge of the dance consisted of the following: Perley E. Barbour, Angelo Conti, William E. Cooper, Walter P. Ela and Elmer F. Ricker.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CITY HOSPITAL

Receipts from Patients Show an Increase of $1,500, but Grocery Bill Increased

Rice Pavilion Dedicated -- Nurses Home to be Built

The annual meeting of the Quincy City Hospital corporation was held in Colonial hall Monday evening with an attendance of 30. The report of the secretary showed an improvement in accommodations and equipment. The new pavilion given by the late William B. Rice has increased the accommodations almost two-fold. A ward containing 14 cots and the private rooms have made it possible to care for many more patients than the report of a year ago could show. As has been the case in former years medical treatment has not been called for as much as surgical and operations have been very successful.

The death of Dr. Monroe, who rendered inestimable service as the surgeon of the hospital, was deeply regretted by the members of the association.

In addition to the work of healing in the hospital young women have been given a course of training under the trained nurses and several have graduated with honor. The Nurses' home, the funds for which have been donated by Henry M. Faxon, will be started in the spring, and by the time of the next annual report will figure in the excellent equipment of our Hospital.

The work of the physician, surgeons and nurses has been highly commendable; the patients have received excellent treatment and have expressed their appreciation of the splendid care they have been given.

The report of the treasurer was not complete and was referred back. Some of the December bills were not included in the report as given, but the financial statement was satisfactory. The collection during Hospital week was about the same as in 1909, a little over $3,000. Several special gifts amounting to about $150 were acknowledged. The budget showed a total of nearly $2,500 more than last year's report. With the new pavilion, new nurses were required, and the pay roll was some $1,400. The added number of patients increased both the grocery bill, and the amount of money received. The report of a year ago showed receipts from patients amounting to $5,111.62. This year's gave an increase of $1,500 and the grocery bill has increased from $3,463.17 to $5,-111.94. The growth of the Hospital is thus marked both by the financial statement and the increase in facilities and size of the Hospital itself.

The treasurer's report follows:

LESS MARRIAGES FEWER DEATHS

But a Larger Number of Births Probable in 1910

The birth census takers, who are at work in the several wards of the city, will probably complete their work this week. Those who are taking this census are: Ward One, Thomas E. Connelly; Ward Two, Peter M. Sullivan; Ward Three, James M. Cantfill; Ward Four, Thomas J. Sullivan; Ward Five, William Murphy; Ward Six, Peter J. Colligan.

The records of the City Clerk show the number of marriages recorded for the year 1910 to have been 325, against 332 for the year 1909. These include the marriages where one or both of the contracting parties resided in Quincy but were married out of town, as well as the out of town couples who journeyed to Quincy to have the nuptial knot tied.

The number of deaths recorded in 1910 were 457 as against 468 for the year 1909. These also include persons who died in Quincy and were buried elsewhere and of those who died elsewhere but were buried in Quincy.

Started Housekeeping 18 Years Ago
A few days ago a prominent citizen of Quincy called at our store to make some purchases of new furniture. In the course of conversation he mentioned that he bought his housekeeping outfit from us 18 years ago—when we first started in business. He said he felt so well pleased with the service his goods had given him and knowing the unfortunate experience of some of his friends in their purchases—he was pleased to come to us for his new furnishings. This little incident was pleasing to us—we thought it might be interesting to some who have not yet become acquainted with our policy of selling goods of quality at prices that are fair to pay.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Pullman porters are organizing a union, but they'll probably take non-union tips just the same.

If they are really short of genuine ermine for King George's coronation, they might borrow some from the New York chorus girls.

Ex-king Manuel is going to travel in order to fit himself for the duties of royalty. The only good king is a king out of his job.

War is getting further and further away every day. Even little Chile has decided to borrow $30,000,000 for the purpose of building battle ships.

Reports at the meeting of the corporators of the City Hospital Monday evening showed increasing usefulness and prosperity. Although the capacity has increased so that over seventy-five more patients can be accommodated, the expenses per patient has not advanced materially, it costing the past year less than $2.40 per day each which compares favorably with the cost in other hospitals. The past year perhaps is a little above the average as the new ward necessitated many extra supplies, making the item for sundries larger than usual. The Hospital Aid Association has been a great help in furnishing the new ward, contributing several hundred dollars worth of bed linen, towels, etc., showing that it is also an active and helpful organization. When the nurses home is built this spring and with the present splendid equipments Quincy will have a "house of mercy" on the hill to be proud of.

Quincy has been deluged with price lists of a Chicago house which offers bargains (?) The prices may appear alluring, but one does not like to buy a pig in a bag, and in the long run nothing is gained by patronizing such a house. Quincy suffers because Quincy people are not loyal to Quincy; because they do not trade at home often-times when they can secure better bargains here. How would it do to work together one year and help to establish large mercantile stores right here at home. Lynn is about the same distance from Boston as Quincy, and has better train service to Boston, but it has its large stores, so that Lynn people trade at home. One reason for this is because the Lynn merchants advertise liberally in the Lynn newspapers; not spasmodically but every day. It requires a paper of 16 or 20 pages to print their large announcements. They advertise prices and the people are always looking for bargains. A newspaper, like a store, can be of greater service to a city if it is well patronized and encouraged.

Statistics show that our exports to China have declined from fifty-eight millions five years ago to fifteen and one-half millions in 1910. The Chinaman is frequently referred to as an enigmatical creature, but those who have studied him in his own habitat realize that there is a great deal of human nature in him and that he has abundant shrewd common sense. The Chinaman is not a first-class fighting man, but he is not unresentful of wrong. He has been outrageously treated in this country and especially on the Pacific coast and organized into unions as a European army is into regiments, the word has gone forth to boycott American wares. It is as nothing to the average Chinaman or to the Chinaman much above the average, that this country remitted some millions of the Boxer indemnity. That was a state affair, and the average Chinaman knows nothing of state affairs, and there is no word in the Chinese language for patriotism because the idea is totally non-existent in the Celestial Kingdom.

Pensions For Armour Men

Chicago, Jan. 17.—J. O. Armour confirmed a report that old-age pensions are to be established for employes of the Armour company. The plan will be put into effect as soon as a committee now perfecting the details makes its report.

CHOSEN ON THE FIFTH BALLOT

Whipple Is Named by Democrats as Lodge's Opponent

THE VOTE MADE UNANIMOUS

Lodge Made Nominee of Republicans by Acclamation—Indications of Deadlock In Legislature In Hotly Contested Fight—Democrats Turn Out In Force at Caucus, but Many Republicans Recorded as Absent

Boston, Jan. 17.—Sherman L. Whipple was the unanimous nominee for United States senator of the Democratic members of the state legislature in caucus after the fifth ballot disclosed 64 votes for him, 34 for John R. Thayer and 11 for Joseph F. O'Connell.

Henry Cabot Lodge was the nominee of the Republican members by acclamation.

Every indication points to a deadlock on the election in the legislature. If the claim made by the supporters of Lodge are accurate, the senior senator at the joint convention of both branches of the legislature tomorrow will have 141 votes, or just the required number to assure his election.

There will be a solid phalanx of at least 122 of the 126 Democratic members of the legislature behind the choice of Whipple for senator.

It is by all odds the closest and most hotly contested fight for United States senator in the history of Massachusetts, and it is being watched with interest all over the country because of the personality of the central figure, Senator Lodge.

The first ballot in the big fight will be taken in the senate at 2:30 p. m. today and in the house at 3 p. m.

A majority vote in each branch is required for election. If both branches fail to elect a candidate by a majority vote, a joint convention of the house and senate will be held tomorrow and every day following until a choice is made. In joint convention 141 votes are required to elect.

At the caucus of the Democratic members all but four members were present. At the Republican caucus, of the 153 members of the majority party in the legislature but 125 were present.

EVEN DEATH IS DEFIED

Standard Oil Said to Have Firmly Riveted Subsidiary Companies

Washington, Jan. 17.—Declaring that the reorganization of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey in 1899 riveted together the control of the subsidiary companies in a way hat had not existed before, and which even death cannot rend, Attorney General Wickersham argued before the supreme court of the United States that the defense put up by the Standard Oil company against dissolution fell to the ground.

It was the third day of the oral argument of the case, and Wickersham was called upon to close for the government.

He did not conclude, but will complete his argument today, when John G. Johnson will finish the presentation of the entire case.

FOR THE SECOND TIME

Speaker Cannon Is Overthrown by Insurgents and Democrats

Washington, Jan. 17.—The stirring scenes of the last session of congress, when the house overthrew Speaker Cannon and took the making of its rules into its own hands, were re-enacted in part on the floor of the house yesterday.

Threatened with what they believed to be an effort to "draw the teeth" of one of the most important of the new rules, Democrats and insurgents joined in the defeat of the speaker.

By a vote of 145 to 126, the combined forces rallied to the support of Representative Fitzgerald (Dem.) of New York and sustained him in his appeal from the speaker's ruling.

The fight developed as the result of the second attempt to use the new rule which gives the house power to discharge a committee from furher consideration of a bill.

HER TESTIMONY UNSHAKEN

Detective Nures Sticks to Story Concerning Poisoned Pill

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 17.—Five hours of the most bitter cross examination to which any witness has been subjected by the defense in the case of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, charged with administering poison to her millionaire husband, John O. Schenk, failed to shake the story told on direct examination by Eleanor Zoeckler, also known as "Mrs. Klein," the detective nurse, who alleges that Mrs. Schenk offered her $1000 to put a poisoned pill in the medicine given Schenk while he was at the North Wheeling hospital.

Miss Zoeckler was on the stand all day, and with the exception of a half hour, she was in the hands of S. O. Boyce, who grilled the witness without mercy.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The Celebrated Swiss Remedy for Coughs and Colds.

QUINCY, TUESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1911.

Sirolin Comes to America

This Famous Swiss Remedy can now be purchased in Quincy.

Sirolin is a famous European preparation that comes to America with an unequalled record of success in the treatment of pulmonary disorders.

Sirolin not only relieves the local symptoms and protects the tissues againt the invasions of the tubercle bacillus, but it promotes appetite, increases weight, and acts as a tonic.

The cough is allayed, nutrition is facilitated, and consumption is prevented. Sirolin is therefore the logical cough medicine. Hence, its great favor.

Sirolin is pleasant to the taste—a clear, syrup-like liquid.

It is entirely different from the ordinary preparations for coughs and colds. It has no depressing effects, and contains no narcotics or harmful ingredients.

Ask your druggist.

Stop that Exhausting Night Cough with SIROLIN

Every one who has suffered from a deep-seated cold knows how annoying and exhausting the night coughs are.

Sirolin—a dose taken at bed-time—relieves the tickling and irritation that cause the coughing fits.

Sirolin not only alleviates the coughing, but it dispels the worst cold in a few days. The action is invigorating and tonic in character.

What Is SIROLIN?

Sirolin is the celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

Sirolin is a physicians' remedy—not a patent nostrum—and it is known the world over by leading medical men.

Sirolin not only relieves the local symptoms and protects the tissues against the invasion of the tubercle bacillus, but—in addition to this—it promotes appetite, increases weight, and acts as a tonic.

Its creation and use throughout the world marks a distinct advance in the treatment of coughs, colds and other pulmonary affections. Sirolin is clear, syrupy liquid—pleasant to the taste.

Your druggist knows about it. Ask him for it.

Teach the Children To Use Sirolin

Sound lungs are more than half the battle in the building up of a healthy body.

That's why parents should take great care to see that their children's lungs are properly developed; that they are kept sound in tissue; and with an expansive power in proportion to the weight and height of the body.

This can best be done by—

1st. Vigorous physical exercises, with stress laid on the setting-up exercises which develop the upper part of the body.
2d. The right kind of food, and plenty of it.
3d. Fresh Air.
4th. The prevention of colds, and their prompt cure if they are contracted. This can be accomplished by the regular use of Sirolin.

Insist on Having Sirolin

It is dangerous to trifle with a bad cold, or bronchitis, or the grippe.

These ailments, disagreeable in themselves, lead to graver diseases, if allowed to run unchecked.

Nine-tenths of the fatal cases of consumption are traced to an origin in some minor ailment of the respiratory organs.

The best and surest way to relieve a cold, or cough, a case of grippe, or any other pulmonary affection, is to use Sirolin freely—at the same time taking things easy.

This is no theory—it is a fact, based on the experience of the leading physicians of the world.

It has an unequalled reputation in Europe, where every family that gives any attention to its health has a bottle of Sirolin in the house.

Your druggist has Sirolin, or he knows all about it. Ask him for it—and refuse any substitute.

Keep a bottle of Sirolin in the house. Take it regularly in rainy, cold weather, and whenever you have been exposed. It will effectually prevent colds.

LIVELY CAMPAIGN IS ON FOR MAYOR

Large Barrel Said to Have Been Opened In Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 17.—The election for a new mayor of Chicago will not be held till April, but the billboards already speak for the candidates. The followers of Andrew J. Graham, a banker, who is running on the Democratic ticket, are accusing the followers of Carter T. Harrison of tearing down the Graham posters, some of which deal vigorously with Harrison's record when mayor.

The Harrison statistics estimate that the Graham advocates have spent fully $100,000 on posters, another $100,000 for billboard space and labor, and that other Graham disbursements eat up another $100,000.

Ex-Mayor Dunne contents himself with attacks upon the Republican administration and Mayor Busse. Dunne says he has no barrel. He is the Democratic reformer. Charles E. Merriam, professor at Chicago university, is a Republican reformer. Mr. Busse, the present mayor, is an experienced politician, and so is Har-

PLUMBER'S LUCKY FIND

Digs Out $1300 In Vegetable Can In Former Hotel Basement

Sandusky, O., Jan. 17.—A plumber, while rummaging around in the basement of the Scott American building, seeking a joint with which a connection might be made, discovered in an old vegetable can $1300 in currency.

The building was formerly known as the Steamboat hotel. Voltaire Scott, a former owner of the building, was a man of many eccentricities. He had little faith in banks and the supposition is that the money was hidden away and that there is more of it under the building.

Deposed King's Grandma May Take a New Lease of Life

Rome, Jan. 17.—Queen Maria Pia, grandmother of King Manuel, is in better mental health than she has been for several years. Ever since her six Angora cats arrived from Portugal she has improved in spirits, and she has not had a fit of despondency for a fortnight.

This leads her physicians to hope that she may take a second lease of life, and be once more happy in her gentle way.

Some objection was made to the transfer.

Councilman Smith explained that Bizzozero had been carrying on the business for Coletti, who had now given up business.

Councilman Smith offered an order revoking the permit of Cataledo Colletti. Adopted.

Councilman Gardner thought it a bad thing to do to make transfers.

The order was then laid on the table, and Councilman Smith offered an order granting Bizzozero a liquor transportation permit.

Councilman Sandberg moved to lay on the table.

In reply to a question of Councilman Richards, President Bryant stated the new permit would only run to May 1.

In reply to questions, Chief Burrell stated that Bizzozero had been filling his returns promptly and that he did a regular business.

ADAMS COUNTY, O., SHOWS HOW TO ERADICATE CORRUPT VOTING

Nearly Half the Electors Disfranchised For Five Years and Fined According to Amount of Bribe Taken.

Public Auctions of Ballot For 30 Years Revealed by Prosecutions—Other Communities Also Guilty?

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

ADAMS county, O., may become the leader in a new crusade. She is disfranchising her boodlers. Between 2,000 and 3,000 of the voters are slated to stay away from the polls for the next five years. As there are only about 6,500 voters in the entire county, more than one-third will thus be disqualified.

Judge A. Z. Blair, the man directing operations, says that the number may go higher and may include half of the men in the county. He has expressed the opinion that two-thirds of them have been guilty of selling their votes at one time or another. This is about the most staggering revelation of corruption yet made.

Lest any pharisaical finger of scorn be pointed at Adams county, however, it may be as well to state that the difference between her and certain other counties—I was about to say all other counties—is that she has repented and is trying to cleanse herself. In that far she has all the best of the comparison and is entitled to praise. She is worthy of additional commendation for the reason that she is setting a wholesome example to the nation.

Thirty Years' Political Debauchery.

The testimony shows that the buying and selling of votes has been going on in this Ohio county for more than thirty years. One man said there have not been more than three or four honest elections in all that time. Political committees, candidates, election officials and practically all in authority were implicated. The drain on candidates was so heavy that several spent more to be elected than their entire salary. A few were financially ruined by running for office. Under this regime office seekers became scarce. Men were not less anxious for the plums, but the price was too high. It got to be so that men had to be drafted to go on the ticket.

The corruption started in a small way, but the voters themselves were so eager to sell their portion of sovereignty that the shameful habit became fixed. Election day came to be regarded like Christmas—as a season of gifts. At first the bargain and sale were secret, the negotiations usually being carried on in a back lot at midnight. After a time it grew more open, and men boasted of the amounts they received. One old gentleman mounted a box in front of the courthouse and auctioned off his vote to the highest bidder, and, though officers of the law were standing by, nothing was done about it.

Both parties were concerned in the traffic, and this gave not a few of the voters a chance to work both sides of the street. One old chap testified that he had got $10 from the Democrats, an additional $10 from the Republicans and wound up the day by working the Republican candidate for sheriff for $3. He did not say which way he voted, but possibly eased his conscience, if he had any left, by splitting his ticket.

Vote Buyers Cautious.

The vote buyers usually made sure, however, that they were not fooled by these double barreled vote sellers. To do this an election judge had to be a confederate. By shaking each ticket open the judge could see which way it was marked and so report by scratching his ear or by some other sign. Another method of identification was to have each bought voter mark his ballot in a peculiar way, a different mark being arranged for each man. Sometimes the marking would be for a Prohibition or Socialist candidate for some unimportant office. If a ballot was found with this peculiar marking the voter would be paid. The bidding was often fast and furious. One man, Uncle Freddie Bock, went back and forth between the Republicans and Democrats until his price was raised from $10 to $25.

Adams is a poor county, but poverty was not always the excuse for vote selling. One of the culprits is worth $50,000. Others are ministers of the gospel, lawyers and doctors. Often a higher price would be given a man of "influence" on the theory that he could swing other votes with his own. Nor was the traffic among foreigners. There are very few foreigners in the county. The men are nearly all of old American stock. Nor are there any large towns to spread corruption. Farming is almost the sole industry.

Adams is one of the Ohio river counties that have been nearly stationary in population for several decades. It has but one railroad, which is many miles from the county seat. The heyday of its prosperity was before the advent of steam railroads, when the river was the chief means of transportation. One of the big crops is tobacco. Another seems to be farming out votes. Most of the county is hilly, and the denizens of these sections are called "Hill Billies" or "Hillikens." Adams is the next county west of Scioto, in which the city of Portsmouth is located. Scioto and several adjoining counties are said to be almost as badly tainted as Adams—likewise numerous other counties in this broad republic.

Other Counties Guilty.

Judge Blair recently touched on this phase of the subject; also on the power of the newspapers to rectify the evil. He said:

While the other counties in Ohio and practically all the newspapers in this country are looking askance at Adams county and saying how dreadful it must be to have so many votes sold and bought, I would gently remind them that right at their doors there is as much, if not more, fraud than in Adams county. It is vastly different, inasmuch as it is practiced in open defiance of the law, while here we have had hardly any law for many years.

Of course Adams county has to bear the brunt of this criticism. It will bear it to cleanse itself. But it would be more satisfied if these "goody-goody" newspapers and these "goody-goody" politicians who are gazing its way with the kindness of a father would kindly turn their eyes to their own hearths and ascertain if they are as clean and spotless as they should be.

I am a great believer in those newspapers which print the facts concerning the government, whether it be municipal, county, state or national. I believe we are getting to be too big a nation to allow the politicians to run us, to think for us and to run our government for us.

Any one at all acquainted with political conditions knows this charge to be true. The writer has personally heard detailed stories of similar corruption in other Ohio counties—likewise in up state counties in New York. The political workers make no secret of the matter. Some of them even boast openly of their exploits in winning their election districts by the use of money. Frequently the political committees of both parties keep lists of "floaters"—that is, of men whose votes can be purchased. Indirectly I have heard similar tales from Indiana and elsewhere.

Let judges everywhere take up this work. And, if the judges will not, let the newspapers come to the front. If one paper in each county should go at this matter man fashion and in earnest there would soon be an epidemic of bribery prosecutions that would have a tonic moral effect on the whole nation.

Sentences Old Friends.

See what one determined man has done! Judge Blair has had to sentence his old friends and neighbors. Nearly every man that comes before him he can call by his first name. He has had to bear threats against his life. He has had to face the opposition of political machines. In the beginning it was exceedingly difficult to find a grand jury that would return indictments. These jurors had to confront, in a less degree, the same opposition, the same hatred, the same actual peril to property and life encountered by Judge Blair.

When twelve honest and fearless men were got together the next step was to call in the vote buyers and demand their lists of floaters, with the threat of imprisonment if they refused. Then the county was placarded with a proclamation signed by the judge and the prosecuting attorney, asking all those guilty of buying or selling votes to come before the court. In the first sentences imposed Judge Blair made it plain that it would go much easier with those who did come in voluntarily and confess than with those who resisted. Knowing him to be a man of his word, the culprits arrived literally by the hundreds. They did not wait to be indicted.

So great was the influx into West Union, the county seat, that all the hotels and boarding houses were crowded to their capacity, and the people had to throw open their homes to entertain the repentant vote sellers. Judge Blair's court was called "the mourners' bench," and the judge himself became "the father confessor." Some of the poor "Hill Billies" walked thirty miles to be on hand. Others came on horseback or in road wagons converted into carryalls—anything to get there!

Easy on Willing Confessors.

To all those who confessed Judge Blair gave light sentences. The usual fine was the amount received by the culprit at the last election. If the man were poor, all this was remitted but $5. If very poor, time was given to settle even this trifling amount. In addition, the voter was disfranchised for five years and a suspended jail sentence imposed. A pointed admonition was given to keep straight or this jail sentence would be enforced—likewise the remitted part of the fine. The proceedings have been secret, so that no man's shame need be known unless he told it himself. But he must not attempt to vote for five years. That would mean the penitentiary.

To recalcitrant offenders the sentence was more drastic. Five men who failed to come before the court when ordered so to do were hauled out of bed at 2 o'clock in the morning and sent to jail. A rich man who had sold his vote was fined $500. A former county official, who after leaving court made threatening remarks, was called back, given a heavy fine and warned that any more talk of that kind would mean the penitentiary.

Many of the personal incidents connected with the crusade were pathetic, others laughable. One old lady, whose aged husband and imbecile son were indicted, walked miles trying to raise money to pay the fines. Judge Blair remitted the whole amount and ordered the bailiff to take the woman to the hotel and give her the best meal in town.

Women Now the Voters.

In the school district of Billtown all the men have been indicted, and the women will have to do the voting and hold the offices. Three women have already declared themselves candidates for school trustee.

It has been charged that many of the wives encouraged their husbands in iniquity and used the money to buy finery. This the women indignantly deny and say that they have opposed the traffic. One woman, however, has confessed that she sold the vote of her son. Poverty was her excuse.

A typical case is that of James Blythe. After Blythe had emerged from a seance with the judge a bystander piped up:

"Waal, Jim, what did he do to ye?"

"Fined me $5 and disinfected me for five years," said Jim.

The judge has literally "disinfected" the county for five years.

He is going over the territory once again. The first time he "used a harrow," he said, and some of the offenders slipped between the teeth. The second time he is employing a fine tooth comb.

"Can any good come out of Nazareth?" Good is surely coming out of this modern vote selling Nazareth. Adams county is saying to all sister counties in the land, "Go thou and do likewise."

SHEEHAN FOR SENATOR

New York Democrats Name Him Over Protest of Dix

Albany, Jan. 17.—William F. Sheehan was nominated as the Democratic candidate for United States senator last night at the joint caucus of Democratic legislators, receiving sixty-two votes, four more than a majority of all the Democratic members of both houses. This was done over the protest of Governor Dix, who urged Sheehan to withdraw.

The fact, however, that twenty-five members refused to attend the caucus leaves a strong possibility that when the legislature votes in regular session he may fail to receive the number of votes necessary for election.

CITIZENS NEAR RIOT OVER APPROPRIATION

Police Called to Quell Disturbance at Town Meeting

North Attleboro, Mass., Jan. 17.—When a coterie of business men tried to push a $20,000 railway appropriation article through a special town meeting last night a near riot broke out among several hundred citizens, which was quelled only by the arrival of the police.

During the excitement several prominent citizens were roughly handled, tellers fought with excited men over the possession of the lists, and scenes never before witnessed in local town meetings were enacted.

At the height of the confusion several hundred workmen lined on one side of the hall hooted and jeered representatives of the business coterie, and their friends lined opposite them until a riot threatened and Selectman Devlin called for the police to restore order.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The removal of Secretary of the Interior Ballinger from office is asked in a resolution introduced in the senate by Senator Purcell of North Dakota: The resolution says:

Ballinger, secretary of the interior, has not been true to his official trust, that his administration has been marked by a lack of fidelity to the public interest, that he does not deserve public confidence and that he should not be retained in the public office, are in substantial conformity with the evidence in the case."

BINGVILLE BUGLE FOLKS.

There was a large attendance of Quincy people at Music hall Monday evening to give the "Bingville Bugle Folks," a creation of Newton Newkirk, a royal welcome. All the well known personages from Bingville were present and took part in the love affair of Polly Skinner, impersonated by Miss Bertha Marian, whose main object seemed to be in looking for a husband.

Of course Seth Dewberry, the lion hearted constable, was present to see that there was no breach of the law; as well as Hen Weatherby of the general store; and Nat, his wayward son; Milly Underwood, the prettiest girl in the village; Rusty Giles, the tramp printer; Bud Hinckley, Anne Hellyer, Bijah Parker and Madeline Dexter.

The play if such it could be called was one of four acts and abounded in laughable situations that kept the audience convulsed with laughter from the time the curtain rolled up at the beginning until it rolled down at the end of the last act.

Act one was laid in the office of the Bingville Bugle, Act two in Milly Underwood's parlor, Act three in Nat Weatherby's apartment in Boston, and Act four was a village scene in Bingville. During the acts there were specialities by Seth Dewberry, Hen Weatherby and Bud Hinckley.

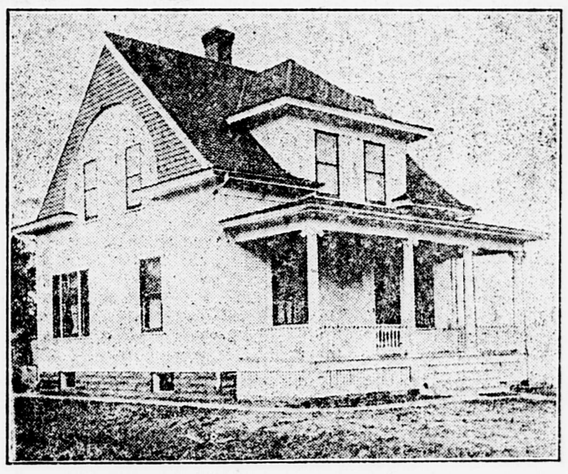
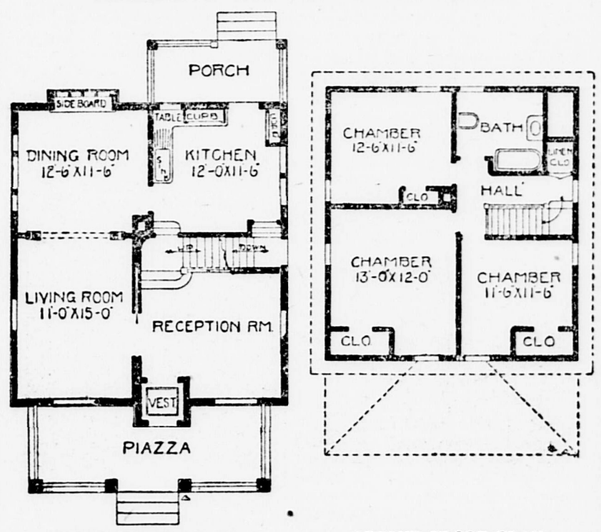
A PLAIN STORY AND A HALF COTTAGE

Design 93, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.



PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

This design combines an attractive exterior with a practical and economical interior arrangement. The reception room and living room are separated by a sliding door. In the living room there is an abundance of good wall space. While planning to get the other features many people often forget to plan places for their furniture. In the dining room is a built in sideboard or buffet, with four small windows above it. In the kitchen are a sink, cupboards, molding table, flour bins and other accessories. The first story is finished in birch, left natural in the kitchen and stained a soft tone of tobacco brown in the other rooms. The second story is finished in pine to paint. Birch floors throughout. Width of house, twenty-six feet; depth, twenty-eight feet. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,350.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one set of plans and specifications of design No. 93 for $15.

OWNERSHIP OF THE AIR NOW EXCITING INTEREST.

Interesting Theories Explained at Political Science Meeting.

"Aerial Jurisdiction" was the subject of a paper read recently by George G. Wilson of Harvard university at the meeting of the American Political Science association at St. Louis. Professor Wilson told of the three principal theories that have been established as to who controls the air with respect to aerial navigation.

These three theories, he said, were promulgated at the meeting of the international conference on aerial navigation held at Paris.

The first theory is that the air is free for navigation by any machine, regardless of its nationality.

The second theory is that the state has the right of jurisdiction over all the air above it, the same boundaries applying in the air over the states as on terra firma.

The third theory is that the aerial space may be regarded in the same light as the ocean—namely, that it is free, with certain limitations. The ocean has a three mile zone which each nation controls along its coast. This system might be applied to the air by establishing a height limit, say, seven thousand feet, below which control would be vested in the state and above which the air would be free as the high seas.

The second of these three systems is most favored for the control of the air, Professor Wilson said. The aerial rights of the private property owner also have been considered, and it is held that he controls the air above his property to a certain height. Above that the state jurisdiction is in force.

Corroding Metals.

Almost all metals corrode when left in contact with air for any length of time. This is due to the fact that they combine with the oxygen to form new substances, known to the chemist as oxides.

How to Gain Flesh

A simple but sure way to increase the weight, it is asserted by several well known physicians, is to take regularly for several months, one or two 3 grain hypo-nuclane tablets after each meal. These little tablets have the distinguished merit of increasing the red and white blood corpuscles, aiding digestion and promoting assimilation and absorption of the elements in the food which go to make blood and solid tissues. They are obtainable in sealed packages from physicians and well stocked anothecary shops.

CONGESTION OF BUSINESS

Never Greater In the Senate Than at Present Time

FURTHER DELAY IS INDICATED

Little Hope For Important Legislation If Filibustering Continues—Pending Legislation of Importance Cannot Be Disposed of In the Five Weeks Remaining Before Adjournment—Burrows to Defend Lorimer Report

Washington, Jan. 17.—Nothing but dark clouds ahead for important legislation of any kind can be detected in the senate chamber, according to the statesmen who expressed their views on the floor. According to Senator Hale no action upon anything may be expected this week, and Senator Beveridge still further darkened the picture by showing that only five instead of six weeks remained for business, as six days must be given to eulogies of the six senators who have died since the last session. Hale expressed himself as "much disturbed" over conditions in the senate, and fearful that the whole session would be wasted.

This disclosure grew out of notice by Senator Borah, its sponsor, that on Thursday he would speak upon his resolution to amend the constitution by providing for the election of United States senators by the people. This is one of what Senator Heyburn called the "sensational" measures before the senate, made so not only by the fundamental principles involved, but by the fact that unless its provisions are very carefully remodelled, it will repeal the laws of the southern states disfranchising the negro. A battle to the death on that proposition may be expected.

Mr. Borah had merely stated his purpose to address the senate Thursday when Hale interrupted and urged that he speak earner if possible. No progress is being made on any of the important measures before the senate, he said, and although it was plain what the action on this resolution would be, he would assure the senator from Idaho that no obstructive tactics would be employed against it.

Mr. Beveridge pointed out that at least five great measures, each good for a week's debate, would be before the senate in the five weeks remaining outside the appropriation bills. These are popular election of senators, tariff commission, the ocean mail bill, revision of the civil laws and the Lorimer case. "A greater congestion of business than veteran senators have seen in their experiences," declared the Indiana senator.

Senator Gallinger, in charge of the ocean mail bill, joined the ranks of threatened filibusters with the hint that although in his twenty years' service he had never taken part in a filibuster, he might be led to do some things he did not want to, if a vote was not reached on his bill.

With Bailey filibustering against the tariff commission bill and the proposed increase in the number of army engineers, Borah on popular elections, Heyburn for his revision bill, Bristow against and Gallinger for the ocean mail bill, the New Hampshire senator's threat capped the climax in a program of delay which menaces the whole fabric of pending legislation.

Senator Hale came to the rescue by urging Heyburn to call up his bill revising the laws. Heyburn has been doing this for several days, and has assured the senate that the measure could be disposed of in two sessions if the senators would get down to business. He tried again, on Hale's hint, no one objected and the work was started.

Wednesday Senator Burrows will speak on the Lorimer case, defending the report of the committee. The impression grows that Lorimer's seat will be declared vacant.

MRS. MELBER INDICTED

Alienist Who Examined Slayer of Son Finds That She Is Sane

Albany, Jan. 17.—Mrs. Edith Melber pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree before Justice Cochrane in the supreme court, after being indicted by the grand jury for killing her 5-year-old son, George, by giving him carbolic acid.

According to the specialist in mental diseases who examined Mrs. Melber she is perfectly rational. On this report, the decision of the coroner and the confession of the woman to the Rochester police, the district attorney will base his case.

UNION SUIT AND A SMILE

All That Brockton Man Wore While Strolling In Zero Weather

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 17.—When the citizens of this usually quiet municipality saw a man walking through the streets clothed in a union suit and a smile, with the thermometer registering in the vicinity of zero, last night, they thought that they were looking upon an advertisement for an underwear concern.

Patrolman Finnegan was taken entirely by surprise, but caught the man by the nape of his neck and ran him to the police station and right up to the stove. The man was shivering so that he was unable to tell his story for some time.

Finally he informed the police that his name was Fabbio Parpino, and his age 31. He said that he had gone during the early evening to visit a friend on Alton street and something prompted him to remove all of his outer clothing except his underwear and stockings and to go out into the moonlight. He was later released.

MUST PAY BOARD BILL

Former Pauper Sued by City After He Receives a Legacy

Malden, Mass., Jan. 17.—Granville F. Lombard lost one of the most remarkable law suits on record, when Judge Sweetser, sitting as auditor in the Malden district court, rendered a verdict for the city for $1,067.32, which is the amount of money the defendant received from it between 1902 and 1908 as pauper aid.

The city of Malden even paid his expenses at the Rutland sanatorium for tuberculosis sufferers, not knowing that Mrs. Adella Lombard, his mother, was wealthy.

After she was found dead in her home on April 8, 1908, it was learned that she left an estate of $17,000. Half of this went to Granville F. Lombard, and the city took action to get back its pauper aid expenditures.

NO COMPROMISE IN EDDY WILL CONTEST

Counsel For Sons Says He Will Fight to the Finish

Concord, N. H., Jan. 17.—"A fight to the finish," was the defiance uttered last night by Henry M. Baker, executor of the will of Mary Baker Eddy, in commenting on a possibility of a settlement with her sons, George W. Glover and E. J. Foster-Eddy.

"Either the sons will get everything or they will not get a dollar—there will be no half-way business," declared Baker.

This statement coming on the eve of the hearing in the probate court where the will is to be proved indicates the attitude Baker will hold in the conflict over the $2,000,00 which Mrs. Eddy left to the Christian Science church.

BARRY IS RETIRED

Navy Department Acts Before Receipt of Charges Against Him

Washington, Jan. 17.—The application of Rear Admiral Barry for retirement has been approved by President Taft and he has been transferred to the retired list of the navy.

The navy department issued the order retiring Barry on Saturday and advised him of that fact by telegraph. This action was taken before the publication of the allegations that officers of the flagship West Virginia contemplated charges against the admiral reflecting upon his moral character.

The fact that Barry has been placed on the retired list does not preclude the possibility of court martial proceedings being instituted against him in case charges are preferred.

JUST IN TIME

Some Quincy People May Wait Till It's Too Late.

Don't wait until too late.
Be sure to be in time.
Just in time with kidney ills.
Means curing the back.
Before backache becomes chronic;
Before serious urinary troubles set in.
Doan's Kidney Pills will do his.

Here is Quincy testimony to prove it.

Nicholas Albanese, 16 Gilmore St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by attacks of backache for some time. Often while at work, sharp, shooting pains darted through my loins, causing me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my sight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies, but did not receive relief and as a last resort, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and in a short time after using them, I was helped. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure."

ASKED FOR FAIR PLAY FOR COOK

Loose Says He Went on His Knees to the Danes

HE EXPLAINS HIS POSITION

Calculated Astronomical Observations Backward at Request of Explorer Because It Was the Kind of Thing He Could Sell—Says He Will Be Better Understood When His "Sad Story" Is Finished

New York, Jan. 17.—Leaving behind him an explanation of his part in the Cook-polar affair, published in a Norwegian paper of South Brooklyn, Captain August W. Loose has quit Brooklyn for Norway. He has sailed for Bergen, where his brother is a director in a Norwegian steamship company, and where he expects to receive a permanent place as an officer aboard a steamer. His occupation as a navigator has not given him steady employment in these parts; in the summer he was skipper of a private yacht and in the winter he devoted his time to odd jobs about the harbor.

The work which he declared he did for Dr. Frederick A. Cook in doctoring the records of the "trip to the Pole" was one of his odd jobs. His explanation of it is defensive, the argument being in effect that it was just as proper for him as a navigator to sell observations made to order as it was for Dr. Cook to sell pills at one time or another.

The explanation is written for his fellow-countrymen in The Norwegian News. The article bears the title, "F. A. Cook, M. D., and August W. Loose, Navigator."

"F. A. Cook is a medical doctor and I am a sailor and a navigator," writes the captain. "To go to sea is my trade. That is all I imagine I am able to do, but with all these amateurs about, it is uncertain enough to find a job. Dr. Cook has had a few experiences at sea, but on most of these journeys he has been employed as a doctor of medicine. I have had more experience as navigator, but have never been employed as a physician.

"I was then engaged by Dr. Cook. I tried to help him; I did not try to help him deceive the world, as some people will have it. I had not then asked him about Capella. The Danes wanted his proofs and began to be impatient.

"What did I do? The first thing I did at his request was to write a long article, which I sent to the five largest newspapers in Norway, wherein I told of how I myself had been shamefully misunderstood, and on my knees asked for fair play for Dr. Cook. Could I have done better? Suppose I had attempted to follow the medical profession, who would have put in a good word for me?

"Dr. Cook asked me if I could calculate astronomical observations backward. Of course, I said yes. I'm no grocery clerk, and the art of navigation cannot be learned over long distance telephone. Measuring distances of the heavenly bodies are not for sale in the hardware stores, nor in the drug shops, but that is the kind of thing I can sell, carefully prepared according to intelligent and legal prescriptions.

"I gave Dr. Cook these measurements and told him he could compare them with those he had taken on the spot. I cannot see anything wrong in that, can you? I was more than willing to go up to Etah last spring as the skipper of any old fishing smack to save Dr. Cook, but nothing came of the plan, and naturally I did not get a cent from Dr. Cook for all my troubles and two months' lost time. When this sad story is finished I'm sure I'll be better understood than I am now."

PUNCTURED HEART MENDED

Texas Man Survives an Extraordinary Surgical Feat

Galveston, Tex., Jan. 17.—What is considered the most remarkable piece of surgery in the history of this section of the country is the stitching of a cut heart in a man, who will live to tell that his heart was punctured nearly half an inch.

His name is Harry Brensel, 35 years of age, who was stabbed with a pocket knife by a woman. A wound an inch and half long was made in the base of the heart. He was hurried to the Sealy hospital and the surgeons took sixteen stitches in the cut. The surgeons say he will recover.

A MISER'S ROMANCE.

George Pike was known as the stingiest man in Monroe county.

He lived alone on a 200-acre farm, did his own cooking, washed his own clothes and mended the same. At mending he was an expert, for it was common talk that he had worn one suit of clothes ten years. No one in the neighborhood knew his exact age, but he looked to be on the shady side of 40. Neither did any one have authentic information as to the extent of his wealth. He was afraid of banks and kept his thousands in some secret hiding place about the house.

That such a man should be a bachelor was quite in order. No doubt he looked upon the question of marriage in the same light that he viewed all other propositions—from the standpoint of probable cost. He seldom called upon a girl. Occasionally when he had ascertained in advance that there would be no charge for refreshments he would attend a church social, his grain leather boots bright with stove polish and his coat buttoned tightly over his gray flannel shirt. Vests in his estimation were in the same class with wives—luxuries to be enjoyed only by the recklessly rich.

At one of these church affairs he met the daughter of a farmer who had recentlymoved into the neighborhood. She was a lass of rare beauty, and it was no wonder that the miserly bachelor exerted himself to outdo the younger men in witty sayings and pleasant speeches to her.

As he drove home in his squeaky spring wagon behind old Esau, the mule he had been driving for 17 years, the vision of the rosy cheeked, brown eyed maid dwelt persistently in his mind, and he caught himself repeating her name over and over again:

"Mabel Harvey, Mabel Harvey, Mab—Get up there, Esau!"

He interrupted his musings on the fair Mabel with a savage swish of the reins and a command to the aged animal, which had taken advantage of its master's abstraction to slaken its gait to a slow walk.

"I can't be a-thinkin' of gals and sich nonsense," exclaimed the farmer aloud. "Wimmin is only expense and trouble anyhow."

It was a brave attempt to banish the memory of the girl, but it failed. Five minutes later Esau had resumed the slow walk, and the bachelor was gazing dreamily at the stars, going over in his mind the incidents at the church social with the pretty Mabel as the center figure.

Several times in the night he awoke from a restless sleep to think of the girl. He could not drive away the constant contemplation of her. Whether in the fields or in the stable, the kitchen or the sitting room, Mabel Harvey was the subject of his thoughts.

Two weeks passed. He met her the second time at the church. On the way home that night Esau's pace was absolutely snailish. Pike ceased to try to escape from the fascination. But then a terrible battle arose between the imp of avarice and the love sprite. Throughout his life the bachelor had denied himself every pleasure and the gratification of every whim for economy's sake. Why should he break the rule because a certain girl seemed a thousand-fold more attractive to him than all others? Then he remembered how she had smiled at his witticisms, and his vanity was touched. He argued himself into the belief that if he should want to marry her she would have him.

"I'm richer than any single feller in the county, and she must know it," he mused. "Gals 'r great after fellers with money ,an guess she's a good deal like the rest of 'em."

But he could not come to a final decision to inaugurate the courting.

One day an idea came to him. He would experiment and ascertain if he could afford, according to his notion of expense, to support a wife.

"Every time I buy anything for myself I'll just get twice as much as usual, and I'll purty nigh know before long how much it 'ud cost for to keep a wife." He smiled complacently at what he considered the sure evidence of an ingenuity that would lead to the solution of the problem which was vexing him.

"I'll try it for a month, and if it aint too expenseful I'll go after that gal."

Such an idea was exactly in keeping with Pike's character. He saw nothing ridiculous in it. It was a business matter with him, and he prided himself that he had hit upon a method of satisfying his avaricious instinct on the stubborn question of expense. He imparted his scheme to no one. This was not unusual. He had never been known to talk of his affairs.

Some discussion was caused in the town store when it was noted that his purchases were precisely double what they had been. This started the gossips, and it was common talk that the bachelor had loosened his purse strings.

"Must be expectin somebody ter visit with him," suggested Jason Brittingham, a grocery store whittler.

"Most likely he's looking fer the price of coffee and sugar to go up soon," was the observation of 'Lihu. No one guessed the truth.

One evening a neighbor dropped in unexpectedly on the lone bachelor at his home. Pike was in the kitchen. He hurried to the door at the sound of the knock and opened it just wide enough to discern the identity of the caller. The latter thought he detected embarrassment in Pike's manner. When he caught an unintended glimpse of the supper table, he was astonished beyond measure. There were two cups of coffee and two plates, containing pork and potatoes. One cup and one plate had been partially emptied. The other cup and plate looked as if they had not been touched.

"Got company?" he blurted out, before he thought what he was saying. Pike had never been known to invite a guest to supper or any other meal.

The bachelor's face flushed a deep crimson. For a moment he appeared to be unable to reply. Finally he stuttered out:

"Well ,no—er, yes; I'm kinder expectin' some one."

His neighbor observed his confusion and hastened to state the business that prompted his visit. Pike did not ask him in, and he departed without obtaining further light on the cause of the presence of the extra cup and plate. The neighborhood now had a genuine mystery. All sorts of vague rumors were circulated. But the bachelor kept his secret.

"S'pose Brown 'll tell what he seen and folks will talk some, but nobody'll guess what it's all about," he chuckled.

It went much against the grain with him to cook twice as much at each meal as he would have prepared for himself alone. But he consoled his economical spirit by feeding what he had over to the hogs.

"Taint lost, after all," he thought. The end of the month arrived. He had awaited the day with impatience. That evening he ate supper earlier than usual. He helped the extra plate and filled the extra cup, representing the amount he would allow a wife—if he had one—for the last time. And as he did it he pictured to himself the brown-eyed Mabel gayly chatting with him across the table.

When he had finished the meal, he took the old slate on which he had done his figuring since childhood and in a few minutes had ascertained to a cent the cost of the extra portion.

"Four dollars and nineteen cents, four dollars and nineteen cents," he repeated to himself, over and over again. His brows were knit. The chill of avarice was creeping into his heart.

"And that don't include clothes. But I reckon she'd have enough duds to do her for a while."

It was the first rule of the bachelor's life to deny himself everything except absolute necessities. For the first time he was dangerously near deciding to break the law which had become almost second nature with him. Few men there be indeed who would hesitate to invest $4.19 a month in the keep of a wife who supplied in all respects their ideal. But Pike had courted the yellow gold so long that his love was not to be changed so easily.

Three days the battle endured within his breast. It was the most miserable existence. Even after he had made up his mind to seek the hand of the witching Mabel he found himself wondering at his own recklessness. But he was a man of stern resolve. Once determined, it required more than human power to turn him from his course.

On the morning of the fourth day he finished up his work about the place earlier than his custom and hitched Esau to the spring wagon.

"It's purty nigh time I was buying a store suit, and I reckon this is a proper occasion for sich a purchase," he soliloquized as he mended a break in the mule's bridle with a piece of twine.

An hour later he was examining the assortment of clothing in Smith's general store at Hill Top.

"What sort of a suit ort a fellow buy to git married in? he asked the proprietor with an effort to smile.

The store keeper received the inquiry as a joke. The idea of Pike desiring information of such character to guide him in the selection of a suit did not enter his brain.

"Same sort you'd want if you was expectin' to be buried," replied Smith. "Pants, coat and vest."

Then both laughed at the homely witticism.

The bachelor drew it out of the store keeper without exciting suspicion that the young man who had participated in the most recent marriage in the neighborhood had worn a frock suit.

"I ain't never had no tail coat yit," he remarked in a careless way. "Believe I'll just git one to surprise the neighbors."

He found a cutaway suit that pleased him in every respect except the price. Fourteen dollars was more than he was accustomed to pay. But he again conquered his economical disposition.

"I'll be back this way in a couple of hours and you can have the bundle ready for me," he said to the storekeeper and added, "When I git it, I'll pay you."

The drug store was his next objective point. The apothecary was dumbfounded when the bachelor asked for a dime's worth of peppermint drops.

"Got a cold?" inquired the sallow faced druggist.

Pike hesitated a moment.

"No but I may git one," he replied, slyly avoiding an answer that would lead to the discovery of his real purpose in purchasing the candy.

The package was done up in pink paper, with a yellow cord about it.

"Won't that tickle her, though?" mused the purchaser as he slipped the package into his pocket.

As he passed out of the store he saw a group of men discussing some matter with great vigor in front of the post-office. He wandered over to the little gathering.

Three or four addressed him simultaneously.

"Heerd the news?" they asked.

"What's up now?" answered the bachelor rather unconcernedly. "S'pose somebody's hogs is got the cholerer," he added, with an attempt at sarcasm.

"No, siree!" Josiah White, the postmaster, was speaking.

"Worse than hog cholerer," he continued. "At least, Tom Harvey thinks so. His pretty darter has eloped with some young feller from the city, and they've been married at the county seat."

Pike's breath left him. For a second he was entirely unnerved.

"How do you know she's eloped?" he managed to ask.

"Why, her daddy's jest passed through town going like wildfire to head 'em off at the county seat, but there ain't much chance he'll git there in time." The postmaster looked at Pike curiously as he spoke. His companions were likewise puzzled to know what caused the color to leave the bachelor's cheeks.

Pike broke the awkward pause that followed the postmaster's last remark.

"I must be gettin' home," he said, "Good day to you all."

He turned and walked abruptly away from the group and entered the drug store.

"Mr. Smart, I don't believe I can use these here drops."

The apothecary mechanically received the package from Pike. He asked no questions but emptied the candy into the jar and returned the dime. The bachelor left the establishment without a word. He went direct to Smith's store.

"Needn't to mind about that suit," he said to the proprietor. "I've concluded I don't want it."

Esau is dead, but George still lives in solitude on his farm near Hill Top. Although the incidents of the story narrated in the foregoing paragraphs occurred 20 years ago, the old bachelor's secret has never escaped his lips. Even at this late day old residents of Hill Top occasionally ask each other:

"I wonder what caused George Pike to act so peculiarlike on the day that Harvey girl eloped?"—St. Louis Republic.

LIKE THE BOSTON "MATCH"

Small Chance of Johnson and Langford Meeting In the Ring

Boston, Jan. 17.—The report from Philadelphia that Johnson and Langford were to meet at Philadelphia has been put to an end by the announcement that all talk of a match was absolutely untrue. The two fighters could not come to terms and negotiations were dropped almost before they had started.

When Langford and Johnson were in this city last fall they were "matched," but when the pair met to talk over fight matters and right down to real money talk both were lacking, and it looks as if the Philadelphia scene was a repetition of the Boston affair.

Balloon Hildebrandt Found, With Aeronauts' Bodies In Basket

Berlin, Jan. 17.—The German balloon Hildebrandt, which had been missing since its ascent at Schmargendorf on Dec. 29, was found in a lake in Pomerania province, Prussia. The bodies of both aeronauts were in the gondola.

It had been believed Dr. Roehrs and his companion had met death in the Baltic sea, the balloon having taken that direction on rising. The aeronauts had planned a forty-eight hours' aerial voyage, and nothing was seen of them after the start.

Ideals in Merchandise

THERE is character building in merchandise, just as there is in men. We learn to know and to appraise goods by much the same standards that we apply to people, although perhaps merchandise represents a double standard, for interwoven with its own character, good or bad, there is also the impress of the character of the maker. We recognize the value of goods by appearance, quality of material, workmanship, finish and fitness; and frequently, by something else—a trade mark, a name—representing in concrete form the character, quality, and fitness of the maker; and when this is present it establishes the value of the goods more definitely than all else. This is especially the case in older communities, where generations have labored toward the perfection of a product, and where this process has gone hand in hand with a determination that the goods, as well as the manner of their marketing, shall bear the impress of their builders, and represent their highest ideals in manufacture and their truest conceptions of the integrity of traffic. Generations continuing the same line of manufacture present striking instances of goods so perfectly developed, so thoroughly known and accepted, that they have become a standard of excellence and value everywhere. Competition has devised no force potent enough to crowd these goods out of a market to which they have proved a supreme right through unnumbered days of steadfastness to honest value and to honest dealing.

For nearly three centuries of manufacturing, New England has been developing to a high plane these ideals of merchandise. Not in her cities alone but in unexpected places among her hills and beside her swift-running streams are found factories and mills out of which come goods known throughout the world; and the trade mark and "New England Made" stamped upon them, and the character for which they stand, make these goods, like the king's seal, pass current wherever there are civilized men.

A CORRECTION.

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Permit me through the medium of your valuable paper to correct certain erroneous reports regarding a matter of recent occurrence in my family. The child in question had measles in a very mild form. The case was promptly reported to the Board of Health, and the quarantine rules relating to such cases strictly observed.

A physician's certificate stating that the child had passed through the measles and was free from contagion was signed by the Board of Health.

The rumor which has since been circulated to the effect that the case was one of scarlet fever, and that others had been exposed to the contagion, is absolutely without foundation, and I am sure that any who may have inadvertantly helped to create this false impression will be glad to aid in correcting it.

Sincerely Yours,
Frank H. Sprague.

And now I'm the head of the big steel trust!

There is to be a new president of the steel trust, after all, to succeed William Ellis Corey. J. Pierpont Morgan and Elbert H. Gary had about made up their minds not to put up another shining mark as the head of the gigantic organization, but the course of events made it necessary for them to modify their plans.

open market. Mr. Farrell's selection means no open market and no price cutting, as was desired by Mr. Corey.

Mr. Farrell, who started in business at sixteen as a $4.65 a week laborer in a wire mill, has been president of the United States Steel Products Export company, a subsidiary of the steel combine handling the export trade. He lives in Brooklyn. He is forty-eight years of age, six feet one inch in his stocking feet and weighs 220 pounds. He has prematurely white hair, parted in the middle, and a drooping white mustache. His presence is that of a military man, and his clear blue gray eyes look straight at a questioner. Mr. Farrell's grip is that of an athlete, and he is popular with his five children.

"My father, John Farrell, who had several small vessels plying between New York and Liverpool, was growing old, and it was up to me to quit school and go to work," says Mr. Farrell in describing his career. "So I began in a steel wire mill at New Haven at sixteen and remained there nine years, doing manual labor. Then I saw a bigger field in Pittsburg and went there when I was twenty-five.

Soon Became Leader.

"I entered the mills of the Pittsburg Wire company as a laborer and late became superintendent and manager for about six years. Then I got the general superintendency of the Olive Steel Wire company in Pittsburg and worked there and at Beaver Falls. In 1903 I was asked to come to New York to organize the United States Steel Products Export company."

When asked regarding his views of corporate publicity Mr. Farrell said:

"I have always been in favor of corporate publicity along the lines expressed by Judge Gary. I came to those views not because some other man believed them, but because I have believed them through many years of practical experience. I am frank to state, however, that it is well in any business to hold views along the same general lines of others higher in authority. If a man does not, then he can get out."

FIRE AT MT. PLEASANT.

The Central station combination was called out on a still alarm at 8.45 Sunday evening, for a slight fire in one of the shacks at the Mt. Pleasant camp. The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil stove and some clothing was burned before the fire was extinguished. The superintendent and patients were hard at work on the fire when the combination arrived. The fire was then extinguished with a chemical stream. The loss was not large.

BLAME AMERICA FOR INUNDATIONS

Deforestation Caused Europe's Floods, Scientists Claim.

FLAMMARION CHIEF ACCUSER.

Eighteen Months of Demoralization Due to Continued Bad Weather Caused by Thinning of Trees, Frenchman Asserts—Columbia Professor Thinks Theory Farfetched.

It is a long way from America to central Europe, yet Professor Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, does not hesitate to say that the abnormal weather conditions afflicting the old continent for almost two years are due in great measure to the winds that blow from our shore.

The first three days of this year gave many Americans a taste of what England, France, Italy, Germany, Spain and Switzerland have been undergoing for over eighteen months. Summer was hardly experienced even as far south as Italy and the Riviera. Thunder was in the air, and scarcely a day passed without a storm, sometimes of an hour, sometimes for a whole afternoon.

In France it is almost two years since good weather has prevailed for a whole fortnight. This began in the spring of 1909 and culminated in the terrific disaster in January, 1910, when practically the whole country was flooded, and Paris suffered in such measure that for a day or two it was feared the whole city would be reduced to a mass of ruins.

Bad Weather Spreads.

Switzerland followed and then Italy and then Spain and England and Germany. With June the water subsided everywhere, but none of the rivers resumed quite their normal level. The skies were seldom clear, the crops were spoiled, and summer frocks were hardly worn at all.

During the first weeks of November Germany began to experience serious inconvenience. The Rhine rose seventeen and one-half feet above its mean level at Cologne, eighteen feet at Mannheim and two and three-quarter feet at Moselle.

Madrid came next, after the first week in December last. This time it was a cyclone that caused the floods, submerging Seville and all the low lying districts as far as Malaga, destroying railroad bridges, washing away miles of railroad, mining all telegraphic and telephonic communications, isolating many villages, which were left in a critical situation, and causing great loss of life and property in the interior and along the coast.

From London stories of the flooding of the Thames valley have been sent out for over a month. It seems that both sides of the river from Oxford to practically within the city of London are flooded for miles. All the villas and bungalows that are so typical in the landscape of the Thames are submerged, and most of them will have to be rebuilt, because the water has undermined their foundations.

All Countries Affected.

Everywhere weather conditions seem to be pretty much the same. In Russia the Dnieper at Kiev rose twenty feet quite suddenly and swept away villages and houses, with their inhabitants, in its wild course.

The same reports of rain and storms come even from those countries where summer conditions should now prevail. Australia, West Africa and Buenos Aires report the same weather.

To explain this ominous state of things Professor Flammarion made a startling statement in the French press.

"Deforestation in America is chiefly responsible," he said, "for whenever the barometrical pressure is low we are subject to west winds, which blow direct from America across the Atlantic, practically following the course of the gulf stream. These winds collect vapors on the way, and these when coming in contact with our damp and chilly land condense, thus causing our continuous downpour.

America to Blame.

"These winds have always existed, but it is only of late that we have noticed them in Europe. Why only of late? The reason is to be found in the wholesale deforestation in the United States.

"It is admitted that the west winds, as a rule, touch the earth in America, and in times past the luxurious vegetation of that country served as a very effective obstruction of their violence, in many cases arresting them and always retarding them. Now nothing stands in their way, and that is why Europe suffers."

Professor H. Jacoby, the astronomer of Columbia university, thought Flammarion's theory rather farfetched. "There is no doubt," he continued, "that forests have a certain amount of influence on the violence of the wind, but only in so far as local conditions are concerned. When you come to talk of the west winds that travel over half the hemisphere, how can they be arrested or retarded by mere trees, take them as high as you like? Let us suppose a chain of mountains, say, one mile and one-half high and all beautifully wooded stood in their way, and let us suppose we cut down all the trees on them, do you think the difference in the wind would be noticeable? I do not think so as long as the mountains remained."

THRIFT AS HOLIDAY PRESENT

Employees Who Were Given Bankbooks Increased Desposits Tenfold.

The history of a cash Christmas present made by a Boston publishing house to its 147 employees, which had increased the bank accounts of the individuals 950 per cent in two years, was made public recently. Two years ago the publishing house deposited $5 to the credit of each employee and presented them with the bankbooks instead of cash.

Of the 147 original accounts ninety are still kept up, and the total for the ninety depositors has grown from the original $4,50 to $4,266, an increase of nearly tenfold.

Seventy-three depositors are still in the employ of the publishing house, and their deposits have increased from $305 to $3,428. The seventeen depositors still remaining on the bank's books that have left the employ of the house have increased their accounts from $85 to $838, the accounts of those remaining with the firm and those leaving its employ showing about the same relative increase.

Of those who have withdrawn accounts twenty-seven are still in the employ of the company and thirty have secured other positions, showing that the percentage of withdrawals outside of the employ of the donor are slightly higher than among those still remaining in his employ.

APPLE TREE WORTH $30,000.

Was Planted Twenty Years Ago by Washington Indian.

Thirty thousand dollars was the sum recently offered an eastern Washington nursery company for an apple tree located near Lake Chelan. The proffer was made by a syndicate which desired to propagate the tree. It was rejected by the nursery company, which will develop the fruit itself.

The tree is twenty years old and is called the Chelan. The fruit is golden yellow and is said to be different from that of any other apple grown in Washington. It is also said to possess exceptional keeping qualities, a box having been kept in storage in Spokane for two years without any marked deterioration.

Twenty years ago, the story runs, an Indian planted a handful of apple seeds, three of which grew. The fruit of but one of the trees was good for anything. The tree is now of great size and a prolific bearer. Recently at the national apple show at Spokane fruit from the tree took first prize for new varieties of apples.

LARGER BATTLESHIP WILL BE RECOMMENDED

Congress Expected to Authorize Two of 30,000 Tons with Twelve 14 Inch Guns

Repeal of the Eight Hour Day Clause Probable

It is probable that the naval appropriation bill, which will soon be reported to the House, will contain an authorization for two new battleships says a Washington dispatch to the Transcript. This propsition and others embraced in "the increase of the navy" programme submitted by Secretary Meyer will come up for consideration at a meeting of the House Committee on Naval Affairs. This programme embraces in addition to two battleships one collier, one river gunboat, two submarines, one original gunboat, two steam tugs and one submarine tender. The House committee, it is said, will authorize the two battleships, one collier, one river gunboat and two submarines, postponing action on the other proposed additions to the fleet until next winter.

If the House committee adheres to a tentative decision reached recently the new battleships authorized will be 30,000 tons each, 3,000 tons in excess of the latest battleships, the New York and Texas. Secretary Meyer has asked that each of the new ships be equipped with twelve 14-inch guns. If the additional 14-inch guns are allowed the new warcraft will be fitted out with triple gun turrets instead of the double gun turrets now in use, thus accounting for the additional tonnage of the new vessels.

It is not unlikely that the committee will recommend action to allow the construction of the battleship New York by private contract instead of in the Brooklyn yard, which would save $1,750,000 on the New York. Repeal of the eight-hour law provision, which would save $750,000 more, according to Mr. Meyer's figures, probably will be favored.

BEFORE SUPREME COURT.

The case of Hannah Carroll vs. the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. was argued before the Supreme court on Tuesday. It is a suit for damages for the conscious suffering and death of Edward J. Carroll, who was employed in the forge department.

WOULD CANCEL DEEDS.

Agnes B. Ware of Dorchester brought a bill in the superior court Tuesday, says the Boston Advertiser, against Clara E. Brown, her sister, seeking an injunction to restrain the latter from incumbering certain real estate in Boston and Quincy, and asking for a decree for the cancellation of the deeds which the complainant executed to her sister.

The complainant alleges that she was induced to execute the deeds by false representations and by fear that her sister would carry out a threat to put her in an asylum. She further says that her sister represented to her that she would not be deprived of her property, if she signed the deeds, as they would not become operative until after her death. She also alleges that she was to be taken care of during her life by her sister, and that there was no consideration for the deeds.

At one time the complainant was confined in the Worcester Insane Asylum for a temporary derangement. She alleges that her sister knew that she was mentally weak and caused her to be examined with a view to have her execute the deeds. An order of notice returnable Jan. 19 was issued.

RUSSIA TO BUILD SHIPS.

The minister of commerce of Russia has prepared a bill to encourage the shipbuilding industry. The bill provides for the payment of premiums for vessels built in Russia of Russian materials, and for the cessation of the free import of foreign-built ships. Russia's merchant marine in 1909 included 2465 sailing vessels of 257 tons and 898 steamers of 443,243 tons.

CLERKS' MEETING.

The Retail Clerks' Union, No. 224, held an open meeting in Hibernian hall Tuesday evening. The wage scale of the Teamsters' Union was endorsed. Addresses were delivered by the Secretary-treasurer Frank F. Keenan and by Charles W. Hanscomb. Refreshments were served in the latter part of the evening. The attendance at the meeting was large and the speeches met with the enthusiastic approbation of all.

TALK ON THE NAVY

Lieut. Wilson Addresses the Union Club

At the meeting of the Park and Downs Union club on Tuesday evening, Lieutenant J. D. Wilson of the United States navy, at present stationed at the Boston Navy yard, was the speaker. He told of the great upbuilding of the navy since the Spanish-American war and said that with the exception of a few gunboats and those in service at China the ships of the navy had undergone a complete change since 1898.

Lieutenant Wilson mentioned the makeup of the Atlantic, Pacific and Asiatic squadrons and described the manoeuvers and practice indulged in each year. The continually increasing efficiency of the marksmen of our navy was spoken of and the rapidly enlarging navies of the world both in the size and number of ships and guns.

The speaker then gave a detailed account of the makeup of the United States navy. In a most interesting manner he described the various classes of ships and the armament with which they were provided.

The talk closed with an entertaining relation of adventures while the speaker was stationed in the Philippines and a clear definition of the duties of the various officers in the navy.

At its conclusion the speaker answered a large number of questions concerning the various departments of the navy and relations here and abroad.

At the business meeting which preceded the talk Vice President F. W. McMulkin presided in the absence of President Frank Burgess. Under direction of a hustling membership committee the club is making rapid strides in the increase of its numbers. It is planned to hold a ladies' night in February and an entertainmeat in March. Following the address of the evening an appetizing lunch was served.

At a recent meeting the following officers were elected for 1911. President, Frank Burgess; first vice president, F. W. McMulkin; second vice president, W. J. Hanscom; secretary, C. A. Colson; treasurer, Reginald F. Shaw. Executive committee, Rev. William B. Ayers, John B. Given, H. L. Irving, Sereno N. Ayres and A. B. Robbins. membership committee, H. M. Watts, C. N. Merrill, Herbert Tucker, L. L. Titus and C. Warren Humphrey.

MORE STEAMERS.

Three more steamers are to be built for the Hartford and New York Transportation Company for the use between Boston and New York and between New York and Portland. For the acquirement of this additional property, the capita l stock of the company is to be increased from five to seven million dollars.

WHIST PARTY.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of James E. and Mrs. Hogan, South street, on Monday evening, by those who responded to their invitation to a whist party. Quite a number of friends from Quincy and Hingham assembled. Miss Kitty Dorrity of Hingham, who displayed marvellous science in playing the game, succeeded in capturing the prize. Miss Helen Donnely presided at the piano and rendered some very nice selections in her usual easy manner. Luncheon was served in Mrs. Hogan's particularly good style, and all present partook heartily of the sumptuous repast spread before them. As the hands of the dial pointed to the midnight hour, Mr. F. D. McDonald of East Boston in a very fitting manner moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess to which Mr. Hogan responded gracefully. The singing of the National anthem brought the evening to a close.

YOUNG MAN ON PROBATION

Disagreement However on Theft of Baby Carriage

Herbert Percival of Brook street was solemnly arrested by Sheriff Irving L. Shaw at the meeting of the Wollaston Social society on Tuesday evening for the alleged larceny of a baby carriage from the residence of Charles E. Barker, Fayette street.

The trial was immediately held before Judge G. Ernest Carr and a full jury was impanelled. Charles E. Baker, the first witness for the prosecution, testified to the disappearance on the night of January 6 of the aforesaid carriage.

Mrs. R. W. Oldham and Mrs. G. Ernest Carr testified that on the night in question they had seen in suspicious proximity to the scene of the crime a man smoking a cigar, the odor of which could not soon be forgotten.

A. W. Rohn, a student of the psychological phenomena of criminology, was called as a government expert. He testified that he had secured "Exhibit A"—a cigar butt that belonged to the defendant—and that the smoke from the same was acknowledged by the two previous witnesses to be identical with that from the cigar of the man seen.

With some minor testimony from Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, the prosecuting attorney Clifton H. Baker rested his case.

George E. Brown, attorney for the defense attempted to prove the unreliability of government witnesses, a heinous plot hatched by the sheriff and State detective to cast discredit on the defendant and to disclaim for the latter any part in the affair.

Roy C. Baker testified to seeing the sheriff and detective in suspicious conference near the scene and on the night of the crime.

Winslow Weston said that he had called at the house of the plaintiff on the night in question as per agreement to take the carriage to be vacuum cleaned.

Louis B. Weston testified that "Exhibit A" was not the brand used by the defendant, as he had sold but one box since he had been in the business, and this to detective Rohn. He also testified to seeing Sheriff Shaw with two suspicious bundles on the night of the crime.

Mrs. Roy C. Baker testified to hearing a noise in the cellar, where the carriage was discovered, on the night of the theft. Winthrop M. Southworth admitted the bad reputation for fraud and deceit that the sheriff had acquired.

Dr. F. S. Andrews, the last witness for the defense and the dentist of the accused, testified that the teeth marks on the pipe and cigar butts exhibited did not correspond with those of the defendant.

In summing up, Attorney Brown declared, there was evidence of fraud and that the jury had been bribed. He made an impassioned plea for clemency because of the youth of the accused.

Clifton H. Baker, the rising prosecuting attorney, delivered a brilliant appeal that the jury would bring in an unprejudiced verdict, and that the base purloiner of a helpless infants only means of locomotion should not go unpunished.

The jury of which Mrs. Carl G. Horst was the forewoman, brought in a verdict of disagreement as the four men on the jury pronounced the defendant guilty while the nine ladies did not believe a nice man as Mr. Percival to be capable of such an offense.

It was a very pathetic sight as Judge Carr admonished the prisoner and put him on probation on condition that he would not visit the house of a certain Wollaston young lady for thirty days.

VALUE OF ORGANIZATION.

Quincy lodge, 108, International association of Machinists, held an open educational meeting in Electa hall Tuesday evening. Official visits were made upon the lodge by fourth vice president, Thomas L. Wilson, and R. L. Hall, president of district 19. Philip J. Halvosa of the Boston American staff, gave a very illuminating and instructive talk of "The value of organization." The meeting was largely attended by members and friends of the lodge.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The accent of Banker Robin's name is on the first syllable.

It is beginning to be realized that we are building the Panama Canal for Germany, Great Britain, Japan and other nations that carry freight by sea. It is evident that the trading ships of other nations will use the waterway to a much greater extent than will the people of this country. How can it be otherwise? Our ships, owing to the tariff and the high price of labor, cost 50 per cent more than the ships of any other country. Our sailors cost twice as much as those of any European country and five times as much as the wonderfully seasoned and competent sailors of Japan and China. We ceased suddenly to be a maritime country fifty years ago and we will never again be a maritime country until we can compete on a financial basis in ships and men with European and Asiatic peoples.

As was expected, Representatives William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier of this city stood loyally by Senator Lodge in his campaign for re-election. Hon. George L. Barnes the senator from this district, was also true to his Republican constituents. A man elected as a Republican candidate could not well do otherwise, unless there was a direct issue in the Republican caucuses which nominated a Representative, or at a Senatorial convention where a Republican candidate was nominated. The Democrats, with the support of the metropolitan dailies, certainly put up a great fight, and came as near electing a United States senator as they will for many a year. Yet no one could do as much for Massachusetts as Senator Lodge.

With the exception of the death of Senator Elkins of West Virginia no event of very great importance has occurred in Washington since the adjournment of Congress. The death of Mr. Elkins makes it certain that there will be two Democratic Senators from his State. Senator Scott of West Virginia will be succeeded by a Democrat, and the legislature being Democratic will elect a Senator of that party to succeed Senator Elkins. The late Senator was one of the wealthiest of what has been called the "American House of "Millionaires." His death is generally explained in the press as caused by over work at the late Congressional session, but anyone at all familiar with the facts will not be slow to attribute his illness to high living. He no doubt had a powerful constitution, but no constitution can forever withstand a perpetual banquet.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The world's army and navy bill for this year alone will be more than $1,500,000,000, or more than 150 times as much as Mr. Carnegie's gift, a proportion of about two-thirds of one cent for each dollar expended on the world's armies and navies for the year 1910.

It is a curious commentary that the United States should spend this year only $50,000,000 less than Great Britain, which country is the most lavish in the world in the matter of such expenditures. Germany, which is engaged in a desperate struggle with England for both martial and industrial supremacy, pouring millions into military and naval armament, spent this year only $25,000,000 more than the United States, and Russia spent only $19,000,000 more.

America spent $262,000,000 for its army and navy this year—and not a dollar of this stupendous sum went into a merchant keel; not a dollar went toward putting the Stars and Stripes back upon the industrial map of the seas nor in the harbors where this flag has so long been a stranger. These reflections, however, so far from proving Mr. Carnegie's gift a mere hopeless drop in the bucket, only accentuate the opportuneness of any and all efforts to hasten the time of universal peace, when these millions will be devoted to commerce, to trading with the peoples of the earth and not getting into a condition of preparedness to kill them or keep them from killing us.

It would seem to be high time for the high seas to be plowed by more merchant vessels and fewer warships and for the solid ground to echo with the tread of marching armies of industry rather than battalions of fighting men.—Haverhill Gazette.

The St. Louis city charter seems to have adopted a happy medium between the extreme of partisan spoils and impractical applications of the wholly commendable civil service idea. The charter provides that municipal employes who are in the service of the city shall be left undisturbed, the supposition being that employes who have discharged their duties satisfactorily for any considerable period of time are competent to perform them indefinitely, the double presumption being that they would not have been retained if not competent and that the longer they are retained the more efficient they will become. This seems a reasonable supposition, especially in view of the fact that the charter provides for discharge for cause. Incompetent men are not protected by the civil service rules, the very foundation principle of the system being the largest measure of competency. But when the civil service causes the discharge of employes who have proved their efficiency by being retained year after year under administrations of different political complexion, the very purpose of the reform is defeated, as has been shown by innumerable instances.—Haverhill Gazette.

Ex-Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri addressed a large audience at a Y. M. C. A. meeting held in Court Square Theatre Springfield on Monday on the subject, "America's Future." He said in part: "If the American Republic is to survive it must be saved by the efforts of the patriotic citizens who want nothing for themselves but the advantages that accrue from the general public's welfare. The future of our Government rests upon the integrity of the citizen and upon his activity in public affairs. Good government must begin at home, in cities and towns, and proceed from there to State and nation. This Government rests not on the wealth of a few, but upon he character and integrity of the average individual.

"I am not an alarmist and I do not believe that he United States will cease to exist as a republic today or tomorrow. We have lasted 134 years, a long time compared with the average period of one man's public activity, but short in history. The most conspicuous fault of national State and municipal governments in the United States today is that they are governments by the few and not by the people. When the lawless get a bad man in office they support him in all the evil that he does; but when the law-abiding get a man in office they too often are ready to criticise him and leave him to fight the battles without their active aid. That is the trouble. Good men are divided and bad men united.

"It is well for a State to display its virtues and not parade its faults, but it should not be forgotten that the highest civic virtue is in the overthrow of civic depravity. Grafters, whether in St. Louis or San Francisco, always endeavor to have it appear that a fight against them is a slander against the city in which they operate. Criminal wealth when assailed always tries to hide behind the skirts of legitimate business and claims that business is being attacked. In the work before you there is no use for the sword, but there is a stern demand for that courage shown by Americans on many battlefields. The spirit they exhibit as soldiers of war we could show as soldiers of peace in the noblest work to which the patriot can be called."

Peruvian Island Yields $900,000,000 In Twenty-five Years.

In the last twenty-five years the French company operating on Chichina island, off the coast of Peru, has realized more than $900,000,000 from guano shipped from those deposits, reputed to be the best in the world, because of the fact that there is no rainfall there. THE NATIONAL HYMN.

It seems to us that quite a number of sensitive contemporaries are unnecessarily borrowing trouble over the suggestion of Andrew Carnegie that Samuel F. Smith's "America" be retired in favor of a hymn written by an Illinois professor. The latter product strikes the former "steel magnate" as everyway superior in the qualities that do go to make up a national hymn to the well-known verses of Smith. It is ony necessary, however, to institute a slight contrast, and the average reader will be likely to conclude that Mr. Carnegie is unfortunate in his preference. Samuel F. Smith wrote:

"My country 'tis of thee."

Now compare this opening line, so full and rich and teeming with so much significance, with the introduction to the Illinois professor's hymn:

"Two empires by the sea,
Two nations, great and free,
One anthem raise."

There is no need of going farther. Mr. Carnegie's suggestion will come tolerably near falling flat, if indeed it has not already met that fate. "America" is still the favorite, and it will continue to hold its primacy.—Salem News.

NO CHOICE ON FIRST BALLOT

Bay State Legislature Must Vote Jointly For Senator

LODGE APPEARS TO BE SAFE

Totals Give Him Exactly Necessary Vote—Three More Than Needed In Senate, While He Falls Three Short In House—Shift of One Man From Lodge Strength Will Result In Deadlock

Boston, Jan. 18.—Unless the unexpected happens, Senator Lodge will be re-elected in the joint convention of the Masaschusetts house of representatives and the senate today.

Senator Lodge received 117 votes in the house and 24 in the senate yesterday, a total of 141, which is just a majority in the joint convention.

Sherman L. Whipple, the Democratic nominee for United States senator, received 109 votes in the house and 14 in the senate, a total of 123 votes, or three less than the full Democratic strength. Representative Cuff of Lowell voted for Butler Ames; McCullough of Holyoke voted for ex-Congressman Thayer and McInerney of Boston was absent.

Following is the vote of the house:

Total voting	239
Necessary for choice	120
Henry Cabot Lodge	117
Sherman L. Whipple	109
Butler Ames	6
Joseph Walker	4
Curtis Guild, Jr.	1
John R. Thayer	1
Sylvester J. McBride	1

The vote of the senate was:

Total number of votes cast	40
Necessary for choice	21
Henry Cabot Lodge	24
Sherman L. Whipple	14
Butler Ames	2

Congressman Ames in a statement to the press said: "Lodge will not be elected. Watch and see what happens."

Desperate efforts are being made by the Ames lieutenants to break the Lodge strength so that a deadlock may result today. With the same conditions prevailing today as yesterday a shift of one vote from the Lodge column would result in a deadlock.

The Lodge supporters are just as vigilant, and close watch is kept on the movements of the Ames lieutenants at the Parker house.

There is no question but that it is one of the most acute situations that has developed in the political history of the state. The Ames lieutenants have hopes of shifting Representative Quinn of Swampscott.

The Lodge men state that if there is a break in the Democratic ranks they will profit by it. On the other hand it is expected that if needed McInerney of Boston will vote for the senior senator.

Speaker Walker sent a personal letter last night to Representatives Arkwell and Sylvester of Worcester, Greenwood of Everett and Wood of Cambridge, asking them not to cast their votes for him today.

To have been elected yesterday Lodge had to get a majority of each branch. Failing in this, it is necessary to hold the vote he secured yesterday at the convention today in order to win by a bare majority.

Governor Foss, who was chagrined at the result of the ballot yesterday, was in consultation with a number of Democratic leaders last night, and was kept in close touch with the Ames headquarters. He declined to make any statement on the result.

SEGREGATES ALL ASIATICS

Indian Children Included In Bill Before California Legislature

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 18.—A bill for the segregation of Asiatic pupils in the public schools of California was introduced in the state legislature by Assemblyman Hall, Dem. It provides that education boards must establish separate schools for children of Mongolian, of Chinese, Japanese, Malay, or Hindu descent, by providing separate buildings or separate rooms in the same building. Indian children are also included in the ban.

The bill further provides that no adult Indian, Chinese, Japanese, Malayan or Hindu shall be admitted to any public school in the state. It was a measure similar to this which led to protests from the Japanese and the intervention of President Roosevelt at the last session of the legislature.

Decrease In Portland's Exports

Portland, Me., Jan. 18.—The exports of the port of Portland during 1910 showed a big falling off from 1909. The value of the exports for last year were $4,628,507 and for 1909 were $6,649,445. The gain in imports was $110,303.

HITCHCOCK IS ELECTED

Democrat Will Represent Nebraska In United States Senate

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 18.—Congressman Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Omaha, Democrat, was elected United States senator by the Nebraska legislature, receiving 117 out of a possible 133 votes.

Mr. Burkett, Republican, and present incumbent, his opponent, received ten votes in the house, but none in the senate. Only one ballot was taken.

EXPLOSION KILLS EIGHT ON THE DELAWARE

Backheaders on Boiler Blow Out on Battleship

Washington, Jan. 18.—Eight men were killed and another so badly injured that he will probably die on the battleship Delaware at sea through an unprecedented accident in the fireroom.

Three backheaders attached to one of the boilers blew off, exploding with such terrific force that the entire crew in the fireroom was scalded to death, probably before it realized what had happened.

The explosion occurred, according to wireless messages received from Captain Gove, in command of the ship, while the Delaware was making for Hampton Roads and when about twelve hours from her goal.

Engineering officers say the accident was one of the most remarkable they had ever heard of. There is no case on record where a similar one has occurred in the United States navy. According to these officers the effect of the tremendous amount of scalding steam must have been instantaneous and terrific. It was, they say, like opening up the vitals of the boiler without warning and letting the entire steam pressure loose.

WATERFRONT THREATENED

Firemen Have Hard Fight In Gale and Cold at Gloucester

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 18.—Fire, fanned by a stiff, icy, westerly wind, threatened the entire waterfront for hours last night, destroying totally four factory buildings of the Perkins Box company and George H. Perkins & Sons, fish dealers, one dwelling house and partially destroying four other houses.

Two schooners, the Eugenia and the Oriole, tide bound at the wharves, were damaged, and one small yacht, name unknown, was burned to the water's edge. The total damage is estimated at $140,000 to $160,000.

Several firemen were overcome by smoke. Three were seriously frostbitten. So cold was it that the water from the hose falling anywhere except in the blaze, landed in pellets of ice.

Indianapolis, Jan. 18.—John W. Kern, candidate for vice president on the ticket with Bryan in 1908, was today chosen as successor to Senator Beveridge by the legislature in joint session.

ENTER MAUD, SMILING.

MAUD MULLER ('tis a name you know)
Stood on the sidewalk shoveling snow.

(This parody, you see, 's a thing
We write each winter, fall and spring.)

The judge came walking down the street,
All cautious where he placed his feet.

He saw fair Maud and doffed his hat
And thought he'd stop to have a chat.

But treacherous ice was hid below
The velvet whiteness of the snow,

And while the judge sedately bowed
With manner dignified and proud

His feet slipped on the hidden ice,
He swayed and stumbled once or twice,

He tried in vain to overcome
His lack of equilibrium,

He grasped and grappled at the air
And found no firm support was there,

And so, with wild and sudden shout,
He whirled and twirled and spun about,

And waved his arms, and wrenched his back,
And then came sprawling down kersmack!

The snow scooped up beneath his vest
And plastered him by east and west.

The back breadths of his coat were torn,
And for his language we should mourn.

He then arose, deliberate,
And stalked away with careful gait

And never gave a backward glance
To Maud, who waited for the chance,

And when the judge was far away
She laughed as though she laughed for pay.

She shrieked, she squealed in girlish mirth
At how the judge had whacked the earth

And then, too much amused to talk,
She finished shoveling off the walk.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The first in the series of four lectures under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts committee held at the Women's clubhouse Tuesday afternoon was a great success the large attendance indicating the need for and the appreciation of the course. Mrs. George T. Taylor of Wollaston was in charge of the afternoon and the lecturer was Miss Lillian Newman, art instructor in the Quincy schools. She made her subject, "American Pottery," very interesting and had many pieces of pottery to illustrate her talk. Having at one time been connected with the Grueby Pottery Co., Miss Newman was able to give her listeners much personal and interesting detail.

Tea and crackers were served, the pourers being Mrs. Arthur F. Capen and Miss Emily C. Wild, assisted by members of the committee.

There was a large attendance of teachers as the hour, four o'clock, was convenient for them as well as club members. The next lecture will be on Feb. 21 and the lecturer Miss Lucy Wright who will speak on "Work for the blind."

The next meeting of the Quincy Women's club is the annual musicale looked forward to each season by club members, and friends fortunate enough to receive an invitation to attend. This year the musicale will be enjoyed under more favorable conditions as it will be at Alpha hall instead of the clubhouse and next Tuesday long before the hour of meeting every seat will probably be taken. To accommodate early arrivals the doors will be open at 1.30 P. M.

Mrs. Doble and her committee have arranged a program sure to please. The Westland quartet, every member of which has made herself known in musical circles by excellence of voice and pleasing personality, will receive a warm welcome. The great attraction of the program will be Henrich Schuecker, harpist of the Boston Symphony orchestra. He has only played in our city once but at that time it seemed as though his audience would tire him so persistent was the applause and so generous were his responses. The Women's club certainly has a treat in store for Mr. Schuecker is one of the best as well as most pleasing harpist in this country.

Members must show their membership card at the door and guests must also present tickets which may be obtained by club members of Mrs. E. E. Jameson, custodian or of members of her committee. Non-members who have already been guests this season may not be invited to the musicale. If any member is not to take a guest or use her guest privilege she is asked to communicate with the custodian that the ticket may be used.

The Home Sanitation lecture by Mrs. Tyler will be held at the clubhouse on Tuesday, Jan. 31 at 3 P. M.

JUNIOR FRIDAY CLUB.

Junior Friday club had a most happy meeting on Monday afternoon with Miss Edith Randall of Spear street. Her meeting was to have been at New Years but owing to an accident she was obliged to change with Mrs. Sturtevant. Coming later than scheduled however did not prevent the coming off of many pleasant surprises in the way of a New Years cake encircled with calendars for each guest inscribed with apt quotations and tied with the colors of France, which country the club is studying this season. A bright little story bringing in each member of the club and her place of residence had been written by the hostess leaving out all the adjectives. She asked each one present to give her an adjective which she wrote into her story until she had enough. The reading of the story was ludicrous and caused much merriment. So much was it enjoyed that it will be reread at the next meeting for the benefit of absent members and the refreshment of all.

Incidentally the routine program of the afternoon was carried out under the leadership of Mrs. Thompson, the committee contributing interesting sketches on Louis 18th, Charles 10th, Louis Phillippe, Dumas, Daguerre, Lesseps and San Saens and the hostess served a delicious lunch.

DORCAS SOCIETY.

The Dorcas society of the Universalist church was delightfully entertained by Mrs. T. A. Addison in the church parlor on Tuesday evening, the occasion being the annual meeting of the society. Encouraging reports were read of the past year's work and the treasurer's report showed a good balance in the treasury. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. George E. Sprague; Vice President, Mrs. Robert G. Reed; Secretary, Miss Maud H. Cudworth and Treasurer, Miss Florence E. Holton. Committees were also elected to carry on the work during the year.

A social hour followed during which ices, cakes and cocoa were served by the hostess. Mrs. Thomas W. Smith presided over the cocoa cups while Mrs. Spooner, Miss Hanson, Miss Blake and Miss Cudworth assisted in the serving of ices and cakes.

A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Addison for her hospitality in entertaining the society.

LYNN ASSOCIATED CHARITIES.

The annual reports of the Lynn Associated Charities, which disclose a wide range of serviceable activity, make clear one fact which is obscure to many people. They show that organized charity does not substitute investigation and advice for material relief when that sort of relief is needed. The general secretary's statement shows that $365.36 were spent directly by the office on emergency relief, for food, fuel, clothing, medicine, transportation, etc. In addition, $256.25 was secured by the office from various sources for direct relief. Over $600 was thus expended to meet the immediate physical needs of people who came to the attention of the Associated Charities workers. To this should be added the amounts expended by cooperating societies and individuals, whose interest in specific cases of need was secured by the office. Such sums do not appear, obviously, in the financial statements of the Associated Charities, and yet they must be reckoned in any adequate computation of the material relief which the central office has been the means of securing. These acts should correct a too prevalent misconception. Many people have thought that organized charity is indifferent to the need of material relief because it insists that the need of systematic treatment of causes is greater. The charge has been made that it allows a starving man to stare longer while it investigates him. Very likely some modern social workers have seemed to justify the charge by showing more scientific interest in their system than human interest in the people the system means to help. But the charge is not warranted by the facts. Certainly it has no justification in the practice of the Lynn Associated Charities, as the reports show.

The motto of the Associated Charities is "adequate relief." So far as that means food to the hungry and clothes for the naked, it is given. If time or opportunity does not permit of securing it from other sources it is provided by the society's own emergency relief fund. If it can be secured from relative or neighbor, or shopmate or fraternity or church, so much the better, for that means enlisting the quickened interest of natural friends and helpers. Every time the Associated Charities can secure relief from some one else, it is establishing normal social relations It is its duty to minimize itself and magnify the enlisted friends even though the careless observer, who judges charitable efficiency by the treasurer's report of money spent for food and fuel, does not credit the society with its important helpfulness. There is abundant relief to be had from many sources, public and private. The business of the central office is to co-ordinate these relief-giving agencies for the needy's sake, their own sake and the community's sake. And then the educative and preventative work of the Associated Charities has only begun.—Lynn Item.

PLANS HUMANITY COLLEGE.

General Booth Could Use Some Carnegie Millions.

General Booth of the Salvation Army was deeply stirred by Andrew Carnegie's gift of $10,000,000 for the promotion of the peace of the world.

"What would I give for $10,000,000 to help us start a university of humanity?" he said. "This university for a beginning should have two centers, London and New York It would be an institution to which the lowest, the humblest and the most degraded would be brought that they might be taught. The greatest and only abiding lesson would be forgetfulness of self.

"In these universities I would give men of healthy bodies the means of healthy work. I would have them trained mentally, morally and physically. I would see that the money was not spent on the few alone. Around each university I would have 1,000 halls which by their brightness would attract each their thousands.

"There are so many ways of spending money in the direction of peace and yet making it reproductive that I cannot recount all. I only wish Mr. Carnegie would give me a chance."

Queer Miss Egerton

She Was Unintelligible to the Last

By EMMA MOREHOUSE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Miss Marcia Egerton was a peculiar girl. She seldom did anything as any one else would do it and was always doing things in a way that no one else would think of doing them. It is the purpose of this story to chronicle the roundabout way she acted in a matter that concerned herself and several other people.

In the first place, Miss Egerton, who was an orphan, inherited a large estate and came into possession of it when she was eighteen years old. The next most important thing about her was an intimate friend. Before her mother's death, when she was but twelve years old, she had conceived a violent affection for Agnes Hart, who was badly named, because she was not possessed of a heart at all. Marcia's mother opposed the intimacy and when her daughter was sixteen years old sent her off to school with no other purpose than to get her away from Agnes, but without avail. The two girls kept up an almost daily correspondence during the whole period of their separation and on Marcia's return were more intimate than before.

Mrs. Egerton died when Marcia was twenty, leaving her daughter her own mistress and in possesison of a large property. She took her friend Agnes to live with her and lavished upon her everything a girl could desire. Several young men, each of whom would have liked to win Marcia either for herself or her fortune, declared that they were unable to separate her long enough from her girl friend to do so. And it was facetiously remarked that any one who married Miss Egerton must have two wives.

Marcia became interested in a young man—Edwin Bond—who found more opportunity to court than he availed himself of. He admired Marcia; but, having no fortune himself, he objected to being tied to a woman who possessed one. He was one of those young men who feel the zest of making a place for themselves in the world and knew that to do this he must be forced on by a powerful stimulus, for the man who marries a fortune is provided for, and he pays the price, which is —in nine cases in ten—constantly being reminded that his wife holds the purse strings and—money is power.

TWO PERSONS ENTERED.

Marcia, not making any headway with Edwin Bond, chose another lover, Cecil Baxter. Mr. Baxter was a frequent visitor at her house and divided his attentions between the two girls. His inclinations drew him rather toward Agnes than Marcia, but since Marcia possessed a fortune and Agnes was poor he accepted the encouragement of the former and proposed to her and was accepted.

When a certain scheme of Marcia Egerton's was whispered about, all who heard it wondered at her infatuation for her bosom friend. On the ground that she did not feel that she would live long she made a will leaving half her estate to a charitable institution to be named for and in memory of her mother. The other half she divided between her lover and her bosom friend.

Those who were observant noticed that Baxter's inclinations were rather toward his fiancee's friend than his fiancee. They also noticed that the friend, except when the fiancee was present, did not show any disposition to compel Mr. Baxter to reserve his especial attention for his betrothed. These people said, "What a pity that Marcia should not take herself off to heaven, leaving the poor their share of her estate and the lovers the rest of it." And yet there were others who claimed that, no matter what happens out of usual and conventional lines, tongues will wag; that these three young people understood one another thoroughly, and that was all there was about it. All agreed that the bequest was very lovely in Marcia, who was just the kind of girl to look out for the happiness of others and was as simple minded as a child.

Meanwhile Marcia Egerton seemed to be slowly failing. Her physician advised her to visit other lands. Since she couldn't very well go alone it was suggested that she be married and travel with a man. But she replied that she did not propose to throw any such obloquy upon a husband as making a courier of him. Then it was announced that she would take her girl friend with her. At this every one said: "That is exactly what was to have been expected. The society of the bosom friend is necessary; that of the fiance is not."

The two friends one day in January sailed on a Mediterranean steamer for Egypt. That is the last any one in America heard from them for several months; then one day Agnes returned, saying that she had left Marcia starting for a trip through the Holy Land. She reported her friend very much improved in health and not at all averse to traveling alone. Agnes was tired of traveling and preferred to go home. As soon as Marcia learned this, which Agnes said she had tried to keep a secret, Marcia would not hear of her remaining abroad any longer. Agnes, after refusing for a long while to return, had been literally compelled to do so by Marcia.

Since Agnes and Baxter were seen together a great deal after her return critical persons said that Agnes had come home purposely to monopolize him. The case excited more talk than any social happening that had been discussed in the place for years. Every one wondered that Marcia Egerton should be so blind. By some she was blamed for offering inducement for crime. Here were two lovers between whom she stood and who might be tempted to put her out of the way that they might be united, each with considerable means, into possession of which they would come at her death.

Then came a report that an American lady traveling in the Holy Land had been robbed and murdered. The report was confirmed, and the lady's name was given as Marcia Egerton. She had gone off on an excursion to a lonely place with a single guide where there was something curious to see, and he had returned to report that they had been set upon by thugs, the lady murdered and her money, including traveler's checks, taken. He said that he had buried the body at the place of the murder.

Baxter cabled and wrote to United States consuls nearest the scene of the tragedy asking for information. Nothing was adduced except the statement of Miss Egerton's guide, which was taken down in writing and sworn to. After waiting six months for the girl to turn up, nothing having been heard from her, the will was admitted to probate.

The evidence of the testator's death being deficient, the case dragged. Certain relatives who had hoped to benefit by the will opposed a settlement of the estate under the plea that there was not sufficient evidence that Miss Egerton was dead. It was six months after the reported death that the chancery court agreed to pay over to beneficiaries the three parts into which the estate was divided by the will.

About this time the announcement was made of the engagement of Cecil Baxter and Agnes Hart. A statement went forth that Marcia Egerton had had a presentiment that she would be summarily cut off and had requested in the event of her being so that the lover was to marry her friend. With angelic unselfishness she had provided in her will for their comfort. This satisfied every one except certain persons who had been watching Mr. Baxter and Miss Hart. They averred that though they might state truly Miss Egerton's part of the transaction it left much to be explained on the part of the two who were about to be married and inherit a fortune from her who was to have been the bride.

Baxter and Miss Hart were finally able to count on a date when their inheritance would be paid over to them, and they arranged to be married the day after receiving it. They agreed that they would place a stained glass window in the church they attended to the memory of the noble girl who had left each of them a comfortable fortune. The plan was laid, but the order for the work was not to be given until their property had been turned over to them. For a wedding trip they were to go to the Holy Land to gather information of the woman they loved and, if possible, bring the body home for burial.

One day they received a notice from their attorney that the papers in the case of their inheritance would be executed the next morning at 11 o'clock. They were all packed to go away as soon as the marriage ceremony had been performed the day after coming into possession of their property. All other matters, including the order for the memorial window, had received attention.

On the appointed morning they called on their lawyer and were taken by him to the office where the transfer was to be made. While they were sitting there two persons entered, one of whom especially they had not expected to see. They were Edwin Bond and Marcia Egerton, now Mrs. Bond.

There is no record of what was said between the testator, who had returned to life, and her expected heirs. All that is known about the sequel to the meeting is that Mr. Baxter and Miss Hart were never married. As to the memorial window, it was not required.

Many blamed Mrs. Bond for her action in deceiving her two friends, especially for going abroad and hiring a native to report her murdered. How she made it up with Bond she never told, but it was known that he went abroad while she was there and they were married there.

It has been said at the beginning of this story that Miss Egerton was a peculiar girl. What she meant by her performance, at what point she discovered the truth about Baxter and Agnes, she never told any one. She certainly went far out of her way to punish them, and punished them very severely. Whether they received more than they deserved is a question.

The Salem News publishes the following article, which will be of interest to Quincy club women and school children:

"The Waltham Women's club has become interested in school savings banks, and hopes soon to put into operation a system whereby the value of thrift may be taught to persons by the smallest means. The scheme established in Quincy will be followed as the most practical. The movement was fostered there in 1908 by the Quincy Women's club, the organization advancing $47 for expenses. The success of the movement is thus indicated. At the end of three weeks $1,500 had been deposited in a bank; at the end of four months $3,000 had been deposited; and at the close of the club season the combined deposits footed up exactly $8,700. Every Monday morning the children of the grammar grades bring their pennies, which are taken by teachers and credited on folders. The money is next deposited; and when the pupils have thus saved $5, they are provided with bank books.

"There is no need for The News to rehearse its opinion of these and kindred movements among the school population. From time to time the principle has been warmly supported. It is only a few days ago that we deemed it worth while to amplify anew upon the subject. Considering the moral and practical advantages, the results are so gratifying that the movement ought to be welcomed on every hand."

BRIEFS

Lent will begin March 1.

Candlemas day comes Thursday, Feb. 2.

On the last day of the month the sun will rise at 7 o'clock and set at 4.56.

Annual meeting of Bethany Congregational church this evening to be preceded by a supper.

This is the kind of weather when it is necessary to burn coal, and a lot of it, to keep the house warm.

The members of the Washington M. French hose association are smacking their lips in anticipation of that chowder which will be served Saturday evening.

A policeman's lot is not always a happy one, especially when they have to tramp about some of these snapping cold nights when there is a strong breeze blowing.

What is bothering the West Quincy Improvement association is to find room for all those who are expected to attend their annual banquet next week at St. Mary's hall.

PLAN COURSE IN WASHING.

Missouri University Co-eds Must Learn Effects of Starch.

Every young woman of the home economic department of the University of Missouri who takes a course in testing fabrics must soon roll up her sleevs and work over a washtub. Each student will have a locker in the laboratory which will contain a tub, washboard, soap and chemicals.

It is the aim of the university to teach the effect the starch, bluing and other chemicals have on clothing. Later the laboratory will be equipped with an electric washing machine. It is expected to enable the co-eds to determine which is cheaper, laundry work done by hand or work done by electricity.

IN FASHION'S REALM

One Piece Frocks Have Long Coats To Match for Street Wear.

Tunic Continues Popular—Brilliant Upper Bodices in Favor.

From present indications it looks as though the late Winter costumes that are not to be worn on the streets will consist of one-piece frocks and long coats. It is a comfortable fashion for mid-season because there is such a wide demand for a gown in one piece if not of one fabric for every hour of the day, and a long coat is always a useful adjunct.

The extravagance of this fashion is that a quaint color is used in the making of such suits. And the coat will not go well with other frocks. Even this can be offset by choosing a neutral color that will harmonize with one's other gowns. Whether or not a woman wants to adopt this fashion, it is the duty of the chronicler to tell of it. There is as much news in fashions as in politics, and former is more important to women than the latter, and far better understood. They want to know the weekly changes, the gossip the displacements, the innovations, the new rules and verdicts.

One of the interesting things about the minds of women is that they want to be informed on every subject in clothes, whether they buy a new suit once a month or once in every four years. And the woman who usually wants to know more about it than any other is in the latter class.

This is natural. She may not be able to indulge in the pleasure of buying and wearing the enticing new things that are offered, but she can delight her mind by reading about them and seeing sketches of them, and she does not want to appear ignorant on the subject when she talks.

And not only does she want to know about the change of skirts and the length of coats, but she wants to know what the first ladies of fashion are wearing. She may finish reading the description of a marvelous gown worn at a ball with the now famous expression of Marie Dressler, "I don't believe a word of it;" but, mark you, she wouldn't miss reading a word of it .

Men have an idea that women read fashions for instruction only, and that they only read about the things they wear and buy. This is only one of the straws which show how a man's mind blows . He reasons theoretically because he has no experience in the matter. If any one wants a living example of what the woman of moderate means likes in the fashion line, that one should go to the shop on the day that the great Paris gowns are shown. Even with tickets of admission there is no way of crowding the people into the space. Women fight for the front seats as they do at a bargain counter. And they are not the fashionable rich women. They come from every class of life, but especially from the quiet mother and housekeeper class that never has a chance to see the wonderful clothes except in the shops.

They come in on an early train from the far suburbs, and when they return home their talk is the only thing listened to for a week by those who couldn't leave household duties.

To return to these long coats, after wandering down a bypath; they have made their appearance on fashionable women and on the stage, and they have been taken up as a becoming costume by many to whom the short coat is not becoming. The gown beneath is always in the nature of an Empire skirt and a transparent bodice. This give a woman the chance to use it for many occasions. She can wear it on the street in the afternoon under the coat, if she is walking to and from a social affair; she can use it for an informal dinner and theatre gown; she can wear it to a luncheon, a matinee, a wedding. The coat being long and dark and not elaborate gives her the chance to cover whatever gorgeousness the bodice may possess.

This idea of producing an Oriental vividness with the upper part of the gown is an interesting feature in fashion. It has an amazing likeness to a transformation scene, for the skirt looks so sedate and the costume with the coat looks so demure that one almost gasps when the coat is thrown off, and the glass and gold, the purple and crimson of the tropical bodice appears.

I saw this exact thing happen when a well-dressed woman came into a house wearing a dull copper-brown costume of satin Janus cloth, its only trimming a small edge of brown fur. The skirt just cleared the ground and was discreetly narrow. The coat fastened at the side below the waistline, and again at the chest with an immense velvet button edged with fur. It showed very little of the neck as the one rever was carried well up toward the chin. The hat was a velvet turban in the same copper color, with a yellow aigrette and a dull gold buckle at the side.

Surely this costume looked sufficiently sedate for a shopping tour—but when the wearer slipped herself out of the loose long coat she looked like an Oriental Princess. There was no defined waistline. The skirt was slightly wrapped from waist nearly to bust, and above that was a peasant blouse of heavy gold lace lined with yellow chiffon cloth, with a second lining of flesh pink. The gold was embroidered with topaz and turquoise. The sleeves hugged the arm to the elbow and were made of the gold over the yellow and pink. There was no collar. All in all, there wasn't over a yard of this gorgeousness, and yet it vivified the gown. The moment the coat was resumed the whole custume took on its former sedate air. Rather an effective trick, don't you think?

The cut of this long coat was as straight and uncurved as an Egyptian mantle. It had no curve under the arm, neither did it have any fullness. It was slim and tubelike. Without question, these straight coats are to continue in fashion, whether they are short or long, and there is a good deal of talk about making the new Eton jacket also straight as it should be, instead of allowing it to curve in to the waist.

If women continue the present sensible habit of letting out their waists over 28 inches and keeping their hips in, there will be no need to draw this short jacket into its old measurements.

The sketches that have come from Paris show this short coat with a lapel up from the edge, or a turnover cuff, or whatever you might call a pointed piece of velvet or satin rolled up from the lower edge as a finish. On midseason gowns as well as on those we have been wearing the tunic plays an important part. It is seen on evening gowns as well as on those for the street, for the designers say that the latter will have this overskirt effect as soon as the weather is mild enough for us to go without coats.

On afternoon and evening gowns this tunic is of chiffon cloth, metal gauze or lace, ending above the knees and trimmed with roses or fur or embroidery.

In the simpler gowns that are for everyday hours the tunic is often worn under the coat or in the house slashed at the sides, and sometimes reaches only from the waist and is arranged in two deep scallops above each knee. This is an especially good model for a tall woman or any slim one, as it protects the line of the knees from that ugly scantiness that the new undraped skirt has. A recent gown made in this way is of myrtle green camel's hair, that new soft variety of it that has met with much favor since October. The skirt has a foundation of black satin lining, on which is put a gored lower skirt of the green. This has a seam down the middle of the back and at each side to keep the fulness from flaring. From waist to knees there is this scalloped tunic, its side seams being on a direct line with those below. This is edged with a two-inch band of black silk braid.

The bodice is slightly short waisted for no other kind gives that straight line over the waist. The peasant pattern is followed, which fortunately shows no signs of going out of favor, and its slight round neck is finished with a band of braid. The sleeves are small and edged with braid, and there is a guimpe with a high collar and elbow sleeves of Mechlin net, the kind that has a small dot in it and is not white but ecru. There is also a wide sailor collar shortened at the back and long on the shoulders of queer blue chiffon cloth, which was finished with a black satin bow and ends in front. This was an accessory which would change the color scheme of the gown for variety sake.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

THE SEPARATE BLOUSE.

The separate blouse is quite a problem of the day. When one could wear a white shirtwaist without breaking the conventions it was much easier to complete the everyday costume. Now things are different. In one way it is easier to dress, because the blouse that matches the costume is all arranged to put on in one piece, and remains fresh and clean for weeks at a time.

Its disadvantage is that it cannot be worn steadily. It needs cleaning and airing, and human nature craves variety. Three blouses are needed for one suit, and one is as expensive as three shirt-waists, as a rule. The jumper blouse is probably the best one for this reason, that it gives variety to the costume by being worn over different linings.

The shirtwaist has the disadvantage of never keeping fresh, especially if one wears a coat, and it may be for this reason that there has come about the present fashion of keeping the coat on during all daytime affairs, including luncheon at the restaurant. In days gone by it was customary to remove the coat and display a smart white blouse with a good-looking collar and an attractive belt and buckle.

The extension skirt with its lack of belt demands a blouse to match, or one of soft striped silk with harmonizing colors. The white shirt waist looks ill indeed above an empire skirt ,as these present ones are called. It does not go well at the waist line, and always looks like a makeshift.

The blouse in the same color of the suit is the first choice, and there is no denying the fact that it transforms the coat and skirt into an admirable three-piece costume. It gives it character. The materials out of which it is made are not varied; they come down to satin, chiffon cloth and marquisette. Few others are used.

Taffeta as a material is no longer thought of and soft silk is only used as a colored lining to a jumper blouse. It is rather remarkable how meteor and charmeuse satin have jumped into first place for blouses of a certain type. They are worn without a covering or as a foundation to an over-blouse.

The chiffon cloth ones are exceptionally pretty, and they can be draped over a lining that harmonizes but does not match. Old gold satin has become one of the leading choices for a lining, as it neutralizes the brilliant tone used over it. It is especially good under the fashionable London smoke tones in gray and brown that have again come into fashion this season.

So all-prevailing is the peasant or Magyar blouse that anything that has an armhole and a shoulder seam with tucks or plaits in it is strikingly out of fashion. It is a pity that this peasant cut will not remain with us for very many years, but the designers fear it will go out with the other novelties of the year.

Its absence of seams is so becoming to every one. Its certain kind of shoulder line imparts grace where grace is not, and the classic sleeve is becoming to the thick and the thin arm. The round neck remains in style for all these blouses, more or less high, and is filled in with a yoke and stock, or is finished with a sailor collar of some soft stuff.

The jumper blouse is an invention that deserves to remain with us. It is unlined and boneless, and can be worn over different kinds of linings, provided they are of soft fabrics and in a neutral color.

COIFFURES LESS ORNATE.

The opening of the opera season brought out a good deal that was interesting in the way of coiffures. So far there has been no especial way of judging what styles would be adopted by the majority. But it was a relief to see that neither the gargantuan coiffure of a few seasons ago nor the close, tightly coiled coiffure of last Winter was much in evidence.

This Winter's styles are infinitely more natural and becoming. The large pompadours are utterly out, and the hair falls low on the forehead in a soft, clinging way. The swirl that was used last year is used this, but in a different manner. It is placed snugly around a central Psyche knot or group of curls instead of being swathed around the whole head, and is caught with diamond pins or clamps.

The closely swathed head of last year was becoming to only a small number of women, and even when it suited one it gave an impression of undress, rather than a dressed coiffure. It was incongruous with a ball gown. It had not sufficient dignity nor formality for such a frock, and could only be worn with distinction in the morning hours.

But the small, crushable hats of this Winter have done away with the necessity for a morning coiffure. Nowadays one's head is having a heavenly rest form puffs and pins, swirls and curls, in the daytime at least.

If a woman chooses she need not make a formal coiffure until the evening. She may don one of the bewitching mob caps for breakfast and the morning hours indoors, and for afternoon she has only to pile her hair comfortably under one of the smart turbans of the season without a qualm as to its arrangement.

But the evening coiffure of the Winter seems to be a succession of waves and soft tendrils. There is not the stiff, hair breaking artificiality that was seen a few years ago. The natural softness of well kept hair is the thing, and puffs have lost their sausage-like contour and are much more natural in outline.

If many puffs are used they are not smooth or regular like those of last year but they are finger puffs with the end not caught in. In some cases these are put on small cushions of hair made from the combings of one's own hair at the crown of the head.

The whole tendency of this season's coiffing is toward softness and natural lines. Nothing is well defined or stiff or regular. It is a blending of waves and tendrils to display the shapeliness of the head, and seen at its best it is an infinitely becoming coiffure.

The Grecian coiffure is having wide popularity and it is eminently suited to evening occasions and formal wear. The hair is drawn up tight from the nape of the neck and caught either in a Psyche knot or with a group of curls. Around this, if one choses, can be fitted the swirl, which is caught down with diamond clasps. But it must fit the head closely and not be pulled out broadly.

The dangling curls that are pinned on the top of the head and allowed to hang irregularly are a Directoire fashion, which has not been taken up over here with enthusiasm.

Ornaments for the hair, of which there is an enchanting variety, are entirely reserved for formal occasions, and then they are almost barbaric in their splendor. Fillets are worn of rhinestones and in bands of plain gold. Butterflies and beetles of brilliants make most effective ornaments, and the braid clasp pins of rhinestones set in platinum or silver are admirably decorative.

GOOD HEALTH RESOLUTIONS.

"Resolution Number One: I will try to become more intelligent concerning my body," says Doctor Jean Williams in Woman's Home Companion "looking with greater respect upon my physical resources and trying to realize more fully that upon them the force and success of my lifelargely depend.

"Resolution Number Two: I will arrange, if possible, to supply sufficient pure air for every breath I take thus better to combat every source of disease that might attack me, to improve my chance for long life and to increase my efficiency.

"Resolution Number Three: I will be kinder to my digestive organs, avoiding all excess and not asking them to struggle with food for which they have repeatedly shown antagonism.

"Resolution Number Four: I will treat my brain and nervous system with greater consideration, and fifty-six hours of each week shall be devoted to sleep.

"Resolution Number Five: I will try to do in eight hours as much hard work as I should do in oneday.

"Resolution Number Six: I will devote at least two of the twenty-four hours to such exercise as I find most beneficial.

"Resolution Number Seven: I will give my moral support to every effort public or private in behalf of the betterment of health conditions, so becoming a small factor in the great movement for moral and physical uplift."

BRIGHTENING DARK ROOM.

In nearly every city house there is always sure to be one dark and gloomy room. It casts its depression upon all who enter it, and yet one is often at a loss as to what should be done to dissipate the lugubrious effect.

It should be dealt with ruthlessly. White paint and enamel should be used with a generous hand. Dark woodwork should not be tolerated, and dull or gloomy paper should be avoided. Hang the room in a paper of sunny yellow hue, put up only curtains of thin net and decorate your walls with pictures framed in white and gold and silver gray frames.

Many mirrors, if possible, should be used, for they aid wonderfully in brightening a dark room, but they must not be hung too high, as they will only reflect the ceiling, while they should catch the cheerful flame of an open fire and repeat its gleam.

No one thing is more successful in destroying the depressing atmosphere of a room than an inside window box. this box can be made attractive by a thin covering of brass or copper that will add to the brightness of the room, and the plants should be chosen with an eye to their color.

When the furniture in your dark and depressing room has been covered with a gay cretonne and magazines, books, and papers have been strewn about, this room, which filled every one with a feeling of aversion and discomfort, will become the favorite resort of the family.

BLACK VELVET BAGS.

The gold mesh purse, which is so dear to the heart of women, has been almost supplanted by the black velvet bag.

Thy are made of thick velvet and are framed in gold or silver. They are variously shaped but all are suspended from the arm by heavy silken cords and tassels, very long, so that the bag drops to the knees. Some are elaborately beaded, but generally the fabric is of so fine a quality that it needs no other embellishment than its own elegance.

BUGLES AND JET.

Bugles and jet, which have always been associated in our minds with elegantly gowned old ladies, are now seen ornamenting flippant evening frocks and youthful coiffures. It must be really nice for the bugles and jet to have this cheerful change of environment, and they are very effective.

Seen in a decorative fringe on filmy evening frocks the bugle is lovely. Its graceful pearl-like body lends itself admirably as a decorative adjunct to the gown and the mournful charm of jet but enhances the fairness of youthful faces when worn as pendant earrings and upon blond coiffures.

HUB DELEGATES WANT A CHANGE

Dissatisfied With Conditions In National Board of Trade

IS ON VERGE OF DISSOLUTION

Determination to Thoroughly Overhaul Old Organization, Which Was Once Powerful, or Form New One—Held Together In Recent Years by Its President Footing Seventy-Five Percent of Its Bills

Washington, Jan. 18.—The national board of trade, now holding its annual session in Washington, faces radical reorganization, if not practical disintegration, as may develop within the next few days. The Boston deelgates, all representing the chamber of commerce, are largely responsible for the movement to vitalize this venerable organization, but the issue is in no sense sectional.

For more than forty years the national board of trade has been the one business body whose conclusions have been commonly accepted as representative of national business sentiment. During certain periods of its career the board has been as genuinely influential as when it was an important factor in the establishment of the department of commerce and labor.

For several years the president of the organization has been Frank D. La Lanne of Philadelphia, a retired business man of large wealth and much public spirit. Through his interest in the success of the annual meetings, La Lanne has come to absorb many of the functions of the board and for several years he has paid many of its bills. The board is purely a delegate body, and last year its income from dues was only about $2300, with estimated expenses of possibly $10,000.

Mr. La Lanne is said to have borne perhaps 75 percent of the financial burden, and as a result the meetings of board have been great social successes. President Taft addressed the dinner of last year and Secretary MacVeigh, Senator Aldrich, Ambassador Bryce and other prominent men were scheduled for the dinner next Thursday evening. While the financial services thtus rendered by La Lanne have been great and his motives were praiseworthy, a marked effect of his generosity has been to weaken the organization.

The affairs of the board have been directed almost exclusively by the president and a few friends, and the constituent bodies, and the committees, relieved of responsibility, have allowed matters to take their course until the board in large measure has lost its character as a thoroughly representative business body.

In sending its delegation to Washington this year, the Boston chamber of commerce picked the strongest list of men it could name. Many of the Boston men had not attended a session of the board before and they came with the purpose of transacting actual and important business. They found little to do and an academic and social rather than business atmosphere pervading the association.

As the newcomers talked among themselves, they became convinced that the national board of trade was not completely fulfilling its supposed mission. They had a conference with Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel and found that official eager to cooperate, on the part of the government, with some great central business organization. The secretary uttered no criticism of the board of trade, but it was known that the national council of commerce, on which his predecessor based such brilliant hopes, had virtually gone to pieces.

It is not putting it too strongly to say that the newcomers were rather disgusted with the conditions they found existing in the national board of trade. They held a conference with La Lanne and found him more or less appreciative of the situation and apparently willing to co-operate in a plan to place the organization on a better footing. At this conference a committee on reorganization was appointed.

It is not expected that a complete plan of reorganization can be devised, but the reorganizers are determined that the committee shall at least offer some suggestions for either a thorough overhauling of the old organization or the formation of a new one.

DOCTORS ON THE STAND

One Testifies That He Supplied Mrs. Schenk With Sugar of Lead

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 18.—Surprises follow one another with great rapidity in the trial of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, who is charged with poisoning her wealthy husband, and yesterday was marked by the testimony of a physician who declared he had given Mrs. Schenk some sugar of lead.

Dr. Myers declared that Mrs. Schenk had secured from him about an ounce of sugar of lead, one of the poisons alleged to have been given to Schenk, and that she had tried hard to get about two ounces of Fowler's solution of arsenic, but upon being refused Mrs. Schenk finally declared she had bought the other poison from another physician, whose name she refused to give.

The last witness of the day, Dr. Burns, one of the physicians attending Schenk, declared that in his opinion, prior to Oct. 21, the packer was suffering from lead poisoning and that arsenical poisoning was developed after Oct. 22.

Protestant Episcopal Prelate Expires After Week's Illness

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 18.—Bishop Alexander H. Vinton of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of western Massachusetts died early this morning, following an illness of a week with pneumonia and bronchitis.

Oxygen was resorted to as a stimulant, but the bishop fatied steadily, although fully conscious until near the end.

CREW TRAPPED IN GERMAN SUBMARINE

Twenty-Seven Escape by Way of the Torpedo Tube

Kiel, Ger., Jan. 18.—With thirty men aboard, the German submarine U-3 went to the bottom of the harbor through the accidental filling of her water bunkers.

The salvage ship Vulcan was at once sent to her rescue, and chains were placed around the submarine, and within a short time one end of the craft was drawn above the surface of the water. She came up obliquely and in that position remains, only one end showing above the water.

Twenty-seven of the crew crept through the torpedo tube when the vessel was partly raised. The three others, including the commander, decided to stay with the ship, and they are still in the tower, which lies under water, owing to the slant of the craft. It is expected they will be rescued without difficulty.

"THE MOTHER OF TRUSTS"

Governor of New Jersey Wants Stigma Removed From State

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 18.—A smashing blow was struck at New Jersey's chief industry—the making of trusts—by Governor Wilson. In his inaugural address he advocated the passage of laws that would decrease the sweeping powers granted to corporations and remove the stigma placed upon the state by calling it "The mother of trusts." He proposes that the law should regulate all future corporations and modify existing charters so that the state shall no longer be the incubator of trusts.

Among the vast corporations organized under the laws of New Jersey are the so-called tobacco trust, beef trust and oil trust.

The recommendations of Wilson on the subject of bosses are of special significance in view of the fact that he has been mentioned as a possible nominee for the presidency by the Democrats in 1912.

NEEDLESS RUN CLOSES BANK

One of Oldest Institutions In Maine Suspends

DEPOSITS OF OVER $400,000

Much Money Belongs to Mill Operatives and Children—Action Taken by Commissioner to Protect Assets—Dexter Bank Was Scene of Killing of Cashier Barron In 1878—Depositors Declared to Be Safe

Dexter, Me., Jan. 18.—The Dexter Savings bank has closed its doors by order of State Bank Commissioner Skelton. It is one of the oldest banks in this section of Maine. The closing followed a run on the bank.

President Arthur P. Abbott attributed the run to "stories circulated that were wholly without foundation." The closing of the Dexter Savings bank, together with that of the Dexter branch of the Waterville Trust company about two years ago, leaves this town with only a single bank. Many of the depositors are mill operatives and children, and the total deposits are upwards of $400,000.

President Abbott in a statement says: "After talking matters over with the bank commissioner, the decision was reached that the closing of the doors was the best thing that could be done. Everything within the power of the bank people has been done to stop the run and to reassure the depositors.

"Owing largely to the fact that the failure of the Waterville Trust company two years ago and the closing of its branch here struck many people in this section a hard blow, it was impossible to stem the tide of depositors who were clamoring for their money.

"Realizing that a continuance of the run meant the disposal of their stocks and bonds on a low market, it became necessary for the officials of the institution to take immediate steps. The bank commissioner, therefore, was consulted, the situation laid before him, and it was decided that the best move was to close the doors and thus allow the bank to dispose of its holdings on a stronger market."

President Abbott stated that a few days ago he went very carefully over the books of the institution for eighteen years back, and found that the bank today is in better condition than at any time in that period. He also stated that there is absolutely no suspicion of mismanagement and that the closing of the bank was unavoidable.

"It is not expected the depositors will be losers other than the loss of interest for an indefinite period," said Abbott. The officials decided not to avail themselves of the ninety days' notice rule when the depositors appeared and asked for their deposits.

This bank was the scene of the killing of Cashier J. Wilson Barron in 1878, for which Stain and Cromwell were arrested ten years later and convicted of murder.

The bank was organized in 1867, and the present officers are: President, Arthur P. Abbott; vice president, C. H. Haines; treasurer, W. H. Judkins; trustees, A. P. Abbott, C. H. Haines, W. H. Judkins, J. W. Haines and Amos Springall.

STILL IN GOOD SHAPE

Young Man Not Discouraged Over Unusual Run of Hard Luck

St. Louis, Jan. 18.—In the twenty-four years of his life Walter L. Gardner of St. Charles has suffered twenty-four bone fractures and five dislocations, besides the loss of one finger on the right hand and three on the left.

He is still somewhat disabled from his latest accident, when a horse kicked him, breaking his left arm for the eighth time. But that was so much less of a calamity than previous ones which have befallen him that he says he feels in unusually good shape.

Gardner's run of bad luck began when at the age of 4 years his sister dropped him, breaking his right leg.

DUKE GOES TO WORK

London, Jan. 18.—Society has been supplied with a new thrill in the news that the Duke of Vezeu, who married Miss Anita Steward of New York, has gone to work.

Dukes who are members of royal families and married to American heiresses and yet follow the daily routine of life in a London stock broker's office are sufficiently rare to cause wonder, even in this city.

MADMAN SHOOTS AT BRIAND

Bullets Fail to Hit Premier, but an Official Is Wounded

Paris, Jan. 18.—A madman sitting among the spectators in the gallery of the chamber of deputies suddenly drew a revolver and fired two shots at Premier Briand. The premier escaped injury, but Leon Mirman, director of public relief, received one of the bullets in the leg.

The greatest commotion ensued among the deputies, while several spectators sprang upon the madman. They bore him down and several of the deputies, running into the gallery, struck at him.

It was discovered by police, who came to his rescue, that the man was M. Gicolme, who had once made an unsuccessful atempt upon the life of the English consul at San Sebastian, and had been incarcerated in an asylum for the insane.

Amid al the uproar Briand maintained his equipoise, apparently having become quite accustomed to being made the object of attack. As in the case of the attempt to do him injury last November, the premier himself went to the aid of his assailant.

CARRIED ON FOR YEARS

Charge That Vote Buying Long Has Been Common In Illinois

Danville, Ills., Jan. 18.—Charges that this county, the home of Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives, long had been debauched by vote-buying, were made before a grand jury here.

The court charged the practice had been carried on for many years by both parties and urged a long and searching examination. The court said a moral wave is sweeping over the country and that this county would be made to feel its effects. A large number of witnesses have been summoned.

ITALIAN IS KILLED BY DEPUTY SHERIFF

Latter Is Seriously Wounded In Liquor Riot In Maine

Topsham, Me., Jan. 18.—John Parri, an Italian laborer, was killed and Deputy Sheriff Ballou of Bath received a bullet wound in the head which is considered dangerous, in the course of a riot at an Italian construction camp near here. The riot was quelled shortly afterward by deputy sheriffs who had accompanied Ballou.

The trouble originated in a raid on the camp, when two deputy sheriffs and an officer of the Maine Christian Civic league seized a quantity of beer. Fifty Italians charged the three officers and rescued the beer. The officers, realizing that they were powerless, left the scene.

Warrants for the arrest of some of the Italians were secured and Ballou and two other officers went to the camp. After they had made one arrest the Italians rushed at them and rescued the prisoner. Then Ballou approached the group of men alone. As he walked toward them Parri left the others and advanced to meet the officer. Ballou saw that the man was armed. When they were ten feet apart both raised their revolvers and fired. The Italian received a wound in the right side, while his own shot went wild, but as he fell he fired again and the bullet struck the deputy under the left eye.

OIL TRUST'S FINAL PLEA

Follows Wickersham's Plain Summary of the Government's Contention

Washington, Jan. 18.—John G. Johnson, leading counsel for the Standard Oil organization, concluded the long oral argument before the supreme court of the United States on the proposed dissolution of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, as in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

In marked contrast with Johnson's effort was the plain summary of the government's side of the case by Attorney General Wickersham, who spoke just before Johnson took his place before the court. Many prominent Washingtonians listened to the final clash of the advocates.

BURTON HOLMES LECTURE.

It is no small privilege to have been for twenty years a chronicler of the Passion Play of Oberammergau. Burton Holmes witnessed the Play for the first time in 1890 and a brief account of it formed a part of the first lecture ever delivered by him. In 1900 he spent three weeks in Oberammergau. The resulting lecture proved the most successful of any he had yet presented. In 1904 he sent Mr. Depue to make motion-picture studies of the famous villagers during a quiet between-play period. In 1905 he attended the performance of "The School of the Cross" and presented a new Oberammergau lecture during the following season. In 1910 Mr. Holmes and Mr. Depue were among the earliest arrivals in the village of the Passion Play and there they remained for a month, witnessing many performances and completing a picture-record of the Play and of Oberammergau life on which they have been engaged for twenty years.

The lecture of this season at Tremont Temple on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, is in no sense a revival of any earlier effort, but it contains interesting retrospective glimpses of the play-periods of the last two decades, thus making it a vivid exposition of Oberammergau as it was and as it is today.

LABOR LEAGUE DANCE.

The annual dance of Brith 8, Labor league, was held in Alpha hall Tuesday evening. About 75 couples participated in dancing to Wilson's orchestra, and the gallery and sides of the room were well filled with spectators. During the intermission refreshments were served in Union hall. The floor was in charge of Nathan Aronson.

STRAIN ON COW TAINTS MILK, SAYS HEALTH HEAD.

Capacity Once Eight Quarts, Now Thirty, Asserts Chicagoan.

Pity the poor dairy cow!

Stuffed with bran, oats, clover and all the delicacies which tickle the bovine palate, she nevertheless has cause to envy her brother, the ox, laboring in his yoke and burning up his muscular force pulling heavy burdens.

The casual observer may think the life of the dairy cow a sinecure. Let him listen to Health Commissioner Evans and be disenchanted. Dr. Evans ascribes the prevalence of tuberculosis in cows—just proved by government tests in the Chicago dairy district—to the hard labor imposed on cows.

This hard labor is producing milk in maximum quantities under unnatural and artificial conditions, according to Dr. Evans.

"It is the most natural thing under the sun that cows should succumb to tuberculosis when we consider their environments and their excessive labor," said Dr. Evans. "Dairy cows work too hard and rest too little. Manufacturing milk is the hardest work in the world.

"The ox has plenty of fresh air, working in the open, while the cow is imprisoned month after month at her stanchion in a poorly ventilated barn full of bad odors and disease breeding germs.

"Dairy cows in the Chicago district are overfed and overworked. They go to pieces in five years, but they are kept at the grind of producing milk much longer than that. Nature has intended that a cow only should feed her offspring. Now, a calf is well fed on eight quarts of milk a day. A good Holstein cow produces thirty quarts a day under the artificial conditions of our dairy districts, enough to feed nearly four calves."

BASKET BALL AT HIGH

Quincy First Team Defeated But Second Team Wins

Quincy High was defeated at basketball by Reading High Tuesday afternoon by the score 19 to 13. The home team worked hard but their inability to shoot baskets lost them the contest. Reading had a scrappy team which could shoot, and thus won from their opponents. The tactics used were not always such as could be approved, but their strategy was good and they deserved to win. Temple and Fairbanks, the forwards on Reading divided the honors for the most baskets. Manning was Quincy's best man but even he was unable to find his eye and shoot in the old form.

During the first half Quincy did not get a basket from the floor, while Reading shot 5 baskets and three fouls. In the second half Quincy revived a little, and brought the score up to 13. With about five minutes to play, Temple got three baskets from the floor, and the home team lost courage and the game. Captain Manning and his men work hard enough but there is a lack of system in passing, and in consequence much time and many opportunities are lost.

The Reading team played rather an unwholesome game, to be sure, but it played as a unit and worked like a machine.

The trouble with Quincy probably lies in the lack of coaching, and it is unfortunate that with such splendid basketball material, no better results are accomplished. Quincy has done well to hold some of the strongest teams in the state, but her attitude seems always to be defensive. A week's work with an efficient coach would put the Quincy team in fine trim and enable them to win decisive victories during the rest of the season.

The summary of the game follows.

SECOND TEAMS.

The second team did not share the fate of the first, but squeezed out a victory in the second half. The score at the end of the first period was 10 to 3, in favor of the Reading team. With the advent of Trask and Sutermeister in the second half Quincy took a new lease of life, and won out by one point. Tirrell with 4 baskets, Trask with 3 and Sam Prout with 2 were the best men on the home team, although Johnson's goal from foul was necessary to win the game. For the visitors, Stratton, McLeod and Staples were the best shots. The summary:

MORAN WINS RACE.

There was a good attendance at the Coliseum Tuesday evening, the attraction outside of roller skating being a five-mile skating race and several wrestling bouts. The main interest was centered on the wrestling bout between Frank West, the middle weight champion, and Jim Proker, known as the "terrible Greek." The match was catch as catch can, best two in three, and was won by Frank West after an exciting match. The five-mile skating race was between Joe Moran of New York and Joseph Donati of Boston. These two men were well matched, and for a time kept close together. Then Moran began to draw away from his opponent and he finished with a good lead.

DR. COOK BEATEN; EDEN IS FOUND

Eve's Habitat "Discovered" at North Pole by Professor.

SEAT OF GENERATING FORCE.

Was Original Site of Tree of Life; Also Home of Traditional Old Mother Goose and the Winged Pegasus, Asserts Walter F. Cooling of Chicago In Scientific Discussion.

Up in the icy and snow bound regions where Dr. Cook says he "doesn't know whether he found the north pole or not" Walter Freeman Cooling, a Chicagoan, has "discovered" the garden of Eden.

Of course the place where Eve first was tempted by the evil one and ate the stolen apple is buried under ever so many tons of ice and snow, but it's there just the same.

If you want to "discover" it yourself, just wander up along midway between the Hudson bay and Siberian magnetic poles, locate Cooling's recently discovered magnetic pole and then plod along until you find the seven stepped Olympic mountain of historic fame, and somewhere in the neighborhood—maybe a block or so away—you'll find the tree of all seeds buried down a few feet—maybe a couple of thousand—below the ice, or, at least, it once was there.

Chance For Fame.

When you stand in this spot you'll be in the garden of biblical fame and can come back to America and make "oodles" of money on the lacture platform and be hailed as a hero or heroine.

Professor Cooling told all about his new find in an address on "The Garden of Eden and the Polar Origin of Life" recently.

"The earth is surrounded by a protoplasm, just like a cell in the human body," the speaker declared. "Then there is a terrific alternating electric current zigzagging in and around the world. It centers in the pole where all vital and constructive energy is husbanded.

"At the north pole in the arctic region this protoplasm seeps out as a generating force. Before the days of the glacial period, when European American and Asiatic shores were jammed together, this was the center of all flora and human life. We find in these regions the trunks of trees and the skeletons of animals now living in Africa and Australia.

"This garden of Eden wasn't the way we have imagined it. There were no rains, and the dew for the garden came from the electrical disturbances in the elements. We have only to make a close study of the myths to discover where this garden was.

Tree of Life In Arctic.

"All ancient historians agree that the tree of all seeds or of life grew on Mount Olympic. They agree that the mountain of seven steps was in the arctic regions. On the top of this mountain grew the trees, and thirty three rivers streamed down its sides in a beautiful cascade. The gods lived on this mountain.

"Historians tell us that Old Mother Goose and Pegasus, the winged horse made their headquarters there. The two swans of Mother Goose went from the north to the south, the female acting as the stork and bringing humans into the world, while the male, acting as death, took them away. They centered at the electric pool on Mount Olympic.

"I have delved deep into history and the old myths and have made research from a scientific standpoint. I have come to the conclusion after years of study that if the garden of Eden wasn't located up near the point that I have fixed as the electrical pole then there wasn't any garden, for I am convinced that all life originated from the now ice and snow bound arctic region."

ORCHESTRA IN "SNEAKERS."

Burglar Equipment to Prevent Musicians' Pedal Discords.

The newest thing in New York is the "sneaker" orchestra at the New theater. Ordinarily "sneakers" are found only on burglars, who wear them to prevent being heard while breaking into a place.

This gave Director Ames an idea. An orchestra's only excuse for "sticking around" is the music it produces. A noisy foot is not music, but an interruption and an annoyance. Interruptions and annoyances must be avoided. The noiseless foot is one way around; the "sneaker" gives the noiseless foot. Ah! "Sneaker" the orchestra!

So the order went forth that every man in the orchestra pit should wear over his shoes a felt slipper, or sneaker, to give the noiseless foot, so that no man might offend by breaking into the show with a rude shuffle or if so breaking in might not be heard.

Two Billion Building Record.

Building department records show that there has been spent on buildings in New York city during the last forty years $2,760,496,000.

Big Debt In New York.

New York city's indebtedness is seven times that of any other city in the country. The debt is about $142 for each inhabitant.

GIVE ENGINE TO ENGINEER.

Railroad Honors Old Time Employee Who Runs Fast Train.

The Erie railroad has honored Alexander Larkin of Cleveland, one of its oldest engineers, both in years and in point of service, by presenting to him on his sixty-eighth birthday the engine which he drives daily in hauling the Pittsburg flier between Cleveland and Youngstown.

Larkin has been with the company for forty-nine years. He began his career as a fireman with the Atlantic and Great Western railroad, part of the Erie system. He served about six months as a fireman and was then made an engineer.

Ever since then he has been running on fast trains; most of the time between Cleveland and Youngstown or Pittsburg. He has been in but two accidents, in both of which he was injured.

The engine is to be regarded as his personal property and can be used by no other engineer.

KONIA IS AWAKENING.

Former Iconium, Made Famous by St. Paul, Becoming Modernized.

The city of Konia—the ancient Iconium, once pagan, then Christian and now Mohammedan, the scene of Paul's labors and once the capital of the Seljunian empire, estimated to have today a population of 60,000, is rising again to prominence through the opening of railroad communication to Constantinople.

The city of Konia is the center of a rich agricultural and pastoral province which politically is considered to be of almost the first rank in the Turkish empire, since more than once the office of governor of the province of Konia has proved to be the stepping stone to that of grand vizier at Constantinople. Linked to Constantinople and Smyrna by railway, Konia is seizing upon western methods and improvements faster than any other city in the interior of Asia Minor.

A closed aqueduct now brings excellent water from a lake 100 miles distant, a street car line is in operation in the city itself, and some of the streets are electric lighted. In the country surrounding reapers are now at work. A German company has already expended about $3,250,000 toward a huge irrigation scheme by which water from the hills may be made available for 1,000 square miles of adjoining territory. These are simply a few of the indications of the material progress already begun.

HERDBOY HOST TO ROYALTY

Lord Mount-Stephen Rose to Peerage by Merit.

The king and queen of England were recently entertained by a man who began life as a herdboy in Scotland. The career of Lord Mount-Stephen, who was their majesties' host at Brocket Hall, has been one of the romances of modern biography.

From herdboy he rose to be a draper's apprentice and worked afterward as an assistant in a London drapery store. Then he decided to try his luck in Canada, whither he emigrated in 1850. What fortune he met with there is well known.

He became head of the Canadian Pacific railroad, president of the Bank of Montreal and president of the St. Paul and Manitoba railroad. He obtained a peerage as the reward for his labors in Canada, being the first man in the colonies to attain this distinction. He is one of the most intimate friends of King George. Although in his eighty-second year, he is more active than most men of middle age.

Dr. Edwin Noah Hardy Resigns Pastorate

FOR SIXTEEN YEARS AT BETHANY CHURCH

Known by Congregationalists Throughout the State as "Bishop" of Norfolk County

His Letter in Full to His People--Committee Try to Have Him Reconsider His Action But are Unsuccessful

Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph. D., pastor of Bethany Congregational church, has resigned and church has reluctantly accepted his resignation after an unsuccessful attempt to have him reconsider his action. To a large majority of the church people as well as the people of the city generally, the change is sudden, although Dr. Hardy intimated as much in his New Years sermon, and it has since been a subject of discussion. His people generally were very anxious that he should continue.

The blow came Wednesday evening at the annual meeting of Bethany church corporation when Theophilus King read at the opening the following letter from Dr. Hardy:

DR. HARDY'S LETTER.

To the members of Bethany Church:

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—After careful consideration I am convinced that the time has come when, for the highest interests of all concerned, it is best for me to resign the commission as pastor of Bethany church so generously committed to me fifteen and a half years ago. Therefore, now at your corporate meeting, I ask you to act upon my resignation and to appoint a committee to serve with me in calling an ecclesiastical council for the dissolution of the pastoral relation according to our denominational usage. I would suggest the thirtieth day of June, the end of my sixteenth year as pastor, as the most convenient time. This date will afford the church ample time to secure my successor who can thus begin his work here in the autumn the best season of the year.

I am convinced that it is a good time for the change of pastorate to be made. The church is in excellent condition to make rapid growth in numbers and influence in the immediate future with its fine organization and loyal supporters, its freedom from debt, its financial ability, and its widening prestige and enlarged influence in the midst of a rapidly increasing population. Again a pastorate longer than mine, while advantageous in many respects is always beset by grave perils, on the part of the minister that he lose his enthusiasm and efficiency, or, if conscientious, suffer a breakdown in health: and there are equally serious dangers that the church lose in appreciation and responsiveness, or in aggressive zeal for the work. In any case it is well nigh inevitable that the pastoral duties become more exacting and numerous with each added year. To offset these obvious dangers I hereby resign my pastorate. I am also convinced that a change of residence will prove beneficial to the health and welfare of my family.

DR. HARDY

It is needless for me to say that this step is one of the most painful experiences of my life. I find myself and family bound to the church and to the city by some of the strongest human ties. The threads of my being are woven into the very texture of this city and this church. I have taken the keenest interest in every movement for the betterment of the city. And more than it falls to the lot of most pastors I have enjoyed the confidence and intimate fellowship of a large church and congregation. I have been with you in your hours of greatest joy, and there are few homes in the parish which have not sought pastoral sympathy in those hours when deep bereavement shadowed the threshold. Together we have worked for and watched the development of a generation of young people many of whom are fitting themselves for large usefulness in life.

Reviewing the pastorate I believe we may honestly say that few churches have enjoyed greater harmony, truer happiness, or more prosperity. There have been few things to mar our relationship and much to brighten and enrich it. I am profoundly grate-

WALTHER MEN'S CLASS

Observe Ladies Night and Have a Jolly Time

With its usual hospitality, the Walther Men's class observed its annual ladies' night on Thursday in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church. At 6.30 over 100 sat down to an excellent turkey supper well served, under the direction of the entertainment committee, by the young men of the church. At the head table were President and Mrs. J. Arthur Sparrow, Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Walther, together with the members and wives of the executive committee.

In charge of the affair was a committee composed of Kendall F. Harriman, J. P. Perry, Professor J. H. Marceau and Louis Cleaves. Following are the young men who served: William Bullock, Everett Rhodes, Chester Barlow, Lester Porter, Alden Hatfield and Nathan Drew.

The evening's program opened with a few words of welcome from J. Arthur Sparrow, who told the story of the man who always voted the straight Democratic ticket but one year voted the Republican by mistake. Shortly after he became imprisoned in a hollow tree, but when he thought of this act he felt so small that he was able to crawl out of his predicament. Mr. Sparrow said he would do likewise tonight by calling on various ones to speak.

Rev. Joseph Walther in his ever cordial manner spoke of his pleasure at seeing so many present, and told a store of entertaining stories in the jocular vein.

As the ladies sometimes complained that they were not permitted to speak often enough, Mr. Sparrow said that he would give Mrs. Walther an opportunity to say a few words.

Mrs. Walther begged to be excused as she had been peeling potatoes all day for the festivities that evening.

Mr. Sparrow then made some remarks about "potato" and "masher" that brought a hearty laugh.

Elford D. Durgin, superintendent of the Sunday School, spoke briefly of that organization and its work, thanking those present for the hearty support they were extending him.

George Bartlett Cutter of Boston was then introduced, and for the remainder of the evening kept everyone in the best of humor with his spontaneity of fun and infectious jollity. Equally at home with the piano or as a reader Mr. Cutter changed from one to the other with lightning rapidity being frequently interrupted by bursts of applause. Many songs were given in a standing posture with one hand running out a lively tune on the piano, while with the other appropriate gestures were made.

At intervals Mr. Cutter, who has visited every State in the union, told anecdotes and incidents of the many places he had been, and stories on and about well-known men.

During the evening many hits were scored, among the number being several apt ones concerning ministers and congregations. Some of the ditties were of so catchy a strain as to nearly make the feet keep time, while others were of a nature to almost draw tears. Among the distinctly humorous and funny ones were "Beautiful ocean," "What the parrot said," "The languid man," "Alice, Alice never bore malice," "The party at Odd Fellows hall" and "A rhapsody on a table d'hote dinner."

The serious numbers included "The old red cradle" and "Old Jim's Christmas hymn." "A model church" proved popular, which ended each verse with the conclusion of some rousing anthem as "Bring forth the royal diadem." The evening opened with "The American's toast" and concluded with "The sword of Bunker's Hill."

In closing, J. Arthur Sparrow spoke briefly of the main object of the class which was not the social times, although they had their place, but the meetings in the church every Sunday at 12.15. This organization is a class not a club. While a club makes the social end a feature, this class places the study of the word of God as of first importance.

CHERRINGTON RESIGNS

Councilman Richards New Head of License Committee

Councilman at large Charles E. Cherrington, who was appointed by President Bryant as chairman of the standing Committee on Licenses, Ordinances, etc., has handed his resignation to President Bryant, which the latter has accepted. When the committees were announced it was noticed that Councilman Cherrington had been favored with two chairmanships, namely, Fire and Police, and Licenses and Ordinances.

Th rules of the Council provide that no member shall be obliged to serve as chairman of more than one committee and Councilman Cherrington feels that with the work of the Fire and Police committee it would be too much to also serve as chairman of the License committee which is one of the hardest worked committees of the Council.

President Bryant, recognizing the fact that no member can be obliged to serve as chairman of more than one committee, accepted the resignation. This morning he announced that he had appointed Councilman John R. Richards of Ward Three as chairman of the License committee. The duties of this committee are by no means new to Councilman Richards for he served on this committee during the year 1909 when the ordinances of the city were revised.

Councilman Richards is a strong No-License man, and during the discussion at the last meeting of the Council on the granting of the liquor permit to J. J. Bizzozero practically said that he would not vote for any permit.

MEN'S CLUB BANQUET

Ladies as Guests, and Several Good Toasts

The seventh annual banquet and ladies' night of the Men's club of Christ church was held Wednesday evening in the parish house and proved a most enjoyable evening in every way. The attendance of members and ladies was very large; the supper a good one and well served, and the after dinner speaking of an entertaining character. Three combinations that could not be otherwise than enjoyable. The

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Institute of Technology need not go as far away from Boston as Springfield. Why not move to Quincy? There is plenty of room here for years to come.

The idea urged by the U. S. Bulletin of raising deer to supply a cheap food is one that should be considered Instead of the deer being a nuisance to farmers why not use waste land and take to raising them for profit? Venison would rival mutton and add to the variety of meats now found regularly at the markets.

One of the recommendations of retiring state Attorney-general Dana Malone should be acted upon, that is that probate courts be allowed to appoint public administrators in cases of estates valued at less than $300 without the delay of present methods of petition and publication.

International Exposition boomers for the celebration of the completion of the Panama Canal are at work in Washington. San Francisco and New Orleans are the contending cities. The capital of the United States, where the exposition should really be held, is not saying much. San Francisco is flourishing seventeen million dollars as her claim, while New Orleans with ten millions insists that this amount will go farther owing to the proximity of that city to the rest of the world, than will seventeen millions on the Pacific slope. An advocate for New Orleans puts it that Congress will be responsible in saying which city is most accessible to all the people of the United States, claiming that New Orleans is two thousand miles closer to the center of population and two thousand miles nearer to Panama than San Francisco and that the latter city is more than three thousand miles farther from the principal nations which are likely to send exhibits. It is claimed that the center of population of the United States is near Cincinnati and five hundred miles from New Orleans, while Francisco is two thousand five hundred miles from the center. Within nine hundred miles of New Orleans, it is said, there are seventy cities with a combined population of twenty millions, while within nine hundred miles of San Francisco are only eight cities and their combined population is one million. With Washington as a starting point, it is said that it takes four days to reach San Francisco and only a little more than one day to reach New Orleans, while the cost including sleeping berth to San Francisco is $93, and to New Orleans $33. All these arguments to the pocket are important but apply with still greater force to the selection of Washington, which is closer to the population of the United States and to the world than either New Orleans or San Francisco. To those who have followed the social, industrial and political tendencies of the Pacific slope for the last five years, a serious objection to holding an international exposition in San Francisco is that that city is rantankerously opposed to the Japanese, Chinese and other Orientals who necessarily make such a large part of every international exposition and that, should the exposition be held there, there would be perpetual danger of artificial earthquakes more serious in their ultimate effects than the catastrophe which destroyed San Francisco a few years ago.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Nearly sixty thousand postoffices are now regularly established throughout the country. "What better organization is there to carry on a parcels express business?" asks an exchange.

Think of what the boon would mean from the standpoint of popular convenience as well as popular benefit were the United States equipped with such a parcels post as may be found in sundry foreign countries, where the rights of the masses are put above private interests. The government could make a good thing out of the business, while charging very much less than the great express monopoly enforces. In the case of the express monopoly, as shown by figures in the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, "the total net or profit income from operation is $11,387,489," or rising fifty per cent. The commission alludes to this showing as a "most significant one." It is all that, and it explains, in part, why the "big four" have been so potent in all these years in monopolizing the field, in opposition to public interests and individual right.

But the day of relief is near at hand. The senator or representative who persists in standing out today against the establishment of the parcels post will soon become a marked man.—Salem News.

—One large part of the American people is commonly overlooked in all the discussions of economics and social organizations. This part includes the majority of the one hundred million who inhabit our common country. They are not organized; they have no class names; they have no chosen leaders; they cannot be summoned to any common centre or committed to any common purpose by any declaration of purposes and policies. This great majority is the General Public. It is not much in evidence, and yet silently it makes and unmakes the reputation of heroes, or those who aspire to the rewards of heroism. It makes and unmakes the fortunes of statesmen, and in the last resort decides the fortunes of all political parties. The General Public includes millions of men and women who are in the army and navy, on the judge's bench, in institutions of learning and benevolence, in positions where they are not dependent upon those who hire and those who dictate the terms of labor.—Christian Register.

ANOTHER TERM GIVEN LODGE

Six Votes More Than Necessary In Joint Convention

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS SHIFT

Two Help Swell Nahant Statesman's Majority of Thirteen Over All Other Candidates—Whipple Musters 121 Votes, While Ames Manages to Get a Bare Seven—No Deserters From Lodge Column of Tuesday

Boston, Jan., 19.—Henry Cabot Lodge of Nahant was re-elected United States senator from Massachusetts, for the six years beginning March 4, 1911, he having received six more than a constitutional majority of all the votes cast in a joint convention of the senate and the house, and a majority of thirteen votes over all other candidates, a majority of the members of both branches being present and voting. The vote was as follows:

Henry Cabot Lodge	146
Sherman L. Whipple	121
Butler Ames	7
A. L. Lowell	2
John R. Thayer	1
Sylvester J. McBride	1
Curtis Guild	1
Total cast	279
Necessary for a choice	140

Mr. Lodge had enough Republican votes, 144—in fact, four more than the number necessary—to elect him. The two Democratic votes which he received were given him by Senators Curley of the Eighth Suffolk district and Murray of the ninth Suffolk district. Representative McInerney of Boston, Democrat, was the only man not recorded out of the total membership of both branches of 280. McInerney was not recorded Tuesday. He has been accused of being a Lodge Democrat and has been pilloried for weeks in the anti-Lodge press. McInerney was present, but did not respond when the clerk called his name Wednesday.

Butler Ames of Lowell, who received eight votes Tuesday, when each branch voted separately—two senators and six representatives—yesterday fell off to seven votes. Representative Killpatrick of Lowell, Congressman Ames' own city, left him, and voted for Lodge.

Speaker Walker's repeated requests, and especially his letter addressed to each of the four representatives who voted for him Tuesday afternoon requesting them not to vote for him Wednesday, proved effective.

Senator Curley of Boston was the first Democrat to break away from his party. When he arose in his seat and said: "Mr. President, I vote for Henry Cabot Lodge of Nahant," there was a rustle of excitement and a happy smile on the faces of the Lodge men. When Senator Murray of Boston followed suit, later on the rollcall, the satisfaction of the senior senator's friends deepened.

No Republicans who voted for Lodge Tuesday failed to do so Wednesday, while Representative Arkwell of Worcester and Greenwood of Everett, Republicans, joined in making up his total.

When President Treadway had announced the vote, he made this proclamation:

"Henry Cabot Lodge of Nahant, having received a majority of all the votes of the joint assembly, a majority of all the members elected to both houses being present and voting, I declare him elected United States senator to represent the State of Massachusetts in the senate of the United States for the term of six years from the fourth day of March."

Then the long-restrained applause broke loose and there was cheering on the floor and in the galleries, which were packed, even to the press gallery, with interested spectators.

LIPPITT IS ELECTED

Succeeds Aldrich as United States Senator From Rhode Island

Providence, Jan. 19.—Henry F. Lippitt of Providence, Rep., was elected United States senator from Rhode Island to succeed Nelson W. Aldrich.

On the joint ballot of the two branches of the legislature he received a majority of five votes over the combined votes of his opponents, Lebaron B. Colt, Rep., and Arthur L. Brown, Dem. The vote was:

Members present and voting, 139; necessary for choice, 70; Lippitt, 72; Brown, 44; Colt, 23. Lippitt gained one vote over Tuesday's balloting in separate session.

Sheehan Fails of Election

Albany, Jan. 19.—The legislative insurgents stood firm and maintained the deadlock prevailing over the election of a successor to Chauncey M. Depew.

William F. Sheehan, the Tammany candidate against whom the insurgents are holding out, lost one vote in the joint ballot of the senate and assembly. He received only ninety votes yesterday. Tuesday he received ninety-one. Ninety-nine votes are necessary to elect.

MEN'S CLUB BANQUET

dinner was announced for 6.30 and it was but a few minutes after that hour when the participants entered the parish house, past a long row of pretty young ladies, gowned in white who stood like soldiers at attention as the hungry ones filed past. Every available space in the room had been taken up with tables ,and it was noticed that when once seated there were no vacant seats. At the head table were the officers of the club, William L. Thomas, the toastmaster, Rev. and Mrs. Armstrong, and the speakers who were later to hold the party spellbound with their flow of oratory.

Henry P. Furnald was the caterer and he served an excellent repast, the menu including escalloped oysters, chicken and potato salad, cold ham, rolls, butter, coffee, assorted cake and ice cream. As was noted above, the waiters were young ladies, and they looked unusually charming in their immaculate gowns of white.

A few words of invocation by the rector and there was a clash of dishes, knives and forks showing that the hungry army had gone to battle in earnest. All good things come to an end, and after a time first one would lean back in his or her chair, then another and another indicating that their wants had been filled and they were ready for the speaking.

Merton A. Turner, the club's president, briefly welcomed the fair guests and their manly escorts, and the manly escorts who neglected to bring fair guests with them, and introduced William L. Thomas as the toastmaster, saying he was one of the hard working members of the parish.

Mr. Thomas said one of the privileges of being toastmaster was that he would not have to make a speech. As toastmaster Mr. Thomas proved the right man in the right place, his introduction of the several speakers being largely in a humorous vein.

The first speaker was Rev. Mr. Armstrong who requested that he be not quoted by the press as he had not prepared himself. His talk was one of five stories although lack of time caused him to omit all except the first and last story.

William Walker spoke for the church. The standard he would touch upon was that the church ideal was worked out through its organizations. When we think of our church we think it is the best laid out church in this respect. First we have the Boys' club, then the Galahad club, and the Galahad brotherhood, and then the Men's club, through which we reach the fifth story which is the church. One thing that impressed him in the Men's club was its stand for civic righteousness. To develop men who can take hold of city affairs, and transact business with an unblemished record.

We take the fellows from the boys' club, the one end to the other end, which is the church, wheer we meet as one large family, where we solve all problems one with another.

J. H. Stedman, speaking for the club, outlined some of the good things that had come to the club. First, we had a talk by Robert Luce, and all could not help being impressed with the fairness and intelligence with which he handled his subject. Then Col. Anderson who brought to us an extreme sense of patriotism for our own country; the greatest country in the world. Then Mr. Billings, who had charge of the relief work at Messina, told vividly of things that transpired there; so that it can be seen that the club is doing a great deal for this community by bringing out a spirit of fairness.

Arthur L. Thomas responded to the toast—"The Ladies." He had hardly prepared himself for this weighty subject, and as he himself said put his foot in it on one or two occasions. He found it a hard subject, but said the ladies connected with this club were far different from other ladies he had seen. He was willing to let them think all the nice things about themselves they desired, and that was what he would say. All books have ladies mixed in them. A book without a lady in it would be no kind of a book. Here in our club we have our meetings and debates, but not to have some night when the ladies were present would be a failure. Adam was having a good time all to himself whn a lady came and we poor men have been troubled with them ever since. So ladies think all the nice things about yourself you want to and I will agree with you.

Henry W. French toast was down on the program as "Remarks," which covered everything. He said he wanted to tell men where they stood. The last census showed the proportion of ladies to men was 5 to 2. That was the one great reason why we should keep suffrage well in hand. He then touched upon the different phases of life and closed with an original sketch in the follies of 1911.

The last speaker was Henry L. Kincaide, who said the evening had been one of pleasure for him. He believed that such occasions as this go a long way to make life worth the living. The spirit shown in your club is the uplifting kind, and did much toward the upbuilding of this city.

Between the several toasts there were other numbers that were also very entertaining. The first of these was a reading by Miss Daisy F. Burnell, a very talented young lady, who rendered two selections. Then two little misses, Irene and Bessie Langhorne, gave a piano duet with such a snap that the party were held in wonderment at the performance of two such young misses. Then Prof. Wrigley gave a piano solo as only he can give it. His selection was a classical one of the Wagnerian variety, and it seemed at times as though he was trying to tear the insides out of the piano, yet the expression on his face was calm and serene and pleasant, as it was when he was drinking one of his seven cups of coffee.

The evening's program closed with all rising and singing "America."

Danderine
GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes: "As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The next meeting of the Master's club will be held on Jan. 27.

• • •

Now that the new school has been opened at Houghs Neck another matter comes to the attention of those interested with the school work. More and more importance is being attached to the domestic education of girls in the graded and High schools, and consequently the teachers are having more work thrust upon them. The sewing teacher is over-burdened especially, and the addition of the Atherton Hough school will further increase the difficulty of her position. The importance of the work merits a sane solution of the problem which means a second sewing teacher. The work is too much for one woman, and the present teacher is obliged to overtax her strength greatly in order to meet the demands of her position.

THE CHILD AT FIVE.

The Parents and Teachers' Association of Wollaston, held a meeting in the Wollaston school on Tuesday at 3. The speaker was Supt. Frank E. Parlin of Cambridge; subject, "The child on entering school."

Mr. Parlin said in part: Most people know little about children. The child differs more from adults than he does from animals. Child food should be different from adult. We must understand the child to do well by him. Must examine child's nervous system if we wish to know him. It is not the size of the brain, but its organization about which we should be most concerned. Brain and nerve system most important. At birth we have all nerve cells we will ever have; our duty is to use them well. At the age of 40 growth of cells usually stops—we should not let nerves get stagnant.

Age is not a question of years. Some people are born old. It is the law of nature to grow, and when we cease growing it is time to die.

A young child should use his muscles; develop his motor powers. The child's method is to handle, to see, to investigate, to taste. A young child should have plenty of opportunity for such, a rich stock of sensations. Early life on a farm is an excellent place for growing mind.

Leadership is one of the rarest things we find. The world lacks leaders and schools are partly to blame.

Given a schoolhouse without a playground or a playground without a school house—he would select the playground for the young child. Child need not enter school before 9 or 10 years of age. The need of child to use his senses, not books. Lower areas of brain should be developed first. The foundations should be carefully laid.

Let a young child run, jump, climb shout. Do not get a forced defective development. It is bad. It robs the child of much. It is also bad for a young child to sit in a seat at school, bending over front of seat against stomach; very bad for the digestion and circulation.

Work an older child to the limit—but never exhaust; keep increasing capacity. Time to puberty—attention to development of a good sound body. Physical strength usually tends to moral strength. We never make out of a physical coward a moral hero.

Every time we send nervous energy over a certain channel it is more easy to do it again; hence the formation of habits good or bad. A child is given to parents to be guided by them for years. Parents have a great responsibility.

Omit the "don'ts" with children and give them something to "do."

A short discussion followed on "Value of a kindergarten." Mr. Parlin not in sympathy with the kindergartens of today. Would have them out doors in the fresh air and sunshine. The children should be in charge of a good motherly woman who would walk and talk with them, and have them see nature.

MATINEE WHIST.

The matinee whist party at Colonial hall Wednesday afternoon proved to be a social event. Twenty-three tables were in play, and for two hours the contest was a keen one. During the play frappe was served. At the conclusion handsome souvenirs for those having secured the greatest number of points were awarded. Those fortunate enough to receive these were Miss Helen F. O'Reiley, Mrs. Osborne Rogers, Miss Katherine Walsh, Mrs. C. H. Jones, Miss Sarah Dunphy, Miss N. J. O'Connell and Miss Avah Gilson. DR. HARDY RESIGNS ful for your splendid loyalty, your consideration, your genuine sympathy and hearty commendations. You have been a royally good people and it shall be my earnest purpose to pass over to my successor this work in the best possible condition.

I have loved this church, given it the best of my life, and can never cease to hold it in grateful and precious memory. With malice toward none and love for all I pray that we may be as divinely guided when now our paths separate as we know we were when they first came together. And I sincerely trust that when the hour of farewell shall come you may remember your pastor as one who tried to be faithful.

Affectionately yours for Christ and His Church,
Edwin N. Hardy, pastor.
Quincy, January sixteenth, 1911.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

Mr. King showed considerable emotion while reading the letter and afterward in discussing it. He recalled the fact that it was Edward Southworth and himself who had visited Natick sixteen years ago, and heard Mr. Hardy preach, and then recommended him for the pastorate here. We have since accumulated a sense of appreciation of his work as pastor. It is not the brilliant things that count but what we do every day. The value of the work of our pastor increased daily. Personally I would like to have it many more years (Applause). We cannot expect all to be satisfied with one man. But all are united that there is no difference of opinion in our appreciation of the work of Dr. Hardy. I believe his resignation is irrevocable. Let there be harmony and unity of sentiment, for Bethany church is here to stay. We should welcome larger revelations.

Mr. King offered the following motion:—"The statement having been made that our pastor's resignation, as read, represents his positive decision, the church desiring to assure itself on this point, and in the hope of securing its withdrawal, appoints a committee of three to visit our pastor at once, and urge his taking such action; further consideration being postponed until their report is received.

The motion prevailed unanimously, and nominations were made from the floor, as follows: Mrs. John F. Welch, Dr. C. T. Sherman and Mrs. Elizabeth Alden.

The committee left immediately and attended to its duties, and the meeting proceeded to other business.

The committee returned a half hour later and Mrs. Welch reported that it was too true, as Mr. King stated, that the resignation was irrevocable. Dr. Hardy appreciated the kindness of the church, but his own good and the good of the church made the step necessary. He desired the relations between himself and the church to remain pleasant. Mrs. Welch spoke words of appreciation of the pastor, and of his faithful service for sixteen years. With others she feared the church would lose greatly. We all have love and respect for Dr. Hardy. (Applause.)

Theophilus King thereupon offered the following motion:

"Deeply conscious of the more than fifteen years of faithful service rendered Bethany church, as its pastor, and of the steady and constant freeness with which you have put in time and effort in this community, resulting in your being held in highest estimation as a citizen and an all round pastor, both to your own church people and many others, it is with regret, understanding that your decision has been unalterably reached, that we unite in voting to accept the resignation of our beloved pastor, Dr. E. N. Hardy, and in taking the necessary steps to conform to your wishes on June 30th.

In connection with the date you name we vote and ask you to accept a continuance of your salary payment over the usual vacation period thereafter.

We desire to add that our hearts, best wishes and prayers are united for the highest good to you and yours wherever your future work may be placed, and that you have our heartiest commendation as a faithful servant of the Master, and pastor to the people, to whomsoever you may go."

Mr. King spoke further in appreciation of the pastorate of Dr. Hardy, and his high minded Christian endeavor, which was not found every day.

The report of the committee of three was accepted and then Mr. King's motion adopted. Later upon motion of Charles W. Miller, it was voted unanimously: As is customary under like conditions in churches generally, that a committee on testimonial to Dr. E. N. Hardy, to consist of a representative from each of the different organizations of the church, be appointed to draft resolutions regarding the work of our pastor.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the church was preceded by an old-fashioned New England supper served by the young ladies of the church, which was attended by nearly 200.

Prayer was offered by Theophilus King. Dr. and Mrs. Hardy and son were present at the supper but retired before the business meeting, at which Frank W. Crane was moderator.

The Australian ballot for officers resulted in the election of the following:

Moderator—Frank W. Crane.
Deacons for three years—George Forsythe and Edwin S. Beckford.
Deaconesses—Miss Amelia L. Bumpus, Mrs. Fairvilla L. Branch, Mrs. Annie M. Hayden, Mrs. Jane D. Murdock, Mrs. Margaret Ross and Miss Cora I. Young.
Clerk—John F. Hunt.
Treasurer—George A. Sidelinger.
Auditor—Henry P. Hayward.
Prudential Committee for three years—Frank K. Damon.
Finance Committee for three years—Ernest W. Branch and Richard Bishop.
Music Com.—Mrs. Jennie L. Sidelinger and Charles Sampson for three years. Mrs. Marion B. Miller and John C. Pierce for two years, Mrs. Kate I. Keast and William F. Sidelinger for one year.

Ernest W. Branch was reelected superintendent of Bible School, but declined to serve as did also Delcevare King. The vacancy was not filled.

Dr. Hardy forwarded the report of the Church committee. He reported six deaths, and had a tribute for each. Twenty had united with the church, and some had been placed on the retired list.

Treasurer Miller reported $3,873.86 received from pledges, $431.62 from collections, and other items making total receipts of $4,825.86. There was a balance of $244.53 in the communion account, and large sums had also been raised for benevolences. The church also had invested funds amounting to $4,600.

A vote of thanks was extended to the retiring treasurer, who declined a reelection after a service of nine years.

The report of the Prudential Committee said that the new sexton, Andrew Stewart, was the right man for the place, and the meeting applauded.

Auditor Sidelinger reported all accounts correct, and the finances of the church in excellent condition.

The Finance Committee reported the annual budget, made up about as usual. Action was postponed.

The Music Committee reviewed the year, and asked for an increase of $50 in appropriation.

Clerk Hunt reported a membership of 484.

Bethany Circle reported a year of activity as did also the Woman's Missionary Society, the Mothers' Association, the Kings' Daughters, the three societies of Christian Endeavor, the Makaria Fraternity, the Philatheas and other organizations.

Supt. Branch reported 670 enrolled in the Bible school, including 510 in the main school, 110 in the home department and 50 in the cradle roll. Graded lessons were being introduced. An appropriation of $450 was needed for 1911.

The meeting adjourned at 9.40 until Friday evening Feb. 3.

THE PASTORATE.

Rev. E. N. Hardy commenced his duties at Bethany church in July, 1895, and was installed in October of that year, making 16 years of continuous and faithful service. He succeeded Rev. Edward Norton, at present pastor emeritus, whose resignation was reluctantly accepted after a service of nearly 22 years. So that the church has had only two pastors since 1874.

During the sixteen years of his pastorate the growth of Bethany church has been remarkable. About 500 new members have been enrolled in the church, more than one-half on confession of faith. During recent years the pastor has averaged 1,000 calls a year among his people, and has probably married more couples and attended more funerals than any other Quincy pastor.

The church edifice too has been enlarged and improved from time to time, and is now the best equipped church of the city with a large auditorium, two chapels which can be united, a ladies' parlor, a pastor's room, other small rooms, and in the basement a large dining room, kitchen, class rooms, cloak room, etc.

Mr. Hardy was a great organizer and Bethany church has always been regarded as a well organized united church, with a large Bible school divided into several departments; several Bible class organizations including the Makaria Fraternity, Philatheas, Abodahs, Friendly Class, Rekrows and C. I. C. Also three societies of the Christian Endeavor and members active in the East Norfolk Union. Also an active Ladies' Circle, a Woman's Missionary Society, a Mothers' Association, King's Daughters and a Men's club. For a year or two the church had an assistant pastor, and a large church like this seems to need one, but Rev. Mr. Hardy has been alone all these years and succeeded admirably.

Mr. Hardy was born among the hills of New Hampshire about 1862, and was a student at Amherst and later the Hartford Theological Seminary. In Hartford he was interested in two mission branches. His only pastorates before coming to Quincy were at the Phillips church at South Boston and the Congregational church at Hollis-ton.

Mr. Hardy was married before he came to Quincy and had one son Phillips at that time. His other children, two daughters were born in this city. There will be general regret throughout the city, as well as among the church people, that Dr. Hardy has concluded that he must sever his Quincy pastorate.

TOO MUCH PICTURES.

Jake Hunt, the oldest Indian in the Northwest, reputed to be 108 years old, who has a son 77 years of age, will not live many more "moons." Jack Coon, a son-in-law, attributes the old man's illness to "too much picture," pointing to Jake's photograph. "Too much picture make too many of him; scatter him all over so when cold come he die. I have picture taken long time ago, make me weak so haye ache under hat two weeks." Old Jake is worth about $7,000 in cash in the banks, has quarter section of land estimated to be worth $30,000 and is known to have $1,600 in gold hidden away. The hiding place is unknown.

Years ago an Indian village stood in what is now known as the Yakima Indian Reservation, where the Hunt family now carry on a general farming business. All that is left of the old settlement is a little church, a totem pole and a number of mounds where the Klickitats lie who could not reach the century mark. Old Jake says that this was the Indians' paradise before the advent of early white settlers. Deer, bear and all kinds of big game were plentiful. Below the falls of the White Salmon river, which is now harnessed, hundreds of Indians congregated every year during the salmon run to procure their winter's supply of fish.

Old Jake was considered the liveliest buck in the tribe when their annual powows took place, which were kept up until 10 years ago. Tomtoms, fancy dresses, painted faces, dancing, singing and feasting was the order of the day and night, lasting a week or more. He is said to have married seven times during his long career, but there will be only a widow and a few children to fall heir to his property.

—All of the mayors of all the cities seem to be impressed with the necessity for economy. But there is necessity also, for improvements, as well as ecomonies. There is such a thing as false economy.—Charlestown Enterprise.

AVIATOR LANDS ON A CRUISER

Eugene Ely Performs a Feat Hitherto Unattempted

HE FLIES AT TERRIFIC SPEED

Starts From Aviation Field Twelve Miles From San Francisco and Drops Gracefully on Deck of the Pennsylvania, Anchored in Bay—Return Flight an Hour Later Without Slightest Injury to His Biplane

San Francisco, Jan. 19.—Eugene B. Ely flew twelve miles in an aeroplane, made a successful landing on the cruiser Pennsylvania, and an hour later arose from the ship and flew back to Selfridge field, twelve miles south of San Francisco.

The feat was accomplished without mishap. Not a wire or bolt of the biplane was injured.

"It was easy enough," said Ely, as he stepped from his seat after his return and was seized by the cheering soldiers of the Thirteenth infantry and hoisted on their shoulders. "I think the trick could be successfully turned nine times out of ten."

It was 10:45 o'clock when Ely left the aviation grounds, swept over the San Druno hills and disappeared towards San Francisco. Meanwhile the wireless advised the cruiser, at anchor with the fleet in the bay, that he would make the attempt, and final preparations were made for his reception.

A wooden platform 130 feet long and 50 feet wide had been constructed over the after deck of the ship. It slanted gently aft and across the floor were stretched ropes with 100 pound sand bags attached, designed to be caught by hooks on the lower framework of the biplane. As a further precaution a canvas barrier was stretched across the forward end of the platform. Launches and ship's boats fully manned were put out in event of a mishap.

At 10:58 o'clock the lookout on the Pennsylvania sighted Ely, and the ship's siren roared a blast of welcome. He came on at terrific speed, circled around the fleet, dipping in salute to each ship, and came up in the wind for the stern of the Pennsylvania.

He was flying low as he neared the ship, and dropped down lightly, striking the platform. The hooks on the aeroplane caught the ropes and stopped the biplane within sixty feet, although he was going about thirty-five miles an hour, without disarranging any part of the machine.

There was a great outburst of cheers and a rush of officers, visitors and sailors to greet the aviator. Later, Ely was the guest of Captain Pond of the Pennsylvania at luncheon.

Exactly one hour from the time he landed on the cruiser, Ely took his seat in the machine and gave word to let go. The aeroplane went down the 130-foot platform at high speed, dropped off the stern with a gentle dip, and then rose rapidly over the ships in the harbor. The start was as perfect as the landing had been.

Rising to a height of 2000 feet, Ely circled over San Francisco and then headed for the aviation field. He landed there at 12:13 o'clock.

A full company of the Thirteenth infantry swooped down on him as he dismounted and bore him in triumph to Major O'Neill's tent, where an informal reception followed.

Once before Ely sailed in an aeroplane from the deck of a war vessel, the first time that that feat was ever accomplished. Yesterday he landed on the deck of a war vessel and repeated his former achievement of flying into the air again.

She is interested at present in a big ranch and declared: "I may be a duchess yet." Incidentally she confides that the Hope diamond "gives her the pip."

PROPER LABELS ON TEA

Treasury Department Takes Measures to Protect the Consumer

Washington, Jan. 19.—Tea imported into the United States after May 1, 1911, must be properly labelled to show the presence of artificial coloring or facing matter. This decision has been reached by the treasury department as the result of a recent conference between representatives of the agricultural department, managers of the tea board and customs officers in New York.

Both the treasury and agricultural departments have certain duties with regard to importation of tea under the provisions of the tea inspection act of March 2, 1907, and the food and drugs act, respectively.

The order of the department is the result of co-operation. Such examinations as the department of agriculture desires to make of tea will be made simultaneously with the examination under the tea inspection act.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND

Indications That British Government Is Preparing a Measure

Dublin, Jan. 19.—That the British government, under pressure of necessity and public sentiment, is preparing a home rule measure for Ireland, is announced in several quarters. Rumors of governmental intent to give Ireland self-government appear to have been based upon definite information.

According to The Independent the government has decided to appoint a commission to investigate Ireland's finances. This would be the first step toward framing a home rule measure, which would be done by a committee of the cabinet.

FAIR EXCHANGE

A New Back for an Old One. How it Can be Done in Quincy.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one. Quincy residents would do well to profit by the following example.

Richard Smith, South Central avenue, Wollaston, Mass., says: "I suffered from backache and kidney trouble for a long time. I had dull pains through the small of my back and on arising in the morning, I was so stiff and lame that I could hardly dress myself. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply and in a short time after beginning their use, I was relieved. After I had taken the contents of two boxes of this remedy, I was in good health and I have had no kidney trouble since. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for this change in my condition and I gladly recommend them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

DEFENSE IN THE LORIMER CASE

Burrows Speaks For the Majority of His Committee

NO PROOF OF CORRUPTION

Nothing to Show Truth In Testimony of Any of the Witnesses Against Illinois Senator—Considers Them as Not Reliable—Says No Senator Should Permit Judgment to Be Warped by Public Clamor

Washington, Jan. 19.—Senator Lorimer of Illinois was defended in the senate by Senator Burrows of Michigan, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, which had reported to the senate that Lorimer should be entitled to hold his seat in that body, notwithstanding the charges of bribery and corruption in connection with his election by the Illinois legislature.

The speech was important as marking a turning point in this sensational case. Many senators have refrained from stating their position in regard to Lorimer because they have desired that Lorimer's side of the story should be told first. Burrows is the first to tell it. His speech is important also because it must be taken to represent the strongest argument that can be put forward in favor of the junior senator from Illinois.

The Burrows speech is capable of exact comparison with the speeches against Lorimer by Senators Beveridge of Indiana, Crawford of South Dakota and Owen of Oklahoma.

Senator Burrows said that despite the confession of Charles A. White that he received a total of $1900 for voting for Lorimer, in accordance with an agreement with Lee O'Neil Browne, the Democratic leader, he (Burrows) believed that White voted for Lorimer out of "pure friendship" for Browne. Burrows concluded his statement as follows:

"There is absolutely no proof in the case, direct or indirect, from which a legitimate inference could be drawn that a single member of the general assembly was corruptly influenced to vote for Mr. Lorimer."

Senator Burrows reviewed the whole case and cited again much of the evidence which induced the committee to arrive at its conclusions, because of "the criticism passed upon the report of the committee." After summarizing the testimony of witnesses, White, Link, Beckemeyer and Holstlaw, Burrows declared that "it is obvious that there is nothing in the statements of any one of them, or in the statements of all of them taken together, which would justify a conclusion that their testimony as to bribery is true, or could be relied upon in a matter of even minor importance."

In introducing his speech, Burrows reminded the senate that it was a court of ninety-two judges and that no member of that tribunal should "permit his judgment to be warped by public clamor, however boisterous, or private appeals, however potential and commanding."

He then recited the preliminary course of events which led up to the controversy and enumerated cases in the history of the senate where the right of a senator to a seat in the senate had been contested.

"The labors of the committee," said Burrows, "were greatly lightened and the scope of the investigation materially curtailed by the admission of counsel for the prosecution that it was not expected to connect Lorimer with any acts of bribery. With this avowal there was no evidence, submitted to the committee or obtainable so far as known, inculpating Lorimer in the bribery or attempted bribery, if such there was, of any member of the legislature, nor was there any evidence that Lorimer had any knowledge whatever that such bribery or attempted bribery was perpetrated by anyone."

SAVED BY HUMAN CHAIN

Two Owe Their Lives to Presence of Mind of Young People

Patchogue, L. I., Jan. 19.—By forming a human chain of fifteen links, a band of boys and girls saved Ethlyn Philips and Edward Smith from drowning in Lake Patchogue. The two broke through the ice while skating, and their companions, lying head to heel on the ice and grasping each other by the ankles, reached nearly to the edge of the open spot.

The last boy pushed out a hockey stick, Smith grasped it in one hand, and hauling Miss Philips after him with the other, was pulled to safety.

TO CURTAIL PRODUCTION

Decision of Treasurers of Cotton Mills In New England

Boston, Jan. 19.—Millions of spindles in the cotton mills of the United States will be idle one-quarter of the time from yesterday until the market conditions improve, if a recommendation made yesterday afternoon by the Arkwright club at a meeting in this city is accepted generally.

The Arkwright club is an organization of the treasurers of mills in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine, many of which have their head offices in Boston, and represents more than 10,000,000 spindles. Of the 28,000,000 spindles in the United States 15,000,000 are in New England. The mills of New England employ nearly 200,000.

The cotton mills of the country curtailed extensively last year because of the high cost of cotton and an indifferent demand for goods. The same reasons are given by the Boston treasurers for their vote yesterday.

DESTROY DISCARDED ARMS

Proposition to Keep Them Out of Hands of Central American Rebels

Washington, Jan. 19.—How to stop the purchase of discarded American firearms by Central American countries involved in insurrections was the problem submitted to congress by Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, who suggested that the government destroy its discarded arms instead of selling them by auction.

Chairman Hull of the military affairs committee said that such action would do no good; that the insurrectionists who wanted arms would get them from some other country or from the manufacturers. "It is better for them to have our obsolete and discarded firearms than to be armed as well as we are," said Hull.

THREE PERISH IN GERMAN SUBMARINE

Commander and Two Officers Had Remained Aboard

Kiel, Ger., Jan. 19.—The commander of the German submarine U-3, which sank to the bottom of the harbor Tuesday, and two lieutenants were found dead in the conning tower when the vessel was raised yesterday and the tower opened.

They had sacrificed their lives to duty, having remained on board after the other twenty-seven members of the crew had escaped late Tuesday by crawling through the torpedo tubes.

Word was sent out that the raising had been successful and that the crew were safe. The work continued when suddenly a ventilator gave way, permitting the water to rush into the submarine, isolating the tower and cutting off the oxygen upon which the three officers were dependent. With the inrush of water the bow of the ship rose quickly, but the stern where tower "L" is located sank deeper.

Recognizing the peril of the officers, the rescuers worked desperately to reach them, but it was sixteen hours before an entrance to the tower could be forced. Long before that time the men had died of suffocation.

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE

Finding of Coroner's Jury In Case of London Desperadoes

London, Jan. 19.—At the conclusion of the inquest on the death of the two desperadoes who perished in their Sidney street home while resisting the police and military, the verdict of the jury was that the man known as "Josef" was shot to death, the victim of justifiable homicide, and that his companion, known as "Fritz," died of suffocation.

The jury added a rider declaring that the fact that such an extraordinary occurrence was possible should lead to the framing of more stringent measures for dealing with criminal aliens arriving in this country.

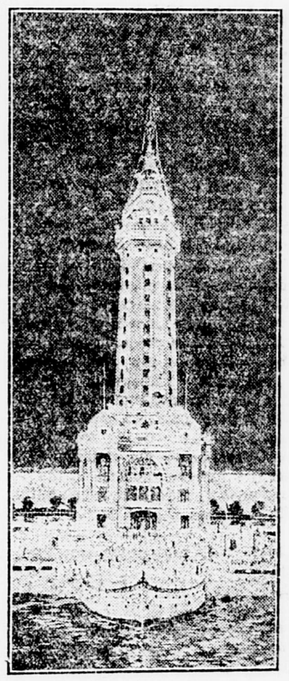
Monument to Recall Battle Perry Won

COMMODORE OLIVER HAZARD PERRY'S victory over the British in his memorable naval engagement on Lake Erie on Sept. 10, 1813, is to be commemorated in several ways by the people of the United States. One is a monument and another a celebration of his triumph at Put-in-Bay, which did so much to assure America's victory in the war of 1812.

The centennial of this battle will be held on Lake Erie in 1913, and at least ten states are expected to participate. There will probably be an attempt made to reproduce the conflicting fleets and the details of the Perry triumph.

This will be a big affair and is expected to attract several hundred thousand people, but it will not be the principal feature of the Perry centennial because it will be but temporary.



© by John Eisenman.

DESIGN FOR PERRY MEMORIAL ON LAKE ERIE.

The permanent feature will be in the form of a monument to be erected at Put-in-Bay and for which congress has already made an appropriation of $250,000. The dedication ceremonies of this memorial may be one of the leading features of the celebration.

From present plans the Perry monument will be one of the most novel ever erected, being a combination of the artistic with utilitarian features.

For instance, the monument itself will doubtless be an immense shaft of granite, and tentative architectural provisions have been made in the base for assembly halls and offices.

Again, the position of the monument, near Sandusky, O., is so commanding that it can serve as a lighthouse as well. The wireless telegraph, of course, will be an adjunct of the lighthouse, and provision can easily be made for an observatory without marring its architectural beauty.

Another public feature at the base of the structure will be an aquarium, showing specimens of the fish indigenous to the great lakes, more particularly.

Besting the Devil Around a Stump.

It may seem a reflection on the New York police force to say that one of its members recently pursued a thief for ten minutes in a twelve foot circuit before catching him, yet such was the case, and no blame should be attached to the "copper" either.

It happened in this manner: A policeman saw a pickpocket deftly demonstrate his skill on lower Broadway, so immediately gave pursuit. The thief saw the pursuer and dashed for a nearby office building with the policeman literally at his heels. The thief just had time to enter one of the partitions of the revolving door, so, perforce, the officer took the next. The thief had no time to jump out, either into the building or the street, for the quick witted bluecoat kept the door revolving at high speed. Finally a spectator phoned headquarters and a surrounding squad appeared, and the circular pursuit was ended.

PLOT AGAINST MIKADO

Twenty-Four Participants, Including One Woman, Sentenced to Death

Tokio, Jan. 19.—Twenty-five men and one woman, charged with conspiracy against the throne and with plotting to assassinate the crown prince and high officials of the empire, were publicly sentenced by the supreme court.

Twenty-four of the prisoners, including Denjiro Kotoku, who once lived in America, and his wife were condemned to death. The other two were sent to prison, one for eleven years and the other for eight years.

The trial had been secret, but the final dramatic scene was witnessed by the diplomats and many prominent Japanese. When sentence had been pronounced one of the doomed men rose and shouted "Banzai." At this all of the prisoners sprang to their feet, and Kotoku, raising his hands above his head, cried: "Long live anarchy." The prisoners then turned quietly to their guardians and were again handcuffed and led away.

MRS. SCHENK COLLAPSES

Trial For Alleged Poisoning of Husband Temporarily Suspended

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 19.—Mrs. Laura F. Schenk collapsed yesterday under the ordeal of the trial in which she is charged with administering poison to her husband, John O. Schenk. She had to be led to her room in the jail, unable to stand the strain. Court took a recess and the trial was temporarily suspended.

Throughout the trial and since her arrest on Nov. 9, Mrs. Schenk has displayed a calm that has repeatedly been remarked. When apparently damaging testimony was being offered against her, it failed to disturb her beyond a slight exhibition of nervousness.

Nothing of a startling nature had been brought out yesterday, the evidence being somewhat technical, with physicians as the witnesses.

MAINE STURGIS LAW RECEIVES SETBACK

Enforcement Commissioners Are Removed by Governor

Augusta, Me., Jan. 19.—Governor Plaisted last night issued letters removing Andrew Havey, Henry W. Oakes and George M. Phoenix from office as enforcement commissioners. Thus Maine's famous Sturgis law, providing for the enforcement of the prohibitory law by state deputies in counties where county officials have been derelict in their duties, becomes inoperative so far as this administration is concerned.

A bill is pending in the legislature, which provides for the repeal of the law itself.

The Sturgis commission, so-called, was created by act of the legislature in 1905 and has operated in nearly every county in the state, one time or another.

During the last eighteen months the expense of the commission has been put upon the counties, some of which have refused to pay and the matter is still in abeyance, with the possibility that it may be carried to the United States supreme court.

UNCLE JOE'S "HOUR GLASS"

It Warns Long Talkers When Their Time Limit Has Expired

Washington, Jan. 19.—A new piece of apparatus adorns the desk of Speaker Cannon. It is a double barrelled hour glass, designed to help members in obeying the most trying of all rules, that limiting debate to five minutes. The glass is timed to run the sand through in five minutes. A white background makes the sand-glass visible from a considerable distance.

Under the five minute rule of debate members often reach the most important part of their arguments when the chairman's gavel mercilessly cuts them down. The new apparatus is intended to give due warning in time to avoid the five minute gun.

It is stated that the cable which is on the Pacific coast side has failed. No cable touches the Gulf coast of Spanish Honduras.

It is believed here that the Honduran cable office may have fallen into the hands of the revolutionists.

☞The movement for health protection, and the sufferings caused by preventable diseases, although to a great extent unorganized as yet, is growing daily throughout the country. When it is realized that pneumonia and kindred ills represent ten per cent of the annual mortality statistics in this country the recent introduction of a famous Swiss prescription, Sirolin, long in use throughout Europe for the relief and prevention of pulmonary disorders—is both timely and hopeful as a safe and sane treatment for coughs and colds, which if neglected, are the too common causes of pneumonia, and incipient consumption. Sirolin is a safe and effective home remedy, guaranteed to be absolutely free from morphine, codeine or other habit forming drugs.

MIDWINTER PICNIC

Unique Social at Quincy Point Church

An evening which was as enjoyable as it was unique, was spent at the Quincy Point church on Wednesday by upward of a hundred people. The event was a "mid winter picnic" given by the Ladies' Aid society of the church.

As one entered the door, the redolence of evergreen trees struck the nostrils and a feeling of contentment would have possessed one immediately had it not been for several disturbing signs, "Beware the dog" and "Knots tied here." A stranger entering the portal could not be just sure what he was getting into. Once inside, however, the feeling of safety returned for one found himself in a virgin forest of evergreen through which boys and girls of all ages and sizes were darting hither and thither. On either side of the vestry were teepees where one could barter for ice-cream, candy and pop corn balls.

Just as the congregation was beginning to realize that there was a void which ought to be filled, somewhere about their person, the minister, Rev. C. P. Marshall, made an announcement that supper would be served on the Baltimore lunch plan. A line was formed and as the individuals passed by the tables, each received a plate of beans, a roll, a doughnut, a pickle, a cup of coffee and such silverware as was necessary for devouring the edibles. The food had such a savory odor that no one was intimidated by the sign "Eat here die outside."

Behind the lunch counter was a place for checking babies, but only two of the guests took advantage and the babies were very diminutive and were made of wax. The only other possibility was a huge Teddy Bear, but its owner refused to part with it even for an instant.

After supper some excellent music was furnished by James A. Melville, violin; Ralph H. Murphy, cornet; and Mrs. James A. Melville piano.

An athletic carnival was planned with the following events charted on the walls: Sports—Young, old, would-be. Races—Peanut, potato, sack, human and animal. Aquatics were prevented by a sign reading "No swimming here."

A number of races did take place, and prizes were awarded the winners. Doughnut eating contest, won by Edward Graham. Prize, a gigantic doughnut about six inches in diameter.

Potato race, won by Miss Cora Barnes. Prize, a pin cushion.

A potato race for men, was won by Rollo Newcomb.

The potato race for women was won by Mrs. C. W. Newcomb.

Peanut race, won by Miss Ada Gerrior. Prize, a miniature green lantern.

Confetti race, won by Miss Ada Gerwir. Prize, a diminutive pair of opera glasess. A number of the small boys and girls who won races wer awarded plates of ice cream.

The evening's program was concluded with songs and gambols.

The originality of the scheme was due to the fertile brains of the committee. The decorations were made by P. H. Holman and Rev. C. P. Marshall. The supper was in charge of Mrs. P. H. Holman, Mrs. C. W. Newcomb, Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Marshall.

FORMER RESIDENT.

H, 4th Mass., and when mustered out he recruited a company in the 18th Mass. regt., of which he was commissioned captain. He was wounded at the second Bull Run battle and was mustered out Sept. 2, 1864. He was a past commander of Edwin Humphrey Post G. A. R., of Hingham and a master of Rural lodge of Quincy, in 1859-60, but not a member at the time of his death.

RUBBER AND PAPER SOCIAL

Prizes Awarded at the Hall Place Church

A very pleasant time was enjoyed by the Junior League at the Hall Place M. E. church on Wednesday night, when about forty-three of the children met in the vestry for a social evening. For the past few weeks the Juniors have been planning for a "Rubber and paper social" and have been very busy collecting old rubber and papers to be sold, the proceeds to be given to the church.

The social was in charge of the superintendent of the Junior League, who was assisted by the assistant superintendent, Miss A. Maud Nichols. The meeting was opened by song and prayer by the pastor, and the repeating together of the "Royal law of love."

The games were in charge of Miss A. Maud Nichols, who kept the children very busy and interested. Two prizes were offered by the superintendent for the largest number of pounds of rubber and of paper. Miss Sarah Fuller took the prize for the paper, and Miss Ethel Nichols for the rubber.

The committees were:

Games—Edna Miller, Rena Peola, Robert McCormick.

Refreshments—Ethel Nichols, Ethel Newcomb, Ardis Raupach.

The evenings' pleasure was brought to a close with prayer, the Juniors repeatingin concert the "Collect." Not only was it an evening of pleasure but also one of profit. The work of the past year in the Junior League has been very successful. The children are interested and helped and the Sunday afternoon meetings are well attended. Great work is being done among the children. The pastor has been assisted in the work by Miss Maud Nichols, whose faithfulness has been a great help.

OLD COLONY GROCERS.

The nineteenth annual business meeting and banquet of the Old Colony Grocers' association was held in the Boston City club on Wednesday afternoon with an attendance of about one hundred.

At the business session a number of resolutions were passed among them being those on the death of E. T. Faunce, who was President of the State association and treasurer of the Old Colony Grocers.

A banquet was served at 6.30 and a musical entertainment followed. The after dinner speeches were made by the president of the Boston Wholesale Grocers' association; Mr. Spinney, president of the Retail Grocers, and E. B. Lehigh of the W. S. Quimby Co. PRESENTATION OF PENNANT.

The championship pennant won by the Quincys in the Old Colony league in 1910 will be formally presented to the club tonight at a banquet to be tendered to the officers of the league and managers at Hibernian hall. President Jerome F. Murphy of Stoughton will make the presentation speech, and the pennant will be received by Michael E. Shea, president of the Quincy club. It is said that with tonights banquet the league which has been in existence for three years will cease to exist.

The first year the teams were: Taunton, Rockland, St. Margarets of Brockton, Deweys of Weymouth and the Randolph. The St. Margarets dropped out late in the season and Somerville was taken in.

The second year Quincy was admitted to the league. The third year Taunton dropped out and the Lincoln team was taken in. Lack of financial support is given as the cause of the league disbanding.

RAINEY TO HUNT IN AFRIC WILDS

Young Millionaire Drops Arctic Sport For Awhile.

WILL BE AWAY TWO YEARS.

Intends Running Down Lions With Bear Hounds and Moving Picture Machine—Plans to Invade Country of Man Eaters That Has Been Seen by but One White Man.

From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strands, from the white wastes of arctic Annatok to the sun bleached plains of Golbo, in British East Africa, Paul J. Rainey, millionaire yachtsman, turfman, polo player and society man, is going a-hunting. His return in the vessel he chartered to take him and Harry Whitney to the polar regions after big game was only a little more than a month behind him when he returned to New York after a few weeks hunting bear on his Mississippi plantation.

Yet the call of the wild is so strong in his ears that he can scarcely wait to shake the dust of Fifth avenue and Newport from his feet and hie away to spend two years in the unexplored jungles of the dark continent.

For Mr. Rainey aims to be a nimrod in an original fashion, and since he has taken up hunting as a steady occupation, so to speak, he has come mighty near to realizing this ambition.

Into Unexplored Lands.

On March 3 Mr. Rainey, accompanied by Dr. M. E. Johnston, who was with his expedition as physician in the arctic; "Hunter" Black, a confrere of Selous and Caninghame; E. R. Shelly, overseer of his Mississippi estate, and a moving picture man, will leave London for Mombasa and a few weeks later will be blazing his own trail through the Golbo plains country, a practically unexplored region several hundred miles north of Nairobi and much farther into that "darkest" interior than the Roosevelt party ventured.

They are going across one of the African deserts straight into the country of the man eaters, a territory whose edge has only been visited by one white man, Colonel Patterson, who wrote of his travels in a book called "The Grip of the Nlaka." For a trip which on appearances might be regarded as the pleasure quest of a young man whose father left him $60,000,000 Mr. Rainey's expedition is one of the most pretentious ever planned, for unless he meets with some misfortune, such as being stricken with jungle fever, it promises to add materially to the record of explorative achievement and the science of zoology.

Valuable to Science.

"One of the most interesting things I plan to do," said Mr. Rainey, "is to hunt lions with bear hounds. This will be practically an original undertaking. I understand 'Buffalo' Jones tried it, but I don't believe he thought much of the plan—anyway, I don't think he persisted in it. But I believe it will revolutionize lion hunting."

Mr. Rainey's sofari, or caravan, will be one of the largest to start from Uganda. He will have 100 native porters, more than a dozen head of camels for the passage of the desert and ponies and mules for the pack trains. These latter are of a particular breed which are not affected by the sting of the poisonous tsetse fly.

Some of the Perils.

"The chief dangers, as I understand it," said Mr. Rainey, "are from the charges of the rhino in the country where the brush is dense, as it is in the Golbo territory. One has to be mighty careful of these fellows, for they are about the fiercest of the wild animals.

"Then a wounded lion is a mighty tough customer, and I promise you I'll be careful of them. I am very anxious to get some moving pictures of the natives spearing a lion. We were very fortunate with our moving pictures in the arctic."

Mr. Rainey will also visit India on his way home to hunt tiger.

QUEEN OF CORNHUSKERS.

Young Hoosier Has Record of Seventy-two Bushels a Day.

Miss Margaret Hoffman, aged twenty-one, who lives at Prairie City, is regarded as the queen of Indiana cornhuskers. She husked seventy-two bushels a day for five consecutive days last fall and hopes to husk 100 bushels a day this year. Here is what she says about herself:

"Last fall I engaged to gather a crop of corn for a neighbor, Mrs. Armstrong. I worked five days in succession, averaged seventy-two bushels of seventy pounds weight a day and unloaded the corn myself. I was in every evening and unloaded by 5 o'clock. I like the work very much—think it fine. It is now my intention to go to the cornfields of Illinois next fall for the season, as I am ambitious to make a record of 100 bushels a day, not only for a few days, but for the harvest."

ON AN OLD CHARGE.

Daniel J. Fitzgerald was arrested at the marine hospital in Chelsea on Wednesday afternoon by Inspector Goodhue who held a warrant for Fitzgerold, charging the larceny of $100 from Abbott & Millers express. Fitzgerald was formerly employed by the express as a driver. Last June he drove to Wollaston one evening and collected C. O. D. orders to the amount of $100. Instead of returning he left his team standing in Wollaston and skipped. He was traced to Lynn and then to Lowell, where trace of him was lost. Recently it was learned that he had enlisted and was stationed on one of the revenue cutters, now hauled up at the Charlestown navy yard. Here it was learned that Fitzgerald was in the marine hospital, but that he would be discharged on Wednesday. When he came out Inspector Goodhue was waiting for him. In court Fitzgerald agreed to pay $20 per week until the debt was liquidated and the case was continued until July to allow him to do so.

CATTLE RANGE IN COAL YARD.

Aberdeen-Angus Herd Thrive In Novel Chicago Pen.

A promising herd of beef cattle was raised in a Chicago coal yard.

Most people when they hear of the droves of cattle that furnish meat connect them with the boundless ranges of the west, of the great black soil farms of Illinois and Iowa, of the Dakotas and with the herds of Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

But here is a plump, sleek little creature that belongs to the particular tribe that just now is claiming front rank among the great beef tribes, as she is an Aberdeen-Angus. This animal has been kept in a boxlike stable, sixteen feet square, located in the rear of a Chicago coal yard all of her life. There is a small side yard, a three cornered lot, in which she has taken all of the exercise she got in her entire life. In the same stable the mother of this heifer has produced two other calves, one of which is a promising head of an Angus herd. All of these animals are of pure bred stock.

The owner of this Chicago herd of cattle is Francis T. McKee, who lives in Chicago, but owns a 900 acre farm near Groton, S. D. From this farm about four years ago he brought a pure bred cow, Groton Isabella, and stabled her in his coal yard. Since then three calves have been added to the little coal yard herd.

HUMAN BANK NOW INSOLVENT

Last of Balance Extracted From Hunter's Anatomy.

With the withdrawal of a quarter from the hip of Walter Charlwood of St. Louis the liquidation of this human savings bank was completed Total deposits in currency one time amounted to 60 cents, while within his anatomical vault he also carried a good sized penknife.

Charlwood went shooting in Colorado eight years ago, and when game was scarce his companion fired at a rattlesnake. What happened to the snake is not recorded, but Charlwood got most of the charge of buckshot in his hip. The shot drove into the muscles a quarter, three dimes, a nickel and a penknife.

A surgeon in the University of Colorado succeeded in extracting all but the quarter, and Charlwood has carried it ever since.

He has suffered pain in his hip recently, and when he consulted surgeons the story of the shooting accident was told. The surgeons decided that the quarter was working its way out toward the skin and advised an operation. An incision was made, and they had little difficulty in extracting the coin.

Charlwood is suffering no inconvenience from his insolvency.

—Last year automobile manufacture in the United States reached a total of 80,000 cars valued at about $240,000,000. It would be interesting on know what percentage of this valuation apart from registration fees, was taxed.—Boston Record.

PENNANT AWARDED QUINCY BALL CLUB

A Team of Local Players Talked for the Coming Season--Probably No League

Banquet with a Large Number of Base Ball Fans Present

The Quincy Base Ball club held its first annual banquet at A. O. H. hall Thursday evening. Not only were several of the champion ball tossers of the 1910 team present, but a large number of the admirers of the team who could be found at every game, roasting on the bleachers and rooting for the home team.

The banquet was served at 8.30 by A. J. Thompson, the City Square caterer. His menu which was an excellent one was as follows:

Grape fruit with claret sauce
Consomme Vermicelli
Boiled fresh salmon, cream sauce
Potato saute
Roast spring chicken, giblet sauce
Mashed potatoes Cranberry sauce
Escalloped oysters
Celery Green olives
Ice cream
Assorted cake Crackers and cheese
Demi tasse

While the dinner was in progress the fans feasted their eyes on the championship pennant which occupied one side of the hall. This pennant, which was about fifteen feet long, had the following large white letters on its blue field. "Old Colony League—Championship—1910."

While the dinner was in progress there were several selections by Casey Bros., the entertainers. Also vocal solos by Arthur E. Baxter, the veteran fan, with Councilman Bolster at the piano. The Prout quartet rendered a number of vocal selections.

But two of the league teams outside of Quincy were represented. They were the Deweys of Weymouth, who were represented by A. B. Tirrell, A. S. Tirrell and John Kelley; and the Randolphs, who were represented by Herman Shaw and Frank Hennessey. Of the champion nine were Walter Lonergan, who held down the third bag, and Billy Duggan, the crack left fielder.

The dinner over, President M. E. Shea of the Quincy's said that while the league was a dead one, he intended to have a ball team in Quincy the coming season that would be made up largely of local players and he hoped to receive the same support that the old Quincy team had received. He was interrupted in his flow of oratory by having the pennant presented to him.

He then introduced Councilman Bolster as toastmaster of the evening.

Councilman Bolster said he was glad to be present and represent a club that had won the pennant. When Mike Shea was made manager he got there with both feet. He also favored the plan to have a team in Quincy the coming year and hoped it would be supported.

A. B. Tirrell of Weymouth said the Dewey's would not organize this year, but that Weymouth would support a good Quincy team.

Mr. Shaw said things were not bright for a team at Randolph this year.

Councilman Bolster said that a city like Quincy ought to support a good ball team. If we had all local players we could put up some good games.

REPUBLICAN CLUB ORGANIZED

No Candidate for Office Can Be an Officer

The Republican club of Quincy was organized on Thursday evening at Colonial hall. Notices were sent only to those who signed cards at the close of the Republican rally in October and a large representation of these were preesnt.

It is not to be a club of office holders or candidates for office, and therefore has started out in the right direction.

George A. Sidelinger was temporary chairman and Representative Louis F. R. Langelier temporary secretary.

The committee on constitution and bylaws, W. M. Chase, W. E. Piper and W. H. Teasdale, reported a constitution and bylaws similar to the clubs of the Republican League.

After some discussion they were adopted without amendment. One article provides:

"The objects of this club shall be to advocate, maintain and promote the principles of Republicanism; and interest in politics those who have hitherto been more or less indifferent to their political duties; to encourage attendance at primary meetings, in order that honest and capable men may be nominated and elected; to guard and defend the purity of the election laws; to work in harmony with and carry out the plan of permanent Republican Club organizations, and to perform such other work as may best conserve the interests of the party, National, State and local, thereby exerting the most potent influence for good government."

Another article provides that no elective officer of th City County, State or Nation shall be an officer of the club, and should an officer of the club become a candidate for any of these offices he shall immediately cease to be an officer of the club.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—George A. Sidelinger.

Vice Presidents (one from each ward)—George H. Brown, Edwin W. Newcomb, Alfred O. Diack, Joseph Walker, Albert W. Fay, and Charles A. Hall.

Secretary—Roy Prout.

Treasurer—Edward E. Jameson.

Executive Committee (one from each ward)—George E. Adams, Jacob Peterson, William H. Deacon, J. Frank Merrill, Eugene H. Sprague and Frederick J. Kessler.

President Sidelinger returned thanks for electing him as the first president. He expected the club to become a permanent organization. Other remarks were made by Joseph Walker of Ward Four, ex-Mayor John O. Hall, and others.

The annual dues of the club are $1 and there are no assessments. All those present signed the bylaws and paid dues for one year. President Sidelinger will soon appoint a wide-awake membership committee, finance committee, and other committees and the club will probably become a power in the politics of the city.

ENCAMPMENT ODD FELLOWS.

The members of Manet encampment, I. O. O. F., and their ladies will be kept busy next week. On Wednesday evening they leave Quincy Square at 7.05 o'clock with the "Travelling Pillars, which they are to present to Wompatuck encampment of East Weymouth, at their public installation. On Friday night they have a public installation and ladies' night at home, when the new officers will be installed by D. D. G. P. Bert J. Wigmore and suite of Somerville.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It's most time to be looking over the seed catalogues and planning your garden. The tree agent will soon be abroad. Give him an order and set out at least one tree on Arbor day.

A few years ago the newspapers recorded that so and so was going south for the mid-winter season but all that is changing for now it is to the north that many go preferring the cold bracing air and snows of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Canada. The White mountains may become more popular in winter than in summer and rival the attractions of Switzerland where tourists flock for winter sports, snow shoeing and skeeing.

Malden merchants have plans well under way for Merchants' week which will be observed the first week in May. One day will be set apart for a civic parade, another for a reception to former residents who will be urged to visit the city, another to the entertainment of guests who may be considering making Malden their home or the home of industries in which they are interested. There are to be athletic events and the city will be specialy decorated. The arrangements are being made by committees of the Board of Trade.

Business societies of Providence, R. I., are taking steps to merge President Gross of the Board of Trade said, in his annual report that the board is not doing what it should and that the combination of all similar organizations is needed to bring about the desired results. The board officials are preparing an act to be introduced into the Legislature authorizing every city and town in the state to appropriate money for advertising itself, its products and advantages, and for maintaining exhibits if it is so desired. The act will place a limit of $10,000 on the apropriations for each community.

In the old days of reciprocity between Canada and the United States there was a very large trade between St. John and New England ports in lumber, lime and produce. The tariff killed the lime exporting business and checked that in lumber and other lines. There is naturally a good deal of interest, therefore, in St. John and New Brunswick generally, in the present reciprocity negotiations. The exports from St. John to the United States last year were valued at $2,368,153.09. This was a decline, compared with 1909, of $1,049,262.96, which was almost wholly due to the extreme dulness of the American market for lumber, pulp and pulp wood. These items accounted for $1,168,852.33 of the total exports. Exports of lime totaled only $11,134.50. The fish exports and those of farm produce were also very small. The exports by the winter port steamships from St. John to British Continental, South African and Australian ports thus far this season amount to something over $6,000,000. It is an interesting fact that last week 9,000 barrels of plaster were brought to St. John in a barge from New York, for shipment to Australia. Furniture from a Nova Scotia factory which formerly went via. New York to Australia now goes via. St. John.

IF WE BUT KNEW.

Jennie H. Lapham.

We lightly greet our friend today,
And then upon the morrow
We hear that he has passed away
Beyond all pain and sorrow.

We loved him very much, we say,
And we shall miss him so;
We thought not ere he went away,
'Twould please him this to know.

We often say, if we but knew
This we would give, that we would do;
Then wait until too late, and rue
That we withheld—if we but knew

Take then this lesson on your way,
And save a deal of sorrow,
The loved ones who are here today
May not be here tomorrow.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

In discussing the proposed closer union of the cities and towns of the Greater Boston district, a question naturally arises as to whether opposition to the plan from a number of these municipalities should prevent those which favor it from entering into the necessary agreement. Various answers to this interrogation occur, but the consensus among well informed men appears to be that the plan, although feasible, is not practicable. Different commissions now handle certain affairs coming within their jurisdictions throughout the entire metropolitan district, and all the towns within that district are paying the expenses hereby incurred. In order to make the work of a metropolitan council, provided for in the Greater Boston plans, entirely effective, a uniform system of accounting in the different cities and towns would be required, and this would be a manifest impossibility unless the records of every municipality were open to inspection by the council. Any other arrangement would be unfair, apparently, to the places that affiliated with "Real Boston," and, possibly, to those that refused to do so.

It is not too much to hope, however, that influential civic leaders who now fail to see any good in the "Real Boston" plan will come to understand annexation is not contemplated, that not a single one of the cities or towns need fear the loss of its identity or individuality, that it is not for municipal Boston alone that exponents of the agreement are working, but that they are striving to promote the interests of the forty-odd municipalities comprising the entire district.

Although citizens of some outlying towns may still think the plan is designed to exploit municipal Boston at the expense of other places nearby, it is easy enough to see that any commercial or industrial growth resulting from use of the largest possible census figures would help all the cities and towns in the metropolitan district. It hardly seems necessary to emphasize again the fact that metropolitan Boston already is recognized. Federation between its cities and towns has existed for years, since pooling of certain interests under state commissions for purpose of developing public utilities. The $80,000,000 already expended by those commissions furnishes strong evidence that benefits thus secured could be duplicated in other directions by putting the work in the hands of a metropolitan council representing each and every municipality within the Greater Boston district.

Less than two years ago, we recall, the Greater Boston "cooperative fire call system" went into effect. A score or more of nearby suburban communities are bound, under that agreement, to Boston. The arrangement is a comprehensive method of assigning fire apparatus for mutual aid and protection in the case of urgent need. This "running card" method had been used generally in Boston for some time previous to 1909, but early in that year the extension of it began, and as now applied it stands for complete and economical cooperation anywhere within Greater Boston in the event of a conflagration.

Such an instance is only one of several exemplifying the manner in which Greater Boston has partly organized for the benefit of its different parts. The possibility, even advisability, of having such agreements in regard to other matters of common interest may also be regarded as apparent. It seems illogical to dispute the statement that estimating population on the total figures for Greater Boston would benefit the whole district industrially, without any harmful effects. If some of the nearby towns took the initiative steps by strongly favoring a reciprocal arrangement of this sort, would not the dissidents gradually join in the movement as they began to understand what it meant to the trade of the entire district, including their own communities? "Real Boston" may not be best served by an agreement between a few cities, but it is too early to see anything but encouragement in the progress made. At the same time it is well to consider every phase of the problem and meet new obstacles as they arise. Closer inspection of this "Real Boston" proposition in towns where it is encountering opposition may put it in a favorable light.—Christian Science Monitor.

GUILTY ON EIGHTY COUNTS

New Orleans Banker Is Convicted For the Second Time

New Orleans, Jan. 20.—William Adler, former president of the State National Bank of New Orleans, was found guilty in the federal court on eighty counts charging misappliction of the funds of the bank.

This was the second time Adler had been tried for this offense. At the first trial he was found guilty and sentenced to six years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta. The verdict was reversed as to many counts by the United States circuit court of appeals and a new trial granted.

Following the decision of the appellate court another indictment was returned against Adler and it was on this and certain counts in the previous indictment that the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

FOSS SIGNS LODGE PAPERS

Disposes of Rumor That Senator's Seat Will Be Contested

Boston, Jan. 20.—Governor Foss signed the certificate of election of Senator Lodge last night. One copy was sent to Lodge and another to Vice President Sherman, president of the senate.

The action of the governor in signing the certificate and forwarding it to Washington effectually disposes of the rumor that an attempt was to be made to contest the seat on the ground that doubtful methods were pursued in securing votes enough in the legislature to re-elect the senior senator.

The governor declined to make any comment on the election of Lodge after he had affixed his signature to the certificate.

Arabian Nights Wedding For Princess of Ancient Lineage

Lahore, India, Jan. 20.—The most elaborate preparations are being made for the fetes to be held at Kapurthala, in honor of the marriage of Prince Paranjit-Singh, son and heir of the Maharajah of Kaputhala, and Princess Brinda de Jubal, a descendant of the most ancient and illustrious caste in India.

The ante-nuptial festivities will take place during the first five days of February, and will be attended in state by all the great princes of India.

At Kapurthala, the capital of the state, the maharajah has a wonderful palace and is one of the richest in money and jewels of the native rulers of India. The wedding festivities in this palace, with music, dancing girls, feasting and the princes, their families and trains in royal robes covered with priceless jewels, will be like a story from the "Thousand and One Nights."

The princess is of such ancient lineage as to be regarded as of half divine origin, and is treated with the highest veneration by the Hindus.

BALLOU ABSOLVES PARRI

Does Not Think He Was Shot by Man Whom He Killed

Bath, Me., Jan. 20.—John Parri, who was shot and killed by Deputy Sheriff John Ballou during a riot at a construction camp near Topsham on Tuesday last, did not fire the shot which wounded the deputy in the head, in the opinion of that official.

Ballou, who is in the Bath hospital, says that, although he exchanged shots with Parri, he believes that he received his wound at the hands of another of the mob which had rescued from Ballou and other officers a man who had been arrested charged with illegal sale of liquor.

DEATH CALLS PAUL MORTON

Dies an Hour After Being Stricken In New York Hotel

HAS CEREBRAL HEMORRHAGE

Prosperous Career of Man Who Went to Work When Fifteen Years Old, Becoming Prominent In Railroad and Insurance Circles and Secretary of the Navy In Cabinet of President Roosevelt

New York, Jan. 20.—Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Assurance society and secretary of the navy under Theodore Roosevelt, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in the Hotel Seymour last night.

His wife and elder brother, Jay, were summoned to his side, but he died a few minutes before they arrived and an hour after he was stricken. His close friend, E. J. Berwind, arrived a few moments before he breathed his last, but he was unconscious from the moment of the stroke, and neither recognized those about him nor spoke.

The coroner's office is satisfied that death resulted from natural causes, and there will be no autopsy.

Mr. Morton himself had no idea that his life was in danger, but his family, his physicians and a few close friends knew his condition was precarious and that if he did not take care of himself something was going to break.

Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon said that from the antecedent history and the symptoms there was no doubt in his mind that death was due to arterial sclerosis, a hardening of the walls of the arteries, terminating in a cerebral lesion. He thought that Bright's disease was indicated, but there would be no autopsy. A permit for removal of the body to Morton's house was granted almost immediately. The death was reported to the coroner's office in the usual stereotyped form as follows:

"Paul Morton, 53 years old, died suddenly at the Hotel Seymour, 50 West Forty-fifth street; reported to coroner's office by Dr. Pearson of 49 West Forty-fourth street; occupation, railroad man."

Paul Morton, ex-secretary of the navy, president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, prominent railroad official and vice president of the Pan-American railroad, was the son of J. S. Morton, secretary of agriculture in the cabinet of Grover Cleveland.

He was born in Detroit May 22, 1857, and started his railroad career in 1872 with the Burlington system, working up from the position of a clerk in the land office and serving as assistant general freight agent and general passenger agent and ending as general freight agent of the C., B. and Q. railroad.

He then became president of the Colorado Feul and Iron company and in 1890 was elected president of the Whitebreast Fuel company. In 1896 he went as third vice president with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad and was promoted to the second vice presidency in 1898.

He remained in this position until 1904, when, having formed an acquaintance with President Roosevelt, he was offered by him a position in his cabinet, which he accepted, becoming secretary of the navy. He served as secretary from July 1, 1904, to July 1, 1905, when he resigned to become president of the Equitable Life Assurance society.

He married Charlotte Goodridge of Chicago Oct. 13, 1880, and she, with two daughters, survives him. The daughters are Miss Pauline Morton and Mrs. William C. Potter.

PEARY CERTAIN OF HONOR

Shown by Canvass of Both Sides of House of Representatives

Washington, Jan. 20.—Repesentative Roberts of Massachusetts has begun work on his minority report on the resolution promoting Captain Peary to the rank of rear admiral, as a reward for his discovery of the North Pole. The report will not be opposed, but it will criticise the National Geographical society for the manner in which it passed on Peary's proofs.

Representative Bates of Pennsylvania, author of the Peary resolution, began a canvass of the Republican side of the house to ascertain the sentiment in favor of Peary. A similar canvass was made on the Democratic side by Representative Harrison of New York, and both members expressed the opinion that the resolution would be passed at this session.

FIRE LOSS OF $100,000

Heart of Business Section of a Vermont Town Is Destroyed

North Adams, Mass., Jan. 20.—Fire destroyed the heart of the business section of Pownal, Vt., a small town near here. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Help was summoned to fight the flames from Williamstown, Mass., and North Pownal. Three firemen were buried beneath falling walls and were badly burned.

The fire started from a gasolene explosion in the general store of A. G. Parker & Sons. Before it was extinguished it had destroyed the store, a barn and a large warehouse connected with it, the postoffice, the Baptist church and the long horse sheds in the rear of the church. The home of A. G. Parker was partially burned.

EAGER TO RETURN TO HIS DUMP CART

Century Old Driver Not Disconcerted by an Accident

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 20.—Daniel Short, who at the age of 100 years and some months, according to his own words, drives a dump cart for the National Biscuit company, fell from his cart at the corner of Brookline and Franklin streets and sustained a scalp wound and a wrenched knee. He was taken to the Cambridge Relief hospital and put to bed, although he protested against the attention of the nurses and doctors and declared that he must be up and about his work.

Short was in a similar accident on Nov. 11 last. He has been employed many years by the National Biscuit company, and its predecessor in Cambridge, and his work nowadays, which occupies only a part of each day, is to haul ashes from the factory. He is proud to be employed at his advanced age and says that he shall not be idle while he lives. His daughter keeps house for him.

DIXIE LABOR REPORTS

Overman Asserts That They Have Been Squelched by Nagel

Washington, Jan. 20.—That Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor has suppressed much of the reports of agents of the labor bureau, because of their revelations concerning the private lives of people in North Carolina and other southern states, was asserted in the senate by Senator Overman.

He stated that some of the reports were so revolting in character that, if printed, the law would prohibit their transmission through the mails.

The statement followed an inquiry by Senator Beveridge as to the publication of the results of investigations into the employment of women and children made a few years ago.

LEPER DISCOVERED IN HUB

Japanese Who Came From the West a Few Months Ago

Boston, Jan. 20.—A Japanese, 35 years old, who came from the west a few months ago, has been discovered to be a sufferer from leprosy. He has been under treatment for another disease. Experts of the health department were sent into the neighborhood to provide against all possible contagion, and the man has been sent to the detention hospital to await removal to Penikese island.

The case was the first discovered in Boston for nearly two years. At that time there were two cases, and the victims were sent to the leper hospital at Penikese.

GREELEY CLEAN AND READY.

Bronze Horace Awaits Centennial Unmoved and Spick and Span.

New York, the city that used to be editorially cleansed by Horace Greeley many years ago, has had its revenge. It was a benevolent revenge, but cleansing. There were no coals of fire heaped on the Greeley head; rather, buckets of soapsuds. But it is affirmed that Horace smiled complacently when the lathing process was completed and he again surveyed busy Broadway.

There was no doubt that Horace needed a bath sadly. More than a year was required by the Hudson river tunnel people to construct their Thirty-third street station, and the Greeley statue was moved from the triangle it had decorated for so many years.

It was decided that he should be washed, and two workmen went to work. They began with the noble brow and dropped soapy water in Mr. Greeley's eye, but he bore it all, even to the tickling of his nose, as an immense crowd can testify. It took an hour to thus publicly wash Mr. Greeley, and he was not given a rough towel rub down either. But so invigorated did he appear that a reverent newsboy offered to shine the Greeley shoes free of charge, and he was with difficulty restrained from doing so.

ALLIGATOR HUNT IN FLORIDA

W. E. Burke Has Interesting Story for Galahad Club

The followers of Sir Galahad held a regular meeting in the parish house of Christ church Thursday evening. A short business session was held and reports were read by the treasurer and secretary. Plans were made for one of the club's popular socials to be held Feb. 16, and a committee was appointed to arrange for the annuel club play.

At 8.15 the speaker of the evening Walter E. Burke was introduced, and he spoke for over an hour on his experiences in Florida during March, 1910, when he spent a vacation on the Gray Duck, a 65 foot motor boat, which is moored at Quincy Point in the summer.

Mr. Burke first impressed upon his hearers the great effect of Gulf stream has upon climatic conditions. This stream is about 25 miles wide and deep blue in color. It is very clear and one may see the beautifully colored fish swimming at a distance of 10 feet from the surface. Flying fish are also abundant in these waters, and it is a pretty sight when a school of the fish are "in flight" (really jumping from the water to escape a large fish.)

Having arrived at Charleston, Mr. Burke joined his party on the Gray Duck, which now had seven passengers and a crew of four. At Jacksonville a stop was made to inspect the ostrich farm where not only ostriches are raised but also snakes, monkeys and bears. From Jacksonville the boat proceeded up the river which was shallow, narrow and very winding.

Daily excursions were made in a small motor launch as one of the members of the party wanted to catch a tarpon. But this wish, unfortunately, was not gratified during the trip. The bete noir of the party was the mocassin snake, whose bite means sure death, but fortunately the entire vacation was spent without sight of one of them.

Near Palm beach, the ranches as they are called, are beautiful, and not to be described in cold type, but like "fairy stories" with the vivid colors of grass, sea and sky.

A large portion of the country is barren and far from beautiful, and Mr. Burke said that he would not care to live in the state.

Navigation is a serious problem in some of the rivers, as they are so shallow that a strong wind will blow the water all out of the river.

Toward the end of the trip the party fell in with a farmer (a New York man by birth) and a bargain was struck whereby the farmer would find an alligator for the tourists. So a party of three was formed and the search began. As an alligator, like a millionaire, has many homes, it was found necessary to visit several pools, and after sending in a card (a long hook) his alligatorship proved to be "not at home." To make matters interesting, these pools were in a swamp where at every step an unfriendly mocassin snake might be expected.

Finally the animal (or fish if you prefer) was found, and declined to be interviewed, but finally was good enough to show himself. He probably regretted this however, as three shots were fired at him and all took effect. When it is remembered that the only vulnerable spot on the animal is about the size of a silver dollar, it will be seen that pretty good marksmanship was in evidence.

After the shooting, another serious problem presented itself in getting the body back to the ship, but the guide was equal to the occasion, and tying a rope to the body, dragged it through the various creeks to a spot a mile from the launch, and from there carried it on his back. The guide explained afterwards that he had heart trouble, and could do no hard labor, but lugging a 225 pound alligator a mile is quite a job for a 150 pound man so the party hardly believed his story.

Finally the alligator was skinned and taken aboard later to be stuffed as a souvenir of what might have been a dangerous experience. A man making a business of catching these alligators receives only $1.65 for each.

Mr. Burke concluded his remarks by answering questions of members of the club. At the conclusion he was given a rising vote of thanks.

The Free lecture to be given at Colonial hall, Sunday, Jan. 22, at 3 P. M. will be of great interest to all thinking people,—especially to Christians. You cannot afford to miss a lecture of such vital importance.

NEW ENTERPRISES.

Representatives of the Hallet & Davis corporation and the George Lawley &Sons corporation were given a complimentary reception Wednesday night, says the Globe, by the Neponset brotherhood, an organization of Neponset citizens.

Admiral Bowles, retired, President of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. at Quincy was the chief speaker. He offered his congratulations on the enterprise of Neponset's citizens in bringing new business industries there, and remarked on the seeming stupidity of the people along the Massachusetts coast in general in not recognizing that the best future of the section must come through the seaports.

George Lawley expressed himself as highly pleased with Neponset. Other speakers were Rev. Mr. Washburn, Walter Ballantyne, president of the City council, Herbert W. Burr and M. Stearns.

At a business meeting of the Neponset brotherhood these officers were elected: Walter N. Baker, president; Oliver S. Hayward, vice president; Pearl J. Caldwell, treasurer; Henry A. Frost, Charles M. Warren, Arthur H. Merritt and James F. Paige, executive committee.

—With the new pension bill calling for an increase of $45,000,000 for the coming year, the old veterans should certainly be benefitted to a large extent. The new bill grants pensions ranging from $12 to $36 a month to all soldiers who served 90 days in the United States army in the Civil war or 60 days in the Mexican war, and who have reached the age of 62 years.

METHODIST MEN'S CLUB

Enjoy an Hour with Shakespeare Thanks to E. E. Bartlett

The Men's club of the Wollaston Methodist church held its monthly meeting on Thursday evening, at which Edwin E. Bartlett of Hyde Park delivered an address entitled, "An hour with Shakespeare." An interesting account of the poet's life as far as is known was given by the speaker, coupled with criticism and comment of some of his principal characters and plays.

Mr. Bartlett opened his talk with a relation of England's history contemporary with Shakespeare's life. The birth of Shakespeare following so closely the death of Luther, he said, the world lost nothing by the exchange.

An entertaining description of Stratford and its surroundings were given special mention being made of Ann Hathaway's cottage. The speaker devoted some time to the criticism and delineation of what he considered one of Shakespeare's best plays: namely, Hamlet.

Mr. Bartlett closed with the poem composed on the Avon's banks at Stratford by the poet Longfellow as a tribute to the "bard of Avon" commencing: "Flow on sweet river."

An interesting series of views pertaining to Stratford and England followed, and as each was thrown on the screen it was described by Mr. Bartlett.

At the business meeting, that preceded, the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and a large amount of "give and take" was enjoyed, which forms an inimitable feature of this club. The reading of the Wollaston Herald, the club paper, by Editor Sedgwick was as brilliant and entertaining as usual.

Following a rising vote of thanks to Mr. Bartlett, the club adjourned for the customary refreshments served by the entertainment committee.

MILTON

The whole community will feel deeply the loss by resignation on Thursday of Rev. Irad B. Hardy, pastor of the First Baptist church, East Milton. Mr. Hardy came to East Milton in 1906 and for five years has conducted the affairs of the church with energy and devotion. The resignation has come as a result of a call to the Chapel street church in East Gloucester.

The Men's club of the East Congregational church had a ladies' night on Wednesday. Dr. William Gallagher, master of Thayer Academy, gave an illustrated lecture on "A trip up the Nile." The evening was in every way enjoyable and the lecture proved to be of great interest. Great plans are being made by the club for the big carnival to be held the middle of February.

The Girls' Glee club of the Milton High school met for singing practice Thursday afternoon. The girls are preparing a concert under the direction of Miss Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. James Malcolm of Petersburg avenue are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter born Thursday morning.

R. F. Clark of Ridgelawn farm, won several prizes with his Partridge Cochins in the Boston Poultry show.

The fire department was called out Tuesday morning at 6.30 in response to an alarm at box 42. A lively chimney fire in the house opposite the schoolhouse on School street, occupied by Mr. Richmond, kept them busy for about half an hour.

The school children are taking advantage of the good skating these days. As soon as school lets out, nearly everyone brings to light from somewhere or other a pair of skates and all are off on the dead run for the pond.

Milton Academy opened her hockey season very successfully by winning two games this week. Boston English High was defeated 5 to 0, and Somerville High was worsted by a score of 3 to 0.

Milton High school was defeated by Medford High in a well-played game of hockey Wednesday afternoon by a score of 1 to 0.

"Sid" Hazelton, athletic instructor at the High school, has been confined to his home a day or two this week on account of illness.

The Milton Five defeated the Cleo Five of Cambridge last Saturday by a score of 38 to 18.

The two Junior teams played on Saturday, one being defeated by the Revere Midgets 15 to 10, and the other receiving a defeat at the hands of the Merkle A. C. with a score of 9 to 7.

BIG INCREASE GAS EARNINGS

Have Been Over $14,000 for the Past Six Months

The net earnings of the Citizens' Gas Company for December were $2271 which is at the rate of $27,252 per year. This was an increase from $740 in December 1909 which was at the rate of only $8,880 per year. With increased earnings of $18,372 in a year, the prospects are good for more reductions in the gas rate of Quincy. In December, 1908, the net earnings were only $95 which was at the rate of $1,140 per year.

The actual net earnings for the last six months of 1910 were $14,005, against $1,771 for the same period in 1909.

The combined net earnings of the subsidiary companies of the Massachusetts Gas Companies for December amounted to $242,382, an increase over those for the corresponding month in 1910 of $31,171, or 14.76 per cent., and a gain over the November showing of $5320, or 2.55 per cent.

WEST QUINCY BANQUET

Improvement Association May Have Attendance of 300

All signs point to a rousing good time with a very large attendance at the second annual banquet of the West Quincy Improvement association, which will be held at St. Mary's hall next Thursday evening. This fact was made certain at the meeting of the association this week when reports were received from those having tickets for sale. From the number of tickets now sold it is expected that the number to attend will be upwards of 300. It is therefore going to be quite a problem to provide room for them. There are still some tickets out that have not as yet been heard from and these parties were urged to make their final report at the special meeting to beheld next Monday evening.

It was also decided that there would be no postponement on account of the weather. Chairman Elcock of the committee reported as to what contributions of funds and food had been made, and his report was enthuiastically received, and a rising vote of thanks extended to the donors.

The committee on decorations were given full power to expend such sums as might be necessary to give the hall an attractive appearance, and the following were appointed as a reception committee whose particular function will be to look after the wants of the invited guests: Dr. John H. Ash, James H. Elcock, Patrick Mannix, James F. Burke and Councilman John D. Smith.

James H. Elcock, as chairman of the special committee on railroad transportation, reported that he had held a conference with the railroad officials in relation to better accommodation to the Fore River shipyard and to the Tubular Rivet works in the morning, and that the railroad had agreed to put on two large cars in the morning for the Fore River, and two large cars for the Tubular Rivet plant. In regard to the matter of a five cent fare to Milton Lower mills he reported that the superintendent had agreed to take up the matter with the officials and would report at an early date.

K. of C. LADIES' NIGHT.

Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, will hold a ladies' night and reception to its retiring and its board of officers next Wednesday evening. The affair, which it is planned to make entirely informal, will be held at Colonial hall. Officers of Ave Marie council of West Quincy, as well as the officers of the councils at Braintree and Weymouth, will also be invited, and it is expected that the state and district deputies wil also be present. present.

Woman's World

Cupid Wins Victory In Suffragette Camp.

© 1910, by American Press Association.

MISS INEZ MILHOLLAND AND HER FIANCE MR. BATES.

The croakers who fear that the suffragette will lose her matrimonial chance may set their fears at rest, for the engagement is announced of the most obstreperous of suffragettes, Miss Inez Milholland, who perhaps has done more spectacular and strenuous work in the "votes for women" cause than any other American woman.

The lucky man with sufficient courage to marry this socialistic suffragette is Lindon Bates, Jr., of New York, ex-assemblyman, author and civil engineer and a recent convert to the "cause."

Victory through defeat will be Mr. Bates' slogan, for he does not promise to aid the girl of his heart in all of her activities, but he promises not to interfere in them. A dangerous trip taken by Mr. Bates through Siberia and his book recounting the experience, "The Russian Road to China," published last winter, completed Miss Milholland's interest in the author. The Russian road led directly to her heart.

A resume of Miss Milholland's short career will show just what her husband will be up against. "As a child," said her mother, "Inez was constantly bringing home the most forlorn and malmed specimens of femininity." And at Vassar later her socialistic tendencies quite shocked the conservative faculty, for early in her college career she had herself made probation officer. The chapel having been refused the fair Inez as a gathering place for a suffragette meeting, nothing daunted, with sixteen of her sworn allies, a meeting took place at midnight in a nearby graveyard, where they listened to burning words from President Inez. After that suffrage became a tolerated if not an approved subject at Vassar.

Miss Milholland has the honor of being the girl who "broke up the big Taft campaign parade." As the procession moved down Fifth avenue, the band playing "There'll Be a Hot Time," a voice from a window of one of the houses called, "Give us votes for women!" Miss Milholland, then a member of the Political Equality league, was shouting these words to the crowd through a megaphone.

Some of the men broke and ran into the house, and after fifteen minutes' convincing talk Inez had converted them to the cause. It was a great victory from the suffragist viewpoint. Several arrests, two in London and one during the shirtmakers' strike in New York last winter, are added to Miss Milholland's victories, for the oftener a suffragette can suffer for the cause the greater the glory.

She made four militant suffragette speeches in Hyde park, London, when only fifteen years old. She interviewed Premier Asquith last summer, when she persuaded him to be more openly friendly to the suffragettes. Her conversion of Mr. Bates took place a year ago at a suffragette tea, and now it is said that the wedding bells will soon be heard.

INDIAN ATHLETES ATTAIN SUCCESS IN BUSINESS.

Johnson Dentist In Porto Rico and Rogers Minnesota Lawyer.

One of the best known athletes in the country is Frank Mount Pleasant, who was graduated at Carlisle and holds records for the quarter mile, 100 yards, 220 yards and the broad jump. He was a famous football player and represented the United States in the Olympic games in Europe two years ago.

He graduated from the academic department of Dickinson college and was the first Indian to get the diploma and degrees of this college. He has been selected as athletic director in charge of all student sports at Franklin and Marshall college, Lancaster, Pa., where he resides.

Another Carlisle student who had the honor of being an all American quarterback was James Johnson, a Stockbridge Indian of Wisconsin. He was considered one of the most wonderful athletes of his day. After graduating at Carlisle he entered the dental department of the Northwestern university at Chicago, working his way, and was graduated in 1907.

He is now at San Juan, Porto Rico, where he is practicing his profession. He did a business of $4,000 last year and numbers some of the most prominent people of the island as his patients. He married a Carlisle graduate and has a nice home.

One of the most exciting things to happen during the football season of 1903 took place in the Harvard stadium when the Indians were playing Harvard university. During the game Charles Dillion, a Sioux, after running the whole length of the field, made a touchdown with the ball tucked under his jersey. This young man, although he did not stay long enough to graduate, is now living in Montana, where he is in charge of the blacksmithing department on the Crow reservation. He married a Crow girl who is a graduate of the school, and he is considered a successful employee of the government.

Many will remember Edward Rogers, a Chippewa Indian, who was a famous end and captain of the team in 1900. He was also a good track man, a hurdler and a pole vaulter. He was graduated from the law department of the University of Minnesota in 1904 and regarding his stay there says, "Worked my way through the university; a very happy recollection."

He is now living at Walker, Minn., where he is a successful attorney. He owns his own home, a nine room house with bath and all modern improvements. While practicing law at Mahnomen, Minn., he had the distinction of being appointed judge of the probate court.

The Loyal Ladies of Clan MacGregor and Clan MacGregor, O. S. C., will celebrate the birth of Scotland's national poet, Robert Burns, by the annual supper and dance. This celebration has become a fixture among our citizens of Scottish birth and ancestry, and also among a great many of our residents who are admirers of the ploughman poet.

A new departure is to be made this year by having the supper served promptly at 8 o'clock. Committees from both organizations, have been meeting early and often, arranging the details and everything has been perfected, and an excellent entertainment will result.

The orator of the evening will be the Rev. A. D. MacKinnon of Boston. Songs will be rendered by Miss Evelyn Blair and D. P. Wilson. Scottish dances will be given by Misses Eva White and Lois La Bua. Dancing will begin about 10.30 and will continue until 3 A. M.

—About 100 schoolboys of Elmira, N. Y., kept gardens last summer on vacant lots which were contributed for their use. The boys were so successful that it is planned to have the work done on a larger scale this summer, and to utilize all available vacant lots in the city. The boys enjoy their work, and also derive some profit from their products.

Borah Says Stream of Corruption Flows In Illinois

LORIMER IS HOTLY DENOUNCED

Votes For Him Which Were "Delivered" by White Were Tainted and Should Be Cast Out, According to Idaho Senator—Says Testimony Before Investigating Committee Showed That Bribery Had Been Committed

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator Borah of Idaho, following Senator Burrows' defense of Senator Lorimer of Illinois, took not only the opposite view to Burrows, but drew conclusions hostile to Lorimer more extreme than any yet suggested on the floor of the senate.

Mr. Borah's speech was a scorching rejoinder to Burrows and a scathing denunciation of what Borah characterized as a machine, "controlled and directed by a powerful mind," which carried on its corrupt operations in the legislature and even in the courts up to the time it was exposed by the confessions of the witnesses summoned by the senate investigating committee.

By careful analysis of the testimony he sought to prove the accuracy of the confessions before the investigations of circumstantial evidence offered in confirmation, such as letters, telegrams and the passing of money. He declared that in an investigation of this kind one could not expect to find witnesses of the highest character, but that in this case the circumstantial certainty with which the transactions are related corroborated beyound question the veracity of the witnesses.

He found that the testimony connects the "jackpot" with the alleged bribery in the Lorimer election and that in the universal condition of corruption which existed in the Illinois legislature the men to whom the Lorimer money was paid were admitted to share in the proceeds of the "jackpot."

He asserted that as Representative White had apparently managed the southern wing of the corrupt machine, not only his own vote but all the votes he "delivered" for Lorimer were tainted and should be cast out. Continuing to discuss White's operations, Borah asked:

"What was it that prompted him to vote for Lorimer? Was it friendship? Was it honor? Or was it corruption? Ask yourself the question and see what the answer will be."

Mr. Borah analyzed the testimony of the witnesses before the investigating committee. He declared that there had been unmistakable bribery. He declared that it had been shown conclusively that at least four of the Lorimer votes had been obtained by bribery. Instead of regarding the testimony as flimsy, he thought it surprising that the committee had heard from as many members of the legislature as had testified. He expressed the opinion that in some instances the committee had not pressed its inquiries as far as it might have done advantageously.

Discussing the part played by Browne, the minority leader in the Illinois house, Borah declared that without his thirty Democratic votes Lorimer's election would have been impossible. "The election could not have been pulled off without fixing Browne," he said.

"From the hour that the senator from Illinois decided to become a candidate," Borah continued, "a stream of corruption began to flow, and it never has ceased. It has gone into the courts; it has affected juries; it has broken down lawyers; it has left broken reputations in its wake. From the beginning there has been evidence of the organizing ability of a powerful mind."

Senator Lorimer himself scarcely stirred in his seat throughout the session, which was practically given up to the fight. Although apparently unperturbed during his defense and the bitter attack by Borah, his cheeks were flushed and his eyes followed intently every movement of the speakers.

WINE RIOTS GROW SERIOUS

French Government to Send Troops to Scene of Disturbance

Paris, Jan. 20.—The series of wine riots which has broken out in the champagne district is seriously occupying the attention of the government, which has decided to dispatch troops to end the disturbances in the Rheims region, where the local authorities are helpless.

Although the misery of the wine workers resulted from poor crops and small wages is recognized officially, it is pointed out that large sums already have been appropriated by parliament to alleviate the sufferings.

Two thousand men and women from the surrounding country marched into Hauteville, carrying red banners and singing revolutionary airs. They broke into several wine cellars and, smashing the casks, poured the contents, valued at thousands of dollars, into the streets until the thoroughfares fairly ran with champagne. Thousands of bottles of wine were emptied into a creek.

SLED CRASHES INTO FENCE

Eighteen Young Young People Are More or Less Seriously Injured

Laconia, N. H., Jan. 20.—Eighteen boys and girls were injured in a coasting accident last night when a double runner on which they were coasting missed the turn of the road and crashed into a wooden fence at the foot of Coolbroth hill.

The sled carried away fifteen feet of fence and the occupants were thrown in all directions, several of them being so badly injured that they were taken to the hospital.

PROPERTY ATTACHED IN SUM OF $1,500,000

Wife of Shoe Manufacturer Plant Files Suit For Divorce

Boston, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Thomas G. Plant, wife of the wealthy Jamaica Plain shoe manufacturer, who recently disposed of his interests to the United Shoe Machinery company for $10,000,000, has filed through her counsel suit for divorce.

Judge Hitchcock in the superior court ordered a special attachment against the property of Plant in the sum of $1,500,000, the largest sum ever involved in a similar case in this jurisdiction.

Mrs. Plant in her complaint accuses her husband of too much friendship with a woman who formerly worked for the Plants before they broke up housekeeping.

She declares that the name of the corespondent is unknown to her, but she charges that her husband was guilty of misconduct "at divers times and places." They were married in Chicago June 26, 1895, and the formal separation was in September of last year.

PEOPLE PANIC STRICKEN

Flight From Plague Infected District Is Prevented by Troops

Harbin, Manchuria, Jan. 20.—The first serious rioting marking the spread of the bubonic plague in Manchuria and China began here when persons who attempted to flee from the city were driven back by soldiers. Troops patrolled the streets with orders to shoot down any mobs who resisted orders to disperse.

The terrified people, stricken with horror and panic, fought with the troops, women taking part in the violence. Martial law was declared in the suburb of Fudziadian, where the pestilence has taken its heaviest toll of human life, comparing the death list with population.

New York, Jan. 20.—Resolutions demanding the immediate abrogation of all existing treaties between this country and Russia were adopted by the delegates to the twenty-second council of the Union of Hebrew-American Congregations at their concluding session at the Hotel Astor.

Bitter denunciation of Russia's refusal to admit into that country Jewish citizens of the United States bearing passports preceded the introduction of the resolutions, copies of which were ordered sent to President Taft and to congress.

TO TAKE STAND IN OWN BEHALF

Mrs. Schenk Will Tell Her Own Story to Jury

PROSECUTION RESTS IN TRIAL

Motion by Defense to Strike Out All State's Evidence and Dismiss Case Is Overruled—Court Says Husband of Accused Woman Would Have Been Competent Witness, Although Contrary to State Law

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 20.—With the state completing the presentation of its evidence in the prosecution of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, charged with poisoning her husband, the defense began to call its witnesses, but not before Mrs. Schenk's attorney had moved to strike out all of the state's evidence and dismiss the case. It is practically sure Mrs. Schenk will take the stand in her own behalf.

Judge Jordan promptly overruled the motion, declaring that had the state called Schenk to testify against his wife he would have allowed the testimony.

A state law specifically forbids the introduction of a husband's testimony against a wife's, or vice versa, except by the other's consent.

"I would have admitted John Schenk's evidence irrespective of the statute," Jordan said. "If a man assassaulted his wife and there were no witnesses it would be monstrous if she could not testify against him. In this case the alleged offense was committed on Schenk. And I certainly would have adjudged him a competent witness."

In presenting the case to the jury when the state closed, Prosecutor Handlan declared that the state had shown that Schenk was in good health upon his return from Europe; that the state has shown by competent physicians that the husband was suffering from both lead and arsenic poison, and that analysts of mineral water and medicine he took contained arsenic and sugar of lead; that Mrs. Schenk was indifferent to her husband, preferring another man, and had predicted his death, speaking of the kind of funeral he would have; that the accused offered a detective-nurse $1000 to administer poison to Schenk; that she had been indiscreet with another man, as testified to by her chauffeur, and that she had procured sugar of lead from Dr. Myers, asking him also for a form of arsenic.

"These points have been clearly set out," declared the state attorney, "and upon them the state bases its demand for a conviction."

It was at this point that Attorney Boyce made his motion to dismiss the case, asserting that the physicians' testimony was conflicting, some claiming lead and others arsenic poisoning, and other information was based on what Schenk had told them.

He said the defense had objected to the questions in relation to the things said by Schenk, as under the statutes of West Virginia the wife cannot testify against the husband nor the husband against the wife, and for that reason no other person could testify as to what had been told them by Schenk.

REPORT ON INFANT PLAGUE

Wesleyan Professor Concludes That It Is Spread by Fleas

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 20.—That the spread of infantile paralysis may have been due to fleas or some other blood sucking insects carried in the hair of cats or dogs, is the statement made in a report by Professor Conn, head of the biological department at Wesleyan university, who has been investigating an epidemic of the disease.

"All of the facts," says the report, "would be explained upon the assumptions that a few fleas have become infected from one or two original cases and spread the disease."

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Love and War usually serve the aspiring playwright and the librettist with plots galore, and for this reason the recurring "Trouble in the Balkans" naturally concentrates attention upon that troubled spot on the European continent. The very latest musical comedy importation from London is called "The Balkan Princess," and is the joint work of Paul Rubens composer and lyricist (assisted by Arthur Wimperis) and Frederic Lonsdale and Frank Curzon, librettists. The Balkan Princess will be impersonated by Miss Louise Gunning, who will sing the music allotted to Stephanie, Princess of Balaria. This musical comedy is the latest production to be made by the Messrs. Shubert, and will receive its presentation at the Shubert Theatre in Boston on Monday night, January 23. In the organization which will support Miss Gunning will be found Mr. Robert Warwick, late leading man with Mrs. Carter, who is making his first appearance in musical comedy. He will portray the character of the Grand Duke Sergius. The comedy parts will be in capable hands, for Herbert Corthell, late star of "The Girl and The Drummer," will head a great trio of fun-makers, which includes Joseph Herbert and Teddy Webb; May Boley, comedienne; Marie Rose, soubrette, and Vida Whitmore, dancer, will all have fine opportunities to exhibit their accomplishments. An augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Frank Tours, late of the Gaiety Theatre, London, will conduct a largely augmented orchestra. Typical Balkan costumes and scenes will serve to embellish the scenic portion of the musical comedy.

AT B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The next attraction at B. F. Keith's Theatre will be a real Wild West Show, with Indians, cowboys, bucking bronchos, kicking mules, sharpshooters, lariat experts, and a cowboy band. This big company of thirty experts is under the direction of Billie Burke, and is called "Frontier Day." The scene takes place in a Western town where the inhabitants are having a holiday, and it is said to be one of the most interesting and exciting productions ever put on the stage. This will be a big feature of a bill composed entirely of headliners. It will include B. A. Rolfe's musical comedy "The Leading Lady," with beautiful stage settings and a large chorus of pretty girls; and will also mark the first appearance in Boston of Mrs. Gardner Crane in her new comedy entitled "The Little Sunbeam." The stage setting of this act is decidedly novel, showing the interior of a sleeping car with the berths made down and the passengers just getting up at seven o'clock in the morning. This is a long laugh from start to finish. Another laughing feature will be Ward and Curran in that vaudeville classic, "The Terrible Judge." Will H. Fox will introduce his pianologue, while Al and Fanny Stedman and the 3 Mascagnos and other features yet to be announced will round out one of the strongest shows of the season.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The success of "Jack and the Beanstalk" still continues at the Castle Square. Mr. Craig announces the beginning of its fifth week on Monday, which means that the demand for seats is as great as ever. Two yeears ago "The Circus Girl" was in the midst of its run at the Castle Square, and now "Jack and the Beanstalk" bids fair to equal its popularity. It is the variety of the piece that takes with the public and that contributes a large share towards its success. Fairies, Mother Goose characters, personages from the Arabian nights, and a multitude of others throng the stage during the performance, while the music and the beautiful scenery give it an especial attraction. During the coming week Jack will be played as before by Mary Young, and Mr. Craig as Sinbad the Sailor, Mr. Hassell as Old King Cole, Kate Ryan as Mother Hubbard and all the others will remain in the cast.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

There will be no soloist at the Symphony concerts this afternoon and Saturday evening. Mr. Fiedler has arranged a more than usually attractive programme. It begins with Schubert's symphony in C-Major. The second part will be devoted to French music, three symphonic poems. They are Cesar Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit," Saint-Saens "Omphale's Spinning Wheel" and "Danse Macabre."

WITH THE ACTORS

David Warfield concludes his engagement at the Hollis theatre next week in "The Return of Peter Grimm."

Bostonians are expecting much from the revival of "Becky Sharp" by Mrs. Fiske, who comes to the Hollis Street theatre Jan. 30.

Arsene Lupin the gentlemanly robber-hero is attracting crowds to the Park theatre. Next week ends the engagement.

A play of great human interest and one that has attracted crowds every night of its engagement here is "The Rosary," now playing at the Globe theatre. The character of the kindly simple-hearted Catholic priest is one that has become a great favorite with everyone who has seen the play.

Mrs. Marion Craig Wentworth will give her annual course of readings at Steinert hall on Thursday afternoons at 3 o'clock beginning Feb 2, when she will read Maeterlinck's fairy play, "The Blue Bird." This reading will be in the nature of a children's matinee, as Mrs. Wentworth will offer it to children 10 years of age, as well as to "grownups."

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Weeks ago the enthusiasm shown by trade and the public in regard to the Boston Motor Boat Show to be held in Mechanics Building the week of January 28th to February 4th, brought forth from the New England Engine & Boat Association headquarters the statement that the 1911 Show would be even more successful from every standpoint than the exhibitions held in Boston under the auspices of that Association in former years. Results have verified that forecast, and Manager Chester I. Campbell now announces that practically all available exhibit space has been spoken for since the first of the year, and that the special exhibition of racing crafts for which arrangements have been made have received so much publicity and aroused so much interest that the only difficulty will be to give all those desiring a chance to exhibit their goods, locations that will be satisfactory to them and at the same time in no way reduce the big aisles that are necessary to handle the immense crowds of visitors that will attend the show. The Management is in correspondence with the owner of the well known "Gregoire VIII," and every endeavor will be made to have that craft shipped from Montreal for exhibition here. The "Gregoire VIII" is the winner of the international race at Monaco, France, last year outclassing every Cruiser in her class by far. "Br'er Fox II" will be shipped from Newport Kentucky, for the Boston Show, and a special representative is even now scouring New York City and Philadelphia in an endeavor to secure several other unique and interesting exhibits. While Boston has gained much repute for its tastefully decorated trade exhibitions each year, the Motor Boat Show this month will well be worth while seeing for the decorations alone. The usual fine music and other high-class entertainment will be presented for the benefit of the visiting public.

Another Bomb In Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Nine persons were hurt by a "Black Hand" bomb here. It wrecked the front of a two-story brick building on the West Side.

—The latest addition to the Brockton hospital plant, made posible by the generosity of Daniel W. Field, is in commission. The hospital today stands as a monument to the generosity of a few wealthy citizens who have helped it materially, and to the hearty co-operation of an army of Brockton men and women who have done their share toward the building and sustaining of the institution ever since, many years ago, a great fair was held to help the project take form.—Brockton Enterprise.

Plays and Players

SPIRITUALISM in serious vein has entered the theatrical realm with David Belasco as its interpreter. The play, entitled "The Return of Peter Grimm," was enthusiastically received at Boston on its initial performance.

The part of Peter Grimm, who "comes back," is delegated to David Warfield, and he handles it well, according to the critics. The story revolves around Grimm, a wealthy old flower grower, who has an adopted daughter whom he loves dearly. Because of this affection he desires to keep her in the family by marrying her to a nephew. The town doctor is a believer in spiritualism and enters into a compact with Grimm that whoever dies first shall "come back." Grimm is the first to depart, and he returns to complete his matrimonial and other plans left incomplete by his sudden demise.

DAVID BELASCO.

Curiously enough, it was a vision that inspired Belasco to write "The Return of Peter Grimm." It was the death of his mother, and the incident is related by the dramatist in these words:

"When my mother died five years ago I had not seen her for some time. I was kept here in the east by my affairs, but I knew she had been in poor health. One night—the night she died—I suddenly was awakened as though some one had touched me, and there above me I saw in the darkness my mother's face. I heard her whisper: 'Davie, Davie, I want to see you again. Davie, Davie, I wanted to say goodby.' And she slowly disappeared.

"I received a telegram next morning telling me of her death. She had died at the very minute she appeared to me in the vision.

"The thought of this remained in my mind. Two years later I was aroused into activity when Cecil Demille came to me in New York with what he thought was a good idea for a play. The idea was the one I had held in mind so long about my mother."

Miss Ethel Barrymore is appearing this winter in a revival of "Trelawny of the Wells," Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's comedietta of the heart. According to its reception in New York, its twelve years of age has not affected either the sadness or humor of the picture of Victorian life in the sixties, when crinoline and pegtop trousers flourished.

Miss Barrymore's reading of the title role is voted by the critics to be sweet and appealing, and she is credited with triumphing over unbecoming gowns by the genuineness of her feeling.

William Collier, who used to be Willie, has scored a popular success in "I'll Be Hanged if I Do," a farce written by himself and Edgar Selwyn. It is a Collier vehicle, as are most of this comedian's plays, but this one is not all William. There are also his sister, Helena Collier Garrick, and William Collier, Jr., and all have scored hits.

WILLIE COLLIER.

The comedian acts the part of a forgetful young man who fails to remember the time of his marriage and is confronted—fresh from the tub and pajamas clad—by his father, the bride's brother and mother and finally the bride herself. He is repentant, but wants time for breakfast. This breaks off the match.

So Percival's irate father sends him to Nevada with a $10,000 check with which to grow up with the sagebrush, and the first event he encounters is a charge of holding up a stagecoach. This causes him to purchase all the available rope and twine in the neighborhood to prevent a lynching, and then he conducts his own case before an antagonistic judge.

As in most of Collier's comedies, he scores best by having others seemingly score on him.

A Steeplejack's Story

He Became Convinced That His Wife Was a Remarkable Woman

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I am a steeplejack.

Now, I'll admit that a steeplejack is a very unique individual. We have "doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief," ad libitum, but how many steeplejacks? Probably not one in a million citizens.

And I am aware that while a steeplejack is very attractive to a crowd he is a constant source of worry to his own family, who don't know when his mangled body may be brought to his home on a stretcher or in a wagon. If his wife sees him at the work by which he earns their daily bread she must be one of a crowd watching him, one half dreading that he will fall and the other half fearing he won't fall. Taking him altogether, a steeplejack is not a desirable member of a family.

"I NEVER INTENDED TO CLIMB IT."

That was the reason why Mr. Davis, when I asked him for his daughter, Molly, turned, faced me squarely and said impressively:

"Yes, you may have Molly when she will marry you, each one of you swinging from an arm of the gilt cross on the top of St. Thomas' church."

"You mean by that, I suppose, Mr. Davis," I replied, "that I can't have Molly at all and because I am a steeplejack. Do you deny, sir, that a steeplejack has a heart the same as any man?"

"I'm not interested in steeplejack's hearts. I don't propose that my daughter shall marry a man out of whom she can never get more than a bare living except by insuring his life."

"H'm!" I replied to this thoughtfully. "Not a bad scheme. Now, suppose"—

"You get out of here. I have something else to attend to than listening to airy schemes for my daughter's betterment. Good morning, sir."

Being thus cruelly choked off, I left him crestfallen. I thought it very hard that he wouldn't even permit me to propose my plan, though I'll admit that the only way to make it a success was to die. I went to Molly and told her what had occurred between her father and me. I was very lugubrious about it and expected a lot of sympathy. What did she do but burst out laughing. This made me look more disconsolate than ever, whereupon she threw her arms about my neck, exclaiming:

"Stupid, get that woeful look off your face."

"That reminds me," I replied, "of when I was a kid. When my mother used her slipper on me she would say after she had finished, "Now be good and look pleasant."

Molly laughed again. "Seriously," she said, "did father say you could have me when I was willing to marry you swinging from the cross of St. Thomas'?"

"Yes, he did."

"Then that's the way we must be married. Grandma left me $20,000, but I'm not to have it without father's consent when I marry. Were there any witnesses present when he said this?"

"There was some one in the next room, but I don't know who?"

"I'll find out. I've got to become a steeplejack like you. That is to say, I've got to learn to climb steeples. I must get such control of myself that I can go up to the cross of St. Thomas' and hang there long enough to be married."

"Nonsense!" I exclaimed.

"No nonsense about it if I'm to marry you. I know father well enough to be sure that if he says a thing he'll stick to it. He has said, or implied, that he will only give his consent to our marriage under certain conditions, which he meant for a refusal. But in law, if the conditions are fulfilled, his consent has been given."

"How do you know that?"

"I don't, but I can ask a lawyer, can't I?"

"But, good gracious, you can't learn to climb steeples. One must be born with a head for that; they say a steeplejack has absolutely perfect eyes."

"Well, can't you hoist me up there at the end of a rope with a bag over my eyes?"

I thought for some time before answering this question. At last I said, "I don't know but I might."

"Come in tomorrow. Meanwhile I'll find out if we have a witness to father's conditional consent."

"But I've been dismissed."

"That does not matter. Father knows that I do as I please. He is aware that his only hold on me is that his consent to my marriage is necessary to my getting my legacy. And he's pretty sure I won't give up $20,000 for a steeplejack, and a very simple one at that."

Her last words cut me to the heart, but she put her arms around my neck and gave me a hug, which made me feel better. I left her feeling that she had a more level head on her shoulders than I, even if she couldn't climb steeples as I could. The next day I went to see her, and she said she had discovered who was in the other room when her father had been talking to me—a plasterer who had brought him an estimate for some work. She had found the man and asked him if he could repeat what was said. He gave the matrimonial condition word for word. Molly took it down in writing, and he signed it. Molly is a mighty practical girl and a very energetic one.

"There," she said, concluding her account of what she had done, "we've got father just where we want him."

"It seems to me," I replied dolefully, "that he's got us just where we don't want to be."

She laughed, and because I wouldn't laugh with her she boxed my ears and said "Look pleasant." This made me look worse than ever, but she kept boxing my ears till I had to smile to stop her. She's a great woman, Molly is—that is, in a certain kind of way.

A few days later I received a note from her saying that she had made an arrangement to visit a cousin in N., a neighboring town, where there were several churches, all with steeples. She told me to meet her there with climbing tackle and she would take her first lesson. I put my ropes and pulleys in a baggage car and went with them to N. I found Molly in gymnasium costume. She had taken prizes in gymnastics, and she said she would go right out to take a lesson. I sent my tackle to the church with the lowest steeple, climbed to the roof, fixed a beam from which I hung a pulley, then sang out to Molly to put the loop on the end of the rope under her arms and haul herself up. She did it without any trouble. Then I went to a window midway up to the steeple, fixed another beam, and this time pulled her up from below, and she got in at the window. I was surprised that she didn't wince. But, as I've said, there's a lot of "sand" in Molly.

Before we had finished the first lesson Molly was sitting on the base of the ball capping the steeple, a hundred feet from the ground. A number of people had collected below, watching her, and she kissed her hand to them. I saw from this that she had a steeplejack's head as well as I.

I remained in N. a week, and every day we did some climbing, the last day I was there going to the top of the most difficult steeple of all to climb. It was not very high, but there was a long pull with no rests from the base to the top of the spire. On the apex were a ball and a cross, and Molly hung from one side of the cross. As I looked at her hanging there it struck me more than ever that for that kind of girl Molly beat any one I had ever tackled.

This was valuable preparation, but the height was only 140 feet, while St. Thomas' was 250. But Molly said that if she could hang 140 feet above ground with her eyes open she could hang 250 with them shut. She seemed very happy over it all, and I wondered whether she was glad because she was going to get me and her $20,000, too, or on account of having demonstrated her ability to climb.

"Molly," I said, "it seems to me that you're mighty pleased at the prospect of getting a man who is nothing but a steeplejack."

"Well, I'll tell you why I'm so pleased."

"Why?"

"Ever since I was a little girl, father, in speaking to me of marriage, has dinged it into me that I was to marry high up in the social scale."

"Molly," I said, with difficulty controlling my trembling voice, "you've crushed me to earth."

I was pulling out my handkerchief to wipe away a tear when Molly kissed it away.

"Never mind, Jim," she said. "Doubtless there'll be lots of couples just like us, but there'll be none more loving."

That comforted me awfully.

We went back home. I told Molly that she must continue her climbing in order to keep her head at great heights. She said "All right," but didn't lay any plans for any more of it. One day she wrote me that she wished to see me at once. I went right round. I didn't see anything unusual in her appearance, which surprised me when she told me why she wished to see me. And what do you suppose it was? Her father had heard of her climbing and, very much astonished and angered, asked her what it meant, whereupon she told him her scheme. He fumed and fretted for a whole day, then gave in. But he insisted on my leaving the steeplejack trade and going into business with him.

"Well, now," I said, overjoyed, "isn't it fine that you won't have to climb St. Thomas'?"

"Nonsense. I never intended to climb it."

"You didn't?"

"No; I contrived that father should hear of what I was doing, and I knew it would bring him round without that."

We've been married five years now, and I am getting to think sometimes in some things that my wife is my superior, although I'm more used to "going up in the air" than she.

CLOTHING MADE OF WOOD.

Discovery of Substitute For Cotton May Have Big Effects.

Clothes made literally from wood are the latest sartorial venture. A beginning is being made with the making of waistcoats. The discovery of this new process is largely due to the fact that bleached cotton is known to be composed of very nearly pure cellulose.

Working on this basis, scientists have discovered a method of manufacturing a thread of cellulose extracted from spruce wood.

Cotton spinners are exceedingly optimistic about the discovery, it is asserted, and with material manufactured from this latest process expect to produce clothing at prices far below those now charged. The finest product will, it is said, be cheaper than cotton in the bale.

In addition to this cardinal advantage the new material can be dyed any color, and, a very important point, the dye will not fade. Lastly, the material is noninflammable.

—It is a bit of rhetorical flub dub to say that "labor is the foundation upon which the structure of popular government is built," as the governor probably knows. Popular government, assuming the hope that it will be permanent, must be built upon the character of its citizens, and not upon their occupations.—New Bedford Standard.

—Some persons are congratulating themselves because they have saved money on their coal bills so far this winter. For some time a period of mild weather has prevailed. But the winter is not wholly over, according to the almanac, nor according to the recollections of people who occasionally remark that some of the worst blizzards that they remember came in February and March.—Salem News.

AN OLD SHIP CARPENTER.

William K. Chubbuck, one of well known residents of Quincy Point passed away this morning at his home on Washington street after an illness of several weeks' duration, aged 79 years. Mr. Chubbuck was a ship carpenter by trade, and during the time that Thomas shipyard was in its prime he was its foreman. Later he went to Beverly where he engaged in the same business for a number of years. He has not been actively engaged in business for some years. He has at various times been employed by the city as inspector of public buildings under erection his last duty as such being at the time the addition was built to the High school. He leaves a widow.

CHILEAN BATTLESHIPS.

A further postponment of the opening of bids for two Chilean battleships of 26,000 tons is announced. It has now been decided to open the tenders in London and Washington on April 5. Originally the time set for the reception of bids was Sept. 15 of last year.

NOW EIGHTY YEARS OLD.

Nathaniel B. Peare, one of Weymouths best known citizens, passed the 80th milestone in his eventful life Wednesday, and that evening entertained a large number of his family and intimate friends. Mr. Peare was born in Green, Me., and came to East Weymouth at the age of 16 years. He was at one time employed as a nail cutter in the Weymouth iron works, and later in the shoe factories.

He enlisted Dec. 2, 1861, in Co. E of the 32d Mass, regiment and was honorably discharged in 1862 an account of a sunstroke. He has been connected with Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., since 1868, and is now its junior vice commander. He is a member of Crescent lodge of Odd Fellows, Mechanics Temple of Honor and Delphi council of Select Templars. He served the town for 18 consecutive years as night officer, and has been a special officer and constable for 35 years and is still a special officer, He gave up night duty in 1900.

He was at one time foreman of the old hand tub Rocket, and later foreman of the Gen. Bates, another famous hand tub.

His wife who was Miss Susan Chamberlin died in 1898. He has two sons and four grandchildren. Capt. Peare is well known in Quincy court circles, where he was a frequent attendant during hsi active career as an officer.

SCAVENGER BILL.

A hearing on the first of the bills of Mayor Shea before the Legislature will be held next Tuesday, Jan. 24, at 10.30 A. M., in room 240, before the Committee on Cities. The bill, which is known as House bill No. 445, is that in which the city seeks legislation to enable scavenger work performed by the city to become a loan upon the property.

The only objection to the bill would probably come from some person who desired to get their scavenger work done and get out of paying for it.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The balance of "Ben Hur" will be given at the Saturday morning meeting for younger boys. Illustrated songs will be sung at the meeting.

The basketball games with the two Makaria teams promise to be quite the most exciting of the season thus far. Seats have been provided for only 300 people, so those desiring accommodations would do well to apply as soon as possible.

The Sunday afternoon meeting for older boys will be addressed by Geo. S. Paine of Brockton, a man who is considered the best speaker for boys in the State. Mr. Paine was formerly boys work director in the Brockton Y. M. C. A., and is now associated with the Plymouth county court as probation officer. The meeting will be held at 3.30 in the association hall.

Ladies' night of the College club will be held on the evening of Jan. 30.

The Britishers Club will be addressed by J. J. Hurley of Boston on "Experiences of an immigration officer." All men of British birth are invited to be present.

The dual meet with Cambridge will be held on Wednesday Feb. 1 in Cambridge.

—The logic of an annual grant of $100,000 to "Tech" is that the school should become a State institution in the fullest sense. State authority and state control should follow the dollars of the tax payers. In no other way shall we be able in the future to maintain a consistent and sound policy in dealing with schools on private or partly private foundations that seek the financial aid of the Commonwealth—Springfield Republican.

THREE DAY'S CAMPAIGN

The Y. M. C. A. Need $5000 Before May 1

The Quincy Young Men's Christian Association is organizing another big finance campaign to be conducted Feb. 9-13. The slogan will be—$5,000 in three days—a current expense hustle."

The campaign will be organized much the same as in the memorable campaign for $25,000; when $27,000 was pledged. There will be a Citizens committee with Theophilus King again as chairman, and ten teams of business men.

The $5,000 is needed at this time for the following purposes:

To repay loan from Granite Bank borrowed in anticipation	$2,000
To re-emburse Campaign Fund (to cover estimated shrinkage)	1,000
To meet current obligations to April 30, 1911	2,000

It is proper that the public should know the disposition of the campaign fund of $27,000. It was as follows:

Mortgage, notes and insurance ance on same	$13,200
Swimming pool and running track	3,600
Campaign expenses	500
Current expenses 20 months May 1, 1909 to Feb. 1, 1911	7,200
Pledges still unpaid	2,500
The extraordinary expenses in 1910-1911 budget were:
Fire insurance covering three years	$350
Permanent improvements	360
Extraordinary repairs-painting building	130
Permanent furniture	160
	$1,000

The association has 452 members in both departments. A daily average attendance of over 200. It is doing a work weekly with 175 additional boys and 100 additional men outside of the membership.

There are 135 men in evening school work. Seven dormitory men are teaching English twice weekly-volunteer service work.

"OLD ED" HOWE RETIRES.

Epigrammatic Kansas Editor Seeks Farm For Rest.

Kansas has jarred the American newspaper world and a large portion of its readers by announcing the retirement of "Old Ed" Howe as editor of the Atchison Globe. For thirty-three years this brilliant editor has flashed epigrams of clever philosophy at his townsmen, the majority of which were so good that they have been copied in every section of the United States. Now at the age of fifty-six Howe has decided to turn his paper over to a son and retire to his country home, Potato Hill, near Atchison, and issue a small periodical called Smith's Quarterly just to amuse himself.

He intends doing all the work, too—writing, typesetting, makeup and press-work—for he knows the entire game except linotyping. He began his newspaper career at twelve in his father's printing office, where he was required to set two galleys of long primer daily. Now, though fifty-six, he is still keen for everything but the worries of a newspaper office. He began the publication of the Globe at the age of twenty-three and speedily made it perhaps the best known small town paper in the country. His "Globe Sights" were copied everywhere. The following are typical paragraphs:

Another girl who took piano lessons, expecting to go into society, has turned out a stenog.

When a young man and a young woman have been engaged a long time they talk as rough to each other as married people.

If women are so amiable and sweet why is it that other women do not care for them as roomers and boarders?

In talking of his retirement and his little publication Howe remarked:

"I am too old a man to become an iconoclast and too big a coward to give people occasion to shoot at me."

MAKARIA BOWLING LEAGUE

Tigers the Only Team to Make Three Points

In the Makaria Bowling League, two matches were rolled off in the Granite street alleys Thursday evening. The Tigers won three out of four points in their contest with the Athletics. The best bowling was done in the first string in which the Tigers were 11 pins to the good. The Athletics tied a knot in the Tigers tail in the second string, but the latter came back in the third, and won out on totals. Morris was high man on single string with 17 pins, and "Cap." Jones of the Tigers carried off the honors for three strings with a total of 255.

The summary:

PIRATES—GIANTS.

The Pirates and the Giants were very evenly matched in their game, and split the points, each receiving two. The Giants outbowled their opponets in the first string but the second resulted in a tie each team with a pinfall of 326. The tie was rolled off in the third string which was won by the Pirates, 328 to 326. The Giants won on totals by 20 pins, and the points were distributed evenly. Matty Nicoll, alias Captain Kidd of the Pirates, was high man on single string, and on three strings, with scores of 97 and 264.

LEAGUE STANDING

The standing in the Makaria league remains unchanged with the exception of a tie for second place made by the Pirates creeping up on the Cubs. The first and last places are not causing much excitement, but the race for second place is a "corker," and any one of the four teams may be expected to grab the coveted position next week.

The standing:	Won.	Lost.	Percent
Red Sox, T. King	21	7	.750
Cubs, Morris	15	13	.535
Giants, Dell	15	13	.535
Pirates, Nicoll	14	14	.500
Tigers, Jones	13	15	.464
Athletics, Troupe	6	22	.214

SPORTING NOTES.

Quincy High and Milton High will meet in a basketball game this afternoon at the local High school. A spirited contest may be expected. The rivalry between the schools has always been keen and this year's teams will endeavor to preserve the reputations of their respective schools.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball games Saturday evening will be worth going miles to see. Makaria will endeavor to take down the pride of their rivals, and the Y. M. C. A. will try to wipe away the taste of the Newton defeat by victory over the Bethany church organization.

The Granite and Makaria bowling leagues are rolling on without kicking up very much dust. T. King's Red Sox in the Makaria league have a good lead over all the other teams, and Harvard Captain Wentworth is on top in the Granite league.

The Quincy team in the Columbus club league is up against some pretty stiff propositions, and so far has been the under dog. However there still is time to look up and to pick up.

All Right, Perhaps.

Patient Father—Dearie, baby's eating my glove now. Is it all right? Dearie (from above)—Oh, quite all right—(pause)—you're sure it's yours? —Punch.

Books and Authors

NEWSPAPER man becoming an author is not an unusual condition in the world of literature, as many of the best writers in history have served their apprenticeship with the daily press. But it is an unusual thing for a newspaper man to become a practical socialistic student. That is what Herbert Kauffman did, and he intends that his literary merit shall be judged by his powers in picturing conditions among the poorer classes undreamed of by settlement workers even.

Mr. Kauffman graduated from the newspaper field into that of the magazines and within a year became the editor of one of the leading monthlies. But that did not serve his purpose, which was to write a series of novels which should penetrate the crust of American life. So he and his wife did a daring thing. He resigned from the magazine and went into the heart of New York's crowded east side tenement district to live. They shunned the police and the settlement and mission workers, and he wrote only enough to keep the wolf from the door. They lived the life as they found it and soon became a part of it, in fact.

HERBERT KAUFFMAN.

At that time Mr. Kauffman knew nothing of the extent to which the "white slavery" traffic was carried on among the poor. The conditions appalled him, and he put the conditions before the public in "The House of Bondage."

With that duty off his mind Mr. Kauffman has recalled his original purpose and has settled in his home town of Columbia, in Lancaster, Pa., to work out his fiction series plans.

The real apostle of the wanderlust among writers is Edgar Beecher Bronson, who has just been elected to life membership in the Geographical Society of Ecuador, a mark of distinction that has been accorded very few foreigners. His election was celebrated with a banquet that was attended by the most distinguished men at Quito, the capital.

The career of Mr. Bronson, who has recently come into prominence as an author of true stories of travel and adventure, has been literally crammed with excitement. He began life more than thirty years ago as a reporter on the New York Tribune. He had charge of the staff of reporters who covered every word of the Beecher trial in Brooklyn, and in getting this report to his office one night he scored a great "beat" and gave an early exhibition of his nerve. The East river was so full of floating ice that the ferryboats could not run, so he crossed the stream by jumping from one ice floe to another and swimming a part of the way.

This experience shattered his health, and he went west to recuperate. In Wyoming he established his famous Dead Man ranch and had many fights to maintain it. He has told of these days in his "Reminiscences of a Ranchman," just republished with some new chapters.

A few years ago he gave up the west and returned to New York, but civilization could not hold him. In the spring of 1908 he preceded Roosevelt on a big game hunting trip through the closed territory of British

EDGAR BEECHER BRONSON.

East Africa, for which he secured a special permit. He went into many places there and in Abyssinia where no white man had ever been seen. His contempt for danger caused the warlike Wanderobos to christen him Bwana Vimerije, which means "the white haired warrior who always laughs." He returned with the largest and finest collection of trophies ever brought to this country from Africa. His adventures and experiences are recited in "In Closed Territory."

Leo P. Noonan did not believe in drawing the line too closely in regard to local players, although he favored giving the preference to local players. The whole thing rests with the public as to how much support they will give a team.

Arthur E. Baxter, who said he had been a fan since 1865, spoke interestingly of some of the old time teams, and of the first professional players.

There were also brief remarks by Dick Prout, Walter Lonergan and Billy Duggan.

These remarks were interspersed with vocal selections by Casey Bros. and others. There was also an exhibition sparring bout between two well known Quincy athletics, which was followed by a social hour during which base ball talk predominated.

PROUD ADDITION TO QUINCY CHURCHES

Several Memorial Windows to Well Known Atlantic People Held in High Esteem

Notable Day and Week for Atlantic Congregationalists

Atlantic's new church will be dedicated tomorrow at 2 P. M. with special services also at 10.30 A. M. and 7 P. M. Quincy and other clergymen will assist as already announced in the Daily Ledger.

The new church home of the Memorial Congregational church of Atlantic is an imposing structure of the Gothic style of architecture and is built of Quincy granite. It is located on the corner of Newbury avenue and Sagamore street with the main entrance at the junction of the two streets. The main building is 92 by 48 feet. At the right of the main entrance is a chapel 22 by 30 feet, the floor of which is raised two steps above the main auditorium into which the chapel room can be thrown by sliding doors which separate the two rooms. Over the chapel is a gallery which is reached by stairways on either side and which overlooks the main auditorium.

The main church room is 50 by 46 feet, and the seating capacity of the gallery and auditorium is estimated at 350. The pulpit is located in the rear, and back of this is the choir loft and organ, these two being located in an apse which projects from the main body of the church.

On the right is the pastor's entrance and lobby, which has a stairway leading to the basement where the Sunday School room is located. The roof of the edifice is framed with oaken trusses and the rafters which are of hard pine show in the interior. The space between the trusses and rafters being sheathed. The walls of the church are plastered to the line of the eaves, and the woodwork above is stained in colors that harmonize with the painted plaster work. The interior finish of the building is cypress and the pews are of oak, dark finish. The floor is of maple. The windows of the church are stained glass and are memorial windows of which mention will be made later.

While the entrance to the main building is approached from a level with Newbury avenue the grade of Sagamore street permits a full story out of ground with an entrance for the Sunday School from Sagamore street.

In this basement or lower story is located the Sunday School room 40 by 26 feet, with a primary room 21 by 28 feet and a ladies' parlor all of which can be thrown into one large room for social purposes. There is also in the basement, kitchen, pantry and cold storage room as well as the heating and ventilating apparatus, also toilet and cloak rooms.

The ventilating system has been carefuly planned and direct and indirect radiation admit warmed fresh air. The building is to be heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

The cost of the building is rising $22,000. The contractor was George E. Thomas and the architect Kendall, Taylor & Co. The building committee under whose direction the edifice has been erected were William F. Cummings, Charles A. Hall, Charles A. Hadlock, C. T. Letteney and William F. Buckley.

MANY MEMORIALS.

The members of the Memorial Congregational church feel deeply gratified with the finished product of their labors. The Memorial Church has actually become a memorial in the true sense of the word, and the Sunday morning service will take the form of a dedication of the beautiful windows given in loving memory of the dead.

As one enters the church the first window to the left is a gift-window presented by the Ladies Benevolent Society. The second window is one of beautiful floral design given by Charles Hall in memory of his father Charles Hall; his mother, Caroline J. Hall, and Mary R. Lee. The third window one of exquisite design, is dedicated to the Rev. Joseph L. Roberts, given by his daughter, Mrs. Adams.

The first window on the right is one of conventional pattern, presented by Miss Lulu Kolb, in memory of her father Jacob Kolb. Next to this is a beautifully designed window dedicated to Roger Henry Wilde, presented by friends, and adjacent to this is one in memory of his son, Adin Packard Wilde, the gift of his mother.

Above the choir loft a circular window reproducing Raphael's "famous cherubs" has been placed by Mrs. Edgar Willey, dedicated to Horace and Marion Carver. An imposing window occupies the space directly behind the balcony, this is a gift-window presented by Mrs. Nellie F. Adams.

The smaller lights in the rear of the chapel have been given by Mrs. J. H. Anderson, the Sunday School, the Christian Endeavor and the Girls Club.

GIFTS TO NEW CHURCH.

In addition to the memorial windows the church has been fortunate in receiving a number of gifts in the way of interior decorations. Among these gifts are the following:

Mrs. Charles Letteney, hymn board.

Communion cup receptacles, by Sunday School.

Carpet for aisles and pulpit, by Ladies' Benevolent Society.

Mirror for ladies' parlor by Mrs. Edward A. Burkhardt.

Wire door mats by Deacon Thomas H. Johnstone of Clinton, father of Mrs. Davison.

Fifty opera chairs by Mrs. Butler's Sunday school class, and fifty by W. F. Cumming's class.

The auditorium of the church is most artistic with its pews and wainscoting of weathered oak, richly contrasting with the creamy tints of the walls. The electrical fixtures of wrought iron harmonizing with the decorative scheme.

NO COLLAPSE IN PRICES.

"I have no idea that there will be a great drop in the local market although there has been a slight decrease in the price of dairy products," said R. E. Foy when questioned about the effect locally of the erported fall of prices in Chicago, due to the unloading of cold storage products on the market. Continuing he said: "The dull business which usually preceeds the last of January results in a light demand, which has a tendency to stall goods. To overcome this difficulty prices are lowered to move the goods. The drop in Chicago, if true as reported, would have its effect locally within a day or two, but I do not look for anything like the so-called 'collapse' in prices. At any rate the use of cold storage products in the local markets is not general enough to produce any tremendous effect here as most of the stores carry fresh goods. For myself, I am pleased to state that we do not handle any cold storage goods."

Miss Richards (of Chicago)—"And so you kissed the Blarney stone at the Columbia exposition. Ha! ha! It was nothing but a Chicago paving stone."

Mr. Smartchap—"So I heard at the time, but I thought perhaps you might have walked on it."

Then she married him.

MILK WAGON IN RUNAWAY

Man and Boy and Also the Horse Injured

An accident occurred at corner of Whitwell and Cranite streets at noon today. One of the milk teams owned by F. W. Piercy of Braintree was being driven around the corner at top speed when the breeching strap came off the hook, and one of the shafts. The horse broke away from the wagon with the shafts and one wheel, and was stopped at the corner of Garfield street, almost wrecking another wagon which it met at that point. The other wheel was detached from the wagon and spun around like a top for several minutes.

The milk wagon was hurled over on one side and the driver and the little oy who accompanied him were thrown to the ground.

The driver had his hand cut, and his leg was badly bruised. The boy, Russell Macdonald, was knocked unconscious by the fall, and was pretty badly cut on the left hand and leg. His condition is not serious. He was taken to the house opposite Whitwell street where consciousness was restored and the wounds were dressed.

The driver was on his way home after the morning round, and thus not much milk was lost. Several dozen bottles were smashed, but not more than two gallons of milk were spilled. One gallon can and a half pint jar escaped unscathed.

The horse was found at the corner of Garfield and Granite streets by the

DATES SELECTED FOR QUINCY AVIATION

Harvard Annual Meet Will Be Held on Squantum Field in August

Claude Graham White and Wright Team Expected

Quincy, which led the way in 1910 is to have another grand aviation meet. It was reported some months ago that it would be held about the Seventeenth of June, but now the Harvard Aeronautical Society has selected August 26 to September 4 inclusive as the dates.

The date selected is two weeks earlier than that of last year, the idea being that more favorable conditions may be insured.

Negotiations are being carried on with all the noted aviators. Claude Grahame-White, the Englishman who was so successful at last year's meet, has promised to come.

Terms are being adjusted for the attendance of a Wright team. Glenn H. Curtiss, Eugene B. Ely, Charles F. Willard and Clifford B. Harmon, as well as a number of others.

Several French airmen are erpected and the committee expects applications from aviators yet to come into public notice, but who, to judge by the events of the year just closed, will undoubtedly attract attention.

This year definite contests will be held on certain days. It is said that there will be more competition in this year's meet and less of the merely spectacular, although the meet will not be without this element.

In order to accommodate spectators Adams D. Claflin manager, and his aids are considering the building of a temporary bridge across the Neponset river. The pontoon type is under consideration.

Extensive additions in the automobile accommodations are contemplated. The roadway leading from the enentrance to the field will be resurfaced and the field and course put in better shape during the summer. In place of the main grandstand of last

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It has been hinted by the Harvard Aeronautical Society that a new bridge be built over the Neponset river between Quincy and Boston to better accommodate the enormous crowd which will attend the 1911 aviation meet in August. Such a bridge is not desirable, and it is very doubtful if the necessary legislation could be secured; but somehow the Old Colony street railway should build a double track line from Hancock street on the Atlantic station to the field. If the right of way for a temporary structure could be secured on the Quincy bay side of the Squantum causeway, the company could operate its cars without hindrance from the crowd of people and the hackney carriages near the entrance. If it is impossible to secure the right to double track the present street railway route between the Metropolitan boulevard and the depot, a second route should be secured even if circuitous for the empty cars. It might follow Squantum street to Barry's corner, there connecting with double track system on Hancock street. Then there would be no limit to the number of cars that could be used, and they would not be confined to any schedule. During the summer season Quincy people and Squantum people would appreciate a through line of cars between City Square and Squantum via. of Barry's corner and Squantum street.

In these days it is necessary to unite if any thing great is to be accomplished. Up in Brockton they have the right idea for the churches are to unite, sixteen churches will federate. The city will be divided into districts with a church in charge of each district. It would be a good thing for Quincy if this idea of unity or federation could be carried out, not only in churches but in civic and social matters. We have a Board of Trade, a Merchants' Association and a defunct Citizens' Association which should combine in one live organization if the city is to benefit by their existence; charity organizations should federate if any real good is to be accomplished; civic leagues, improvement societies and civic betterment committees can do better work by getting together and uniting on civic improvements. What Quincy needs more than anything else is to get together there is lack of unity throughout the city. There should be more fellowship, more neighborliness and more loyality and pride in our City. Individuals can accomplish little but all work together and results will follow. Try it in 1911. Do your part.

"When one speaks of granite, the mind naturally reverts to Vermont," says the Chicago Tribune. For goodness' sake, why? We are going to invite that Chicago man to Concord the day the Historical society building is dedicated and send him home by way of Washington, with the request that he look at the Congressional library. Then, if his mind does not naturally revert to Concord, New Hampshire, when one speaks of granite, we will be even more surprised than we are now over his Vermont idea.—Concord Monitor.

Pooh! Pooh! Did you see a real granite quarry? Come over to Barre and see why the Chicago Tribune got that impression. Your Concord, your Milford, your Fitzwilliam et al. quarries would look like a pale ray of sunlight as compared with the full burst of the orb's splendor.—Barre Times.

Steady there now you people up there in New Hampshire and Vermont. What's the matter with Massachusetts and Quincy granite? Did you ever hear of the Bunker Hill monument—and a few others, to say nothing of buildings all over the country?

The passing of a bishop is always looked upon with sadness by the people of his diocese. They have learned to love him well, to realize what a big place he has in their hearts, when lo he passes on and another takes his place. Most bishops receive their title by election of the church, because they are men of power, of large sympathies and possessing a high ideal of service. But what of the bishop who is raised to his position by all peoples of all creeds, regardless of denominational sympathies and belief? With the passing of such a bishop how great would be the sadness in the hearts of all? The friend of humanity, the servant of all who knew him, "the bishop of Norfolk county," Dr. Edwin Noah Hardy, will soon pass on.

We little know, and can still less appreciate, the place he has filled among us. Everybody knows Dr. Hardy as a leader in all things which make for civic righteousness and are for moral and spiritual uplift in the city. He will be missed not only as the pastor of one of the largest churches in the county, but also as a man among men, and one who has lived the gospel that he preached.

Dr. Hardy is always the first to express his appreciation of a thing well done, and as his sixteenth year of ministry is drawing to a close, we can ill afford to do less than tell him that his work has been well done, and that he will leave behind him a host of friends who will miss his kindly greeting and the whole souled sympathy he extended to all in time of trouble.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The date of the College club ladies' night has been shifted back to Friday. Jan. 27.

George S. Paine of Brockton, the most fascinating speaker to boys, in the state, will address the older boys' meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 3.30.

The second half of the stereopticon story of Ben Hur was given this morning in the assembly hall. Before the pictures were presented, illustrated songs were sung by all the boys. "Throw out the life line," "Where is my wandering boy tonight," and others were beautifully illustrated by appropriate pictures. A chorus of some 200 juvenile voices singing the familiar songs was an inspiration in itself.

The basketball games this evening promise to be among the most interesting of the season. Makaria has much of the same material that has been playing Y. M. C. A. basketball, and the rivalry between the teams, though friendly, is of the keenest kind.

STEAMSHIPS TO TEXAS.

Charles Francis Adams, 2d., a former Mayor of this city, is at the head of a committee of Boston capitalists who are organizing a company to operate a direct line of steamers between Boston and Galveston, Texas. Associated with him are Frederick Ayer, Elmer J. Bliss, John C. Cobb, A. G. Duncan, E. F. Forbes, Ralph E. Forbes, C. H. W. Foster, John S. Lawrence, Arthur T. Lyman and H. O. Underwood.

Quincy granite manufacturers with a southern and western trade, would appreciate this steamship line.

"Galveston," says Mr. Cobb, "which is about 2200 miles from Boston by water is, on the basis of actual cost of transportation in competition with railroads, within 400 miles of Boston, and a case of shoes can be carried from New England to Texas at materially less cost than from St. Louis to Texas, while we are now paying a much higher rate of freight than St. Louis, or even Chicago, and today cotton is being shipped from the gulf ports to the mills in Manchester, England, at a much lower freight rate than our mills at Lowell or New Bedford can secure.

"In our competition for business with New York we are at an equally serious and unnecessary disadvantage. But today the cheapest way to ship goods from Boston to Galveston is to ship them to New York at full local rates and transfer charges and send them by a New York steamer.

"A direct line of steamers to Texas, owned and controlled by New England capital, should not only place us in position to compete in the markets of Texas and its immediate vicinity, but also with proper attention to through rating, with California and all the territory between."

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas F. Grignon was arraigned for uttering at Quincy, and was held in $500 until next Wednesday.

Francis G. Caverly was fined $10 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

GOODS RECOVERED.

Inspector McKay recovered two gold watches, a gold chain and three gold rings Friday in a Boston pawnshop. These articles were some that were taken from the house of John Adams, 247 Fayette street, Jan. 11. The house was entered during the day while the family were absent.

IMMIGRATION PROBLEMS

Discussed by Commissioner Hurley at British Club

Jeremiah J. Hurley, deputy commissioner of immigration of the port of Boston, was the guest of the British association of the Y. M. C. A. at its meeting Friday evening. Mr. Hurley spoke on the subject "Some experiences of an immigration commissioner."

The speaker requested that no mention be made of the definite instances he gave so the account must of necessity be in general. He told of the principles of immigration, and gave a very interesting account of the sentiments of Presidents Washington Jefferson and Madison with reference to the subject. In view of the rapidity with which the flow toward these shores has increased, he expressed the great need and desirability of a good class of foreigners coming, and the need and positive necessity of keeping out the undesirables, criminals, illiterates and those physically and mentally deficient.

He gave a rather startling expose of the methods of steamship companies in inducing people to come to this country, just for the sake of getting their passage money. Agents are located in all sections of central and eastern Europe for the purpose of encouraging immigration to this country. There is regard neither for law nor humanity in the unscrupulous methods of these men. Many instances were given in which the eager desire to sell passage brought untold sorrow and suffering to individuals. One little Armenian girl was detained 21 months on account of a legal battle before she was allowed to enter this country.

The whole subject is one of vast importance to every American and it is a subject with which we are coming in closer contact every day. Quincy is getting her share of immigrants, and many of them although they may not be classed as undesirables, have no right in the country. The number of immigrants that enter the country by the port of Boston is comparatively small compared to the hordes that pour in through Hell Gate in New York. Consequently the number of undesirables which slip by the officials in Boston is reduced to a minimum.

This morning the writer had an opportunity to witness the result of subagent coaching. A man came into the Y. M. C. A building and approached the desk. The extent of his vocabulary was limited to three words words, "Polack," "yes" and "two o'clock." These were the sesame which gained him admission to the country.

After Mr. Hurley's address, there was a short musical entertainment and then the company of fifty disbanded. The majority of the men connected with the club are English and Scotch. There are a few Welsh and one or two from the north of Ireland. The presence of several of the carol singers was greatly appreciated when the musical program was given.

N. E. O. P. INSTALLATION.

The installation of the officers of Quincy lodge, 261, New England Order of Protection, was held in Protection hall Friday evening. Deputy, Grand Warden Jacob Dexheimer Jr., and suite of Safety lodge No. 96 of Weymouth installed the officers as follows:

The old fire vets known as the Washington M. French Hose Company, which was organized in Quincy, May 6, 1869, will assemble in Union hall tonight at their mid-winter chowder party and smoke talk. The festivities will commence at 8 o'clock, and there will be something interesting doing until the curfew sounds.

MILTON

A public hearing on the Town Landing will be given in the Town Hall, Monday evening, Jan. 23 at 8 o'clock. A committee of five has been appointed to look into the matter of improving the property at Milton Lower Mills, between Adams street and the Neponset river, and also to improve the condition of the town landing. The sum of $150 has been given to the committee for the latter purpose. The following were chosen on the committee: H. Clifford Gallagher, Horace B. Horne, Timothy N. Melley, James S. Russell and Norton Wigglesworth.

Charles L. Curtis, master of the Milton High school has moved to East Milton from Mattapan. His residence is on Eaton street.

Louis, the hot-dog vender, is missed at the hockey games this winter.

Mrs. George Everson, nee Jenness of Natick, is visiting Mrs. Poulton of Granite place.

Representative Roger Wolcott is mentioned as a candidate for speaker of the Massachusetts House of 1912.

A dramatic entertainment consisting of a one-act play, "How the Vote Was Won," and a comedietta, "Lady Geraldine's Speech," was given in the Town hall Thursday evening for the benefit of Little house at 73 A street, South Boston. One of the features of the house is a stamp savings bank to encourage thrift. The girls are taught cooking, sewing and all sorts of housework and for the boys classes in carpentry and chair seating have been organized.

Milton Education Society's concerts in past years have been of so much educational and recreational value that it has been decided to take steps to insure their permanent continance. The society has therefore been incorporated and is now legally qualified to hold property. An endowment fund is to be raised, the income of which will be large enough to cover the yearly deficit on the concerts. The society will give an extra concert in aid of this fund in the town hall, Jan. 24. The artist will be Alexander Heinemann.

MILTON CONCERTS.

The concerts that have been given in Milton for the last six years under the auspices of the Milton Education society are to be assured in the future by an endowment fund. To start the accumulation of this fund a special song recital is to be given in the Milton Town hall on Jan. 24 by Alexander Heinemann the celebrated European lyric singer who is now in America for his first tour.

A CURE FOR CANCER

Vaccine Is Successfully Used Upon a Buffalo Youth

Buffalo, Jan. 21.—Coincident with the introduction into the legislature of a bill for a $65,000 appropriation for the New York state cancer laboratory here the announcement is made here by Dr. H. R. Gaylord of the laboratory that he has discovered a cure for cancer and has successfully demonstrated it in the case of a boy 17 years of age.

An operation had been recommended to remove the cancer, which was on his neck. The boy's parents refused to allow this, and so the treatment at the cancer laboratory followed. The vaccine gradually removed the cancer, and now all trace of it has disappeared.

AN EVENING WITH DICKENS

Dr. Burton Describes His Works and Tells of Reforms

At the Quincy Mansion school on Friday evening Dr. Richard Burton delivered a lecture upon the subject of "Charles Dickens." Livermore hall was well filled with friends of the school from Quincy and Wollaston, in addition to the pupils and teachers.

Mrs. Willard presented Dr. Burton by saying that she would give him no introduction, but simply say that that they had great expectations. Ere the evening was out those present felt that their expectations had been amply gratified.

When Charles Dickens died, said the speaker he occupied a place in the world that has been held by no man since. He was not only a genius and a master of humor, but he felt an obligation of spiritual relationship to his readers.

Dr. Burton outlined the author's development, his small chance for schooling, his rise from bottle filler to lawyer's helper, his quick absorption of legal knowledge that is much in evidence in Bleakhouse and his rapid ascent to the position of one of the best parliamentary reporters in England.

The works of Dickens were then described.

Dr. Burton emhasized the reforms Dickens had accomplished through his writings. The speaker, during his lecture read excepts from Dickens works, among them, the visit of "David Copperfield" to Dame Trotwood, the incident between Dick Swivler and the marchioness in the "Old curiosity shop" and the wreck scene from "David Copperfield" in a manner that made his audience feel that they had become acquainted with their Dickens to a degree never experienced before.

Closing with reading of the Cratchit's Christmas dinner, Dr. Burton said: No statue has ever been been made of Dickens by any really great sculptor. If such were made, I should like to have a hand in its pose. I can see just one position—that with his hand out in benediction to the human race. Although in marble I can see those lips trembling still with the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us, every one."

MAKING ADVERTISING NEWSY.

The principal reason for disappointments over the results of advertising is the failure says the Beverly Times to make it like the rest of the newspaper. People read the news columns to get the news. They turn to the advertising for precisely the same reason. If the same article was stuck in our news columns day after day, it would attract few readers. Just as the dispatches of a newspaper reflect what is going on in the world, so the advertising should reflect what is going on in the stores. Things are happening every day in our stores that will keenly interest the people. There are new lines of goods, bargains on shop worn or unseasonable stock. The public is anxious to know about these things, drawn by that keenest of all motives, the desire to save money. Tell them about the news of your store, Mr. Merchant, just as definitely as the reporter tells his story. Then the public will read your news a great deal more eagerly than it reads anything else in any newspaper.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

The Philergians held Gentlemen's night last Tuesday evening. The hall was well filled and a most enjoyable evening was passed. Mrs. Rogers, the president, extended a welcome to the gentlemen present and told of the aims and accomplishments of the clubs of the present day. Miss Mary Agnes Best told true stories of the east side in New York. She is a resident in a settlement and beside intimate experience has the power of story telling. Her simple manner of recounting the incidents of Jewish and Irish slum life, caused great amusement and gave a true view of that hard life. Mr. Ellsworth's playing the violin, and Will Brooks on the 'cello, accompanied by Mrs. William C. Brooks of Worcester furnished musical numbers during the entertainment. Refreshments of ices and cake followed and Mrs. G. W. Tinkham, Mrs. G. E. Williams, Mrs. John G. Worster and Mrs. Willard E. Dow poured coffee.

The second reading of "Twelfth Night," has been postponed until the evening of Jan. 30, meeting at Mrs. Albert Avery's, the mid-winter meeting of the State Federation is held Feb. 3, at Park Street church, Feb. 7, is the date for the next regular meeting of the club. Mr. Ralph L. Wiggin will speak on the "Social Order and the Public Schools."

It is the intention of the club to hold a fair on February 16, 17 and 18 at the opera house. Good entertainments are already underw ay and the various committees in charge report good progress. The executive committee having the fair in charge is Miss Grace Mitchell, chairman; James French, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Florence Corthell, Mrs. Bessie K. Hunt, George M. Hoyt, Charles Merchant, Minot Mathewson, Gideon Murray and Walter Ryerson.

Mrs. J. D. Gardner observed her eightieth birthday on Wednesday at her home 1067 Mill street.

Mrs. Margaret Bicknell is spending the winter in Whitman.

A feature of the occasion will be the presentation to Wompatuck Encampment by Manet Encampment of Quincy of the "Travelling Pillars," which have been journeying about from place to place for many months.

GRIGNON HELD FOR UTTERING

Said to Have Worked Off Worthless Checks at Wollaston

Thomas F. Grignon, aged 27 years, who gives his residence as 245 Newport avenue, was arraigned in court this morning on a complaint charging him with uttering. It is alleged that Dec. 24, Grignon visited the store of Grace Burns in the Wollaston hotel building and purchased a $1.50 box of confectionery. In payment of this he presented a check for $10. Mrs. Burns took the check and gave him the balance in money. The check went through the bank and came back marked "cancelled."

The check was drawn on the Henry Siegel Company, bankers. The number of the check was 391 and was made payable to James Craig, and signed by G. H. McDonald. On the back the check was endorsed by James Craig also Grace Burns.

It is also alleged that Grignon about the same time succeeded in working off three other worthless checks on Quincy and Wollaston people, but these charges have not as yet been brought against him. Grignon skipped immediately after obtaining the money and nothing was heard from him until last Monday, when he was located in a lodging house at 6 Stamford street, Boston. Inspector Goodhue accompanied by a Boston officer went there for him but arrived just after he had left. No further trace was heard of him until Friday, when Grignon visited the office of the chaplain of the Massachusetts reformatory where he was arrested.

Grignon has rather a bad record. In 1908 he received a sentence to the Massachusetts reformatory for uttering a forged check at Salem. He came out of the reformatory last June, only to be arrested by Inspector Goodhue for larceny from Abbott & Millers express, for whom he at one time was employed. For this he received a sentence of six months in Dedham jail. He was released last November and immediately began operations working off bad checks.

Grignon's acknowleged chum is McDonald, whose name was signed to the check passed on Mrs. Burns, and this same McDonald was arrested at Bristol, R. I., Jan. 19, for breaking and entering. To the Bristol police he is said to have admitted breaking and entering in a number of New England towns and it is now believed by the police that McDonald could tell something about the recent burglaries at Wollaston if he saw fit. While there is no evidence to connect Grignon with these breaks, the mere fact that he and McDonald were chums is significant. Gregnon was held in $500 bail until next Wednesday.

WILL BE MISSED.

The many friends of Gustavus R. White, who for twelve years has been a familiar figure to the patrons of Johnson Bros.. store, will miss his every smiling countenance after tonight, for with the closing hour tonight Mr. White brings to an end his connection with that firm.

During his long years of service he has been one of Johnson Bros. most faithful employees, and often when matters of business arose it was like second nature to call for Gus, as he would know just what to do. Possessed of an unusually sunny and obliging disposition, he had the happy faculty of not only making many friends, but of always retaining their friendship, and the many patrons of this busy business center, as well as his friends, extend to him their best wishes for success in the new field of labor he is about to enter.

Mr. White leaves Johnson Bros. to enter the employ of the Fox River Produce Co. of Aurora, Ill., whom he will represent in southern Massachusetts.

LIFE.

When all is done, human life is, at the greatest and the best, but like a froward child that must be played with and humored a little to keep it quiet till it falls asleep, and then the care is over.—Sir William Temple.

Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of.—Benjamin Franklin.

THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

House Committtee Votes In Favor of New Orleans as the Site

Washington, Jan. 21.—New Orleans won the first round of its fight with San Francisco for the location of the Panama exposition, when the exposition committee of the house, by a vote of 9 to 6, decided in favor of it as the site for the fair to celebrate the opening of the Panama canal in 1915.

No appropriation for the pecuniary aid of the New Orleans fair is authorized. It is understood, however, that the committee will favor an extensive government exhibit, to cost approximately $1,000,000.

The bill was referred to a sub-committee for perfection. This committee will report Tuesday and the bill then will be favorably reported to the house, where the New Orleans-San Francisco fight will be renewed.

TWO MURDER MYSTERIES

One Man's Head and Legs Severed and Another Killed and Robbed

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 21.—The authorities of Belmont county, O., across the Ohio river, are wondering what they will do with the two murder mysteries forced upon them yesterday.

Late in the day the body of a man with head and legs severed was fished from the Ohio river. Attached to it was a sack. It is believed he was murdered and decapitated and the body placed in the bag from which it had been torn by the recent flood.

The other man was dead when he was run over by a street car in Bridgeport, O., a short distance away. His pockets were turned inside out and he had evidently been killed and robbed.

HIGH OFFICIALS MAY BECOME INVOLVED

New Developments In Ohio Vote Selling Investigation

Danville, Ills., Jan. 21.—The vote-selling inquiry by the grand jury promises to develop into a real sensation before it is concluded. It develops now that Isaac Woodyard, foreman of the grand jury, has consulted several attorneys with reference to indicting buyers and sellers of votes for criminal conspiracy.

According to the opinions of lawyers consulted by Woodyard, he can go back three years under the criminal conspiracy act. The law states that when a candidate is elected by fraud there has been criminal conspiracy, and the grand jury will endeavor to bring indictments under the law, it is said.

If the grand jury goes back three years it will be compelled to investigate the election of Mayor Platt, Judge Kimborough, who charged the grand jury in the vote-selling inquiry, State Attorney Lewman, who is conducting the investigation, and numerous other officials who have been elected during the past three years.

WAR IS IMMINENT

Hayti Will Oppose Dominican Forces In Disputed Territory

Port au Prince, Hayti, Jan. 21.—War with Santo Domingo appears inevitable. Dominican troops have occupied Grand Gosier, on the Haytiat frontier, and are marching on Seitrou, Hayti.

The government has decided to oppose this invasion of its territory and is hurrying preparations for sending large forces of infantry and artillery to the menaced points.

Continued diplomatic exchanges, which it had hoped would result in a peaceful settlement of the boundary dispute between the two republics, have failed thus far. Many citizens have been called to the colors to augment the present army.

The first of a series of "Free will offering" socials to be given under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church will be held at the home of Henry Williams, 14 Barry street, Wednesday, Jan. 25.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. George Crothers, 149 Beale street when Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham will give Current events in Reform work.

Many of the teachers of the Quincy school are availing themselves of the privilege of attending the course of lectures being given by the Arts and Crafts committee of the Woman's club.

Because the Christmas festival of the Sunday school of St. Chrysostom's had to be omitted on acount of the scarlet fever epidemic it has been decided to give the children a party on Saturday, Jan. 28. The younger scholars will meet from three until five and the older ones from seven until nine. The committee and teachers are arranging to give the children a grand good time.

The ladies of the Benevolent society are planning an elaborate banquet as the first social event at the Memorial Congregational church. It is expected that two hundred will be seated at the tables which will be laid with the new china and silver purchased by the ladies for all such future occasions. The menu will consist of roast turkey, celery, cranberry sauce, mashed turnips, riced potatoes, chicken pies, escalloped oysters, Waldorf salad, mince and apple pie, plum pudding, ices cake, coffee, chocolate and tea.

The Wollaston Congregational church has added a combination reflectoscope and stereopticon to its equipment, with a luminary screen. Sunday night it will be used to illustrate Van Dykes' "Story of the Other Wise Man."

ANXIOUS FOR A COMMISSION

Taft Is Very Much Worried Over Tariff Question

ORIGINAL PLAN SIDETRACKED

Rejection of Longworth Bill and Approval of Dalzell Measure a Disappointment to President and Those Who Agree With Him—Insurgent Republicans Now Depended Upon to Carry Out Wishes of Administration

Washington, Jan. 21.—President Taft is determined to have that tariff commission. This is now pretty well understood by the Republicans in both senate and house. The attitude of the old standpat leaders toward this legislation is such that the president is now consulting the so-called insurgent Republicans freely about it.

The original plan with respect to commission bills has been upset by the action of the Republican members of the committee on ways and means of the house in rejecting the Longworth bill, the administration measure, and approving the bill introduced by Representative Dalzell. The Longworth bill not only had the approval of the president, but it was indorsed by the National Tariff Commission association and the insurgent Republicans had agreed to support it.

The Dalzell bill would create a commission of only three members, whereas the Longworth bill proposed to make up a commission of five. Under the Longworth bill, it would have been possible for a commission to get information. The Dalzell bill fails to make provision under which the board could obtain records, or compel the attendance of witnesses.

The president today is looking toward the senate for assistance. One suggestion made is that since it is plain that the house leaders are not sincerely for a commission, it might be well for the senate to pass a real tariff commission bill in advance of action by the house.

Senator Beveridge, who introduced the first tariff bill presented to the senate, was sent for by the president, and the situation with respect to the legislation was discussed at some length. The insurgent Republicans in the senate are not only willing, but anxious to give the president all the assistance possible. They stand ready to make a fight any day for the Longworth bill, introduced in the senate by Senator Lodge. A canvass of the senate indicates that the administration has votes enough to pass a commission bill if a vote can be reached.

Senator Bailey, representing the Democrats, still insists that the legislation shall not be put through, and Senator Heyburn, representing a small company of Republicans, declares that he will prevent a vote if possible. The situation has veered round to where the dependable support of the president is the insurgent Republicans.

The president has made no effort to conceal his displeasure at the manner in which the house ways and means committee has sidetracked the bill drawn by Longworth. Owing to the limitation on the authority of the tariff board and the fact that it can be abolished any time congress sees fit to withhold an appropriation, President Taft and the friends of the tariff commission are opposed to the Dalzell bill.

Representative Tawney, the chairman of the house appropriation committee, talked with the president about the situation. He told the president there would be no difficulty in obtaining the appropriation of $400,000 necessary to continue the present tariff board for two years more.

On the whole, the president is discouraged about the outlook for a permanent tariff commission, but it is apparent that he had changed his tactics and that he will insist on having his way and make his wishes known to the house and senate leaders in no uncertain terms.

DUTY MUST BE PAID

Treasury Ruling Concerning Fish Bought From Foreigners

Washington, Jan. 21.—The treasury department has made a customs ruling of immense importance to American fishermen. It provides in effect that fish caught in foreign waters by foreign ships and brought to ports of the United States by American fishermen will no longer enter free of duty.

A recent decision of the board of general appraisers, holding that such fish was free, will be appealed to the customs court, and to avoid a repetition of the case the new regulations defining an American fishery are effective. The new rules are of great importance to all the North Atlantic coast towns which have fishermen in Newfoundland waters.

Fish caught in foreign waters where fishing is permitted by international agreement still will be free of duty if taken by an American vessel with an American master and crew. Any fish which such a vessel might buy from a foreign fisher will be subject to duty.

BARRED FROM CHURCH

Charge That Greek Clergyman Caused Riots Among Parishioners

Boston, Jan. 21.—A temporary injunction restraining Rev. Nestor Souslides from entering the Greek Orthodox church in the South End, of which he was formerly pastor, was issued by Judge Hitchcock in the equity motion session of the Suffolk superior court. The injunction also restrains the clergyman from interfering with the church services and from soliciting alms.

The injunction was issued in a bill in equity brought by the Hellenic association of Boston. The bill alleges that the clergyman caused riots among the Greeks who attend the church.

SOME MYSTERY IN DEATH OF MORTON

People Near Whose Rooms He Died Deny Knowing Him

New York, Jan. 21.—The mysterious circumstances surrounding the sudden death of Paul Morton at the Hotel Seymour Thursday night have become more deeply involved.

Paul L. Kiernan, the lawyer who lived in the hotel, and whom it was said Morton had a business engagement with, last night at Chicago stated that he had no appointment with Morton; did not know him, and did not understand why their names had been associated together. Kiernan had left for Chicago an hour before Morton was found near the Kiernan apartments in the hotel, the appointment to go there having been made a week before.

Mrs. Kiernan, who remained in New York, stated that as far as she knew her husband did not know Morton, and she had never heard him mention Morton's name.

At the hotel at the time of the maid finding Morton ill it was stated that the Kiernans had two hours before given up their apartment at the hotel. But they still occupy the suite.

SLASHING ESTIMATES

Foss Said to Be Planning Economy to the Extent of $500,000

Boston, Jan. 21.—Governor Foss saw a $6,000,000 tax budget staring him in the face yesterday, and he sent to the legislature a bunch of estimates with $67,000 slashed from it, $53,000 of this amount being in the judiciary department.

Governor Foss has yet before him most of the estimates, and rumors come from the council chamber that the governor is aiming at a final slash of no less than $500,000, and more if he can do it.

The state commissions, which the governor says are expensive and ought to be abolished, are booked for a deep cut.

DIRECT VOTE FOR SENATORS

Borah's Plea For Passage of His Resolution

PRESENT SYSTEM CONDEMNED

Says It Injures the Public by Bad Legislation, Patronage and Office Enter Into the Deal and Whole Affair Becomes a Disgrace—Members of Illinois Legislature Who Cannot Be Believed Under Oath

Washington, Jan. 21.—"In some fourteen instances states have gone without full representation in the senate because of deadlocks in the legislatures," Senator Borah of Idaho informed the senate, in supporting the resolution providing for the popular election of United States senators.

"In other instances," he said, "bribery and corruption and scandal have attached to the sessions. It is not alone that direct and open bribery sometimes prevail; but that which is equally as bad more often prevails—bills and measures are traded up or killed; the public interest is sacrificed or actually bartered away; patronage and office enter in the deal and the whole affair becomes a disgrace and is of itself sufficient condemnation of the present system."

The senator specifically cited the contests in Pennsylvania in 1890; in Maryland in 1904, and in Missouri in 1905. "Prior to 1872," he declared, "we had but one case of alleged election bribery connected with a seat upon this floor. Since that time we have had ten, to say nothing of a number of investigations before state legislatures which never reached this body."

Senator Borah referred to the present senatorial investigation, the case of Senator Lorimer of Illinois, as an illustration of "the vices of the system under which we now elect senators.

"If there is any state where the present system might be fairly tested," he said, "it ought to be in Illinois. No commonwealth is better fitted in tradition, in pride of history, in the intelligence and manhood of her people to meet and discharge the duties which properly pertain to the state. Yet her prominence now and during the last year is not due to her industrial prowess, but to that scandal and shame which has been fastened upon her by reason of a senatorial election."

Recalling the story of the deadlock preceding Lorimer's election, Borah said: "Men bartered their honor like the courtesan of Babylon, and at last performed the task amid charges and countercharges, criminations and recriminations between legislative members, reminding one of the days when the prong of Catiline was the sceptre of power at Rome.

"And now we are solemnly told by a committee of this body that so shameless and demoralized, criminal and degraded were many of the members of that legislature that they cannot be believed under oath." At the present time the legislature of that great state by reason of that election is meeting under the eye and surveillance of a grand jury.

"No wonder that one of the old and honored members of this body, a veteran in unselfish devotion to his country, said, with reference to that election 'I have begun to despair of the republic.'"

Senator Borah concluded with an appeal for a popular vote and to "the open forum, upon which beats the fierce light of public opinion."

Supplementing Borah's speech, Senator Clapp said that by making the senatorial question an issue in legislative elections the people of the country already had taken into their hands the election of senators to as great an extent as the constitution would permit them. This course he accepted as an indication of the popular will and he predicted that if the opportunity should ever be given them they would manifest this interest in an unmistakable way.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hub's New Zoo Secures Black She Bear "Oso" for First Contribution—Even Artists May Not Dock Horses' Tails in Yankee Athens—Honey Fitz Says Hubbites Don't Receive White Treatment from Flour Merchants—Music Students to Get the Glad Hand of Financial Assistance.

Even art mustn't be guilty of cruelty to animals, in Boston. Dr. Francis Rowley, president of the M. S. P. C. A., is playing the role of hero in a characteristic anecdote, now going the rounds of the Hub. A Bostonian in closing up an estate found himself burdened with a large, handsomely framed picture of a horse. Someone sgugested that he give it to the society with the long name. Dr. Rowley on receiving the offer expressed great pleasure and went immediately to inspect the painting. When he saw it, however, he thre up both hands—the horse's tail was docked. A bright idea occurred to him presently and he inquired, "Why can't a tail be painted on?" to which proposition the executor assented. The work is now under way of making this painting suitable for a place of honor in Dr. Rowley's office.

"Oso," a young lady bear, is the first contribution to the Boston zoological park now in process of preparation. Oso and her brother Boso held the rapt attention of Hubbite office boys as they gambolled in the windows of a sportsman's magazine office until Miss Oso won the heart of Newton Newkirk, Boston's popular humorist and editor of the "Bingville Bugle," who purhased her for a household pet. Shortly, however, Miss Oso began to grow rude and unladylike in her play, and as she was becoming too large to spank Mr. Newkirk was obliged to send her to the Lady Bear Seminary at Lexington Park while he negotiated with the Mayor and Park Commissioners for permission to turn her over to the new zoo. She developed such an affection for her tender hearted patron that he was in imminent danger on several occasions of having his ribs fractured. The Mayor and Mr. Peabody, chairman of the Park Commission, have accepted the offer with deep appreciation, with the promise of installing her in the temporary quarters just as soon as they are built. Meanwhile Mr. Newkirk is still buying her meal tickets at the Lady Bear Seminary at Lexington. It is likely that the renowned fisherman of the Maine lakes will confine his attentions in the future to winning the hearts of the shy salmon and black bass, which are at least only temporarily obsterperous.

White treatment is something Boston folks are not getting, according to the doughty Mayor Fitzgerald who wonders why the humble householder must pay $7.50 a barrel for flour while the municipal government gets it for $4.83. Other people also wonder why, if the city can buy at that rate it might—theoretically at least—with profit open a municipal store and sell flour to the public at, say $5.50 a barrel. Yet the Mayor's political cake would probably be dough if he were to propose a measure so unpopular with hundreds of grocers who have to get a living out of their stores, big and little.

The glad hand of financial help will soon be extended to a larger group than ever before of the music students who throng Boston during the school year, provided that a campaign which has been quietly going on for some time at the New England Conservatory of Music succeeds in its object. A member of the Conservatory's board of trustees offered last summer to be one of ten persons to establish each a scholarship fund similar to those provided for deserving students at other great institutions of higher education in New England. The leading American music school with nearly 2,700 students last year, or more than half as many as in all the departments of Harvard University including the summer school and Radcliffe college, had at the beginning of the present school year only five specially named scholarships and prizes of which the annual prize of a Mason and Hamlin grand piano offered to the best pianist of the senior class is by far the most valuable. The boy who enters Harvard College ordinarily well prepared and who attends faithfully to his studies is reasonably sure, if he needs assistance toward completing his education, of getting each year a scholarship that pays from two to four hundred dollars. With that amount as a nucleus the task of earning one's way through college is not so arduous or likely to overtax one's strength. Several generations of well to do friends of Harvard have made its department of scholarships and fellowships as strong as any in the world. But the talented student of music who comes to Boston with high ambition and low finances faces a struggle such as few except those brought into close circumstances with this class of young people can appreciate. Some opportunities there are for such young people to earn money. Chances to play and sing in the churches of greater Boston are brought to the attention of a limited number by the Conservatory office which is always on the lookout to place its pupils in these positions. Summer work, such as teaching or playing in orchestras at shore and mountain resorts and other similar occupations put honest dollars into the pockets of a few youthful musicians. Yet there are long odds against the poor though gifted devotee of the musical arts who has to make his way unaided, and the management of the Conservatory, the largest music school in the United States, has come to view the situation with alarm when such a student presents himself and pleads for all the help that is available in order that he may gain the institution's coveted diploma. Now and then some kind friend of the school comes forward to give a little temporary assistance to hard pressed students, but assistance of this kind is not dependable. That is a main reason why the stipulation of the scholarship gift of last summer is being carried out. Up to the first of the year pledges of funds sufficient to create three new scholarships had been obtained. If enough is secured to make it possible to provide free tuition each year to ten or a dozen students the group of Conservatory scholarships will serve as a nucleus and standing encouragement to future donations of the same sort.

Ethel Angier.

MRS. NAT GOODWIN

Wife of Famous Actor Is Seeking a Divorce

DISCLOSURE IN DIVORCE SUIT

Mrs. Goodwin Is Said to Be a $1,700,000 Wife

TRUST DEED SIGNED BY ACTOR

Counsel For Woman Says Transfer of Property "Was a Gift, Pure and Simple"—In Nature of Pre-Nuptial Agreement, Although Executed While Goodwin Was Still the Husband of Maxine Elliott

New York, Jan. 21.—Justice Goff, in the supreme court, named J. C. Thompson, a lawyer, referee to take testimony in the suit for divorce brought by Edna Goodrich Goodwin, the actress, against her husband, Nat C. Goodwin, the actor.

The suit promises to be productive of interesting developments, not the least among which will be the bringing out of the story of an alleged $1,700,000 pre-nuptial trust deed by which Goodwin, prior to his marriage to Miss Goodrich, turned a big share of his wealth into a trust fund, the revenue from which, it was provided, should be equally divided between the pair during their lives and the principal go to the survivor upon the death of either.

Herman L. Roth, counsel for Mrs. Goodwin, said that the property embraced in the trust deed included real estate in California, a big amount in government bonds, many New York state and city bonds, and a lot of equally valuable staple and other securities.

The San Francisco real estate was the $250,000 Lafayette apartment for which the comedian paid cash; other San Francisco residences and business property, and a number of orange groves. Several choice pieces of Los Angeles realty also figured in the list.

Roth declared that the agreement by which all this was converted into the trust fund for the benefit of Miss Goodrich was drawn up and signed while Goodwin was still the husband of his third wife, Maxine Elliott.

"It is an iron-clad document," continued Roth, "and it will be impossible for Goodwin to break it. It is not a pre-nuptial agreement, as such agreements are usually considered, for Goodwin, being then the husband of Miss Elliott, was not in a position to make a pre-nuptial agreement with Miss Goodrich. The transfer of the property was a gift, pure and simple."

The lawyer incidentally declared that the comedian had plenty of other resources aside from the nearly two millions tied up in the trust fund.

Mrs. Goodwin is in New York awaiting the trial, but her attorney would not disclose her address. A batch of depositions taken in St. Louis by Roth recently is expected to figure in the trial.

KING OF ITALY HELD UP

Accomplished by Hello Girl Who Was Unaware of His Identity

Rome, Jan. 21.—Rome is chuckling over an incident in the telephone service. The king wished to speak to the head keeper at Castle Porsiano and tried to ring him up.

His efforts were in vain, and a telephone girl, unaware of the identity of the subscriber, answered tartly that the number "non rispond," the classic answer of all telephone girls in Rome.

The king, who knew the keeper was expecting the call and probably had been standing before the receiver since [illegible] was quite frantic.

[illegible] court dignitary called at the [illegible]e exchange and the girl was "hauled over the coals."

No Gambling on Cars

Boston, Jan. 21.—Card playing for money and children in smoking cars hereafter will not be allowed on the trains of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company. Orders to that effect were issued to all conductors and other employes of the company.

Carnegie Tells of Work of Institution Which He Founded

New York, Jan. 21.—Andrew Carnegie announces the donation of $10,000,000 to the endowment fund of the Carnegie institution of Washington. This brings his total endowment to that institution to $25,000,000.

The institute was founded by Carnegie in 1902, at which time he endowed it with $10,000,000. Its field of search and experiment covers biology, astronomy, economic, and sociology, chemistry and experimental evolution.

Mr. Carnegie, in making known the new benefaction, said that the work of the institution had cleared from blame the captain of a British ship who ran his vessel upon the rocks, proving that the British admiralty charts by which the captain was guided were two or three degrees astray. The discovery of 60,000 new worlds by Professor Hale at the observatory on Mount Wilson, Cal., was also announced. The observatory was established by the institution.

TRAP LAID FOR HER

But Sentence of Woman Convicted of White Slavery Must Stand

New York, Jan. 21.—The conviction of Belle Moore, the so-called "white slave" dealer, who was sentenced to serve not less than two years and six months in prison, was affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme cour.

Belle Moore was convicted during the John D. Rockefeller, Jr., grand jury inquiry. The court said that it was conceded that a trap was laid for the woman, but that her contention that the crime defined by the statute was legally impossible of accomplishment, and that therefore no crime had been committed, was not well taken.

ARABIANS DECLARE WAR AGAINST TURKS

Latter Government Determined to Suppress Rebellion

Aden, Arabia, Jan. 21.—The Imam of Sanaa, Yahya Hamid-ed-Din, has declared war against the Turks, and armed bands are gathering in the Yemen mountains. The notorious Sheikh Boni Pacha has joined the imam's standard, and a rising throughout Yemen, which is a region of southwestern Arabia, is expected. The Pretender Idrisee has assumed the defensive against the Turks.

The capital of Asir province has been under siege since early in December, the governor and a large garrison being barred in. A new governor has been appointed, but he has not been able to reach his post owing to the activity of the Arabs.

The Turkish government has determined to suppress the rebellion, and to that end is sending thirty fully equipped battalions into that district.

"TASTE LIKE SOUR MILK"

American Oysters Attacked by Dealer In English Bivalves

London, Jan. 21.—The Daily Express attacks American oysters, quoting George Tabor, one of the largest oyster dealers in the world, as saying few would have the temerity to compare the American with the English natives, which are perfection, while the Americans taste like sour milk.

Edgar Newman, whose firm, he says, has handled oysters for more than a thousand years, declares the English are best and spurns the charge that they taste like copper.

Commenting editorially, The Express charges Americans with barbarism when they stew or broil or fry oysters, saying they must be eaten raw.

NEEDS A GOOD SPANKING

So Declares Husband of Girl Committed as Incorrigible

Washington, Jan. 21.—Charles H. Daly, aged 20, haled his wife to the juvenile court and declared she was incorrigible.

"That's a charge to place against children, not married women," said Justice De Lacy.

"She's only a child and needs a good spanking, but I have scruples against spanking my wife," said Daly. "She's only 15."

Judge De Lacy decided that the Sisters of the Good Shepherd probably could teach her to be a good wife, and committed her to their home for a year. The pair eloped to Rockville, Md., two years ago.

Rescued In Nick of Time

Rockland, Me., Jan. 21.—Rudderless and leaking so fast that the crew was able to keep her afloat with difficulty, the schooner Centennial was towed in here by the revenue cutter Woodbury. Long ledge would have been her undoing but for the timely arrival of the cutter.

Would Tax German Sovereigns

Berlin, Jan. 21.—The reichstag debated the second reading of the government's unearned increment tax bill and adopted an amendment subjecting the German sovereign houses to the tax. The government is strongly opposed to this innovation in German constitutionalism.

GRANITE BILL OF PRICES

Both Sides Apparently Firm in Their Ultimatum

A meeting of the two committees representing the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the Granite Cutters Union, who are considering the proposed changes in the bill of prices, held a meeting Friday evening, but nothing was accomplished. The cutters stood firm in their refusal to accept the proposition of the manufacturers, which was a minimum of $3.20 per day for the first three years and $3.25 for the next two years.

The manufacturers were equally as firm in their refusal to grant the cutters $3.25 for four years and $3.28 the fifth year.

On all other matters their two committees will have no trouble in agreeing. Another meeting of the two committees will be held next Tuesday hevening. There is a rumor on the street that the two committees may agree on a flat schedule of $3.25 per dey for five years.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

driver, who rode him back to the scene o fthe accident. The animal was cut about the hoof, but was otherwise uninjured, although all aquiver from fright. This horse is a very nervous animal and has given trouble before. Several weeks ago she became unmanageable and tipped the wagon over in Fort Square but little damage was done.

After the driver returned, he was assisted in getting out the bottles and cases, and the wagon was righted. The front axle was broken and the left side of the covering was damaged, but aside from these and the shafts, but little repairing will be necessary. The wagon siued after turning the corner and landed close up to the sidewalk on the south side of the street.

ANNIVERSARY BANQUET.

The members of Braintree Council No. 1462, Knights of Columbus, celebrated the first anniversary of the institution of the council by a brilliant social function in the Town hall last Thursday evening from 7.30 until midnight. First on the program was an elaborate banquet furnished by C. C. Whittemore, of Boston. The menu was a lengthy one and also of great variety. Moses McGaughey of Washington street was toastmaster.

After an opening address by Dr. C. A. Sullivan, G. K., the several toasts were delivered. The speakers were all eloquent and convincing and their remarks elicited great applause. The following are the subjects:

The church, Rev. Andrew J. Fitzgerald.

Our order— William J. O'Brien, S. D.

The ladies—Edward V. Heffernan, D. G. K.

All of the foregoing program took place in the lower hall where the well laden tables, the beautiful gowns of the ladies and the floral decorations made a most pleasing picture. After the speaking adjournment was made to the upper hall where dancing was enjoyed to the seductive strains of Cuff's orchestra, the floor being in charge of Moses McGaughy.

The Knights and their ladies were present in large numbers from Boston, Quincy. Brockton, Randolph, Weymouth, North Easton and other surrounding places. At the banquet, interesting remarks were listened to from State Deputy T. J. O'Brien and there were also present State Secretary Louis Watson and the following Grand Knight: Chas. McGilvray, West Quincy; Thomas J. Canan, North Easton; Peter Hart, Randolph; James Reilly, East Weymouth. Last but not the least to be mentioned is D. D. S. K. Edward J. Barry of Brockton.

The whole affair was a great success and reflects great credit on the executive ability of the following gentlemen who acted as the committee of arrangements: Dr. C. A. Sullivan, Moses McGaughey, Walter J. Fouche, James J. O'Keeffe, Joseph F. Mohan, Dr. Norbert B. Shay, Edward V. Heffernan, John F. Madden, Chas. R. Greelish, John H. Sullivan, James G. Cuff and John W. Cuff.

QUINCY WINS FROM MILTON

Score Was 25 to 7 in Favor of Home Team

Quincy High defeated Milton High in a well played game Friday afternoon by a score of 25 to 7. Most of the scoring was done in the first half, Quincy getting eight of her baskets and Milton getting all three of hers in that period. A spirit of good natured rivalry predominated throughout the contest, which was one of the cleanest of the year. Manning and Prout divided the honors for scoring the greatest number of points, each with four baskets to his credit. O'Hearn of the Milton team played creditably getting two baskets.

Quincy won the game without much difficulty, but the Milton team showed greater efficiency in passing, which means that Milton has a coach.

During the first five minutes of the second half there was no scoring on either side, but Quincy braced up a little, and Manning and the Chapman brothers each got one. "Nil" Chapman made the prettiest goal of the game with an overhead shot.

Prout's three baskets in succession were clean and pretty. Manning with his usual whirling dervish act was in all places at once, and his baskets in the first half were secured with gatling gun speed.

The summary:

QUINCY		MILTON
H. Chapman, rf.		lb., O'Connell
Trask, rf.
Manning, lf.		rb., Walsh
Prout, c.		c., Sangster

PINE TREE CLUB.

Wednesday evening, the members of the Pine Tree club and their guests assembled at G. A. R. hall, South Braintree to enjoy the program prepared for them by the committee in charge. As it was the regular meeting of the club President William J. Robbins called the meeting to order and the minutes of the previous meeting in December were red by the secretary Mrs. S. S. Bridgham. The committee of the evening consisted of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Moody, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gilman, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Duckworth and Mrs. Elizabeth Bradford. A pleasing entertainment consisting of piano solos by Miss Foss of Braintree and vocal solos by little Ruth Stone and Mrs. Fred A. Swallow of Fountain street was greatly enjoyed by the appreciative audience. Miss Florence Rogers was the accompanist of the evening. Dainty refreshments were generously served after which dancing was enjoyed by the younger members of the party. Miss Eva Dam presided at the piano.

The February meeting will be held in Braintree and the committee appointed to serve were Mr. and Mrs. Will W. Mayhew, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Martin, Miss Annie Hale, Miss Florence Robinson and Miss Olive Robinson.

The countess, having discharged her coachman for drunkenness, was asked to take the son of an old servant of the house to supply his place.

"But are you sure you know how to drive?" she asked.

"Why, of course, my lady; don't you rec'lect I druv you to Richmond that day we was upset in the road?"—Household Words.

MIDWINTER CHOWDER PARTY

Old Times in Fire Department Talked Over at Reunion of Washington M. French Hose

The Niagara, the Tiger, the Granite and the Vulture Recalled

The annual mid-winter chowder party of the Washington M. French Hose Association on Saturday evening proved to be fully as enjoyable as others that have preceded it in recent years. It is not the chowder alone that calls the boys together on these occasions, but it is a meeting of those in Quincy's early days who responded quickly to the call for aid in extinguishing fires. While the town was not equipped in those days with modern apparatus drawn by horses or electricity, its engines were capable of doing, and they did good work The boys who composed the companies were fleet of foot and full of ginger, and took pride in making quick runs in answer to alarms.

According to tradition some remarkably quick runs were made in those days and they are always brought forward at these gatherings. The gathering of Saturday night was held at Union hall, and it brought together many of the old fire fighters.

The absence of some was noticed with regret however. First there was ex-Engineer James T. Penniman, now in his 92d year, and it was the first of these reunions he had ever missed. Then there was Quincy Torrey, who was never known to miss one of these gatherings. He would have been present had it not been for his physician. Mr. Torrey is recovering from a fall received several days ago. Then there was ex-Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., who never fails to say a good word for the old Vulture. He was also confined to his home by illness. These absentees were noticed at the after dinner exercises, and it was voted to send a letter of remembrance to Mr. Penniman with the hope that he would be with them at the summer reunion.

The chowder was served at a little after 8 o'clock. Asa Pope was the man who prepared it, being ably assisted by "Billy" Bird. The chowders of these two have long been famous for their excellence, and that of Saturday night was up to the standard.

Fred H. French, a worthy descendant of Washington M. French, from whom the association derives its name, sat at the head of the table as life president. At his right was Mayor Shea, an honorary member. Then there were Chief Williams, City Clerk Keith, Engineer James H. Elcock, ex-County Commissioner John Q. A. Field, District Engineer Daniel J. Nyhan; Eugene R. Stone, president of the Board of Trade, and William L. Willey, quartermaster of the Ancients.

At the other tables there were noticed Lieut. Henry Hall and Joseph B. Blanchard of the Milton fire department; Frank Bates, who years ago was a member of the company attached to the famous Butcher Boy of Braintree; District Chief Frank C. Packard, and ex-Chief Walter H. Ripley and A. L. Litchfield. Active and honorary members of the association filled the remaining seats.

After the chowder there came some little speaking. President French welcomed those present, and extended them his greeting, hoping to see them all again next summer.

Mayor Shea congratulated the association on such a large gathering, and he hoped they would always be so. He spoke briefly of the absence of Mr. Penniman and Mr. Whiton. The former had sent his regrets at being unable to be present, but hoped to see them next summer. He said that he had promised Joe not to say anything about the Vulture. He enjoyed these gatherings because they were non-partisan. He hoped these gatherings would continue and the association retain its full membership. He would not say anything about the Granite for her record spoke for itself. He moved a letter of regret be forwarded to Mr. Penniman which was voted.

Chief Williams was glad to see the faces of so many that were with the old fire department, and he was glad to be present and renew friendships of forty years ago.

President French said that last summer the Ledger had stated that no one had said a good word at the summer gathering for the old Niagara but that tub was able to speak for itself.

James H. Elcock said he never lost an opportunity to attend one of these gatherings when they were pulled off. He was pleased to meet so many that ran with the engines when he did. He liked to hear about the Vulture, Niagara, Tiger and Granite, but of course the Granite was then it. He remembered the run of the Hose Company to West Quincy in eight minutes five and one-half seconds. Then he had heard of the Granite run to Quincy which was made in five seconds less time.

Ex-County Commissioner John Q. A. Field was glad to hear so many remarks about the different engines, but the Tiger could beat anything in town. It would get to Neponset bridge and limber up almost before the Granite had started. He knew the president of the association was a good runner, but could not agree with him as to time made by the Hose Company. He was sorry not to see his friends Penniman and Torrey. The old timers did good work, but today things are different. There is more to contend with, and more to do with. We are now ready to meet a conflagration if it should threaten. He also paid a tribute to the late Washington M. French.

QUINCY MAN FOR SPEAKER

Representative Thomas Reported to be in the Field

The Sunday Globe says:

"Yesterday Representative Thomas of Quincy, a third-year man, announced that he was a candidate and that he had retained "Ike" Willetts of Fall River, one of the "speed boys" on the Republican side of the house, as his campaign manager.

Thomas of Quincy and his friends take the ground that it is about time that the Republican party played a little closer to the people and cut out the idea that Brookline and the Back Bay are entitled to all the honors that the party has to pass around.

Tom White of Newton was asked by one of his associates the other day why he didn't get into the speakership fight. Tom is sleek and fat and sleeps o' night, but he possesses a good thinker and this was his reply: "I'm not a candidate. In the first place because I could not get it, and in the second place I couldn't afford to put out the money that would be necessary to make the fight, and if I had it I wouldn't do it."

NEW AUTO FIRE WAGON

Bids Opened Today for a New Combination

Bids for the new combination automobile fire wagon, for which the Council of 1910 made an appropriation of $5,500, were publicly opened this morning in the office of Mayor Shea. Three bids in all were received. But two of these contained the certified check required to accompany the bids so that the third bid which was from the Combination Ladder Co., of Providence, R. I., was not read. There was still another bid on the way from the LaFrance Co., but the man who had it was delayed in Braintree and did not arrive in time.

The first bid opened was that of the Dodge Vehicle Co. Their price was $5,000 for a four cylinder 50 horse-power machine with one 35-gallon chemical tank.

The Underhill Co., manufacturers of the Knox machine, submitted four propositions. The first was for a four cylinder 40 horse power machine with two 25 gallon chemical tanks for $5,000. The second proposition was for a model M 4 machine with one 35 gallon tank for $5,500, Model M 3 for $5,600, and a machine with two 35 gallon tanks for $5,900.

The bids were taken under advisement.

DEATH OF MRS. HOWLETT.

James D. Howlett, head master of the High school, was called out of town on Sunday by the death of his wife. Mrs. Howlett had been in poor health for a number of years. About seven years ago she was taken to the Adirondack Mountains, where it was found she had developed a serious case of tuberculosis of the throat and lungs. The disease had progressed so far that hope of recovery was not at all certain. Within recent months the decline had been rapid and Sunday marked the end of the long struggle. Mrs. Howlett was a graduate of Syracuse University, and before her marriage had been a teacher in the public schools of New York.

—The yeear 1911 promises to give the people the greateest reform ever known. Plans for international peace plans for peace between capital and labor, are being evolved and the rich men of the country are giving of their plenty to assist along in the good works. Efforts are being made to make the world better and good results are being accomplished.—Whitman Times.

CONCERT AT ST. JOHNS

Local and Out of Town Talent Contribute

A sacred concert was given in the hall of the Parochial school Sunday evening with an audience of nearly 600. The talent was principally local and all the participants acquitted themselves with great credit.

The opening number a piano selection by John Mahon elicited much well earned applause. Charles Mills sang a fine tenor solo next entitled, "In the Garden of My Heart."

A contralto solo, "The Bird and the Rose" was very pleasing rendered by Miss Teresa Keating and Marcus Mahon gave a good account of himself in a violin solo, "Meditation" from "Thais." For the encore he played "Gondoliera" by Ries Suite 3.

Miss Nina Bearse Wilbur of Boston held the audience spellbound during the reading of a selection by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps entitled "Through the Moonlight." Miss Wilbur was called out for four encores before the next number was allowed to come on.

Albert Mills gave a good rendering of "The Heart Bowed Down" and for his encore sang "The Dream."

One of the most pleasing features of the concerts was the contribution of Mrs. Helen Donovan Kierns of Wollaston. Her solo, "Oh Divine Redeemer" by Gounod was rendered with an ease which was delightful. Her enunciation was all that could be desired and the sweetness of tone and mastery of the difficult modulations brought the singer round after round of applause. The encores were of a lighter type but brought out all the pleasing qualities of the artist's voice.

Miss Ruth Keating executed De Beriot's "Air Varie" with skill. The technique was good and the expression pleasing.

The Palms was rendered in French by Miss Parquette of Boston and Mr. Levine with his powerful bass sang "Di Vero" in Italian.

Fred McDonald of West Quincy gave some very enjoyable readings and Mrs. John Reardon rendered a piano selection and an encore with great skill.

The closing number was a duet by Charles and Albert Mills. The voices blended well and the number gave a very pleasing conclusion to a thoroughly enjoyable concert.

The artists from out of town were of Matthew Ott's Players of Boston. Mr. Ott is a playwright of no mean ability and his players are all artists of the highest stamp.

The soloists were accompanied by John Mahan, Mr. Small and Miss Teresa Keating.

The committee in charge consisted of the following: Chairman, Father P. J. Scannell, Miss Elizabeth Garrity, Miss Mary Keating, William T. Donovan, Joseph Keating, John W. Walsh.

PROUD DAY FOR ATLANTIC

Large Audiences at Dedication Services of the Memorial Congregational Church

Told Not to Think It a Little Too Good for Service

The opening service in the new Memorial Congregational church at Atlantic on Sunday morning, at 10.30, was in commemoration of those for whom memorial windows have been placed in the church. It was marked by a large attendance which showed enthusiasm and satisfaction with all that has been accomplished. It was an interesting service with an able address, and a fine musical program.

The order of service was:

Organ prelude Miss Hazel C. Davison
Processional, "The church's one foundation"
Exordum Pastor and Congregation
Invocation and Lord's Prayer
Chant, "O come let us sing"
Prayer in unison
Gloria
The Apostles' Creed
Hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King"
Responsive reading, Psalm 19
Anthem
Offering and prayer
Doxology
Scripture reading Rev. Seelye Bryant
Response by choir
Prayer by pastor
Hymn, "Hark, hark my soul"
Sermon Rev. Seelye Bryant
Hymn, "Stand up for Jesus"
Benediction

Before the offering the paster spoke briefly. He said it was not intended to ask any subscriptions, but he had been told that a dedication would not be complete unless there was such an appeal. About $1,000 was needed to keep the mortgage down to $5,000 and cards would be passed at the same time the offering. A goodly sum was realized.

"Memorials" was the theme of Rev. Seelye Bryant, the young and talented pastor of Springfield, who is a personal friend of the pastor, and a son of Rev. Mr. Bryant who supplied the pulpit of Bethany Congregational church at the time of the resignation of Rev. Edward Norton.

The preacher did not announce his text until the end of his address. It was from 11th chapter of Hebrews, a part of verses 13 and 40—"These all died in the faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them from afar."—"God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

He said it was those memorials of the past which speak an inspiration that we desire. Not only has the past contributed to the present but it is a part of the present. No man liveth to himself; no man dieth to himself; all are beneficiaries of the ages. Those

Gov. Stubbs of Kansas might rope and tie the railroads while Lawyer Brandeis cuts off their expenses.

If that "boy aviator" who's been performing down Charleston, S. C., keeps up his gait he'll be a wonder by the time he's grown.

It seems rather hard just at this time Marse Henry Watterson should hike off to Europe and leave Champ Clark and the Democratic party to work out their own salvation.

The present candidacy of former Senator W. A. Clark for the Senatorship in the Montana legislature should impress the Senate of the United States in its handling of cases like that of Mr. Lorimer.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The meeting of the Braintree People's Forum Sunday afternoon was one of the most intensely interesting ones of the entire series and was attended by 331 people from Braintree and near by places. The speaker of the afternoon was Prof. James H. Hyslop of New York who addressed his audience on the general subject of psychic research.

The professor is secretary of the American Society for Scientific Research and has conducted many notable investigations regarding psychic phenomena. He is an authority on the subject and is classed with such men as the late Prof. Hodgson and the lamented Prof. William James of Harvard.

Prof. Hyslop described himself as being at one time a materialist but that he had come to believe differently because of powerful proofs pointing to an existence beyond the grave. He spoke of apparitions, hallucinations, visions, etc., and cited several elaborate experiments which tend to answer in the affirmative the old, old question: "If a man die, shall he live again?"

He recounted some very astounding happenings concerning the wonderful powers of Mrs. Piper the celebrated medium and of the experiments conducted by himself to test those same powers or manifestations. He related many facts both from his experience and that of others concerning remarkable communications from relatives and friends long since dead.

His recital of messages received by him from his departed father and mother showed clearly how far he has studied into the matter, how large an experience he has had and how far removed it all is from the table tipping, slate writing and other methods of the so-called spiritual mediums.

The address was unusually interesting and instructive and the speaker graciously answered many questions concerning it from different ones in the audience. The meeting next Sunday will be the last one of the series. At that time Henry Sterling will speak on "A Civic Conscience."

SOCIAL DANCE.

The second social dance of the Pond Street Social and Athletic Association was held in Odd Fellows' hall, South Braintree last Saturday evening from eight until twelve o'clock. The music was very good and rendered by an orchestra composed of Edward Dennehy, violin; George Abell, piano and Fred Goodnow, cornet.

There was a good attendance, about sixty-five couples, and everybody had a fine time. The floor was in charge of Alexander McGibbon, assisted by William Lawry, Frank Southwick, F. A. Hayden and Edward Southwick. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served during the evening.

The proceeds of this and other dances which will probably be given during the winter will be used to finance the building of a club house which the members are desirous of erecting in the spring.

The commitee of arrangements for the social consisted of Alexander McGibbon, Frank Southwick, Harry Burrill, William Lawry, Raymond Denbroeder and Guy E. Wood.

CHOWDER PARTY

President Stone of the Board of Trade said there was a reason why he always had a good time a t these gatherings. It was pleasant to hear the old vets tell of old times. They were in the thickest of the fight in those days. The young men here now will hold up this association when the old vets are gone.

Frank A. Bates had a good word to say about the Butcher Boy of Braintree, and Granite. Looking back twenty-five years or more he could remember the times when the Butcher Boy would help the Granite, and at other times when they did not pull together.

After expressing the wish to see them all present at the summer reunion, President French called off the speechmaking. The boys then gathered in little groups about the hall and enjoyed the games they used to enjoy in the good days of long ago.

LETTER FROM THE SOUTH.

Daytona, Florida, Jan. 18, 1911.
Editor of the Ledger:

We left Marshfield Hills for Florida the tenth of November but stopped at Atlantic City, N. J., over a week and then at Washington nearly two months, thence to Southern Pines, N. C., and from there we journeyed to this place. Southern Pines, N. C., is a delightful country. It is elevated and the soil is very sandy. With the pines, it is an exceedingly healthy climate, dry, warm, sunshiny and invigorating.

The pines are novel in appearance, the needles being nearly a foot in length. The tree grows very tall, bare of branches and needles to nearly the top, where the needles spread out in a sort of tuft or head. It is a hard pine and a native there. Tupentine is obtained by removing the bark near the ground. The young trees are handsome covered with long needles which adorn the front yards and sidewalks. Onions, lettuce, turnips and even peas are up and growing the middle of January.

Pinehurst we also visited which is about eight miles from Southern Pines. The latter place is a great winter resort for the rich, and rather an expensive place to stop. It is a large village, the land and buildings owned by one man,by the name of Tuft. The father, who went there some fifteen or twenty years ago, was from Boston. He was the inventor of the Tuft soda fountain. When he came south he bought several thousand acres of land and built handsome residences, and elegant hotels and would not sell an inch of land or house to anybody. He lets them to northerners who come to stay for the winter. Think of it, only one owner to a whole township. He named it Pinehurst. You have seen it probably highly mentioned in the papers.

I prefer Southern Pines, which is more of a business place and a homelike village. The founder of Pinehurst died some two years ago, leaving the property, which is worth several million, to his son, who manages it.

If I find time I will send you by and by an article on our visit and experiences here at Daytona among the oranges and alligators. Shall remain here till spring.

Lysander S. Richards.

"Boston Trot" Is Ancient.

To show that he is still up to date, though serving his last term as speaker, Uncle Joe Cannon did the "Boston trot" with much grace and eclat at a ball in Washington recently. The party was given by Robert J. Wynne, former postmaster general, for his daughter, and all the younger set of Washington were there. So was Uncle Joe, who is not quite seventy-five.

He was immediately captured by Miss Ruth Wynne, who demanded a dance, and the speaker assented so far as the Virginia reel was concerned. But the reel was long in coming, and Miss Wynne grew impatient. The "Boston trot," latest thing in terpsichore, was announced, but it did not feaze the Illinoisan. There were many on the floor who did not fully understand the trot and showed it, but not Uncle Joe. Not a twist, dip or bow did he miss, and he was warmly congratulated.

"It is strange," remarked Uncle Joe, whose face was flushed with the pleasure of old times, "but that is the only dance I know. I learned it more than fifty years ago. The barrel has just been turned over again."

OLD GUARD "COMES BACK"

Barnes Wrests New York Republican Machine From Roosevelt

New York, Jan. 23.—The Republican state organization has passed again to the control of the "Old Guard," out of whose hands Theodore Roosevelt so spectacularly wrested it some months ago.

William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, who led the fight against Roosevelt last fall in the Saratoga convention, was chosen chairman of the Reupublican state committee here to succeed Ezra P. Prentice, resigned.

"Will the committee be for President Taft?" Barnes was asked.

"It is reasonable to suppose so," he assented.

Timothy L. Woodruff, former state chairman, took much the same view of things.

VANDALISM IS DUE TO CUT IN WAGES

"Black Hand" Does Not Figure In Trouble at Draper Mills

Hopedale, Mass., Jan. 23.—The armed guards about the Draper mills are protecting the machinery and materials from present employes whose wages have recently been cut and not from "Black Hand" authors of threatening letters, it is learned from reliable sources.

Since fall the firm has been cutting the piece rates, in some instances as much as 25 percent. Most of the cuts were in the bobbin room and foundry.

In retaliation, for the last six weeks many of the employes have been turning out poorer work, and in some mysterious way belts have been cut, expensive machinery disabled, moulds in the foundry filled with sand, and many other acts of vandalism have been committed.

The loss from the wilful destruction of machinery and materials has gone far into the thousands.

DENIES HE HAS CONFESSED

But Danville Official Believes Many Votes Have Been Bought

Danville, Ills., Jan. 23.—Frank Jones, city attorney, who was reported to have made a confession that he had bought votes at the last election, denies that he had, but states that he believes there have been many votes trafficked in. He says he favors a mass meeting where all of the candidates can get together and go before the grand jury and tell all they know.

Sheriff Shephard, who also was reported to have confessed, will say nothing in regard to vote selling.

SALOONKEEPERS IN DUEL

One Dies After Shooting Match Following Raid on Their Saloons

Memphis, Jan. 23.—L. L. Hardage and Richard Mulcahey, rival saloonkeepers, fought because of the raiding of their saloons. Mulcahey is dead and Hardage is under arrest, charged with murder. Each accused the other, it is alleged, of having "tipped" the police.

According to Hardage, Mulcahey tried to draw a weapon, but Hardage fired first, five bullets taking effect in his adversary's head and body.

Boston, Jan. 23.—Churchgoers halted, horror-stricken, in Boylston street, yesterday, when a man was ground to death under an engine in the yard of the Boston and Albany railroad. The victim was Joseph M. Orchard, who for thirty years had been in the employ of the road.

Crash of Freight Trains

Brattleboro, Vt., Jan. 23.—A rear-end collision between two freight trains here yesterday afternoon resulted in the injury of one man and tied up traffic for four hours. Three cars were derailed and a fireman's nose was broken when he jumped from an engine.

LAST HOURS IN PERFECT PEACE

Justice Bond of Superior Court Answers Death's Call

ON BENCH TWENTY YEARS

Presided Alone In Noted Hattie LeBlanc Murder Trial, Which Keenly Interested the Public—His Mind Somewhat Disturbed by Widespread Comment Upon His Charge to Jury and Questions as to Decisions

Waltham, Mass., Jan. 23.—Daniel W. Bond, justice of the superior court of Massachusetts, died at his home here last night.

His wife and three children were at his bedside to the end. His last hours were spent without pain in perfect peace. His parting words were "good night," addressed to his wife, before he lapsed into unconsciousness.

Judge Bond, who had been justice of the superior court of the state of Massachusetts since October, 1890, probably presided over no case in his twenty years on the bench in which the sympathies of the public were more keenly interested, or which taxed his strength more than his last murder trial in East Cambridge, which resulted in the acquittal of Hattie LeBlanc for the murder of Clarence Glover.

One of his decisions which carried considerable weight in the trial was the exclusion of the dying statement of Glover, on the ground that Glover did not realize that he was dying and because Glover had made other statements to people on his deathbed which tended to throw at least a suspicion on another than Hattie LeBlanc.

He had, in a previous murder trial at which he presided, admitted an ante-mortem statement, under conditions somewhat less complicated. This was in the trial of the Italian, Storti, who was convicted of the murder of his brother-in-law.

Judge Bond, in the LeBlanc trial, also had the distinction of trying the first murder trial alone under the new law in Masaschusetts, which reduced the number of presiding justices from two to one in capital cases.

There is no doubt that the long contested case tried Bond's aging strength. Since its conclusion he had been frequently questioned by associates about his reasons and the way he arrived at some of his decisions. His charge to the jury had created widespread comment, much of which eventually reached him, causing some unquiet in the mind of the judge.

Judge Bond was born in Canterbury, Conn., April 29, 1838. He was a descendant of that William Bond who settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1630.

MUST WED "SOCIETY LADY"

Lord Cholmondeley Otherwise Will Forfeit Bequest of $15,000

London, Jan. 23.—Some amusement has been caused by a bequest in the will of the late Lady Meux, leaving to Lord George Cholmondeley $15,000 on condition that he marry "a lady in society."

The testatrix herself was not "a lady in society," and, in fact, the will shows her annoyance at the members of her husband's family, who refused social recognition to her.

The particular point of the bequest to Cholmondeley is that his attentions to Mrs. Sterling, the American showgirl, whose divorce proceedings a year ago attracted attention, had been marked. If Mrs. Sterling marries she forfeits the allowance made to her by her late husband.

SPINE EXPOSED TO VIEW

Delicate Surgical Operation Performed Upon New York Policeman

New York, Jan. 23.—A delicate operation was performed in the Mount Vernon hospital when the spinal cord of Policeman Pasquale J. Ruffato, who was shot through the spine a week ago while trying to arrest two Italians, was exposed to view.

It was found that two-thirds of the cord had been shot away. It was impossible to sew any of the cord together owing to the laceration, but the envelope in which it is hidden was stitched and the operating surgeons believe that the policeman may regain some feeling in his lower limbs.

Squabble Over Howe Portrait

Boston, Jan. 23.—Mayor Fitzgerald will call together the Julia Ward Howe memorial committee to take action on the latest report of the municipal art commission, which has refused to reconsider its original ruling to the effect that the portrait of Julia Ward Howe shall not be placed in Faneuil hall.

Russia's "Bountiful" Pensions

St. Petersburg, Jan. 23.—The pension bill has been submitted to the duma. According to the degree of injuries suffered in war or peace soldiers will receive from $15 to $90 yearly, widows from $24 to $36 yearly. Heretofore war veterans or their widows received practically no aid.

Good Form

If you are a boor among your acquaintances they can severely leave you alone; you can give the cold shoulder to the cad in the office or the works; you can escape the fool in the morning train; you can have a prior engagement if your pet aversion asks you to supper.

But your home people are under the inexorable necessity of living with you. A man sometimes gets into the habit of thinking that anything will do for his home people. He treats them as daily bread; he does not exert himself; he reserves his best for outsiders.

He says he likes to be homely at home; that is very well so long as it does not mean being vulgar. He says he likes to be at ease in his home; very well, too, if it does not mean being thoughtless.

Familiarity breeds contempt. It is not easy to be constantly patient and profitable and pleasant to those whom you meet every morning at breakfast. The breakfast table is often the greatest disillusioner. More secrets of character are revealed over the bacon and eggs than over the dessert.

There is no severer discipline in the world than that of the home, and most of us go down under it in this matter of courtesy.

Don't let us put off our manners when we put on our slippers. Let us be the more considerate when it is only our own whom we have to consider. And just because our home life is private and is screened off from public judgment and is sheltered from the restraint of public opinion let us be the more scrupulous that we may be void of the offense against the heart of love.

Behind many closed doors and drawn blinds there lie grim tragedies, and many of them may be traced to seemingly trivial slackness in the courtesies of love.

This is the rift that has made the music mute. Take care of the courtesies and the grand passions will take care of themselves.

The Desirable Guest.

The person who can talk entertainingly is the best type of guest at social gatherings, for she who chatters incessantly is almost more undesirable than one who is too quiet, for the latter gives opportunity for other persons to express themselves, while with the former to say even one word is often a struggle.

The balance between these extremes is the art of stimulating a temporary companion to conversation, and at no place is it more important to adopt the correct attitude than at a dinner. More than one man has been obliged to talk so much when sitting beside a quiet woman that he has not eaten enough. Such conduct on the part of a woman is decidedly inconsiderate.

At dinners and also at formal luncheons it is a good idea to watch the plates of neighbors, and if one person has been talking so much as to have fallen behind in the course it is tactful to take conversation into one's own hands, giving the other a chance to listen and at the same time to eat.

It is not good form to monopolize the attention of one neighbor to such an extent as to prevent him or her from talking with the person on the other side. Often it is a temptation when on one side is an attractive person and on the other one who is dull, but politeness makes dividing the attention necessary.

If one person is kept constantly in conversation by one neighbor at a dinner it means that he or she on the other side sits much of the time with no one to talk to, for the guest farther on is certainly giving some time to the person on his or her other side.

Wedding Reception Before Ceremony.

The wedding reception should precede the marriage ceremony. This is the newest suggestion from London. Instead of the "at home" that usually follows the society church weddings, a reception that is similar in every respect practically to the old time function should be held on the day before the wedding. The parents receive the guests while the bride to be and the bridegroom elect stand together to receive the felicitations of their friends. All the wedding presents are on view, and everything is the same as in the "at homes" except that the couple are not married. The reason for this new arrangement is that it saves the crush at the bride's home following the church wedding. It is more comfortable for the couple and their parents to have a quiet hour while preparations for the wedding tour are being made. Such an arrangement also gives the bride and bridegroom an opportunity to slip away quietly.

Grammatical Points.

Many people make mistakes in the use of "lay" and "lie." It is correct to say "I am going to lie down." "I am going to lay down" is not grammatical. One may inquire, "Lay what down?"

"Shall" and "will" are also often incorrectly used. Learn to say, "I shall, we shall, you will, he will and they will." This rule guards the switch where most people get off the track. "Will" in the first person must always have a touch of volition, and "shall" in the second person gives emphasis to authority. But courtesy demands that both authority and self assertion be avoided whenever needless.

YOUTHFUL SENATOR ELKINS.

Heir to Father's Toga at Thirty-five, but Noted For Ability.

Davis Elkins, who has been named by Governor Glasscock of West Virginia to fill the senatorial vacancy caused by the death of his father, Stephen B. Elkins, until the legislature meets, is cited as an example of a rich man's son who has not been spoiled by wealth. Though but thirty-five years of age and therefore one of the youngest men who have sat in the United States senate, he is known to the citizens of his state as a man of great agility in both a business and political way. He has long been recognized as being next to his father in command of the Elkins millions.

He is named after his maternal grandfather, Henry Gassaway Davis, former senator from West Virginia and candidate for the vice presidency in 1904 on the Democratic ticket headed by Alton B. Parker.

Davis Elkins took a special course in civil engineering at Harvard to fit him for the management of his father's extensive coal and railroad properties. At twenty-five he was given partial command, being made a director of the Morgantown and Kingwood railroad, which, though but fifty miles in length, occupies a strategic position in the West Virginia coal fields. He is now president of this company and also of the Elkins Coal company. The new senator also has had military experience, having served as captain on the staff of General Schwan in Porto Rico during the Spanish war.

It is predicted that if the Republicans recapture the West Virginia legislature by 1913, when the elder Elkins' term expires, his son will be regularly elected to the place, the prophets believing he will be a political power by that time.

DRESS.

Courage oozes out of the holes in a ragged suit and fear enters. But give the same man a new suit, clean linen, a good hat and shining shoes and you will see how soon fear will fly away and confidence be restored. He who before was afraid to speak in whispers lest he might be heard and consequently seen will now talk loudly of million dollar propositions, though he may not have a cent in his pockets. It is the duty of every man to dress as well and neatly as his means and circumstances will allow. He should cultivate taste in his apparel and show wisdom in its selection. His main object should be to give grace to his figure and attractiveness to his general appearance; but, above all, he should dress in accordance and in keeping with his station in life.—Rev. Madison C. Peters.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Large Congregations and Many Helpful Thoughts

SWEDISH METHODIST.

The pastor preached at the morning service from the text Luke 7: 18-21. "The Messengers from John to Jesus." The attendance at this, as at all the meetings of the day, was large.

The Sunday school services were in charge of William Gelotte.

The Epworth League meeting was unusually helpful under the leadership of Miss Greta Anderson.

In the evening the pastor took his text from Hebrews 11: 24-26. "The Choice that Moses Made" was the subject of his address.

The attendance was large at this meeting and a fine spirit predominated. Miss Olga Olson sang two splendid solos during the course of the evening

One new member was taken into the church in full and two were admitted on probation.

The regular prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening.

The Epworth League monthly business meeting will be held at the home of Andrew Anderson, 58 Cranch street, Friday evening at 7.30. There will be a program and refreshments in connection with the meeting.

WOLLASTON M. E.

At the morning service at the Wollaston M. E. church on Sunday the pastor preached a very impressive sermon, his text being Exodus 3-5, his subject "Reverence." He went on to show the want of reverence toward the house of God and His word, that is to be seen by all classes in the present age.

At the Junior league meeting at 4 o'clock Mrs. W. L. Pease was the leader; her subject was—"Life Building."

The subject for the gospel service in the evening was "Compromising."

The Whatsoever circle King's Daughters meets with Mrs. George Thompson tonight.

Tuesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the W. C. T. U., will meet with Mrs. George Crothers.

Thursday evening at 6.30 the Ladies' Aid society will serve a progressive lunch. A variety of good things will be served, including chafing dish specialties.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor took for his morning text II Cor. 1:3-5. Subject: "God is our Father Christ is our Brother."

The morning church service was preceded by the children's worship and Sunday school session.

The Young People's meeting was exceptionally helpful to the 200 young people who attended. Edward Johnson of Waltham sang two solos with guitar accompaniment.

Miss Lizzie Maki told a touching story of a crippled Christian boy. The meeting was led by the president, Mr. Oksanen.

The pastor spoke at the evening service from the text Luke 19:1-10. Theme: "The Conversion of a Capitalist." The example in the text was Zaccheus.

The evening school will meet in the church Monday and Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

The pastor will deliver a lecture at the Thursday evening meeting on the subject: "How to Raise Children." Mr. Lillback has studied into the subject quite thoroughly from the medical standpoint and is well versed in all the authoritative books on the subject.

A Deacon's meeting will be held Friday evening in the church.

The church business meeting will be held Saturday evening. The question of church improvements will be one of the important measures to be discussed.

A very successful church concert was held Saturday evening. The combined choirs of the Finnish Congregational and Finnish Lutheran churches sang several anthems and each gave a number of selections separately. J. P. A. Uksila sang two fine solos and Miss Edla Lammi rendered one. Miss Elsie Williams accompanying herself on the organ gave a very pleasing selection.

The pastor in addition to his address of welcome spoke briefly in the latter part of the concert.

William Huovimen offered prayer. A. W. Oksanen gave a lecture on "Music."

The concert closed with a benediction by the pastor. An effort is being made to show the Finnish people that the ordinary worldly amusements do not offer the best kind of a good time and furthermore the pastor is trying to show them that a good time may be had in the church just as well as outside.

of the past of this church longed to hear of this day. Their work is a part of your triumph. This building is good as it is, is not yours but for service. Mr. Bryant emphasized the fact that it should not be considered too good; that boys and girls were worth more than carpets, and that souls were worth more than a little paint and oil.

Memorial windows are placed in the church in memory of Charles H. Hall, Aroline J. Hall and Mary R. Lee, by Mrs. George W. Hight, Jr., Percival A. and Charles A. Hall, in memory of their parents and of their life-long friend, Mary R. Lee. For Rev. Joseph L. Roberts, by his wife, Mrs. Frances E. Roberts. For Adin Packard Wilde, by his mother Mrs. R. H. Wilde. For Roger H. Wilde, by his friends. For Jacob Kolb, by his daughter, Miss Louise S. Kolb. For Horace W. Carver and Marion P. Carver, by their aunts, Mrs. E. E. Willey and Mrs. W. S. O'Brien.

The choir of the church is under the direction of Albert P. Briggs of Cambridge, and appeared for the first time in vestment. The ladies of the choir had made their own cassocks of black and cotters of white, which were very becoming. At the opening of the service they entered from the rear of the church near the main entrance. The members are:

Sopranos—Miss Annie Harding, Mrs. W. F. Cummings, Mrs. Ernest L. Newcomb, Mrs. W. A. Hartley and Miss Grace DeWolfe.

Altos—Miss Maude Read, Mrs. Albert H. Hall, Miss Florence Hill and Mrs. Jean Arthur.

Tenors—George Deans and John Ward.

Basses—William Harding, Kenneth Blake and Malcolm Blake.

Organist—Miss Hazel C. Davison.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ROOM.

The Sunday School rooms in the basement are wholly above ground, and very attractive and well lighted.

The rooms of the primary department and kindergarten open into the main room by folding doors. The rooms were dedicated at 12 M. with special responsive readings, remarks by officers and others. The attendance of children was very large.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Although the new church has a seating capacity of 350 it was not large enough to accommodate the number who desired to attend the dedicatory exercises that were held Sunday afternoon beginning at 3 o'clock. Every seat was taken and in addition to this many chairs were placed in every available space. The exercises of the afternoon opened with an organ prelude and processional and responsive service by Rev. Charles H. Washburn of Neponset and congregation and invocation by Rev. G. H. Flint of Dorchester, and anthem by the chorus.

Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of the Bethany church was then introduced by the pastor, as one who had given him much good advice in the erection of the new church, and the one who a year ago had said to him the time is ripe for the new church.

Dr. Hardy said it was a great pleasure to be present because he had been privileged to be intimately connected with the work you have been doing here. It seems but a short time since the Congregational Union committee met with your building committee to see what was best to be done. We debated long and earnestly and finally the idea was impressed upon us that nothing short of the best would do. Turning to Rev. Mr. Davison, the pastor, Dr. Hardy said we can congratulate you sir, the general who has accomplished this work. You have been extremely fortunate in your leader and officers, for no general can do good work without good help. This building stands as a memorial of splendid leadership and conception. As a gift of these people who will be proud of it as the years go by. Because of this church, property will be worth more here. Homes will be better and the schools better. Every interest and institution will have some advantage accruing to it because of this church. It was splendid to have such an addition to a community. He brought his own and his peoples greetings, and congratulated the church on its splendid achievement.

Samuel Usher of Boston was introduced, representing the Congregational Union which had stood by the work of the building of the new church. Mr. Usher brought the congratulations of the union. The union was not a company of Congregational ministers but rather of churches who by delegates represented the work ofr the interest of the Congregational chrches. It means a union of corporation full of inspiration and promise. Thirty years ago churches would be advised to provide a place of worship with a burden of debt that nearly sapped its life. Today it is with the corporation of brethern that we get advice. He believed that better results were obtained in this way. The union has taken great satisfaction in the way this work has progressed. It seems fitting that the beginning of your life anew that there is something full of promise. I wish you God speed in the work you contemplated. Do not stop until you have completed your task, and if it becomes burdensome do not fail to let us know of it.

At this point Miss Alice Gertrude Coe of Atlantic sang a solo, after which the pastor said that it was fitting at this time that the people should be given a financial statement. He said that there was now due on the building $5,425. Of this amount $2,500 was yet to be received. The church needed $2,925 which he hoped to raise soon. During the past week the men of the church had raised $300 and he had set himself the task of raising $1,400 in all before he slept tonight.

Mr. Usher then made an appeal for funds after which pledge cards were distributed which were collected later in the afternoon. As a result of these pledge cards something like $200 was pledged.

The sermon of the afternoon was preached by Rev. W. W. Jordan, D. D., of Clinton, who was introduced as the one who had first led the pastor into the church and into the ministry.

Dr. Jordan expressed great pleasure at being present at this happy occasion. He could go back to the time their pastor entered into the kingdom. It was a rare thing to find a minister of such absolute sincerity and devotion to the interests of his people as he who is your leader. I congratulate you on having him as your pastor and he on having you for his people.

Dr. Jordan took for his text the words found in the 17th verse of the 28th chapter of Genesis. "There is none other but the house of God." There is a significance to a church of God which makes us rejoice in the dedication of every new church. It is God's house and he called it the new Bethel. The church holds a unique place among all houses as God's house. Clothed with sacredness and significance as it is set apart for divine worship. Let the church ever be to you none other than the house of God. As God's house the church is the scene of expression and influence in the life of man. Here the walls will resound with prayer and worship. We will here have communion through which we see the vision of God. Here men will come with sorrow and care and depart with rest and freedom. Here children will come. The young wedded and the old buried. Every scene in life is represented in the house of God. Every church of God is not only a meeting place but a power house from which religious influence goes forth into the world. Study the words that the church exists for those who never enter it. May it ever be the place to continuously learn of the love of God. That here men may be helped to the rightousness of life. My message of the church shall beof such inspiration that men shall continue to go to it out of service to Him.

Let your light so shine that your good works shall glorify not only you but your Fathers house. Let it carry blessing to this community. It is the privilege of the church to be the centre of activity that uplifts all around it. We know the lives lived for God are the most vital contribution to the upbuilding of a community. Every church is a concentrated force and all citizens must in a degree share its benefits, yet many never recognize it by their support or attendance. The church is a part of a great kingdom that is spreading throughout the world, the work of uplifting men to Jesus Christ. The church today has a clearer vision of her mission than ever before. It addresses itself to the great tasks in the world. Is it not true that we are all in the world to give a little push toward God, that we may be saved. This is the mission of the church that shall live in the world. So I am glad to bring you the congratulations of the church from which I come. From which your pastor first entered the church of Christ and bid you God speed.

The sermon was followed by another solos by Miss Coe, after which William F. Cummings, chairman of the building committee, formally turned the keys of the new edifice over to E. E. Willey, chairman of the board of trustees.

Then came the service of dedication by the pastor and people, after which the prayer of dedication was made by Rev. Edward Norton.

The service closed with the singing of a hymn written for the occasion by Mrs. Hattie E. Baker, and benediction by the pastor.

There was another largely attended service Sunday evening the sermon being preached by Rev. F. E. Emrich, D. D. of Boston.

The services for the balance of the week are as follows:

Monday evening, January 23, at 7.45—Reception and inspection of building; Greeting from pastors of Quincy; address by Rev. Asher Anderson secretary of National Council of Congregational churches.

Tuesday evening, January 24, at 7.45—Young People's service, conducted by the eY. P. S. C. E., addresses by representatives of Union.

Thursday evening, January 26, at 6.30—Dedication banquet by the Ladies' Benevolent Society, Mrs. Isabel S. Smith chairman; addresses by local speakers.

Friday evening, January 27, at 7.45—First prayer meeting in church. Addresses by pastor, deacons and others of church.

The tickets for the banquet Thursday evening have been placed at 75 cents each and the number is limited to 200. It will be necessary to secure them in advance.

BOSTON GLOBE'S BIG YEAR.

Boston, Jan. 24—By its great and solid growth since 1872 the Boston Globe has placed this city so that it ranks in journalistic circles with London, New York, Paris and Chicago. The average daily circulation of the Globe, selling at two cents per copy, last year was 183,720 and for last December the daily average circulation was 188,543. For the last year the average circulation of the Sunday Globe was 321,878, while for last December 330,717 copies were sold each Sunday.

The Globe goes into the homes of the substantial people of Greater Boston and New England, people with money to spend; therefore it is not to be wondered at that the Globe is recognized as the great advertising medium in this section.

This recognition is proven by the fact that the Globe's advertising receipts last year exceeded those of any preceding 12 months. Including all kinds of advertising, the Globe showed a gain last year of 586,831 lines over the amount printed in its columns in 1909, as it printed 7,922,108 lines of advertising. Its nearest Boston competitor printed 5,528,005 lines of such matter, while the next best showing of a Boston newspaper was 5,142,480 lines of advertising. These figures cover from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1910.

In every large city the bulk of the small advertisements of the community appear in either one or two of its newspapers. The Globe last year printed 479,877 separate small advertisements of the "want" class, a gain of 19,412 over what it printed the year before, and 347,148 more than appeared in any other Boston paper last year. This was because results can readily be traced, and advertisers know they get results from the Globe columns.

According to the last national census, 1,423,429 persons live within Metropolitan Boston, making "real" Boston the fourth largest city in the country and the tenth largest city in the world. Boston is the center of the most populous and wealthy community in America, and in the Globe it has one of the 10 largest newspaper properties in the world. Just what the people in this great community think of the Globe is well shown by its circulation and business showing for the past year.

DOER OF DEEDS.

It is not the critic who counts, not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood. — Theodore Roosevelt.

SIAM POSSESSES PRECIOUS BUDDHA

Is Replica of Ancient Figure at Pitsanuloke.

MADE OF GOLD AND BRONZE.

Late King Chulalongkorn, Determined That Bangkok Should Be Equally Honored, Called on People to Help In Furnishing Metal and Then Gave Magnificent Dedicating Celebration.

Siam was a short time ago the scene of one of the most interesting events of its history. The late King Chulalongkorn while touring in the northern part of his kingdom at the end of his reign visited the ancient town of Pitsanuloke, which contained within its walls a celebrated many centuries old figure of Buddha.

The king was so filled with enthusiasm by this statue that he made a vow to place a similar figure in the royal temple, Wat Suan Dusit, in the capital of his kingdom. He sent off some Buddhist priests immediately to Bangkok, ordering them to bring back six old bronze cannon captured during a war with Burma to Pitsanuloke. In the meantime the king so pushed on the work that by the time the cannon arrived the process of casting could be begun.

People Contribute Treasures.

Faithful Buddhists streamed from far and near and threw gold and silver into the glowing mass. Girls took off their costly jewels and offered them as a sacrifice. Whole families would gladly have given their all. In order that the sanctity of the ancient statue should be conveyed to the new two consecrated silver cords were fastened to the ears of the old statue and given into the charge of the highest bonzes, who watched day and night and sang and offered prayers incessantly.

Amid the rejoicings of the people, the casting was finished, and the statue, under the guidance of the king, was conveyed in solemn procession down the river to Bangkok, where the work of art was to be completed.

It is said that hundreds of chisels were broken during the work. King Chulalongkorn gilded the face himself and placed in the forehead an enormous precious stone. Then the whole figure was gilded and adorned with Buddhistic rosaries of fiery brilliants from the king's treasury.

At last the great day came when the new Buddha was to be brought to the royal temple, Wat Suan Dusit.

Brilliant Dedicating Procession.

The scene under a glowing tropical sun was so wonderful, so gorgeous in color, that it will remain unforgettable by all who witnessed it. The gorgeous statue of Buddha, as if carried by an invisible power, moved majestically on the glittering waves of the broad river Menam, followed by the purple and gold state barges of the king, the queen and the whole court.

Numberless Buddhist priests clad in yellow garments followed in long fantastic boats, singing to the curiously beautiful sounds of the Siamese musical instruments. Then came hundreds of little boats filled with the populace, who ended the strange fleet.

The front of the temple was left open to receive the statue of the new Buddha, whose golden body glittered in the sunlight. It was conducted into the temple to the sound of the Siamese national hymn, the festive ringing of gongs and the singing of the bonzes. Suddenly there came a great silence, during which the king with a ringing voice bestowed upon the Buddha the name Phra Chineral.

Big Philadelphia Hotel Plans Something Really New.

"Get into your automobile, ride through the park, then to the hotel driveway, shunt the car into an elavator, dash eighteen stories skyward and have a bottle of wine without leaving the car."

This is the new announcement of a big Philadelphia hotel. If you don't want to be served amid the odor of gasoline you can leave the car in the garage, 225 feet from the ground, and step into the glass covered roof garden.

In addition this hotel will have 300 more sleeping rooms on the roof, a convention hall to seat 1,500 people and four big private dining rooms. The improvements will cost $1,000,000.

Indiana Coal Town Plans Solution of High Living.

Union coal miners of Boonville, Ind., are planning to run a co-operative store as a solution of the high cost of living. The formulated plan for the store will be presented by a committee to each local union. Shares of stock will be sold for $5, and it is expected that a majority of the 600 miners in the city will help finance the store. Groceries, dry goods, clothing, household supplies and miners' tools and supplies will be sold.

The twenty storekeepers of Boonville do not know what the effect of the new store will be on their business.

CIVIC INCONGRUITIES.

To those who were familiar with the surroundings of railroad stations and factories years ago, the gradual change to cleanlier conditions, more sightly arrangements and something like harmony of relation with their sites is impressive. Still, this broad field of improvement has by no means been covered; there are many instances where a touch would work wonders in the way of removing glaring incongruites. In fact, one has to look somewhat closely even now to find many places where corporations, or even merchants, put enough altruism into their buildings and grounds. Yet notice of an increasing tendency in that direction is refreshing. It sets new standards that finally are appreciated by property owners, merchants, employees and communities.

There is a distinguishing quality for the manufacturing city in neat, commodious buildings, set off by well-kept lawns, with stately trees here and and there. Great importance attaches to the railroad station, the approaches to it and the structures nearby, stamped with industry or sloth, according to their material and size; this because a municipality's supposed features, displayed there for every traveler to read as he may, usually determine the municipal reputation for good looks, or their opposite. The ordinary observer has small opportunity to assign each portion its due; the hasty glimpse suffices. Who has not viewed with rising disapprobation evidences of inadvertency on the part of railroads, property owners or municipal governments after the abolishment of some grade crossings? And, again, who has failed to note the neglect of both factory structures and grounds in numerous industrial centers? Are we not all impressionists?

It behooves local governments to watch the work and plans of corporations whose activities come within the municipal domain, dealing fairly in all respects but requiring observance of regulations protecting the taxpayers. But local governments cannot in fairness overlook neglect on the part of individual citizens in matters whereof the outward show works against the best interests of the city. What any man does affects his brethern. It makes small difference whether the particular point is cleanliness, sightliness, harmony or utility. Neither the manufacturer, the railroad nor the citizen property-owner can properly avoid considering them. And the public is mere and more the court that has jurisdiction in these matters.—Christian Service Monitor.

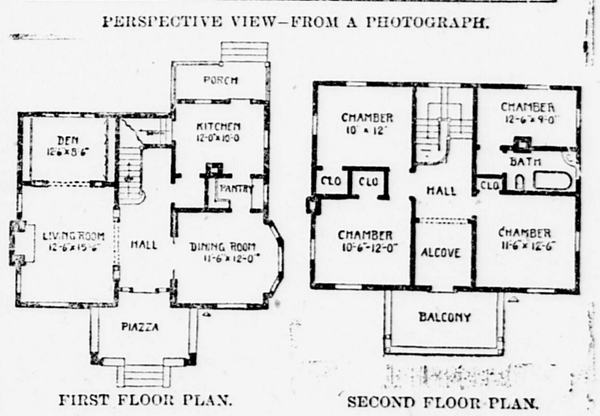
Model Residence For a Modest Sum

Design 865, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Here is planned a home that should make the heart of any housewife glad. It has all the conveniences of a residence costing many times the estimate here quoted, yet can be built for a modest sum. The living room covers practically the entire side of the house, but a sort of division made with a column archway allows the back of the living room to be used as a den or library. It is now planned to be used as a library or den, with bookshelves built in on each side. These could be left out and seats put in if so desired. The first story is to be finished in red oak or birch; second story in pine to paint. The size is 33 feet 6 inches wide by 25 feet 6 inches deep over main part. It has a full basement. The first story is nine feet; second story eight feet in the clear; first story sided and second story shingled on outside. Attention is called to the balcony in the second story, ample to seat eight or ten people and also large enough to be screened in and used for an open air sleeping room, being accessible from the alcove, which is practically a hall space or can be used for a sewing room. Cost to build, exclusive of plumbing and heating, $2,950.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 865 for $25.

THINKS HONOR DUE EXPLORER

Roberts Agrees That Peary Has Made Good His Claims

HE FILES A MINORITY REPORT

Contends That Investigation Was Conducted "In House of Peary's Friends"—Chart Without Merit, but Captain Was Near Enough Pole to Warrant Conclusions Reached by Majority of Naval Committee

Washington, Jan. 23.—Representative Roberts of Massachusetts, who has bitterly opposed any official recognition of Captain Peary's polar exploration until the officer made good his claims, filed a minority report in the house, concurring with the majority of the naval committee and recommending that the captain be rewarded by this government.

Mr. Roberts, in changing his mind, observes that the evidence seems to warrant the conclusion that Peary came near the Pole. He takes a parting shot, however, by saying the National Geographic society investigation of the Peary claims was conducted "in the house of Peary's friends," that it was not complete and that the chart the society submitted showing where Peary got to was without merit. Speaking of this chart, the congressman said:

"As it is, it is somewhat doubtful if the publication at this late day will remove the deep-seated doubts created in the minds of many people by the inadequate examination and report of the Geographic society, coupled with the reluctance of Mr. Peary in submitting to any tribunal other than the Geographic society his records and memoranda.

"Assuming the astronomical observations upon which this chart is based to have been made by Captain Peary as he states they were made, and there is nothing in evidence to the contrary, I am forced to the conclusion that Peary was within a very short distance of the Pole, sufficiently near to warrant the claim that he reached the Pole."

That Peary came within 1.6 miles of the North Pole—near enough to established his claim of having been at the exact spot—is the decision of the house committee on naval affairs, which has been considering the bill to retire Peary with the rank of rear admiral.

The basis of the committee's finding is the chart prepared by H. C. Mitchell and C. R. Duvall of the United States coast and geodetic survey, and based on Peary's observations. This chart shows that Peary went to the left on nearing the Pole, due to an error in his instruments. Later he crossed toward the Pole, his nearest point being 1.6 miles.

Representative Bates of Pennsylvania presented the majority report of the committee, recommending that Peary be retired with the rank of a rear admiral.

The majority report recommended the passage of the Hale-Bates bill giving Peary the thanks of congress and creating him a rear admiral on the retired list. A fight is certain to develop in the house over the proposed legislation. Representative Macon of Arkansas has indicated that he will oppose its passage on the floor.

FOR THE MATRON.

Here's a Winner In Evening Gowns of High Degree.

WHITE CHARMEUSE AND CHANTILLY LACE.

Yes, at first glance this gown has all the earmarks of extravagance; but, madam, just look a little closer and use your "gumption" a little bit, and it will suddenly dawn upon you that you have a black chantilly lace shawl that will make up beautifully into a model fashioned after the costume illustrated. It is a delightful mingling of black and white laces arranged over white charmeuse. The embroidery banding used as "bridgework" on skirt and bodice is a very new treatment. So is the coiffure ornamentation—pearl cabochons connected with jet chains. A jet and pearl buckle fastens the wide black velvet neck ribbon.

The Small Girl's Hobble Coat.

Hobble styles have invaded the realm of children's fashions, and the wee girl hobbles, or seems to hobble, just as mother does. As a matter of fact, the coat of the hobble order to be seen in the illustration assumes that grotesque fashion, although it has it not. The band holding the fulled portion of the coat at the bottom is not tight, but looks so and is of velvet. Black broadcloth makes the rest of the wrap. Children this winter are dressing a great deal in this somber black, and it is a pity to see the little dears so solemnly attired, but Dame Fashion's decrees must be obeyed.

A Remarkable Chapeau.

A new hat designed especially for the woman who has retained all the instincts of her savage ancestors is a helmet shape covered with tailless ermine and bordered with royal blue velvet. The decorations consist of two rosettes, each of which is made of twelve humming birds laid flat, with their bills meeting in the center.

FORTIFICATION OF CANAL

President Will Bring All His Influence to Bear In Its Favor

New York, Jan. 23.—President Taft has begun in earnest his campaign for the fortification of the Panama canal. His entire speech at the annual banquet of the Pennsylvania society in New York was devoted to this subject. He has high hopes that congress at this session will declare in his favor and appropriate $5,000,000 to begin the work.

President Taft will bring all of his influence to bear in favor of fortification. In his speech he declared that there were absolutely no obligations in the way of fortifying the canal; that the United States had every right and reason to protect what was purely an American waterway.

The president said he yielded to no man in his love of peace and hatred of war. At the same time he cautioned his hearers that universal peace was still a long way off, and he could not conceive of any patriotic American being willing to allow an attacking force free and equal use of a waterway which was built by Americans largely as an instrument for the defense of their country.

KEEPS POLICEMEN BUSY

Crazy Farmer Musses Up Things Before He Is Subdued

Saco, M., Jan. 23.—Manacled hand and foot, and with four policemen sitting upon him, Stephen Goodins, a farmer, six feet two inches in height, who went suddenly insane, was taken to the insane asylum at Augusta in a freight car.

When Goodins was finally aboard and the train left the station, a battered and bruised police force breathed easier. While he was locked up in a cell he wrenched an iron bed to pieces with his bare hands, set the cell afire, and managed to put the whole force in a blue funk, until the chief marshal and eight policemen, using strategy and strength combined, managed to overpower him.

Goodins is the wealthiest farmer in this part of the state. He was sunstruck about a year ago and has been queer at times since.

BOY SEVERS JUGULAR VEIN OF PLAYMATE

Wrought Up by Companions' Taunts of Cowardice

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 23.—James McKeever, aged 14 years, wrought up by the taunts of his companions, turned on Francis Donovan, a year older than himself, and plunged his jackknife into his chum's neck, severing the jugular vein, causing almost instant death.

The boys had been arguing over McKeever's courage, telling him that he did not dare to back up slighting remarks he had been making about Donovan.

The boys, all arguing, stopped at the gate when they reached Donovan's house. The others were urging Donovan to make McKeever retract, when McKeever, whirling around, sprang at Donovan with his open knife.

With blood welling up from a deep gash in his neck, Donovan dropped into the arms of one of the boys, in front of his own gate. The stabbed boy was dead when he was laid on the ground.

McKeever was arrested. He advanced as his excuse for the stabbing that the other boys had been plaguing him all the way home from Sunday school and that Donovan was just going to fight him when he plunged the jackknife into his chum's neck.

HORNET MUST BEHAVE

Guard From United States Vessel Placed Aboard Honduran Gunboat

Washington, Jan. 23.—The Hornet, General Bonilla's revolutionary gunboat, which has been promoting his cause along the coast of Honduras, has been boarded by a force from the American gunboat Tacoma.

The information came in a wireless dispatch to the navy department from Commander Cooper of the U. S. S. Marietta. The dispatch merely stated that it had been found necessary to place a force on board in order to detain the Hornet, and added that details would be reported later.

Two Artillerymen Asphyxiated

Providence, Jan. 23.—Joseph Scott and Chester Pouns, members of the coast artillery corps stationed at Fort Adams, Newport, were accidentally asphyxiated at a local hotel. The men were on a day's leave of absence. Medical Examiner William Magill pronounced death due to accident.

OUR FISHERMEN ARE ALARMED

Report That Treaty Will Put Fish on the Free List

GARDNER TAKES MATTER UP

Says Reduction of Duty to Even a Half Cent Would Practically Wipe Out Industry In Bay State—Reciprocity With Canada Is Reached, but Its Terms Are Not Revealed by the Commissioners

Washington, Jan. 23.—Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts will confer with the president today over the terms of the reciprocity treaty now being negotiated between this country and Canada, and will, if possible, convince the president the present duty of ¾ of a cent a pound on imported fish should remain. Without this duty, Gardner says, the Gloucester fish industry will be destroyed.

The report is prevalent here that the duty will be taken off fish entirely if the terms of the new treaty become a law, and this has alarmed the Massachusetts fishermen.

In discussing the matter Gardner said the reduction of the fish duty to ½ a cent even would so cripple the industry as practically to drive Massachusetts fishermen out of business.

With the simple announcement that an understanding had been reached and that certain formalities probably would be completed by Thursday, the commissioners representing the United States and Canada in the negotiation of a reciprocal trade agreement adjourned.

At the conclusion of the meeting the commissioners issued a joint statement. Further than this they positively refused to add a word on the subject, carrying out, it was said, a promise made in the meeting room that the short statement, consisting of less than thirty words, would be all to be made public at this time. The official statement is as follows:

"The negotiators have reached an understanding which, when certain formalities are completed, will be made public at Washington and Ottawa. It is thought this may be done next Thursday."

Asked if the statement that "certain formalities" would be completed probably by next Thursday meant that Secretary Knox and the other American commissioners would go to Ottawa, the commissioners merely replied that to answer that question or any other would be a violation of confidence contained in the understanding agreed upon.

The undisguised delight of the commissioners when they adjourned and the cordiality they exhibited toward one another evidenced their satisfaction over the outcome of their negotiations.

"POEM" DRAPED IN CREPE

It Adorns Door of Office of Recent Sturgis Commission

Augusta, Me., Jan. 23.—The dissolution of the Sturgis commission has brought joy to the hearts of the Democrats. A fair expression of the attitude of the Democratic members is contained in the following poem, which, draped in crepe, is attached to the door of the enforcement commission's office:

IN MEMORIAM.

Here lies the bodies of Phoenix, Havey and Oakes,
Three men who died from Prohibition jokes.
Peace to their ashes and of their deputies,
Those sleuths for graft and parasites of ease.
By Fernald fed and pampered, by Cobb created,
Cursed by the public and by Plaisted assassinated.

ASK FOR LOWER STEPS

Hobblers Find It Difficult to Board Providence Trolley Cars

Providence, Jan. 23.—In an effort to harmonize the hobble skirt and the accommodations provided patrons by the local street railway company, 354 members of the Rhode Island Women's club petitioned the city council to institute a crusade for more and shorter steps on trolley cars.

The substitution of two steps instead of the single high one attached to the platforms of most of the electrics in service here is requested in a lengthy memorial to the city fathers.

Stabbed In Fight With Chicken Thief

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 23.—Samuel White of this city was stabbed in the head in a hand to hand encounter with a chicken thief. Awakened by his wife, White ran out into the yard in his pajamas and surprised the thief in the act of walking away with four of his hens. After using his knife the thief escaped.

Stiletto Used In Card Game

Watertown, Mass., Jan. 23.—Frank Gouda, 38, staggred into the police station last evening and said that he had been stabbed during a card game in the open air at Saltonstall park. He will recover.

NEW BERTH FOR HILLES

May Become Taft's Secretary Upon Retirement of Norton

Washington, Jan. 23.—Charles D. Hilles, assistant secretary of the treasury, has been offered by President Taft the position of secretary to the president, made vacant by the resignation of Charles D. Norton. He is considering it.

Hilles has contemplated retiring from public life March 4, but whether the offer will serve to keep him in the public service is entirely conjectural. He declines to discuss the matter.

Future secretaries to the president probably will be men of cabinet calibre. This announcement was made at the White House in connection with the proposed retirement of Norton.

Under the reorganization of the executive force which has brought about Norton's short term at the White House, all of the force, with the exception of the secretary, will be practically a permanent body.

NEW USE FOR HOBOES

Artist Has Them Posing as Models For Historic Group

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 23.—It can no longer be said that tramps are useless. In Wilmington they are used as artists' models. The more unkemp they are, the greater the demand.

This was demonstrated when Henry J. Soulen, a noted artist, utilized the second of a pair of hoboes whom he found in a cheap saloon as a model for a buccaneer. He is painting a group of seventeenth century pirates drinking at a table outside a Spanish inn, on a commission from the Democratic league of this city.

The work will be Soulen's greatest effort. The hoboes are posing as the pirates.

GETS A LIFE TERM

Sentence of Fireman on Battleship Who Killed Water Tender

Washington, Jan. 23.—The heaviest punishment ordinarily meted out in the navy in time of peace has fallen upon Ernest H. Walker, a fireman on the battleship Louisiana, who killed Patrick J. Fitzsimmons, a watertender, at Cherbourg, France.

The sentence of a court martial, just confirmed by the navy department, is imprisonment for life for Walker. He will be confined in the New Hampshire state prison at Concord.

Eight Chinamen Killed In Riot Following Death of a Coolie

Hankow, China, Jan. 23.—The death of a coolie, who was found in a state of collapse by the British police, resulted in serious disorders Sunday. The Chinese suspected that the police had killed the coolie and rioting began in several sections.

British and German gunboats landed detachments, and fierce fighting followed, in which eight Chinese were killed. The viceroy is sending native troops to restore order.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Hickory Nut Cake. Three eggs, one cup milk, one cup sugar, two-thirds cup butter or good dripping, three cups flour, two rounding teaspoons baking powder, one cup nut kernels.

Baked Bean Soup. This is an especially good soup, and provides a use for any left-over baked beans one may have. Cover the beans with cold water in a sauce pan, allow to simmer until very soft, then strain, add cream to make desired consistency, season well, and serve with toasted crackers.

Curried Potatoes. Two cups potato balls or cubes, two level tablespoons butter, one level tablespoon finely minced onion, two level tablespoons flour, one level tablespoon curry powder, one-half level teaspoon salt, one cup hot milk, one level tablespoon finely minced parsley. Cook the potato balls in boiling salted water until tender (about eight minutes.) Drain and keep hot. Melt the butter, add the onion and cook for three minutes, then add the flour, curry powder and salt mixed, and when blended add the hot milk gradually. Stir until it boils and cook for five minutes. Strain over the potatoes, reheat, pour into a hot serving dish and sprinkle with parsley.

Orange Cake. Yolks of three eggs, whites of two eggs, pinch of salt, one cup of sugar, juice of one orange, one-half teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-half cupful of water, grated rind of one-half orange, one cup rounding full of flour, one rounding teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separate. To the well-beaten yolks, add the salt, gradually beat in the sugar. Add the fruit juice, water and the orange rind, and the flour in which the baking powder has been sifted. Beat well and just before baking fold in the well beaten whites of the eggs.

Frosting. To the well beaten white of one egg, add one tablespoonful of orange juice, a little of the grated orange rind and enough confectioner's sugar to make a paste thick enough to spread on the cake.—Lavinia E. S. Powers.

Grandma Turner's Beau

How Love's Afterglow Came to Doxie Turner

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Miss Doxie Turner opened the door wide to admit the bulky figure of her neighbor.

"My land, but it's come off cold, Doxie," shivered Beulah Norton as she hovered close to the warm kitchen fire. "I thought my knitted shawl would be plenty warm enough, but it seemed like I had nothing on."

"Sit down, Beulah; here's my rocker. Don't you want some hot spiced cider? I was just going to fix some for myself." Miss Doxie brought a jug of sweet cider from the cellar and poured a quantity into a stone pinkin and set it on the stove to heat. She added some nutmeg and ginger and stirred it carefully. When it was hot and steaming she poured the cider into two large china mugs and brought out a plate of doughnuts.

"When I passed the old Bunderman place the wind was howling in those locusts fit to drive you crazy. I wonder at Howard wanting to go back there to live again." Beulah watched Doxie's startled face with furtive eyes.

"I didn't know Howard had come back, Beulah. I thought he was settled in Omaha."

"So he was, but—you know Lucy died most a year ago and left him with those two little girls on his hands. I guess he found it hard work doing for them and keeping at his job, too, so he came east a few days ago, thinking Estelle would take care of them so's he could get work in the shipyard. She's lived alone there so much I guess he thought she'd be glad to have him back home again."

"Didn't he knew she was married?" asked Doxie curiously.

"No more than any of the rest of the village suspected it might happen. Captain Lees, he's been real mousy about courting Estelle, and then their streaking off to the city and getting married last Saturday was the biggest surprise Fernville ever had. 'Twasn't like a boy and girl elopement—you expect that—but Estelle Bunderman and

"ISN'T IT BEAUTIFUL, GRANDMA?"

Captain Lees are both over forty, and nobody cared whether they ever got married or not."

"Who's taking care of the little girls?" asked Doxie rather diffidently.

Beulah reddened and for the first time appeared flustered. "I am,", she said bluntly.

"You are? I didn't know you cared much about children," remarked Doxie slowly.

"I don't especially, but I have plenty of time, and ma said we might as well help Howard out till he got a housekeeper. You can't guess what that young one's called!" she repeated.

"I can't guess unless it's after Lucy's Aunt Hyacinth Moore," suggested Doxie, rising to her slender height. "I remember when Lucy and I went to school together she used to think her aunt had the loveliest name in the world."

"She wasn't named after her mother's Aunt Hyacinth Moore," mimicked Beulah, rather crossly. "Lucy Bunderman was awful tender hearted, and I guess her—conscience kind of bothered her the way she'd acted toward some folks, so she named the second little girl after one of her old schoolmates. I must be going now. Good-by."

When Beulah's red shawl had flickered from sight Doxie turned back to the sunlit room and sat down once more.

An attack of neuralgia had confined her to the house for several days, and consequently she had not heard of Howard Bunderman's return to Fernville. Nearly every pleasant day when she went down to the postoffice she passed the Bunderman place, and whenever she saw Estelle's pale face at the door or window she would wave a hand in greeting, and sometimes Miss Bunderman would come out to the gate and chat for awhile. But she never mentioned her brother nor anything about his affairs to Doxie Turner. Indeed, no one in Fernville dreamed of repeating Howard's name in Doxie's hearing.

If they had only known, Doxie would not have minded their mentioning the name of Howard Bunderman, to whom she had once been almost engaged to be married, nor of Lucy Moore, who had been the village belle and madcap who had got Howard away from Doxie and married him, some said, out of pure love of mischief. It was known that Lucy bitterly repented of her wickedness, for her husband did not love her as dearly as he did Doxie Turner, yet never by look or deed did he betray himself. But Lucy Bunderman knew. The postmistress said that Lucy had written a letter to Doxie once after her marriage, when she had gone out to Omaha to live, and that a letter from Doxie Turner had passed through the office in reply. That was all. Nobody ever knew what Doxie Turner thought about the matter. She always looked the same, tall and fair and sweet, with wistful blue eyes that never overlooked a duty undone.

Now she suddenly arose from her chair with a little exclamation of dismay. She opened the door into the sitting room where Grandmother Turner sat in the sunny bow window knitting furiously at a long white stocking.

Apple wood logs were singing and sizzling in the drum stove, and there was the pleasant odor of cedar from the old lady's open cedar chest.

"About time you took your tonic, grandma," suggested Doxie. "I forgot all about it. Have you been lonesome in here?"

"Not a mite, Doxie. I'm too busy to be lonesome. I heard Beulah Norton's voice in the kitchen, and I was scart to death afraid she'd come in here. I can't abide her!" Mrs. Turner jabbed her needles into the wool and paused for breath. Her black eyes sought her granddaughter's face with a keen inquiry.

"What's the news, Doxie? Something's happened—your face is real pink."

"I guess it was the spiced cider I've been drinking," evaded Doxie as she moved to and fro preparing the tonic. "Beulah was real cold when she came in, and I heated some cider, and, besides, the kitchen's getting most too hot."

"What's the news?" persisted Mrs. Turner, making a horrible face over the medicine.

"You know Estelle and Captain Lees went to the city and got married last Saturday."

"Of course I know, Doxie Turner! You told me yourself! I guess I know what Beulah Norton came up to tell you." She looked narrowly at the younger woman.

"What then?" asked Doxie defiantly.

Mrs. Turner folded her wrinkled hands and looked out of the window. "Beulah came up to tell you that Howard Bunderman had come back. I've known it ever since he came, Doxie. Somebody run in and told me when you was down to the postoffice. I feel dreadful sorry for that poor fellow. I guess he had a hard row to hoe with Lucy Moore, though I bet he tried to do his duty by her. And after she got him I guess she wasn't real happy over the way she'd treated you. They say before she died she named the second little girl after you."

"After me?" Doxie's face radiated with a strange glow. "Did Lucy name her little girl after me?"

"Yes," snapped grandmother sternly. "'Twas the least she might do after making so much trouble all around. Lucy wanted to marry Jim Turrell, but he didn't care for her, so she got around Howard and married him for spite. She was a clever one. She fixed it so he couldn't get out of it, and first thing Howard knew he was engaged to her instead of you."

"How did you know?"

"It came direct from Lucy herself," returned Mrs. Turner with dignity.

Doxie opened the stove door and looked at the fire. The red glow shone on her sweet face and discovered her blue eyes wet with tears.

"Something else I never told you, Doxie," resumed Mrs. Turner, knitting busily. "Before Howard married Lucy Moore he came here and told me all about it. He said he knew it looked as if he was a coward and a villain, and he asked me what do do. He said he didn't like anybody but you and he'd never be happy if he married anybody else. I advised him to go and tell Lucy what he told me. He did tell her, and she said she'd rather marry him even if he didn't love her a bit, and so he did. Doxie Turner, Howard Bunderman is a hero! What are you going to give me for supper?"

"I'll cook you a poached egg, grandmother," said Doxie in a queer little tone as she kissed the gray hair beneath the old lady's cap.

"I'd like it kind of early," went on the indulgent old voice. "I'm rather expecting a beau tonight. He came last evening and talked to me through this window when you was across the street. I told him he better come tonight. I hope you don't mind my having a beau, Doxie! What—say?" she called after her granddaughter.

Doxie turned suddenly and came back. Kneeling beside Mrs. Turner, she dropped her head against the bent little shoulder.

"Isn't it beautiful, grandma?" she whispered. "It's wonderful after doing all those things Lucy should be sorry and then name the little girl after me—after me! Somehow it seems as if I'm happier now than I was before anything happened at all. I wonder why it is."

Mrs. Turner was looking out at the red and gold sunset that crowned the short November day. "After suffering comes the purest joy, and it comes just when you've settled down to dreariness. Hark, was that the gate? Hurry, Doxie. I believe my beau is coming now!"

SICK KEEPER STICKS TO HIS POST OF DUTY

Tends White Island Light Even When Unable to Walk

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 23.—Through the rescue of Captain James Burke, keeper of the White island light, sles of Shoals, comes a tale of unselfish devotion and heroism.

Shut off from rescue by roaring seas, and sick with pneumonia, his wife helpless and his assistant gone, Burke for six long days overcame obstacles that would have balked a weaker man, and faithfully kept his light shining as a beacon for sailors.

Several times nightly Burke crawled on his hands and knees from his wife's bedside to the light tower to care for the big lamp.

Finally he succeeded in signalling the Wood island life saving station. But when the life savers attempted to rescue Burke and his wife the tremendous seas kept them from landing.

Over on the banks of the Piscataqua the story of the keeper's plight reached the ears of Captain Hoyt of the tug Mitchell Davis. "I'll get Burke and his wife to mainland," he told the life savers.

And he did. But not before he had jockeyed with the waves that wear smooth the rocks on White island and several times his dory came near being swamped and dashed upon the jutting reefs.

May live to fight another day,
But he who is in battle slain
Can never rise to fight again.

WOMAN'S CLOTHES AFIRE

Miss Blanchard However Was Not Badly Burned

Hose 4 responded on a still alarm shortly after 8 o'clock this morning for a slight fire in the Joseph Lapham house on Washington court. An attempt was made to sound an alarm from Box 72, but the box did not work. The fire alarm men, however, found the box to be all right.

The fire was in one of the upper rooms of the house, occupied by Miss Blanchard, and was caused by an alcohol lamp taking fire. The burning fluid set fire to her clothing, and to the bed clothing. Her screams brought Mr. Lapham to the scene who succeeded in extinguishing the fire in the woman's clothing, and Hose 4 put out the fire in the bed clothing with a chemical stream. Fortunately Miss Blanchard was not badly burned.

THE ADVANCED GUARD IN HATS.

Hats are going to turn up and not down in the spring. In other words, the extinguisher chapeau has extinguished itself, and no more will the masculine cry be heard, "it's hard enough on a fellow to remember the faces of all the girls he knows when he meets them on the street, but when he's only a chin to recognize them by it's awful!"

The hat model pictured clearly displays the face of the wearer and is smart in the extreme for the tailored girl. The trimming consists of a twist of velvet about the crown, and the velvet faced brim is pierced with an aigret.

THE Y. M. C. A. VS. MAKARIA

Former Team Wins First Match of the Series

The most closely contested and interesting games of the season were seen in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium in the first of the city championship series between the Y. M. C. A. teams and the Makarias. The players were so evenly matched that there was no particular star and the score was so close that the victory might have been decided the other way in the last minute. The Y. M. C. A. first team defeated the Makaria first by a score of 20 to 17. Most of the scoring was done in the first half, the Y. M. C.A. getting 15 points and the Makaria 11. But three baskets were shot in the second half, two by Makaria players and one by a Y. M. C. A. man.

The first half was productive of the keenest interest on the part of the spectators. First one team would get a basket then the other evened things up and so they seesawed back and forth until near the end the Y. M. C. A. team got a lead of two baskets. The second period was a harder battle than the first but the ball did not seem inclined to be caged vere often. Numerous fouls were called and the Y. M. C. A. was one ahead in the final score in that respect as well as in goals from the floor. It is impossible to pick out any one who played better than all the rest. Dackers deserved credit for getting the most baskets but Jenkins and Mundie playing back were responsible for two each and every man contributed substantially to the good showing of his team.

The Makaria sprang a little surprise on their rivals by giving them such a close contest and the next game will be awaited with eager interest.

The summary:

Y. M. C. A.	MAKARIA
Dackers, rf	lb, Marden
Gourlie, lf	rb, Mundie
Claflin, c	c, Tupper
Jenkins, rb	lf, Glover
Morris lb	rf, McKenzie

Score—Y. M. C. A. 20; Makaria, 17. Goals from floor—Dackers 3, Gourlie 2, Jenkins 2, Mundie 2, McKenzie 2, Tupper, Glover. Goals from fouls—Morris 5, Tupper 2, McKenzie 2. Gourlie, Marden. Referee, Eickbauer, Scorer, LaRose, Timer, Nicoll; Time 20m halves. Attendance 300.

SECOND TEAMS.

The second teams had a battle royal as well as the first string men and although the final score 28 to 22 was not quite as close as that of the other contest, the game was just as exciting and the Makarias might have pulled out with a victory at the very end. The score in the first have was more of a seesaw than was the case with the first team and everyone was receiving a succession of thrills as first the red and blue and then the red and grey would shoot a basket. Bonney was undoubtedly the star of the first half.

In the second half there was no one brilliant stellar player, five men, two on Makaria and three on the Y. M. C. A. team caging two baskets apiece. Findley and Tirrell deserve special mention for their fine playing and Childs of the Y. M. C. A. quintet played very commendably. Trask, Holmes, Rich and Dineen played especially good basketball also. The match was quite as interesting as the one between the first teams and the man for man comparison would find the players as evenly matched as the bigger men. The gallery and side lines were filled with sympathizers of the two teams and enthusiasm was at its highest pitch throughout the evening.

The summary:

Y. M. C. A. 2nd	MAKARIA, 2nd.
Newcomb, rf	lb, E. Nicoll

"Yes," answered Jerrold, "unremitting kindness."

RIB BROKEN BY FALL

Woman Was Leaving the Finnish Church

Mrs. Gilberg of Allston, a visitor at the Finnish church Sunday evening met with a painful accident while coming down the steps. Slipping on the second step she fell sidways and landd havily on the sharp edge of the granite balustrade. Dr. Groenlund was summoned and in the meantime Mrs. Gilberg was taken to the home of Mrs. Pyyny, 15 Buckleye street, in an unconscious condition. Upon examination it was found that a rib was broken. After the fall she rolled dwn two or three steps but was caught by a young man before she reached the sidewalk. Her condition is not considered serious. Mrs . Gilberg was rather a stout woman of middle age. She is a frequent visitor in Quincy and is very much interested in the church work.

DOUBLE BEREAVEMENT.

In a letter just received from Mrs. Fisher,wifeof J. Stillman Fisher of School street, she gives the sad intelligence of the death of her sister, Mrs. T. W. Price of Lynn, Indiana. Mrs. Price has been sick for sometime and a telegram last fall called Mrs. Fisher and daughter Nana to her bedside. This seemed to rally the patient and under careful nursing she lingered until Wednesday last, when she passed peacefully away and was laid to rest on Friday by the side of her husband, who was placed in the grave only three days before.

Sorrows never come singly, as was certainly shown in this family. Mr. Price, a hearty robust man of sixty-eight years, who never knew sickness, enjoying the best of health and always in the best of humor, was suddenly stricken with heart failure on Friday evening, Jan. 13. He was full of fun and happy as ever at the supper table, and, as it was stormy, said he would close up his store and be home early. While making change for a customer, he was seen to fall to the floor, and when assistance reached him, he was found to be beyond human aid. He died instantly, and was carried home a corpse in less than two hours from the time he had left.

One son, Everett, living in Montrose, Col., was notified and upon his arrival Tuesday morning, the funeral was held from the church, which was filled to overflowing with friends and representatives from the different organizations of which deceased was a member. These included the Masons, I. O. O. F., K. of P., A. O. F. and several business orders.

This sudden and very unexpected shock to th widow caused her to fail rapidly and on Wednesday she passed away. A son and daughter are left to mourn in this twice suddenly stricken family and they have the sympathy of numerous relatives and friends.

Mrs. Fisher and Nana will visit among relatives for a few weeks and then return to Quincy.

CRIMINALS.

The history of the nineteenth century is filled with the reforms which were directed not merely to the improvement of criminal codes and the mitigation of punishments for crime, but to the better care of the insane, of paupers and of prisoners, who had been treated in the eighteenth century far worse than animals. In some of our states and in many countries of Europe the death penalty has been abolished, even in cases of murder. Before the era of reform there was little or no public sympathy with the criminal. Today we seem almost to have reached the point where the sympathy is so strictly confined to the criminal that there is none left for the victim of the crime. The abolition of capital punishment does not appear to have brought about the condition postulated by Talleyrand, who, when he was urged to support the abolition of the death penalty, said he certainly would if the murderers would begin by giving up murder.—Henry Cabot Lodge.

SELF DENIAL.

Use your money as you see fit, but always remember that the highest service we can render to our Maker is to help others who are less fortunate. It may take some self denial to do this, but what good can be accomplished without self denial? —John D. Rockefeller.

For the Children

Little Pu Yi, Baby Emperor of China.

While Pu Yi is the emperor of China, he does not rule over that great nation yet. He is too young for that. Some day, if he lives to grow up, he will sit on the throne. At present his father, Prince Chun, is the real ruler, acting for his son. Prince Chun is the brother of the late emperor, who died a couple of years ago.

Pu Yi was born in February, 1906, and is therefore nearly five years old. When he becomes emperor he will be able to exercise but a small part of the autocratic power by which his predecessor ruled. China is advancing and has already decided to have a constitutional government. So Pu Yi must reign according to the written law and not as the emperor would decree under the old system.

Valentine Archery.

Cut from red kindergarten paper as many hearts as there are people. Divide in two lots. On the back of one lot write halves of verses and the other halves on the back of the second lot. Pin one lot a couple of feet apart to a white sheet and hang at one end of the room, removing breakable things from the vicinity. The other lot distribute to the girls. Each boy will in turn try to pierce a heart on the sheet with the bow and arrow given him. The one he comes nearest to belongs to him, and he finds his partner by the half verse on the back. For instance, Teddy pierces a heart on the back of which he finds:

The rose is red,
The violet blue.

And he searches among the girls till he finds Nellie has:

Sugar is sweet,
And so are you.

They are partners for the next game or for supper or whatever is arranged.

A Wonderful Person.

With what amazement would you regard a person who had a million ancestors? Yet by looking into a mirror you can behold the very individual—yourself.

Now, we each had two parents, a father and a mother, both of whom had two parents. Thus, on this principle and assuming there has been no intermarriage of relations, a person who has had four grandparents has had eight great-grandparents. And our lineal ancestors during twenty generations number 1,048,576. So if these ancestors were all living they would be sufficient to populate Wales.

Conundrums.

Why is a nobleman like a book? Because he has a title.

What class of women give tone to society? The belles.

What is that which has a mouth, but never speaks; a bed, but never lies in it? A river.

Why is a four quart jar like a side-saddle? Because it holds a gall-on.

Why are airships like tramps? Because they have no visible means of support.

What islands would form a dainty party luncheon? Sandwich and Madeira.

Ingenious Wasps.

In South America lives a wasp that hangs from the boughs of trees a nest tough as pasteboard and remarkable also because the hole through which the branch is passed is so large that the nest swings freely in the wind. In most of these nests the hole is simply made through the thick upper part of the structure, but sometimes this is so molded that it looks like a ring. This wasp is named chartergus, a name derived from two Greek words meaning papermaker. The average nest is about a foot long and wide in proportion.

Dorothy's Valentine.

Wee Dorothy sits by the little stand,
With paper smooth and white,
A pencil held close in her chubby hand.
Her eyes with smiles are bright.

She has drawn a tree and painted green
The leaves of a vivid hue.
Her flowers are the brightest ever seen.
Their size is marvelous too.

She wonders if papa will ever know
From whom the picture came,
For mamma says that it will go
Without the sender's name.

Her work she thinks is rather grand
For a little girl, you see,
And secretly hopes he will understand
"To papa dear—from me."

"COMMUNITY HOUSE" PROPOSED FOR WOLLASTON

Advanced Step Taken at Annual Meeting of the Unitarian Church Which Meets With Favor

Salary of Rev. Carl G. Horst Increased----Progress All Along the Line of Church Activities

At the annual parish meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Monday evening a $300 increase was made in the salary of the pastor Rev. Carl G. Horst, and steps were formally made in the movement for a community house for Wollaston. Walter J. Wellington who has held the office of treasurer ever since the organization of the society was again reelected.

Reporting for the parish house committee appointed at the last parish meeting, Eugene H. Sprague called upon Frank A. Page, another member of the committee, who outlined a plan for a community house in place of the proposed parish house of the church.

The building should be for the use of all the Wollaston churches and proper societies and contain a large hall and the necessary ladies' parlors, committee rooms, supper rooms, etc., enlarging if the demand required for gymnasium, reading rooms and the like.

Such a building, while the expense would be out of proportion to its use for a single church, under the present conditions in Wollaston, could be used to great advantage by this parish and the rest of the 5,000 people of Wollaston at a maximum of benefit and minimum expense.

To erect a parish house would be to narrow denominational lines while the erection of a community house, as proposed, would increase the spirit of brotherhood and good fellowship.

As the result of this report, a motion was made and carried for the appointment of a committee of twelve men, headed by Mr. Page, and as many ladies as deemed advisable, to thoroughly investigate the matter and take whatever action necessary in keeping with the object of the committee.

The parish meeting opened with the reading of the warrant by the clerk William H. Boynton, followed by the report of Dr. Charles S. Adams, president of the parish. In the latter report Dr. Adams mentioned the improvements and events taking place during the past year, giving an encouraging report.

The treasurer's report showed the society to be in excellent standing with a good balance in the treasury. The report of the parish house committee by Eugene H. Sprague and Frank A. Page followed.

Mrs. William E. Rowe, reporting for the flower committee, told of its work and made an earnest appeal for funds. The mission of the "Dial" the weekly organ of the parish was told by its editor, Mrs. E. J. Cummings.

Mrs. F. A. Page reported for the Earnest Workers' Lend-a-hand society, telling of the charitable work it was doing.

The first annual report of the Junior Lend-a-hand society, an organization of young girls formed on November 1, 1910, was read by its secretary, Gretchen Horst.

The report of the Sunday School was given by Frank A. Page, who stated that while the financial condition was excellent other features were not so encouraging.

J. Harry Hooper, president of the Young People's Religious Union reported for that body telling of its meetings and work the past year.

The Unitarian club was reported to be in its eleventh season and in a flourishing condition by Charles H. Brigham, its president.

Mrs. William H. Boynton reported for the Unitarian Church Helpers, an organization a little over a year old, which in this short time, has accomplished a large amount of work.

Upon motion of Mr. Wellington a hearty vote of appreciation was made to Nathan S. Robinson, former clerk of the parish, who resigned last summer on account of removal to Sharon.

Mrs. Frank A. Page, acting president of the Ladies' Aid Alliance, gave a resume of the year's work, telling of the good that had been accomplished and the money raised by the society that "works with its hands as well as its head and heart." Over $400 was raised by the society and several general meetings were held for the benefit of the public. The society has the membership of an even hundred with every hope of an increase.

In the second annual report of the minister, Rev. Carl G. Horst, it was recommended that a cradle roll be added to the church departments, and that a secretary for the same be appointed. It was also advised that the annual contribution for the Unitarian Sunday school society take place at a regular morning service of the church

PURCHASE BY RAILROAD

Three Estates and Strip of Forty Feet Secured

It is not generally known, perhaps, that the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has just completed an important real estate deal at South Quincy, whereby a large tract of land between School and Water streets has passed to their ownership. The tract in question is a strip forty feet in width on the east side of and bordering the railroad tracks.

The property taken includes the house and land known as the Cronin estate on School street, and a strip from the land occupied by E. L. Bean, Charles H. Spear, J. B. Sutherland, Sarah Kincaide and N. B. Furnald. Several houses now located on the land will be moved, but the sale of the Kincaide and Furnald lots are said to include the buildings on Water street.

It is not announced what the property is to be used for, but it is understood to be necessary in laying of the proposed four tracks and the separation of the grade crossing at Water street. Before the purchase the railroad had a right of way about fifty feet wide near Marsh street, but it will now be nearly double. Between Federal avenue and Penn street the railroad has a right of way about 112 feet wide. A few years ago the railroad purchased a strip of land from the present freight yard on Presidents avenue nearly to the Braintree line, and on the curve near the estate of John Q. A. Field took an additional strip of 27,000 square feet to straighten the line. The railroad probably has inside knowledge at this time how it is proposed to abolish the grade crossing at Water street. An early report may be expected from the commission.

MISSIONARY WORK.

Rev. John Lilback spent the first three days of last week on Cape Cod, conducting revival services in Wellfleet, West Barnstable and Hyannis. Next Saturday evening he will go to the meeting of the State committee on Finnish literature in Fitchburg. A motion will be introduced by Mr. Lilback, changing the denominational publication from a magazine to the newspaper form. On Sunday he will be the principal speaker at the 16th anniversary of the Finnish Young People's society of that city. He will also read an original anniversary poem. The Quincy pastor will also have charge of the morning and evening services of the church in Fitchburg.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Rev. R. G. Davis was called to Providence, R. I., late Saturday evening, owing to the serious illness of his mother. It is not expected that she will live owing to a complication of diseases. She was found unconscious upon the floor by her other son upon his return home Saturday evening. The doctor pronounced her case very serious since she had had a cerebral hemorrahge and a paralytic stroke. At the latest report Mrs. Davis was a little better, but not out of danger. She will be in the hospital for at least two weeks. Mr. Davis will return to Quincy on Wednesday, unless there is a change for the worse in the meantime.

REAL BOSTON MEETING.

The special committee on the "Real Boston" movement of the Civic League, Merchants Association and Board of Trade met Monday evening to take steps toward a public meeting to discuss the Real Boston plan. Wendell H. Hull was appointed a committee to consult with the Boston Chamber of Commerce relative to furnishing speakers for such a meeting the date and place of the meeting to be announced later.

RECEPTION AND INSPECTION

At New Memorial Church At Atlantic

The second day of dedication services at the Atlantic Memorial Congregational church was given over to congratulatory services, reception and inspection. The services were held in the auditorium of the church beginning at 7.45 P. M. The vested choir led the singing in a short praise service after which the pastor Rev. Thomas W. Davison offered prayer.

REV. T. W. DAVISON.

The visiting clergymen were then introduced. Rev. James A. Matheson, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. John L. Garland, of the Atlantic Methodist church, brought the greetings of their respective congregations, and offered their own congratulations to the pastor and people upon the erection of the beautiful structure which has been dedicated for the worship and the service of God. The atmosphere of sanctity and grace and purity impressed both speakers and determined, in a measure, the nature of their remarks.

The service in the auditorium was concluded by a splendid recitation of Tennyson's "The Lady of Shallott," by Miss Maude Read.

Afterwards, those who had not already done so, took a tour of inspection through the church. An informal reception was held in the vestry during the latter part of the evening. Music was furnished by the I. O. O.F. orchestra of the John Hancock lodge, Wollaston.

The church was well filled at the opening services and most of the people adjourned to reassemble in the vestry and talk it all over. The committees appointed for the building of the church came in for their share of the congratulations at the reception, as well as at the formal service in the auditorium.

The service this evening will be in charge of the Christian Endeavor society. There will be a reorganization of the society and brief addresses by representatives of the East Norfolk C. E. Union. A general invitation is extended all members of the Union to attend this service beginning at 7.45.

The dedication banquet served by the Ladies Benevolent society will take place Thursday evening at 6.30. After dinner addresses will be made by local speakers.

The first prayer meeting in the new edifice will be held Friday evening at 7.45. There will be addresses by the pastor, deacons, and other members of the church.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

One year ago today news was received from London, that the Fore River Shipbuilding company had received the coveted contract for two battleships. The Argentine commissioner proved the pen mightier than the sword, by signing the contract which would bring the Quincy concern $22,000,000. And Quincy has profited greatly in many other ways. We have come to know "the other Americans" better than ever before and to appreciate more fully the advantages of inter-continental relations in commercial and social life.

On the other hand the people from Argentina may have gained something from their life among us and perhaps a lesson has been learned by them in witnessing the bustling prosperity among us, their northern brethren.

In the meantime, the Rivadivia and the Moreno are taking shape, and both will be launched this year.

The Atlantic Memorial church certainly has a new edifice of which to be proud. Everything being new, it is probably the most attractive church of the city today, although not as large or as well equipped as some others. The people have much to be thankful for, and the outlook is bright. We understand, however, that some of the leaders ofthe church have protested with a Boston paper because said paper located the church in Quincy. This is hardly the right spirit, for Atlantic is Ward Six of Quincy, and Atlantic needs Quincy, and Quincy needs Atlantic. If Atlantic does not wish to be known as a part of Quincy it should never expect to have a successful candidate for Mayor of the city. Probably that was not the reason for defeat at the last city election, but might be in the future. For three years a resident of Atlantic has represented the city in the Legislature. The indifference of Atlantic to Quincy is also illustrated by the fact that the Memorial church went to Stoughton for the printing of its dedication programs. It is only another case where home trade does not count, and the work of local newspapers does not seem to be appreciated.

There is just now much agitation of the question of fortifying the Panama Canal. Philanthropists, peacemakers, or perhaps sentimentalists are opposed to any step looking toward military protection. Statesmen and militarists, on the other hand, are unable to see safety except in fortreseses and big guns. Congress has been memorialized by distinguished men and women who made much of the argument that the Suez Canal was without fortification and that inasmuch as England had left this Canal open and undefended, there was no reason why the Panama Canal should be forfeited. This statement, however, appears to have been presented without complete geographical or political knowledge. A sum equal to the cost of the Panama Canal would not be sufficient to fortify it as strongly as the Suez Canal is fortified. The fortification of this Canal begins on the west at Gibraltar, is continued at Malta, at Cairo and Alexandria, and on the east at Aden. In other words, England has full and tight control of the Mediterranean at Gibraltar and of the Red Sea at Aden. No enemy can approach within hundreds of miles of Suez without accounting to Great Britain. It is true that there are French and Spanish and Turkish and Austrian ports on the Mediterranean or connecting waters, but their naval forces are insignificant as compared to the fleet that England constantly maintains in what is substantially a British lake.

THERE IS NOTHING SAYS MR. MILLER

That Would Help the Granite Industry More Than a Chance to Ship by Water

Advocates Large Business Men's Association to Get Results

Editor of Daily Ledger:

I have noticed lately that you have been advocating a getting-together-spirit in our city, and instead of so many small associations, that have but little power, have one grand business men's association. I am in hearty accord with your endeavors.

We now have the Granite Manufacturers' Association, Board of Trade, Civic League and the Merchants Association, and nearly all their objects are either local, or wholly selfish, and devoid of power. I believe what we want is a strong business organization (I care not what name you give it) that will be a power and get things done. There never was a time when a unification of all business men was so needed as now.

No city of our size and with our exceptional advantages, is so dead to its opportunity. Our exceptional long water front laying dormant, when a small outlay might make our city a port of entry of no mean dimensions. How slight would be the expense to dredge the creek up to the Electric Light plant and build a suitable wharf where vessels of at least a thousand tons could come and load and unload. To carry the idea still fruther, the expense of digging a canal from that point to the low marsh land on Coddington street would be as nothing to the benefits to be derived from water transportation.

Here we are at the mercy of one niggardly railroad, that will give us nothing unless they can see an immediate gain to themselves, yet we appear to have got to the point where our people say "What is the use, we can't help ourselves, we are at their mercy," and lay down and go to sleep.

Mr. Editor, just consider the large tracts of low land we have, that is so well adapted for large factories, iron manufacturing, woodworking industries, woolen and cotton factories, all depending on water transportation. In my judgment, there is nothing that would contribute so beneficially to the granite industry as a chance to ship our products by water.

No one man can bring these things to pass, but one strong united business men's organization could accomplish it. We have so many little organizations that all our time is wasted in attending meetings, many of which are so purely selfish in purpose that they only tend to retard unification in one body for the general good of the whole city.

Mr. Editor, keep up your agitation, keep the bugle call sounding in their ears and perhaps some leader will come forth to lead our people out into a larger and a richer Quincy. It appears to me that our greatest lack now is one great strong leader who would have influence and power, and could get us out of our selfishness, but so long as we stand still and find fault with the other fellow, so long will we fail to take advantage of our priceless inheritance in the location we have within eight miles of the centre of the great city, with miles of water front and bays within a half mile of our City Hall, that only requires the most trivial expenditure to make them navigable for vessels of average tonnage.

Just think of walking down Coddington street and boarding a steamer for a moonlight sail down the harbor. To show the great advantages of water transportation, at present it takes from eight to fifteen days to transport a monument by rail from Quincy to Brooklyn, N. Y., yet even a sailing vessel would land it there in three days, and a steamer in one. I shipped a monument last fall to Yarmouth, N. S. It left my works on Thursday morning and Friday night it was all set up in the cemetery there in half the time, and half the expense that it could be shipped to and set in New Bedford, so I will repeat the prayer, "Oh, for one strong central organization, that will stand for Quincy, last, and all the time."

Sincerely yours,
John L. Miller.

WOULD BE AN INJUSTICE

To Further Assess Marshfield for Fore River Bridge

Editors of Daily Ledger:

As one of the Selectmen of Marshfield, I wish to correct the impression or statement made that any person has approached the officials of Marshfield in any spirit other than that of open fairness and frankness, regarding any additional expense to be put on the town for repairs to Fore River bridge. That the injustice of putting expense for this bridge on the small South Shore towns was shown to and elt by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., is very evident by the offer made by them, through Mr. Crane, to share with the small towns the expense of widening the draw.

While the officials of this town appreciate the interest taken by the company and Mr. Crane, they feel that the time has come, when Marshfield with 75,000 square feet of bridge surface within its own town and a substantial share of Powder Point bridge ta wooden bridge over 2,700 feet long within the town of Duxbury) to maintain, should be relieved from any further expense in connection with Fore Bridge bridge.

LOBBY FOR THE PANAMA SHOW

Sharp Rivalry Between San Francisco and New Orleans

CALIFORNIANS SET THE PACE

Everyone Who Has Slightest Connection With Congress Plentifully Supplied With Free Wine and Oranges—Cresent City, Not to Be Outdone, Has Imported Squad of Bartenders to Dispense Free Drinks

Washington, Jan. 24.—When the house receives a report from the committee on industrial arts and expositions designating New Orleans as the city in which an international exposition should be held in celebration of the completion of the Panama canal, the last stage of a most picturesque, if not edifying, lobbying scheme will have been reached.

Members of congress are familiar with lobbyists and their methods; hotel proprietors have welcomed them as lavish entertainers, but seldom has Washington seen lobbying carried on so extensively as during the past three or four weeks by the boomers of San Francisco and New Orleans.

The entertainment furnished by the representatives of the two cities has not been confined to the members of the committee on industrial arts and expositions, or to the members of congress. Everyone who had the slightest connection with congress or who would give a bit of publicity was looked up by the boomers.

In view of what has taken place in Washington during the past month it is considered remarkable that no member of the house and senate has criticised the methods employed by the exposition boomers. San Francisco set out to put members of congress and many others not connected with congress in a friendly state of mind by bringing to Washington an unlimited supply of California wine and innumerable boxes of oranges. For many days the express companies of Washington were swamped with cases of wine and boxes of oranges for delivery throughout the city.

San Francisco was making excellent headway, and had a goodly proportion of the population of Washington sipping claret and port at dinner, and eating California oranges at breakfast. Just about the time the San Francisco supply of wet goods was exhausted the New Orleans boomers seemed to have reached the conclusion that the best way to demonstrate that their city was the proper place for the exposition was to follow the same general policy of their rivals, so far as alcoholic refreshments were concerned, with the exception that New Orleans specialized.

Instead of distributing their liquors in bottles at the homes of official Washington, the New Orleans boomers opened up headquarters n a centrally located hotel, imported a squad of bartenders and announced that New Orleans was holding open house. Those bartenders were kept busy from morning till night. This sort of thing went on for days. Members of congress, senators and representatives alike, did not hesitate to visit the headquarters to sample the drinks which the boomers predicted would give joy to the heart of the visitor to New Orleans during the exposition.

San Francisco having supplied its friends with boxes of oranges in addition to cases of wine, New Orleans could not afford to be outdone. Hence hundreds of boxes were prepared for delivery at the homes of the folks whose names were on the mailing list. New Orleans furnished a greater variety than San Francisco, and the thrifty housewife who came into possesion of one of the boxes found oranges, nuts of various kinds, a tiny bottle of famous cocktails, and other delicacies. How much money was spent by the boomers of the rival cities is a matter of speculation, but it is certain that it ran up into the thousands and that a very large percentage of it was spent on alcohol.

Now the boomers are sitting back to see what the verdict of congress will be. Figuratively speaking, if the Sazarac cocktail and gin fizz proved to be the most palatable of drinks supplied by the two lobbies then New Orleans will get the exposition. A report favoring that city nas already been prepared by the house committee on industrial arts and expositions. It is for the house to decide whether that report shall be accepted. While the committee may have preferred the city of cocktails and fizzes, there is a possibility that the house itself may be partial to the port and claret of California.

The lobbying is not yet over, but from this time forward the boomers will devote themselves to arguments with only incidental entertainments.

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1911

How to Cure a Cold

The inner surface of your lungs is a delicate mucous membrane, thinner than the finest tissue paper. Behind these fragile walls the blood circulates and meets the air as it is inhaled.

A deep-seated cold affects this delicate lung surface. Such a cold almost invariably leaves the lungs in a weakened condition, and this, combined with a lowered general vitality, turns them into a favorable settling ground for the tubercle bacillus—in plain English, the Consumption germ.

This, in a few words, is the history of the beginning of Consumption in nine-tenths of the half-million or more cases in the United States.

That's why you should never let an ordinary cold run unchecked.

Before it is through with you, it may be the cause of your death.

This sounds alarming, but it is plain truth. A cold by itself cannot cause Consumption, because that dread plague is a germ disease—and the germ must find lodgment in the lungs before consumption can begin. We all breathe in millions of these germs every day, but our lungs are strong enough to throw them off.

But—

Lungs weakened by a deep-seated cold are not able to throw off the invading bacilli—and the result is that the most formidable of diseases has another victim.

This being so, you should treat every cold as being full of deadly possibilities. Treat it at once with Sirolin—which your druggist has—and, no matter whether it is slight or deep-seated, remember that the most obstinate and distressing cold rapidly yields to its influence.

Sirolin dispels the peculiar and well-known symptoms experienced in the head and the respiratory organs, and does it by healing the surfaces affected by the cold. The curative action is vigorous, and so much so that if a few doses are taken early in the attack its severity is at once diminished and its duration greatly reduced.

Obviously, after this treatment there can be no after-effects of a disease character and it follows that consumption seldom ensues upon a cold treated with Sirolin.

Sirolin Prevents Consumption By Relieving the Cause

Children like Sirolin, because of its pleasant taste.

Sirolin relieves the distress of coughing almost immediately.

La Grippe is conquered by Sirolin. It relieves all the disagreeable symptoms quickly, and effects a cure in a few days.

What Is Sirolin?

Sirolin is the celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

Sirolin is a physician's remedy—not a patent nostrum—and it is known the world over by leading medical men.

Sirolin not only relieves the local symptoms and protects the tissues against the invasion of the tubercle bacillus, but—in addition to this—it promotes appetite, increases weight, and acts as a tonic.

Its creation and use throughout the world marks a distinct advance in the treatment of coughs, colds and other pulmonary affections. Sirolin is clear, syrupy liquid—pleasant to the taste.

Your druggist knows about it. Ask him for it.

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug

BRILLIANCY.

Brilliant men like to have as their helpmates brilliant women. The essence of marriage is companionship, and the woman you face across the coffee urn every morning for years must be both able to appreciate your jokes and to sympathize with your aspirations. SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Large Congregations and Many Helpful Thoughts

QUINCY POINT CHURCH.

The pastor, Rev. Charles P. Marshall, preached Sunday morning on the theme: "The Christian a Leader." In the evening the text was taken from Matt. 13. "Three aspects of the Christian life." was the title of the pastor's sermon.

The Men's Club will hold their meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Inasmuch as it is the 151st anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns the club will hold a Burns evening. There will be poems and songs and many original features for which the Point people are noted.

An all days sew will be held at the home of Mrs. P. H. Holman on Wednesday under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society.

On Friday evening at 7.30 the regular church prayer meeting will be held. These meetings have been especially helpful during the past few weeks and it is hoped that the good attendance of the last few meetings may continue.

Preparations are being made for special services on Sunday, February 5. The day marks the first anniversary of Mr. Marshall's pastorate at the Point, and special observance will be taken of the fact.

FIRST CHURCH.

At the First church Sunday morning Rev. Ellery C. Butler took for the subject of his sermon, "Gideon said I'll have none of this." After the reading of the scripture, Frederick J. Maples sang a solo "If with all your hearts."

Monday evening a meeting under the auspicees of the Alliance in aid of the Sunday School was held in the chapel. The subject of the meeting was "The question of the Sunday school." The speakers were Rev. Edward A. Horton and Miss Harriet E. Johnson. The junior alliance joined in this meeting.

The Junior Laymen have secured Dr. Allen secretary of the Boston society of natural history to speak before them Monday evening Jan. 30. Dr. Allen will give an account of his trip through Africa collecting animals. The talk will be illustrated with the stereopticon.

The Laymen are also working upon an entertainment to be given March 10.

Commencing Feb. 6 a course of free lectures will be given every Monday afternoon at King's chapel, Boston, on "The Eastern church."

CHRIST CHURCH.

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good," was the subject of Rev. Richard E. Armstrong at the Sunday morning service at Christ church. At the evening service his subject was on the same line. The services opened Sunday with holy communion at 8 o'clock.

On Wednesday there will be holy communion at 10 A. M.

The parish supper of the Women's guild will be held Wednesday evening at 6.30 and will be followed at 8 o'clock by the annual parish meeting.

The annual meeting of the Boys' club scheduled for Wednesday evening has been postponed one week on account of the parish meeting.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The pastor, Rev. Carl G. Horst, following his usual custom took for his scripture reading at the morning service words found in the book called "The Soul of the Bible," the selection Sunday being from St. Matthew and St. John. Two words sufficed for the text of his sermon "Judge not."

Wise warning was given those whose impulse is to hastily and harshly judge those whose actions only are seen and of whose motives nothing is known. Such criticism is especially unjust when we remember how little we can any of us be acquainted with the inner lives of even our most intimate associates. The kindly, generous encouragement of the good we see in those we meet in daily life forces the spark of divine fire to a steady flame and society is lifted up and helped by man's belief in the nobleness of his fellowman. People tend to be what we expect them to be and harsh criticism hastily and foolishly spoken is often a greater reflection upon the critic than he realizes since our own mental and moral condition is a large factor in our measurement of the motives of others. We should be mindful of our own faults and failings before we express too strongly our judgment against our neighbor—but it we must at times sharply criticize, let it be always in love. The discourse closed with the familiar and ever true words of our own poet, Whittier:

"Search thine own heart! What paineth thee.
In others, in thyself may be.
All flesh is frail, all hearts are weak
Be thou the true man thou doest seek."

The annual service in charge of the music committee was held by the Young Peoples Religious Union in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry on Sunday evening with great success, a large number attending. Rev. Carl G. Horst told the interesting but pathetic story of the origin of the hymn "Oh to bee nothing nothing." During the evening vocal selections by a chorus composed of Miss Margaret Hall, Hattiemay Mitchell, Ernestine Litchfield and Louis B. Weston, George E. Brown, Ray Weston, accompanied by Mrs. Frank A. Page were enjoyed. Piano solos by Miss Gertrude Lacey proved pleasing to those present.

The Whatsoever circle, King's Daughters, will meet with Mrs. George Thompson, 170 Arlington street, this evening at 8 o'clock.

The annual parish meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held this evening at 7.45 o'clock. The usual supper will be omitted this year. Reports from the church officers and committees, the allied societies and the minister, including that of the committee on the parish house, will be submitted at this meeting, and plans for our future welfare and success will be discussed.

The Rev. Thomas Jay Homer of Melrose, who exchanged pulpits with our minister last spring has received an enthusiastic call from the Pilgrim church in Attleboro.

Among the special Lenten preachers at our church this year are the Rev. William H. Lyon D. D., of Brookline and the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, who has a world wide reputation as an astronomer of Winchester formerly of Taunton.

"The Continental versus the New England Sunday" is the subject of next Sunday morning's sermon. The public is earnestly requested to hear this timely sermon.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor's Bible class met Sunday morning at 9.30 with a record breaking attendance.

The morning sermon was preached by the pastor; subject: "The revival at Sycher." The male choir rendered several special anthems.

The church was filled at the evening service which was powerful and inspiring. The topic chosen by the pastor for his evening sermon was "The Hidden Christ." There was special singing at this service also.

The Women's Society will meet with Mrs. Berglund, 162 Glendale road, Thursday afternoon.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30.

A special invitation to attend the Christian Endeavor rally in Bethany church, Feb. 6, has been received from the East Norfolk C. E. Union. Rev. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple will speak at the rally. There will be excellent vocal and instrumental music. All the young people are urged to save the date.

THE GIRL FROM ACROSS.

"Oh!" said the girl, in a tone of shocked surprise. "Is it here?"

A woman from below answered, raucously affirming that it was the abode of the Man.

The Girl looked up at the attic door in absolute dismay. She was pretty, very pretty, and young, and stylishly dressed. She lived over the way in two charming rooms, where pretty girls like herself and nice boys were glad to take tea. She had heaps of friends and studied at the college.

Why, she, the daughter of an American citizen, should aspire to medical honors in Auld Reekie was by no means clear. "Poppa," busy in Baltimore making dollars, pulled his chin whisker and "guessed there were diploma factories enough their side the streak." But "Poppa" evidently had to give way, as every one alike had to where Maisie was concerned. So a self-possessed damsel of twenty-two summers and three brass-bound trunks, marked with the Stars and Stripes, arrived in L——Walk.

And He—the man who knew everything, and was a professor at the college—lived here!

She hesitated a moment, doubtful of the propriety of intrusion. He was a great man, and a professor of integral philosophy, which is a very abstruse subject to take a degree in, still more so to teach.

The Man knew everything—except how to compel buttons to remain on shirts, and to keep mice from his provisions, to tidy up his rooms, and the principles of household economy, general comfort and such like trifles, which were not included in the curriculum of any college he had ever heard of, being even outside the limit of integral philosophy, and, as affairs that chiefly concerned women, of no matter.

Then she went boldly up to the door and knocked.

The Man was sitting at a large table covered with papers, his trousers turned up and his feet immersed in a pan of once tepid water.

Oblivious to everything outside his own thought he sat and wrote.

He was engaged on a great work, to be published in two volumes at the scientific book-seller's—and also in adding many lines and furrows on his face.

Life was short, but the power of man is great. In his short travail he had held the lamp of truth to many hidden mysteries. What secret should escape him? What line of demarcation stay his search? Meanwhile, there was one thing only—to work.

That was why his eyes peered dimly over his dull, dark folios, and his feet splashed in the cold water. He had forgotten to take them out.

His pen shook a little as the crabbed characters formed themselves on the sheets of his manuscript. Doggedly he wrote on exultant, determined, while some one knocked, unheeding.

"The Principia Vitae.' He underscored the headline and began a fresh paragraph, as some one entered—"The Principle of Life is—a pretty girl!"

That is not what the Professor meant to write in his great treatise, nor is it what he would have acknowledged or realized at any ordinary moment. I do not pretend to know the psychological reason that explains the phenomenon. It may have been the retina of his eye received an impression which disturbed and dominated the current of his thought and automatically his hand transcribed. Anyhow, it was there, in black and white, and anyhow, she was there also, clad in dainty muslin.

He looked dreamily at the bright figure from over his clouded glasses. His tired gaze rested on the blue of her eyes, the gold of her hair, the red of her mouth and the freshness of her bright young face, as on a beautiful picture destined only to fade. Then he sighed, wearily.

Even then, however, his mind, bent on the great work, was not wholly equal to the situation. He addressed her laconically, as he would have done the charwoman who tended him.

"Well!" he grumped.

The pretty Girl looked at him for a moment. A half-stifled laugh at his surliness rose to her lips. Then the amused merriment died out from her eyes, and they renewed their look of sympathy.

"You are the Professor?"

"Well!"

"And I am the girl over the way."

"What girl—what way?"

He hadn't noticed her! Her feminine sense was distinctly hurt. Other men's observant admiration was more apparent, even to obtrusiveness. But it is not pleasant to feel one has been needlessly ignored.

"I live the other side the street," she explained, flushing slightly. "And study under you at the college."

"Ah, yes!" He memorized her now, as a collector does an unlabeled specimen in a box. Back row, pink complexion, a flower generally on desk in front of her. Answers averagely intelligent.

"Won't you sit down?" he said, with well meant politeness, indicating to her, by a wave of the hand, the only unoccupied chair.

She repressed a smile as she noted its bottomless condition.

"No, thanks," she responded, "I would rather stand."

There was a pause. He listlessly fingered his pen, but his brain was tired, and moved slowly. The Girl returned to the object of her visit.

"I—I—heard you were ill—and brought you these"—indicating the grapes in the basket.

He raised his brows and nodded.

"Can I do anything?"

"I think not," he replied absently. "I need nothing!"

"Perhaps"—she made the suggestion with difficulty—"perhaps I could tidy up."

He looked around on the litter in surprise.

The room was no more palatial than its approach suggested. The one window looked out on the lank telegraph poles as comrades, and commanded a charming view of the chimneys over the way. For furniture there was a wardrobe, an old armchair, that did duty also as a bed, a rush-bottomed chair, a cupboard, a few cooking utensils and some chemical apparatus grouped round the hole in the wall, called by courtesy a fireplace; and lastly and chiefly, a large kitchen table and —the Man.

The table contained chiefly papers. Its drawers held some scientific instruments and a mousetrap. The wardrobe held old clothes. The cupboard served as food store for both Man and mice. And the Man contained knowledge.

"Tidy up? It is all very tidy, thank you. Mrs. Stamp, my charwoman, has done everything—I—am very comfortable, thank you."

"But you are ill.'

"I shall soon be better." There was silence. The Girl sat uncertain what was best to say or do. Something splashed under the table.

She started in alarm. "Oh, what was that?" She cried.

"My—er—pedicular extremities," he ejaculated.

The Girl stared in astonishment and turned red.

"Yes. I beg your pardon. I—was not expecting visitors, and my landlady told me if I put them in hot water it would do my cold good."

"But that water is cold."

"Yes—now. I forgot. But it was hot."

"Had you not better get back to your bed-room?"

"This is it."

And he lived day and night, ate and slept in the desolate attic! The girl shuddered. No wonder he was ill.

"Then where is your bed?" Surely the Man of Knowledge slept sometimes.

"Folded up." He indicated the chair on which he was seated.

"Won't you let me make it up for you, and then lie down?"

The Professor started with astonishment. "Young lady! None ha' waited on me to that needless extinct, sin—sin my ain mither died—and she were a foolish wummun." He relapsed into the broad Doric on special occasions when the cold current was stirred to the depths far below the surface.

The Girl's eyes filled with tears. "Then it is time some one did it for you now," she murmured. "Oblige me, Mr. Morphyn, please, by taking your feet out of that water and changing chairs."

"Eh!"

At first he was inclined to rebel, But there was a conciliatory pleading in her face that even a hard-headed professor, resent it as he would, could not resist.

"Now! Just lift your feet a little, please." He looked at her curiously from under his shaggy brows. It was a child he was dealing with, or rather, who was dealing with him. Of what worth was it to resist? He lifted his feet and she tucked them in the blanket, and unperceived put another wrap round his shoulders.

She heaved a deep breath of satisfaction when her task was satisfactorily accomplished. The professor still sat over his books. He certainly felt warmer than he had been before.

The Girl, her point gained, went quietly on, tidying up and arranging the couch. She tripped gently out of the room once or twice and held mysterious consultations with the raucous-voiced woman below. Some more coals appeared in the room, the scrap of fire glowed brighter, the litter of pots and pans disappeared, being relegated to the crowded depths of the professor's cupboard.

A gentle hand touched his sleeve. He looked round on the transformation which had been going on unbeknown to him.

"There! Now you will go back to bed. And I will let the doctor hear, and look in again on you later."

He saw her depart with a sigh of relief, and watched the gold-crowned head with its sunny smile disappear behind the rickety door with evident satisfaction. Now he would be able to really work.

"Go to bed," she had said, as though expecting implicit obedience—he a staid professor, already in his gray-haired stage, meekly to obey a mere chit of a schoolgirl—filia pulchra—Daughter of Eve. Pish!

He laid down his pen, his head throbbed wearily. The cold sheets looked inviting. He stroked them with his hand. In ten minutes nature had conquered, and he was resting his burning head upon pillows her dainty fingers had straightened and smoothed, and his lips sought gladly the cooling drink her thought and care had placed near by.

Meantime the Girl was interviewing the Professor of Medicine. He heard her story with surprise, then went out and fetched the Head.

The Head, a grave, clear-headed man, pursed his lips and leaned the tips of his fingers against each other meditatively as he listened to the Girl's recital.

"Strange--dear me! Alone, you say--"

The Head gasped with astonishment. Morphyn had always been an extreme recluse, but such lack of comfort and dubious surroundings for a man of means was, even to them--grave, studious men of modest, even ascetic habit--inexplicable and unreasonable.

They listened to her story with suspended amazement. Thanked her gravely and bowed her out.

As she reached the step the Head coughted. "Miss—Hopkinshaw—er—in future—er—with a nurse—er—in attendance—er—there will be no need to call—that is, a repetition of your opportune visit will be inadvisable."

She flushed scarlet. "May I not see my patient?"

"We shall be happy, Miss Hopkinshaw to give you particulars of his progress, but for you to call there will be scarcely—er—"

Then the reason dawned on her.

"I see."

Her features set fixedly and the words fell coldly—"It would not be proper."

"—Er. He will have every attention," the embarrassed Head explained. The Girl turned on her heel.

"Of course, we are more than grateful for your kindness—" but she was gone, and the excuses and reasons which were addressed to empty air, though more fluent of delivery, sounded horribly unconvincing to the two men, the sole auditors, as they reiterated them soothingly to each other.

Propriety! Yes, she had acted with American freedom, she supposed, in venturing to knock at the neglected door. Propriety would have left him to die. Propriety, as typified by that fussy old dame who shuts her eyes to everything disagreeable that does not prowl under her very nose."

She sat by her window while the sun flecked with crimson clouds the scanty yellow sky over the way.

She watched a cab draw up—a sparse figure and a corded box deposited. That was the nurse, she supposed. She picked up a book and tried to read.

* * * * * *

Night came darkly down. The shops lit their lamps. Unmindful of the darkness she sat in the window seat and brooded with hot cheeks over the Head's edict. About nine o'clock she saw the nurse go out. Then she did a daring thing. Putting on her cloak she stole warily up the rickety staircase.

He lay apparently asleep. The window was open. The nurse's tea things lay about, but little seemed to have been done for him since the morning. The fire was nearly out. Bending down quietly, she breathed fresh life into the dying embers, freshly piled the fuel, and, with a last look at the fever-puckered brow, flew down the stair, her heart aching strangely for the desolate man, and in mortal dread of discovery.

The next day, toward afternoon she met the owner of the raucous voice in the street. Her inquiry as to the Professor was met with a shaking of the head, accompanied by incoherent murmurs that might have been the result of despairing pessimism or alcoholic stimulant. Mention of the nurse evoked only a sniff in reply, together with a shake of the head, and the contemptuous production of a gin bottle, suggesting a vice which the raucous-voiced one evidently strongly disapproved of—in others.

And he was lying there—worse than alone—in such care. That women so degraded crept into the ranks of an honorable profession, she knew. But that he should be at the mercy of one of these! That night she watched the woman out, but dared not go up.

* * * * * *

In her doubt and despair she turned into the street. Amid the flare of the lamps, she saw a figure with bonnet and cloak awry drop out of a common bar and into the seething crowd.

The Girl flew back, and up the rickety stair.

The raucous one met her at the head, her voice more husky than ever. "Time some 'un come," she said. "Lor' 'elp 'im!" and in her grief she pulled again with a broken sob, at the bottle.

The Girl went in and bent down over the lonely man.

The fever had left him, but something else was fast ebbing with it. The life, hope and the lonely soul were speeding out to the dancing waves of the unknown sea. The waters sang in his ears. The spray bubbled and foamed through rosy beams of sunlight, and the hymn of the Unknown sounded eternal over all.

A few drops remained in the hollowed bowl of an emptied brandy bottle on the littered table. She poured them out, and hastily diluting gave them to the dying man.

The rainbow land and emerald seas turned leaden hued, the waters gurgled and droned painfully. . . The man opened his eyes. . . Did he know her?

A step on the stairs. The dour Professor of Medicine's broad shoulders darkened the door.

"Lassie, forgive me," he said. "I thought—"

"Yes, you thought," she answered bitterly, "Now it is time to do."

"Then let me help you," he said humbly.

"He is dying," she replied, in a choking voice.

The gnarled face of the old Scotch doctor looked sadly into her own. Its rough features softened with a look of regret for his misjudgment, and the mute appeal in them was irresistible.

They shook hands as they bent silently over the dying man.

"Tonald," the broken professor cried, "you know me? I've kem to pull ye through."

The Man's eyes wandered slowly around the shabby room in search of her. . . . She knelt by his side.

The wan face turned paler—the feeble lips quivered. The Girl bent her head. . . He recognized her presence.

"Sin . . . sin . . . my ain mither died—" he murmured, and, clasping her slender hand, his mind passed back to the river of endless song.

* * * * * *

But the Man did not die. Nor did the college Head regard too seriously the breach of decorous restriction, for the Girl took her degree after all.

The Professor coming to the conclusion that his education was incomplete, took one, too—in matrimony, and in this his name and the Girl's were bracketed together equal with honors.

And the heads of the college fervently congratulated themselves, whenever they met Mrs. Morphyn, on their unusual foresight in overlooking a Samaritan indiscretion. For, had they done otherwise, their necessarily frequent meetings would have been, to say the least of it, very awkward. —Lady's Pictorial.

Committee on Ways and Means Has New Tariff Commission Bill

Washington, Jan. 24.—As a result of President Taft's demand that the house leaders give the country a real permanent tariff commission, the ways and means committee has abandoned its plan of reporting the Dalzell bill, making the present board permanent.

The bill agreed upon and to be reported will be substantially the bill introduced several weeks ago by Representative Longworth. It will create a permanent commission of five members and will confer the power of sending for persons and papers.

Unlike the interstate commerce commission, however, the tariff commission will not have the right to appeal to the courts to compel the appearance and the production of papers if manufacturers and others decline to recognize the commission.

FALL INTO AMBUSCADE

Hundred Federal Troops Are Slain In Northern Mexico

Presidio, Tex., via Marfa, Tex., Jan. 24.—That fully 100 of the government's troops were killed in the fight at Ojinaga, Mex., is the report received here. It is further stated that the heavy casualties were due to an ambuscade.

The government troops were caught in a trap and were literally mowed down by the storm of bullets which swept their ranks from three directions. The insurrectos occupied the cliffs and mountains and the soldiers were in the road with the only way of escape and that blocked.

The revolutionists' loss is said to have been slight, only five men being killed, according to their reports.

RARE MINERAL FOUND IN LONE STAR STATE

Miners Strike Vein Containing High Percentage of Platinum

Pecos, Tex., Jan. 24.—Texas has the distinction of containing the only producing tin mine in the United States, and is about to have the rare distinction of containing the first platinum vein found on the western hemisphere. A platinum mine has recently been opened in Gillespie county, between San Antonio and Pecos.

The first shipment of the mineral was made to Boston last week, and is said to contain a high percentage of platinum. Two shafts have been sunk on the property to a depth of 100 feet and connected with each other by a drift.

Nearly all the platinum now used in the United States is shipped from Russia, which is the chief source of the world's supply of this material. It is quoted at $41.60 f. o. b. New York per ounce.

BEATS MILE A MINUTE

Morgan's Special Train Flies From Washington to New York

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—What is believed to be the fastest railroad trip ever made between Washington and New York occurred when J. P. Morgan, the financier, was whirled from one city to the other over the Pennsylvania railroad in three hours and fifty-six minutes.

All the way the special train on which Morgan made the trip averaged more than a mile a minute. The distance between the two cities is 224.7 miles and express trains make it in five hours.

The special train, it is said, was ordered in a hurry and the purpose of Morgan's trip was not made known to the railroad officials.

FIRE CHIEF SUED BY WIFE

She Asks Personal Allowance of $500 a Month Pending Action For Separation—Husband Says He Has Already Given Her $87,300, That She Dyes Her Hair, and That He Is Now Broke Despite His Large Salary

New York, Jan. 24.—The unhappy life of Fire Chief Edward F. Croker, who is forced, he says, to live as a recluse in the Great Jones street fire house, with his children and other relatives turned against him, was unfolded before Justice Gerard in the supreme court when a motion was made by Mrs. Ella J. Croker, his wife, for $500 a month personal allowance and $500 counsel fees, pending her suit for separation against the fire chief.

Answering Mrs. Croker's claims that Croker receives a combined salary of $12,000 a year; that he maintains an expensive automobile and chauffeur; that he owns stock in several corporations and that before their separation in 1908 the chief had maintained her in luxurious apartments in the Imperial and Breslin hotels, Croker set up a long list of denials and responded with a pitiful story of how he has been deserted. His answer is included in papers filed by David L. Neuberger, his lawyer.

From the time of his marriage in 1888 until January, 1908, Croker claims, he gave his wife every cent received by him in every grade of the fire department until at the time the couple parted she had accumulated $87,300, which she had deposited in various banks "under an agreement to be in use for me absolutely." He has nothing now for all his years of work "except his clothing and his salary, and these are heavily mortgaged," his lawyer stated.

Because they were "frugal in habits, quiet in tastes and not lavish in dressing or expenditures," Croker believes his wife now has at least $40,000 of his savings in banks out of the $87,000 he says he has given her.

When his wife began to "play the role of a person of means and attempt to move in aristocratic society, which was an impossibility, because she never had any social position and the only reputable people she ever met was through me," Croker declares, he asked her to return a deed to the Croker home at Good Ground, stock in the Merritt-Chapman company and the balance of his salary savings in banks. She refused, he states.

Asserting that his wife's association with a woman who "lived in New York and had no visible means of support," was responsible for some of the trouble, Croker swears:

"Time after time had I repeatedly and persistently asked her to discontinue such association and public appearance in this woman's company. She persisted in driving through Central park with this person and stopping at road houses. She also persisted in dyeing her hair. In January, 1908, returning home one day, I found my wife had changed the color of her hair. She also commenced the excessive use of powder and face paint."

TESTIMONY IS ALL IN

Evidence Tending Toward Favor of Mrs. Schenk Is Ruled Out

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 24.—A decisive blow was struck at the defense of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk at the opening of her third week of trial when Judge Jordan ruled out the evidence given on Saturday tending to show that a conspiracy against Mrs. Schenk had existed.

The state then rested and the defense, taken by surprise, did likewise. The basis of Mrs. Schenk's defense has been that she was the victim of a plot.

Boston, Jan. 24.—In the superior court, before Judge Lawton and a jury, Marciano Gasparielio recovered a verdict of $7500 against the Boston Elevated company for personal injuries. He sued for $20,000. He was a newsboy and boarded a car at Washington and Elm streets to sell a paper.

He claimed that the conductor pushed him from the car and that another car ran over him, cutting off his leg.

STOCK BUSINESS IN JAIL

Said to Have Been Carried on by Broker Serving Sentence

Boston, Jan. 24.—The charge that one of the prisoners of the Worcester county jail was carrying on a stock brokerage business, and that another was conducting a successful engraving business, with the assistance of the chaplain and jail officials, was made before the committee on rules of the legislature.

Wilfred A. Bailey, the jail broker, who is serving two years for forgery and one and a half years for perjury, according to the witnesses had a lot of people on his list. He was receiving orders and placing orders and he was allowing those assisting him the use of a fine saddle horse, it was declared.

The charges were made by Officers Murray and Molt of the state police, who have made an investigation.

St. Louis, Jan. 24.—The corset-coat is the fashionable spring and summer garment for men this year. Trousers will fit the legs so snug it will be necessary to remove one's shoes in order to change clothes.

Already there is an end to what the International Custom Cutters in convention here call the "foolish, over-exaggerated man." In his stead will come the "under-exaggerated man."

Federal Officials Raid New York Medical Establishment

New York, Jan. 24.—Three postoffice inspectors, re-enforced by a score of policemen, raided the Collins Medical Institute on West Thirty-fourth street, arrested William Rudolph, the manager; Dr. E. S. Hyndman, a surgeon, and twenty or more patients and employes who were found in the building, on a complaint charging improper use of the mails in distributing medical literature.

The prisoners were bundled into patrol wagons and taken away. Policemen were left in charge of the building, after several trucks full of literature, printed in foreign languages, were hauled away to the federal building. The institute is said to do an annual business of $100,000.

Following the raid, the postoffice inspectors swooped down on the establishment of Dr. John E. Thompson on West Twenty-seventh street and arrested employes on similar charges.

Dr. Thompson, Rudolph and Hyndman were later held in $5000 bail by Commissioner Shields.

White Said to Have Beaten Lewis For Presidency of Miners

Columbus, O., Jan. 24.—The election of John P. White of Oskaloosa, Ia., as president of the United Mine Workers of America to succeed Tom L. Lewis of Bridgeport, O., is conceded by leaders of the administration faction.

Official returns of the election are not yet released by the national tellers who have been at work in Indianapolis counting the ballots.

The claim of White's election is based on a canvass of the twenty-seven districts of the country, and is said to be authentic. White says that he is the victor over Lewis by at least 10,000.

From Thin to Plump—Girls.

The expressions of happiness and gratitude of several of his young lady patients for whom he prescribed the recently successful flesh forming product, known as three grain hypo-nuclane tablets, is related by a physician in one of the medical publications and it comes as a surprise to the ordinary layman to learn the heart throbs of distress which seems to effect so many young people who are abnormally thin. Also to know that the weight can be so readily increased by the use, regularly for several months, of this peculiarly named preparation, now obtainable of the best physicians and apothecary shops in sealed packages with complete instructions for self-administration.

NOISE.

Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, while thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number, or that, after all, they are other than the little shriveled, meager, hopping, though loud and troublesome insects of the hour.—Edmund Burke.

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS SHOT

No Known Motive For Attack Upon Noted Author

ASSAILANT TAKES OWN LIFE

Identified as Violin Player and Socialist Orator—May Have Been Crank Who Had Annoyed Phillips For Six Months—Little Hope For Recovery of Literary Man Who Achieved Great Success

New York, Jan. 24.—David Graham Phillips, the author, was shot and probably fatally wounded in front of the Princeton club, 121 East Twenty-first street, by a man who afterward turned the weapon upon himself and fired one shot, killing himself.

Phillips at the time was on his way into the Princeton club, where he lives. He was taken to Bellevue hospital. No motive could be advanced for the attack, except that the assailant of Phillips was insane.

Phillips was only a few steps away from the entrance to the club when the stranger approached him and opened fire. One shot was fired and the bullet lodged near the heart. As Phillips fell to the sidewalk the man shot himself in the head and died within a short time. Dr. Fuller, who was called, said there was small hope for the recovery of Phillips.

The assassin was identified as Fitzhugh Goldsborough, a violin player, who had achieved some notoriety as Socialist orator.

While it is certain that Goldsborough lay in wait for his victim, not a shred of evidence has been obtained by the police that supplies a reasonable motive for the crime. It is known that Goldsborough lived in Washington for some years and during the period when Phillips was in the capital engaged in gathering data for his magazine article, "The Treason of the Senate." Whether the two men met during that interval the police have been unable to learn.

Goldsborough was 30 years old, an undergraduate of Harvard of the class of 1901, where he remained one year, a musician of more than ordinary talent, a composer of merit, temperamentally a poet, but with a hobby for establishing a school for music. He lived for years in Washington, where his father, Dr. E. K. Goldsborough, now lives.

Descended from one of the oldest families in Virginia and Maryland, Goldsborough came to New York last June, after a trip abroad, and opened a studio for teaching violin playing, in which he was an expert, at 6 Gramercy park. About three weeks ago he made his home at the Rand school, at 112 East Nineteenth street.

Goldsborough, according to the tenants of that place, was of a cheerful disposition until ten days ago, when he was attacked by a fit of the blues, as he expressed it to a friend living on the same floor.

Five shots were fired at Phillips and each bullet took effect. Three entered his stomach, one lodged near his heart, and the fifth penetrated one of his legs.

It was learned that more than six months ago a crank had been on the trail of Phillips. In a cafe, six months ago, Phillips told Detectives Duggan and O'Farrell how he was being bothered by a man who sent him threatening letters and lay in wait for him. He did not say what the man's alleged grievance was.

said frequently that if he had a son or daughter he would send him or her into the newspaper field for the ex-

David Graham Phillips was born Oct. 31, 1867, in Madison, Ind. His father was a banker. When he was 19 years old he came to New York and began work as a newspaper man on The Sun. Then he went to The World and was reporter, editorial writer and London correspondent by turns.

In his later days, when his newspaper work extended into literature, he perience that the work would give them. But he did not marry and never put his theory in practice as a consequence.

Phillips made his first big hit with his novel, "The Great God Success." He was well equipped for work as a literary man, for he studied hard, first at De Paur university and then in Princeton. His father was a banker and his educational advantages were good. While he was 6 feet 4 inches and was solidly built all the way up, Phillips was not strong for athletics in Princeton. He preferred his books and made a good student.

His first important fiction work was done under the name of John Graham. For a number of years writers wondered who John Graham, the new light in American literature, was. Then it was announced that John Graham was a newspaper man hard at work on Park row.

Pekin, Jan. 24.—The Chinese taotai at Harbin has been dismissed from his post at the request of the Russian minister, who complained that the taotai had persistently ignored Russia's treaty rights in Manchuria.

MONEY.

I do not believe in the doctrine that if you want to make your wife happy all you have to do is to give her plenty of money. I do not believe that possession of money and happiness are synonymous. Women want love first of all if they are provided with the right instincts. The great problem of today is the making of money. It is unquestionably the occupation that engages the minds of the vast majority of people. But from what I have seen of life and those leading it when one has obtained a competency money is superfluous, just like an excess of what is not needed to round out the figure and give it a handsome appearance. Piling up wealth then becomes like piling on flesh and greatly hinders the enjoyment of the best things of this life.—John Burroughs.

ANTICIPATING.

We are apt to rely upon future prospects and become really expensive while we are only rich in possibility. We live up to our expectations, not to our possessions, and make a figure proportionable to what we may be, not what we are. We outrun our present income, as not doubting to disburse ourselves out of the profits of some future plane, project or reversion that we have in view.—Addison.

GAMBLE ARGUES FOR MAJORITY REPORT

South Dakotan Addresses Senate In Behalf of Lorimer

Washington, Jan. 24.—Supporting the findings of the majority of the sub-committee of the committee on privileges and elections that investigated the election of Senator Lorimer of Illinois, Senator Gamble of South Dakota, himself a member of that sub-committee, addressed the senate.

Reviewing the history of the election of Lorimer and of the investigation of the charges of bribery and corruption by which it had been brought about, Gamble gave a summary of the testimony of each of those who had appeared before the sub-committee, analyzing it and giving his views of its bearing upon the issue as to whether Lorimer rightfully and lawfully is entitled to his seat in the senate. He argued that there was not enough corruption to affect the election of Lorimer and said he believed the Illinois senator to be in no way guilty.

"Count" Daulby Writing Memoirs of His Adventurous Life

Paris, Jan. 24.—Daulby, the false count, who sold spurious "old masters" to Charles H. Paine, is writing a book about his adventurous life. He says:

"I've got no more money, so I must think of earning a living for my wife and children. I am going to accept the offer of a friend, who has proposed that I go into a bank with him. I shall have a position in the bank of which he is a director.

"In the meantime I am writing my memoirs in order that the world may know the whole truth about my life, for I owe this to the honor of my wife and children."

NO NEGROES IN HOMINY

Expulsion by Whites Follows the Leasing of Cotton Lands

Hominy, Okla., Jan. 24.—Following the posting of notices threatening all negroes if they did not quit the town, the last of 150 negroes left Hominy yesterday. Explosions heard in various parts of the town within the last ten days increased the negroes' alarm.

The trouble started two months ago, when negro tenants were given leases on cotton lands. White farmers objected and the posting of notice followed. The explosions are thought to have been intended only to frighten the negroes.

SEVEN YEARS IN PRISON

Sentence Imposed Upon Mrs. Martin For Death of Her Daughter

Newark, N. J., Jan. 24.—Seven years in state prison was the sentence imposed upon Mrs. Caroline B. Martin for the part she played in the death of Ocey Snead, her daughter.

Mrs. Martin, who had pleaded nonvult to manslaughter when arraigned on an indictment charging her with murder, apparently expected a much lighter sentence and became greatly agitated when she learnd her fate.

The body of Ocey Snead was found in a half-filled bath tub in a partly furnished house in East Orange, N. J., Nov. 26, 1909.

SUNDAY SERVICES

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor took for his morning theme "The harvest of saved souls." The attendance was large at this as well as at the evening service. Miss Sadie Nelson sang a solo.

In the evening the topic chosen by the pastor was "The absurdity of Atheism."

The Dorcas society will meet at the home of Mrs. Loddengaard, 24 Deldorf street, on Tuesday evening.

The second annual business meeting of the church will be held Thursday evening.

A special invitation is extended to the young people of the church to attend the Christian Endeavor Rally at Bethany church on Feb. 6 at 7.45. Rev. Cortland Myers of Boston will speak and there will be special music, both vocal and instrumental.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The pastor preached in the morning from the text: Jer. 4:3. The sermon was one of the most powerful of the season and the attendance was unusually large. The simile used was that of ploughing the ground in preparation for sowing the seed. The pastor urged the people to abstain from worldly vices and to prepare their hearts for the spirit of God. The choir and the string band furnished special music.

At the evening service Mrs. Hellstrom and Mr. Stone sang excellent solos. The choir also sang some anthems. The pastor preached from Acts 9:10 telling of the conversion of Saul.

The Young People's meeting, led by John Peterson was one of the best ever held by the society. The subject, "Power in Prayer" inspired many of the young people to take active part in the meeting.

Beginning Tuesday evening and lasting until Sunday a series of special evangelistic meetings will be held in the church at 7.30. Pastor Cari Westerdahl of Concord, N. H., will have charge of the meeting. Waldemar Marker, a noted soloist from Jamestown, N. Y., will sing at all meetings. "Alla aro valkomma."

The King's Daughters elected the following officers for the new year: President, Mrs. A. P. Hanson; Vice President, Miss Emma Anderson; Treasurer, Mrs. Augusta Bergstrom; Secretary, Mrs. Agnetta Hedman; assistant Secretary, Miss Augusta Hendrickson.

The meetings will be held at the homes of different members on the afternoon of the third Sunday in each month instead of on the third Thursday.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

Rev. Willard E. Waterbury had charge of all the services Sunday in the absence of the pastor. At the morning service he took for his subject: "Kadesh Barnea." Special emphases was laid on taking the next step after conversion.

The Sunday school classes met all together under the leadership of Mr. Waterbury.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was led by Miss Eva Abbott. Mr. Waterbury gave a brief address at the meeting.

The evening service had the largest attendance of the series of meetings Mr. Waterbury preached on the topic "A Night Vision in a Prison." Miss Blanche Tilton of Boston sang two splendid solos and Mr. Bull and Miss Tilton sang an inspiring duet. The meeting was the most spiritual that has been held. Many of the young people took a definite stand for Christ and the testimonies were many in the after service. Mr. Waterbury concluded his stay here last evening. After three days rest he will start a series of meetings in Brockton.

The Bible Study class will meet at the home of Robert Farquhar, Arthur street on Tuesday evening.

The regular prayer meeting will be held on Thursday.

The Ladies Mission Circle will meet in the parsonage Friday afternoon at 2.30.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor used as his text for the morning sermon Jer. 13:7. He spoke of the life of the prophet and its object. The lesson in the text concerned the beautiful girdle which Jeremiah buried near the Euphrates river and when he went to dig it up "behold the girdle was marred and it was profitable of nothing." The tendency and fate of Israel was thus illustrated by the prophet. The pastor spoke of the girdles which are bound so tightly about us that we cannot get them off, selfishness, worldliness etc.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was well attended and very helpful to all. The Prayer Meeting committee was in charge of the service.

In the evening the pastor spoke from John 3:14. The service was evangelistic in character. The example of Moses' uplifting in the wilderness was used as a foundation of the address.

The regular young people's prayer meeting will be held at 7 o'clock Thursday evening followed by the regular church prayer meeting at 7.30.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Sunday was a day of uplift in the church. In the morning the congregation was of good size, the girls vested choir sang and the minister preached the second sermon in the series—"In the school of experience"

The boys department of the Sunday School organized and chose its officers.

In the evening, Henry Van Dykes story of "The other wise man" was read, accompanied by stereopticon views to a congregation which filled the room.

The Men's club holds its monthly supper on Tuesday, with Dr. Dana of Exeter as speaker.

On Wednesday, at 2.30, the ladies Benevolent Society meets.

At the Friday service, Dr. Jefferson's book "Building the church" will be studied.

Next Sunday night, the new reflectoscope will be used to illustrate a talk on the "In the footsteps of Jesus."

HALL PLACE M. E.

"Dividends from a well invested life" was the subject taken by the Rev. Carl H. Raupach at the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church on Sunday. He took his text from Heb. 10-35 "Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." The pastor said in part that while material things may be used to illustrate the value of spiritual things, there really can be no comparison in the value of spiritual and material things. He used to illustrate, the insurance companies methods of declaring dividends, and said there is no investment no matter how large or small, that nets such large dividends as the life that is invested in Christ Jesus and fully surrendered to God.

At the close of the session of the Sunday school the following officers were elected for this year.

Superintendent—John Pearce.
Assistant Superintendent—J. J. Nichols.
Treasurer—Miss Catherine Hodgkinson.
Secretary—Miss Bessie Nichols.
Librarian—Clyde Hannant.

The work of the past year has been very successful in all ways and the Sunday School closed its work of 1910 with a balance in the treasury.

Miss Maude E. Hodgkinson lead the Epworth League service at 6.15.

The subject for the Praise and Gospel service at 7 P. M. was "An incentive to immediate decision," the text bing taken from Isaiah 55, 12th and 13th verses.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor preached in the morning upon the theme: "The Great Physician."

The Sabbath School was well represented at the noon session.

There was a very good attendance at the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting. The speakers were earnest and spoke to the point. Topic: "The Law of Prevailing Prayer."

The evening service had a good audience. Fine music and an excellent sermon made the service one to be remembered. Text: "A man shall be as an hiding place etc."

The teachers' Bible class meets on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. John Russell at 7.30.

The regular prayer meeting will be held on Thursday at 7.30.

I was troubled a great deal by headaches and dizzy spells which were so severe at times that I had to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My sight was also affected, spots often appearing before me and my back ached intensely. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store and began their use. Romance in Merchandise

IN THE building of every great merchandise success there is a story of absorbing human interest, a story fused from the lives and characters of its builders.

A great business appears to be almost automatic in its development. In the full swing of its success it absorbs mountains of raw material and pours out unending rivers of finished merchandise; and it seems as if such an institution must always have been in operation and its product always in demand.

Yet back of this success, a hundred or even two hundred years, there was an insignificant beginning, compassed very likely by a single brain and two labor-scarred hands; followed by many heart-breaking years of experiment, of error, and of desperate chances when it was a daily fight for even the primitive right to exist. With this right established, there came such imperative need of expansion as taxed every resource of the mind, drained dry the uttermost springs of credit, and tested the very marrow of courage.

During all these years of struggle the merchandise and its makers have grown into a closer harmony, each becoming more nearly representative of the other; for nothing is more true than that goods or businesses which are the concrete result of years of study and effort, of days of tireless toil and nights of sleepless thought, come at last to represent and to stand for the character, ambitions, and ideals of their builders.

And merchandise so built has upon it the very finger prints, the intimate touch and fiber, of those whose lives have entered into its moulding. No wonder then that where such businesses are established, and where such goods are made, there has developed a pride of production, a perfection of workmanship, an unswerving loyalty to the highest business ideals.

It is these almost intangible things, these romances of merchandise, that have determined New England's destiny as a great manufacturing center, teeming with millions of skilled laborers and dotted with thousands of mills and factories.

CHANNEL ROCK TO GO

United States Engineers Are Now in Favor

If the War department can put on speed the chances are that a bill appropriating $65,000 for the improvement of Weymouth Fore River will will be passed at this session of congress, says a Washington dispatch to the Globe.

The board of engineers for rivers and harbors has reversed its decision against the project and the chief of engineers has indorsed the report of the board. Now an estimate of cost must be prepared by the district engineer officer and forwarded to the board for approval. When that is accomplished Senators Lodge and Crane will be able to fight for an amendment to the river and harbor bill that will take care of Weymouth Fore river.

Today Senator Lodge asked the war department to use all possible haste in getting an estimate of cost from the district engineer officer. It is understood that if the channel is improved several large manufacturing concerns will establish plants at Quincy.

Another interesting fact brought out at the hearing before the board of engineers is that a big warship, now being built by the Fore River company for the Argentine republic, cannot be got down the river without the greatest difficulty and danger.

NEW BIDS WANTED.

Mayor Shea has rejected the two bids received Monday for the auto fire wagon, and advertised for new bids. One of the reasons for this is that the Mayor desires to get the best piece of apparatus possible for the money. In addition to this, there were practically two other bids that were not considered Monday. One of these was the Combination Ladder Co., of Providence, R. I., where through an oversight the certified check required did nor accompany the bid. The other was the bid of the LaFrance Co. The Mayor was notified Monday morning that this bid was on its way. The man who had it started from his home in Brockton in season to reach Quincy before 10 o'clock, but there was a delay in the train which caused him to miss his connection at Braintree, where a change of trains had to be made, so that he was half an hour late in reaching the Mayor's office.

It has been said that there is a supreme court decision that in the case where a bidder notifies the party advertising for bids, before the time set for their public opening, that a bid is on the way that it should be considered if unavoidable delays prevent its arriving until after the time set for opening the bids. For these reasons Mayor Shea advertises today for new bids.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Mabel G. Dixon celebrated her twelfth birthday at her home 60 Goddard street Monday evening by giving a party to fourteen of her young friends. The evening was very pleasantly spent in playing games and all left at a late hour wishing their young hostess many happy returns of the day. Among those present were Margaret Hartrey, Olive Phelan, Viola Ford, Eva Diack, Mildred Diack, Mabel Bishop, Emeline Kerr, Marion Cummings, Lilla Dixon, George Proaf, Roy Westland, Ray Ford, Sydney McLaughlin, Donald Cummings and Miss Mabel's favorite aunt Mrs. William F. Doten of Plymouth.

PATRIOTISM.

Breathes there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said.
This is my own, my native land—
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burn'd
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd
From wandering on a foreign strand?
If such there breathe, go, mark him well!
For him no minstrel raptures swell.
High though his titles, proud his name.
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim—
Despite those titles, power and pelf.
The wretch, concentered all in self.
Living, shall forfeit fair renown
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust from whence he sprung
Unwept, unhonored and unsung.
—Sir Walter Scott.

Milton High school leads the Plymouth-Norfolk county basketball championship race with a percentage of 1000, two games won and none lost.

The Milton hockey club was defeated by the Brookline club Monday evening in the Boston Arena by a score of 1 to 0. The lone goal was made during the first minute of play.

The annual meeting of the football rules committee will be held in New York, Feb. 3 and 4. The forward pass will be the principal question for discussion. Inasmuch as the rules of 1910 have been generally successful, it is probable that there will not be many radical changes unless possibly the forward pass should be abolished.

SUCCESSFUL RAID.

Inspectors McKay and Goodhue and Officers Cahill and Donovan raided the premises of Giannini Guerrini at 51 Water street Sunday afternoon, and seized 40 bottles of beer, a quantity of ale, and some empty barrels. Monday Guerrini was arrested and brought into court. He pleaded guilty to a violation of the liquor law and his case was continued until Feb. 20, under $300 bonds to give him time to raise his fine.

The Halliday Emeralds

A Story of Their Quick Recovery

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Elsie Halliday stood before her dressing table looking down at her jewel case with frightened eyes and a wildly beating heart. Costly gems sparkled from every velvet lined compartment but one. The white nest that had contained the famous emerald necklace, the Halliday heirloom, was empty.

She rang the bell, and after awhile a strange maid appeared.

"Will you send Louise, my maid?" asked Elsie.

"I do not think she is here, miss," returned the girl bluntly. "I saw her running across the lawn shortly after your arrival. She went toward the river."

Elsie's eyes sparkled dangerously at this evidence of the perfidy of the trusted Louise. She turned to the staring servant with a gesture of dismissal and when she was alone proceeded to dress for the approaching meal.

When her golden hair was gathered into its customary soft knot and she had slipped into the white chiffon dress Elsie drew forth the string of pearls and clasped it about her slender throat. Without pausing to admire the charming effect she made a careful search of the room. The chair near the open window must furnish the first clew, and Elsie was not disappointed.

There was a tattered bit of lace evidently torn from a cheap handkerchief—a fragment from which dangled a bit of gold set with a drop of emerald green—and the lace smelled of that dreadful French scent which Louise persisted in using.

On the floor near the chair was a white silk handkerchief twisted into a loose knot. Elsie lifted it gingerly and inspected a few Japanese characters in dead black across one corner. The characters were too large for a laundry mark and must represent the owner's name, and that owner was probably a Japanese. Elsie recollected that the Ormonds had a butler of that nationality.

Last of all, on the seat of the chair was a man's pearl cuff link, on the flat surface of which a golden initial was finely inlaid. Elsie studied the twisted "V" with a little puzzled frown knitting her brows. Why had Harvey Ventnor's name sprung so quickly to her mind in such an unpleasant connection. Perhaps it was because he was never far from her thoughts or for the reason that there are few names that begin with the letter V, not that for one instant he might be associated with anything that was dishonorable.

The dinner bell rang then, and Elsie obeyed its summons, first taking pains to hide her jewel case in the remotest corner of her wardrobe. She went reluctantly down the broad stairs conscious that this visit she had anticipated must be inaugurated by the unpleasant features surrounding a jewel robbery. While she realized that the thief must be making a successful escape and that every moment lost strengthened the difficulty of capture, Elsie hesitated to disturb the equanimity of her genial host, now in one of the happiest moods. Near the drawing room door two men were talking in low tones, and as Elsie passed one of them was saying: "I heard Ventnor was hard hit today. That drop in X. and Z. must have crippled him."

Elsie bit her trembling lips in an angry effort to gain composure. She hated herself for the lightning thought that had connected Ventnor's pecuniary difficulties with the pearl cuff link and the missing emeralds. In that instant she vowed to seek no further for the thief. The Halliday emeralds must go.

"You look troubled, dear," whispered Mabel Ormond in her ear. "Has anything gone wrong?"

"Everything is lovely," smiled Elsie brightly. "How dear of you to give me the rose room!"

"I knew you were charmed with it last year. Ah, Katuru is a little late tonight. Rather unusual in our impeccable Japanese."

It was not Harvey Ventnor who took Elsie in to dinner; she heard his voice at the end of the procession as she walked in beside young Fred Ormond, Dick's brother. When she sat down Ventnor was opposite, listening attentively to the chatter of some strange girl. Elsie's swift glance noted his slightly disheveled appearance, and then she saw with a sinking of the heart that the sleeve link was gone from one of his cuffs—the left one. The other, plainly visible was of pearl inlaid with gold.

Ventnor, watching her now and then, seemed to be aware of her sudden coldness toward him. A hard look settled around his pleasant lips and his sunny eyes clouded.

To Elsie it was a miserable dinner, and it dragged to a tedious close while her overstrained nerves seemed on the point of giving way altogether. She resolved to plead illness and return to New York the next morning. Ventnor's presence made it impossible for her to remain.

After dinner she had fled to the conservatory for seclusion, and it was there that Ventnor found her seated in a dusky corner under arching palms When she saw him she arose with a little frightened sob.

"Why—why are you here?" she demanded brokenly.

"Am I so distasteful to you?" he asked, stopping short. "You have not led me to believe so."

"I did—you do not understand—what has happened today—must always stand between us."

He stared incredulously, boldly, at her. "You cannot possibly mean that my rumored failure on the street has affected your feeling toward me?" he asked scornfully.

"No, oh, no! How could you believe a little thing like that would make any difference to me? I mean this!" Elsie brought forth the pearl sleeve link and held it toward him in her rosy palm.

"You found this? It is mine. I thank you," he said gravely, slipping the link into his cuff and still holding her with his questioning gaze.

"It was in my room—on the chair where my dressing bag had been. You see"—she turned away her head so that she might not see his face—"you see, my emeralds were stolen tonight from that very bag!"

"Ah!" There were anger and condemnation in his rapid glance before it turned to tender amusement. "And you have spoken to no one regarding the matter?"

She turned eagerly. "Not a soul. I shall never breathe a word. Only I hope I shall never see you again! How could you?"

"You mean, how could I rob the girl I loved best in the world?" he asked gently.

Ventnor took her hands in his and compelled her to return his straight look. "Do you love me, Elsie?" he asked.

"Yes," she said.

He released her hands and offered his arm.

"My poor little detective, come with me to Ormond. He has something to show you."

In the housekeeper's room a little group of people were centered about the table. There were Dick Ormond and his wife, Louise; Katuru, the butler, and a strange, heavy set man with keen eyes. They turned with one accord as Elsie entered with Ventnor.

"Miss Halliday," began Dick Ormond soberly, "this has been rather an exciting evening for some of us—would have been for you only Mabel insisted you should be kept in ignorance until after dinner. Your emeralds have been stolen—and recovered!"

White and shaking, Elsie stretched forth her hand and received the green ripple of flame from Ormond. From one end of the chain a stone was missing.

"I knew it," she said in a low tone. "I discovered their loss before dinner. I was going to tell you about it, only I"— She hesitated.

"She discovered a clew," added Ventnor calmly—"this." He laid the sleeve link on the table.

"And other clews," said Elsie hurriedly, telling her story now without reservation.

Then the short man spoke with authority. "Very easily explained, Miss Halliday. Your maid had unpacked your trunk, and the butler, here, in the absence of another servant was removing the trunk to the storeroom. A man stepped through the open window, slit open your dressing bag, extracted the jewel case, from which he took the emeralds, replaced the case in the bag and was escaping through the window when your maid, returning, discovered him, alarmed the butler and Mr. Ventnor, who was passing through the hall, and the three of them struggled to hold him. He was a husky chap and desperate, and they had a fight for it, each one leaving some evidence of the contest. Now, Mr. Ormond, with your permission I'll take my fine gentleman along!"

He strode to a door and threw it open, revealing in a shallow closet the sullen, downcast face of the Halliday chauffeur.

"Henry!" Miss Halliday's lovely face was a reflection of passing emotions as she realized that the chauffeur had followed in the wake of her journey to rob her; that the valiant little Louise, who was Henry's sweetheart, had captured him for the sake of loyalty to her mistress and was even now crying her pretty eyes out over his degradation. Elsie swept all barriers aside and knelt down beside her weeping maid.

"Poor little Louise," she whispered softly. "You are far braver than I. I could never have done what you have today. Your reward will come later. My father will investigate, and if it is Henry's first offense it may be possible for you to marry and start afresh somewhere with the dot I shall provide."

Thus comforted, Louise dried her tears and was taken to dinner by Katuru, while the police officer Ormond had summoned took his prisoner away. The Ormonds went back to their guests, and Elsie slipped away in their train.

At the drawing room door Ventnor placed his hand in hers and drew her unresisting into the conservatory.

"You said you loved me," he said firmly.

"I do," said Elsie humbly, "but I cannot expect you to value such an affection as I have displayed tonight."

"The reason you fastened suspicion so strongly upon me was a simple one, dearest. It was really because your heart was so filled with thoughts of me that there was no room to suspect anybody else. I am flattered—indeed"—

"Oh, you are generous, Harvey. Would you want to marry me now?"

"If you will have me," said Ventnor softly.

MUSICALE OF WOMEN'S CLUB

Delightful Program Rendered by Westland Quartet and Other Favorite Artists

Alpha Hall Was Crowded Early in the Afternoon

So popular have the musicales of the Quincy Women's club become that the clubhouse will not accommodate all who desire to attend so this year it was decided to hold it in a hall. The wisdom of this was shown Tuesday afternoon when every seat in Alpha hall was filled long before the hour of the meeting.

The usual business session was held at half past two the president Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney presiding. Among the matters presented was the announcement by Mrs. N. S. Hunting of a vaudeville entertainment Feb. 17 in aid of Camp Mt. Pleasant; by Mrs. Stanley Bone of a lecture at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 31 by Mrs. Tyler of Abington on "Let the label tell its own story." This lecture is free to the public and a large attendance is urged. Mrs. George G. Saville for the program committee announced the next meeting of the club on Feb. 14 as being well worth attending as Madame Mary Hallock was a talented musician. Mrs. Mackay for the Education committee made the pleasing announcement that $126.75 was made at the Twelfth Night Rebels. Mrs. E. W. Sheppard and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith were elected delegates to the State Federation meeting in Boston on Feb. 3 and tickets for members may be had on application to the secretary. The club endorsed the stand of the Wintergreen club that no woman should be kept in prison a year awaiting trial. The matter of club members arranging parties to attend grand opera was presented and Mrs. C. W. Smith will receive names of any desirous of making up a group.

This closed the business and the audience prepared to enjoy the program arranged by the Music committee, Mrs. W. H. Doble chairman, given by the Westland Quartet: Mabelle Dadmun, Viola Van Orden, Alice Gertrude Coe, Dorathy McTaggart Miller with Marion Chadwick Whiton as accompanist and Heinrich Schuecker, harpist.

The following program was rendered:

Quartet, Wake Up, Sweet Melody, Cole
Harp Fantasie Op. 95, Saint-Saens
Quartet, Song of the Shepherdess, Anderson
Bells of Shandon, Nevin
Songs, Awake, Dear Heart
, Out in the Open Meadow
H. J. Stewart
Who'll buy my Lavender? German
Miss Van Orden
Quartet, Barcarolle (Tales of Hoffmann) Offenbach-Sherwood
Harp, Ballad
Dance of the Sylphes, Rondo brilliant Godefroid
Quartet, The Rosary Nevin
Duet, Love, the Fair Day
Oh Love, how green the World! Mabel Daniels
Miss Dadmun and Miss Coe
Quartet. Old Black Joe, arranged by Mrs. Jennie B. Worster member of Quincy Women's club.
Harp, Romance Dubez
Spring Song Gounod
Aria, My Heart at thy Sweet Voice, Saint-Saens
Mrs. Miller
Quartet, In May
Horatio W. Parker

Quincy people and more especially members of the Women's club take a personal pride in the Westland quartet for as formed originally two of its members were club members and at the present time there is one, Miss Coe of Atlantic, so as they came on the stage for the opening number of the program the greeting given them was most hearty and cordial.

It was a musicale of rare enjoyment throughout.

The quartet in voice was a pleasure, and a delight to the eye in charming personality and beautiful gowns. The unison and blending of voice and arrangement of the program in bringing out musical shading is what makes this quartet so popular and in constant demand where good music is appreciated. The "Bells of Shandon" by Nevin was beautifully sung as was "Barcarolle" by Offenbach-Sherwood. A pleasing feature of the latter was the harp accompaniment by Mr. Shuecker, a pleasant surprise which he gave the quartet and audience. The quartet responded to encores most generously. One of their selections was of personal interest, an arrangement of "Old Black Joe" by a club member, Mrs. Jenie B. Worster and sung with much feeling.

Miss Van Orden, the new member in place of Mrs. Moore, gave a group of songs in rich full tones winning instant recognition of her talent and responded with another song. Miss Dadmun and Miss Coe in their duets were pleasing, their voices blending most harmoniously and they too received loud and prolonged applause to which they responded. Mrs. Miller who is a great favorite wherever she sings won deserved applause at her fine rendering of the aria "My heart at thy sweet voice." Her voice is of wide range, full and deep, well rounded and with much dramatic force. The songs which she gave in response to encores were much enjoyed because of their humorious character and the manner in which they were sung.

The bright particular star of the program was of course Mr. Heinrich Schuecker, harpist of the Boston Symphony orchestra and all expectations were realized in his playing. He is not only an artist but a musician in every sense of the word, his playing showing not only his ability and fine technique but more than that a love of music and enjoyment in his playing which makes it always so enjoyable and a pleasure to his audience. Mr. Schuecker's playing of "Romance" by Dubez was especially pleasing as was the "Cradle Song" by E. Schuecker and the "Hungarian Patronille" by Blumenthal given in response to encores.

All in all it was one of the finest and most pleasing concerts ever given in our city—a well rounded program carried out by artists.

EVENING IN LIGHTER VEIN

Wollaston Congregational Club Addressed by Dr. Dana

The monthly meeting of the Wollaston Congregational club took place on Tuesday evening, supper being served at the usual hour.

The program took the form of an evening in the "lighter vein" and the club was especially fortunate in its speaker, Dr. S. H. Dana of Exeter, N. H., whose informal succession of stories "By-experiences of a parson," were intensely amusing.

The experiences related kept the audience in continuous merriment occasionally breaking into a hearty laugh at some very funny story. The anecdotes were gathered from an experience in the ministry not only in Massachusetts but Connecticut, New Hampshire and the West.

Most novel was the club's newly adopted band which proved a feature of the evening's entertainment. This consisted of two diminutive street musicians, who, by a bright thought of several club members, who recently saw them on the street, were imported for the occasion. These two lads, one with accordion and the other with tambourine, contributed an interesting series of popular songs and clog dances, which were greeted with rounds of applause. At its conclusion the young artists departed after having their tambourine well lined with coins. Their hearty "Goodnight gentlemans" brought another hearty laugh.

At the business meeting, E. S. Tenney read a report of the executive committee concerning benevolences. Later in the year it is proposed to contribute toward the work of Dr. Fenenga at Ashland, Wisconsin.

An invitation to attend the next meeting of he Men's club of Christ church was read, and Mr. West recounted the incidents attending the club's visit to the Quincy Point Men's club.

Charles P. Hutchins, William A. Mann and Charles A. Randall were appointed a committee of the club to take charge of the afternoon meeting at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. on February 12.

President Godfrey also announced the plans being made for the big annual club show to be held the latter part of February.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

The continued case of Thomas F. Grignon, who was arrested in Boston last week for the Quincy police, on the charge of uttering a forged check came up in court this morning, when he waived examination in the lower court and was held for the grand jury

Grignon has admitted to the police that McDonald, who is under arrest at Bristol, R. I., is his chum, although the latter denies it. Although the police have not as yet been able to fasten the crime upon these two men, they believe that they could throw some light on the recent burglaries at Wollaston.

The police have several charges against Grignon for uttering forged checks, although but one case was pressed against him at this time. It is probable, however, that when the case comes before the grand jury that other charges may be brought.

Y. P. S. C. E. SERVICE

As Part of Dedication Week at Memorial Church

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor had charge of the dedication week services of Tuesday evening at the Atlantic Memorial church. Malcolm L. Blake presided over the meeting. After a praise and prayer service there was brief addresses by Alden H. Blanchard, president of the East Norfolk C. E. union and an inspiring address on "Prayer" by Wendell A. Harvey of Braintree.

At the conclusion of the service, the young people adjourned to the vestry, where the society was reorgarized and a social hour was enjoyed.

A number of the other Young People's societies were represented in the gathering. Among them were: Bethany Congregational, Braintree Baptist, Calvary Baptist and Wollaston Baptist.

There will be no meeting in the church this evening but at 6.30 on Thursday the dedication banquet will take place. The banquet will be served by the Ladies' Benevolent society. After dinner addresses will be given by local speakers.

GRANITE MEN IN CONFERENCE

Harmonious Meeting Last Evening and Some Progress

Another meeting of the committees of the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the Granite Cutters' Union, who are considering the new agreement and bill of prices, was held Tuesday evening. The meeting was a very harmonious one, and several minor but important items in the agreement were settled to the satisfaction of both committees. The one matter that is causing some delay in the final agreement is that fixing the minimum wage. This, however, was not touched upon at Tuesday night's meeting. Another meeting of the joint committee will be held next Wednesday evening.

NO OPPOSITION.

Mayor Shea in his agreement before the Committee on Drainage at the State House on Tuesday, in support of the bill to allow the city to borrow $200,000 outside the debt limit to complete the sewer system, stated that the city had expended approximately $7000,000 in the devlopment of its system, and now has only about $5,000 left which it can expend for this purpose. The number of houses were rapidly increasing, 700 having been built last year, and 600 the year previous. It was imperative that the sewer should be extended. There was no opposition to the proposed bill.

WEDDING AT WOLLASTON

Miss Leona Robbins the Bride of Louis S. Cleaves

Over seventy-five relatives and friends from Wollaston, Quincy, Milton, Dorchester, Somerville and Cambridge atended the wedding of Leona Greenwood Robbins and Louis Stephen Cleaves at the home of the bride on Beach street, Tuesday afternoon.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church, a bank of palms and foliage forming an attractive background. The bride was attired in a travelling costume of blue broadcloth with velvet hat and furs.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. William Cleaves, sister-in-law of the groom, and the bride was given away by her father, Alpheus B. Robbins. Folowing the ceremony a collation was served, catering arrangements being in charge of Spargo of Dorchester.

Amid a shower of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on a wedding journey through New York, Philadelphia and Washington. After their honeymoon they will make their home for the present with the parents of the bride at 30 Beach street, Wollaston.

The bride is the daughter of A. B. Robbins, proprietor of the A. B. Robbins Iron Company of Norfolk Downs. She is a graduate of the Quincy High school of the class of 1906, where she was very popular. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Cleaves of East Elm avenue. Both have been residents of Wollaston for many years where they have a large circle of friends. The couple were favored with a large number of wedding presents among others being a substantial check from the father of the bride.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The letter of John L. Miller on "Getting Together" needs only some one to formulate a plan, as he suggests, and the Daily Ledger hopes to present a plan in a few days. Meanwhile let others write letters for publication expressing their ideas.

We quite agree with Representative Thomas that the Back Bay and Brookline should not furnish all the speakers of the Massachusetts House. Young men of ability and legal trainlike Mr. Thomas have a right to aspire to this position, and the party which recognizes self-made men should be successful. Money, rank or influence should not be the qualifications of a speaker or an office holder, but ability, fairness and honesty.

The announcement that the day of big salaries is over if followed up by its being a fact will do much toward settling some of the difficulties of capital and labor. A salary of $50,000 a year is big enough for any man and we doubt if any man is big enough to really earn more or even the $50,000. Less salary, less dividends and cheaper and better public service from some of the big corporations is what the people of this country want.

While Quincy is already negotiating "temporary loans" payable in 1912, those who follow the financial news will see that the temporary loans of other cities are payable in 1911. These are all from a Boston paper of Tuesday:

Woburn, $20,000, maturing Oct. 15, 1911.

Salem, $200,000, maturing Oct. 17, 1911.

Somerville, $100,000, maturing Nov. 2, 1911.

Gloucester, $125,000, maturing Oct. 18, 1911.

Why should Quincy be an exception? Large loans maturing in January are what places a new city government in a hole at the start.

That is a fine compliment the Mayor of Lynn pays the fair sex. His private secretary is a woman much to the surprise of office seekers. When explaining his selection he said: "I want someone here in this office with me upon whom I can absolutely depend. In a general way, Mayor Connery is of the opinion that a woman fits better in a confidential post than a man, especially when the complications of politics form a factor that must be considered. He does not agree with the oft-expressed sentiment that woman's secret develops into an endless chain of common knowledge. 'Female confidential clerks,' said the mayor, "are known to be more faithful to their employers' interests than are the male clerks."

There are indications that the most promising Congress for a score of years has lost its dynamic force six weeks before its end; but little of the legislation begun in December is likely to be enacted. Some are predicting that the appropriation bills will not be passed by March the 4th. It is almost impossible for a heterogeneous team of over three hundred patriots, statesmen, demagogues and cranks to pull together as a harmonious whole. A majority of Congress knows that the country is demanding a lowering of certain tariff schedules. It knows that the country wants a parcels post and many other important measures, but with half a dozen political factions and ten times as many individuals pulling in sixty-six different directions, there is but little probability of urgently needed legislation.

Again Wollaston takes a progressive stand in its movement for a "community house." The first question one asks is—What is a community house? We understand it in this case to be a parish house for all the churches of Wollaston. Or a club house controlled by the churches of Wollaston. If known as a club house it might not meet with favor from any of churches if they were to be sponsors. But a community house is for common possession and enjoyment, where all the people of Wollaston churches will have common rights, privileges and interests.

At present Wollaston is debarred many privileges. The Unitarian Men's Club has outgrown the vestry of the church, and it is not just adapted to its needs. Then it would like to invite the public once in a while, or to give a ladies' night. Smoking is permitted at these club meetings, but there are some church people who object to smoking in churches.

Most of the churches are large enough for any mass meeting, but nevertheless it is difficult to get people of one church into another church, and more difficult to get some people into any church, but they might go to a Thanksgiving service, or an entertainment, or a mass meeting, or a caucus, or a banquet if held at the "Community House." Such a house, if built on the plans of the Cochato clubhouse at Braintree, would fill a popular need at Wollaston. If the churches do not take the step, the people soon will. Why not the church control?

DRIFT OF OPINION.

We have often warned our readers against all schemes for getting rich quick. The press of the country has published repeatedly facts which ought to serve as warning to all people of small savings. Nevertheless, both from England and the United States many thousands of dollars have gone to the prisoner in Spain, and from nurses, teachers, ministers, physicians, and other people in moderate circumstances the promoters of mines plantations, and industrial schemes have drawn money by the hundred million dollars. After serving fifty years as the cashier of a bank, a man said to us that, if all his life he had invested his money at four per cent. interest, he would be much better off than he was at the end of his career. It has been estimated that, even if on could make some investments at twenty or twenty-five per cent. interest, the total amount invested during successive years would, counting in the losses, average not more than four per cent, income.—The Christian Register.

The most interesting item of news so far this week is the collapse of the food trust. A dispatch to the daily papers from Chicago, under date of Jan. 15, says that "The Trust must unload at any price. Cold storage monopoly on verge of collapse. Millions of pounds of foods to be thrown on the market. Butter, eggs, cheese and poultry first to feel the effects." The dispatch further stated that millions of pounds of cold storage articles, some of it as much as five years old, are about to be thrown on the market and sacrificed at whatever price it will bring, as a result of the collapse of the food trust which has caused the present exorbitant price of provisions, which is said to be 33 1-3 per cent higher than they ought to he. Butter, eggs, cheese and poultry, it is said, will be the first to be reduced in price, but the tendencies are that there will be a drop in the prices of other articles of foods stored by the cold storage trusts. The collapse of the "food trust" has been due to natural causes. Curious enough it was the cold storage people themselves who first spread the glad tidings that the bottom had dropped out of the market. They did that Saturday at a meeting of a number of wholesale dealers in New York. It was a measure of self defense. In order to get rid of their cold storage products quickly and raise cash when cash is needed, they want the general public to know the conditions so that it will bring pressure to bear upon the retailers to force them to bring down their prices and thus facilitate an immediate distribution of the contents of thousands of packed storage warehouses.—Athol Chronicle.

TEACHER IS THE BOSS

Keeps Boy Mayor From Attending Meeting of City Council

Clinton, Miss., Jan. 25.—R. R. Hardy, 17 years old, recently elected mayor of this town, though still a pupil of the local high school, was prevented from attending a called meeting of the town council by the principal of the high school.

When a message came to the school house for the youthful officer, stating that the council, which consists of two other members, was waiting for him, the teacher refused to release the pupil.

Hardy had called the meeting for an hour after the dismissal of school, but was kept in for a breach of the rules of the school.

TO CONSIST OF FIVE MEMBERS

Bill For Tariff Commission Is Favorably Reported

HEADQUARTERS IN WASHINGTON

Authorized to Conduct Investigations, However, Anywhere In United States or Abroad—Plans of Longworth and Dalzell Embodied In the Measure—No Penalty For Witnesses Who Disobey Summons to Testify

Washington, Jan. 25.—A tariff commission bill, effective July 1, declared to contain practically all of the important parts of the bills introduced by Representatives Longworth of Ohio and Dalzell of Pennsylvania, was favorably reported from the house committee on ways and means.

The bill calls for the appointment of a board of five members to be appointed by the president, who shall also designate the chairman. Not more than three members of the board shall be members of the same political party. The salary of the chairman is fixed at $7500, and the other members shall receive $7000. The board is given authority to appoint a secretary and fix his salary and to appoint and fix the compensation of such other employes as it may find necessary.

The board is to make its headquarters in Washington, but is authorized to conduct investigations at any other place, either in the United States or abroad. Authority is given to require the attendance of witnesses, but no penalty is provided in the event that witnesses refuse to recognize the authority of the board to summon them. The work to be done by the board is set forth in Section 3, as follows:

"That it shall be the duty of such board to investigate the cost of production of all articles which, by any act of congress now in force or hereinafter enacted, are made the subject of tariff legislation, with special reference to the prices paid domestic and foreign labor and the prices paid for raw material, whether domestic or imported, entering to manufactured articles, producers' prices and retail prices of commodities, whether domestic and foreign markets affecting the American products, including detailed information with respect thereto, together with all other facts which may be necessary or convenient in fixing import duties or in aiding the president and other officers of the government in the administration of the customs laws and shall also make investigation of any subject whenever desired by either house of congress."

Failure of witnesses to recognize a subpoena of the board is to be reported to congress, if the board deems such action necessary. Provision also is made that no evidence or information secured under the provisions of the law shall be made public in such manner as to be available for the use of any business competitor or rival. The board is directed to submit information upon call of the president, the house or the senate.

The house committee on rules today will hold an executive session which is expected to help set the pace for legislation in the house for the remainder of the session. The committee will report a rule for consideration of the tariff commission bill, which is an administration measure and no doubt will pass the house.

FLEEING FROM PEKIN

Plague Leads Many Foreigners to Take a "Vacation"

Pekin, Jan. 25.—The weekly express for Hankow was crowded with fugitives. These included college professors, the Italian minister, minor diplomats and persons of means, who find the moment convenient for vacation or retirement.

The bubonic plague, which had its first victim here several days ago and, it is believed, many since then, is the primary cause of the outpouring through the gates of the city. Even military officers took opportunity by the forelock and joined the departing throngs.

TRIAL OF BIGGEST AIRSHIP

Twelve Passengers Make Flight on Its Initial Trip

Berlin, Jan. 25.—The world's biggest airship had a trial flight here. It was built by Siemens & Schukert. The flight was short, but it demonstrated that the airship was satisfactory in every respect.

The ship is non-rigid and 387 feet long and of 500 horsepower. The gas bag has a capacity of 13,000 cubic feet. Suspended from it are three cars, the central one of which can carry fifty passengers. The others are occupied by the machinery. Twelve persons made the flight.

REVOLT IN MEXICO IS GAINING GROUND

Federal Force Almost Wiped Out In Fight Near Ojinaga

Washington, Jan. 25.—Advices reaching the revolutionary representatives here are to the effect that the uprising in Mexico is spreading rapidly. A telegram from the chief of staff of General Madero, dated from "headquarters in the field," confirms the news despatches of the brisk fighting near Ojinaga. The telegram reads:

"Complete victory for the insurgents led by Colonel Ortega near Ojinaga. Defeated federals and killed 150 out of 200. Another victory near Casas Grande obtained by Casillas with 300 insurgents against federals led by Colonel Rabago. Casas Grande and railroads are at mercy of the insurgents. General Navarro is completely cut off and there is no news from him. Insurgents hold a strong position between Navarro and Chihuahua. Durango has joined Chihuahua and Sonorar against Diaz. Near Torreon insurgents have 500 men well armed; they recently engaged federals, killing one of their leaders, a son of Colonel Gonzales."

The despatch closes with the statement that the insurrectionary movement has gained vastly within the past month.

JAMES' SPOOK MESSAGE

Spirit Trying to Get in Communication With Boston Friend

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 25.—Herbert Luzon, a psychologist, announces that he has received spirit messages from the late Professor William James. The spirit is declared to be searching for M. F. Ayer, a Boston friend of the late Harvard professor.

Luzon had been making no effort, he says, to get into communication with James' spirit. He says a message he received indicated that James' spirit has been trying for three weeks to explain to Luzon what is wanted. The message was in part:

"Ayer will know why I want him. I will do as I promised, but I cannot reach him."

PERSONNEL OF NEW SENATE

Dozen Old Members Re-elected or Certain to Be, While Thirteen Will Yield Their Seats.

Popular Forecasts Place Townsend of Michigan and Pomerene of Ohio as Men of Destiny.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

WE now know for the most part the personnel of the new senate. A few state legislatures are yet deadlocked because of our archaic method of choosing senators, and the results in these may not be known for days or even weeks. In Georgia the legislature will not gather till June to name a man to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Clay, now temporarily occupied by former Governor Terrell. The Hoke Smith faction is in control, and it is not likely to elect Terrell. A progressive Democrat will presumably win. There is even talk of the redoubtable Hoke himself.

There are an even twelve members of the present senate who have been or almost certainly will be re-elected to the new one—Clapp of Minnesota, Clark of Wyoming, Culberson of Texas, Du Pont of Delaware, La Follette of Wisconsin, Lodge of Massachusetts, McCumber of North Dakota, Nixon of Nevada, Oliver of Pennsylvania, Page of Vermont, Rayner of Maryland and Sutherland of Utah. Two of these are Democrats, two progressive Republicans and the remainder regular Republicans. Out of twenty-one regulars whose terms end with this session thirteen have been or will be defeated.

Because of several deaths there will be exactly twenty-four of the new senators, an unusually large number. I doubt if in the memory of those now living there were ever an equal number of new senators at the beginning of any congress.

Lippitt a Textile King.

It is a startling fact that among these entire twenty-four there is only one regular Republican of the stand pat variety. There are or will be six progressive Republicans, and the remainder are Democrats. More significant still, the one lone regular is from Rhode Island and even in that state got in by the skin of his teeth. He is Henry F. Lippitt, head of a big textile company. Lippitt has never before held a prominent office, but has been in politics—very much in, it is said. It is even averred that he wrote the cotton schedule in the present tariff law. It is also worthy of note that Lippitt received two Democratic votes in his very close contest, just as Lodge received two Democratic votes in Massachusetts. He is fifty-five years of age.

George Payne McLean, who beat Senator Bulkeley in Connecticut, says he is a progressive, but wants somebody handy with a brake. McLean is a leading lawyer, a persuasive speaker, is fifty-three years old and has held various offices, including those of United States district attorney and governor.

Charles Elroy Townsend, the victor over Senator Burrows in Michigan, is also a progressive. Despite the fact that he lives in the railroad town of Jackson, Townsend has been against the railroads in his law practice and as a representative in congress was one of the authors of the famous railroad rate bill. He is of a serious turn of mind and is regarded by those nearest him as a "man of destiny." Since he is only fifty-four years old it may be as well to take note of Senator Townsend.

Asle J. Gronna, who succeeds Senator Purcell of North Dakota, is at present an insurgent congressman from that state. He was born in Iowa in 1858, removed to North Dakota, where he was engaged in farming and banking, held some minor offices and has been in congress for three terms.

Poindexter an Insurgent.

Miles Poindexter, the new senator from Washington, is also an insurgent congressman. Although he lives in Ballinger's own state, he sided with Pinchot and then went back home and swept the state despite the opposition of the national administration and of Ballinger's friends. Poindexter is only forty-two years old, but has been a supreme court judge and is serving his first term in the house.

John D. Works, who replaces Flint of California, was a soldier in the Union army, having enlisted in 1863, when he was fourteen years old, and serving till the end of the war. He has also been a supreme court judge and has written several law books. Just how much of a progressive he is may be judged by the following utterance:

Progressive Republicans and progressive Democrats are so nearly alike that one can hardly tell them apart. When the time comes for progressive Democrats and progressive Republicans to combine against the money power and the interests for the protection of our free institutions every true patriot will be found joining hands without reference to party.

Among the new Democratic senators, of whom there are to be seventeen according to present indications, John Worth Kern of Indiana is perhaps the best known. Mr. Kern is famous for having been an unsuccessful candidate for vice president and for being a very successful cultivator of a whisker. He is sixty-one years old and is a rather vigorous speaker who is long on horse sense. He has held several offices and would have held others if the electorate had not prevented him. For one thing, he was city attorney under Mayor Tom Taggart in Indianapolis.

As well known as Kern is John Sharp Williams, who succeeds Money of Mississippi. It is a rather strange coincidence that Money is the present minority leader of the senate and Williams the former minority leader of the house. Speaking of the scholar in politics, Williams is one of the best educated man in our public life, having taken courses in several southern universities and at Heidelberg, Germany, where he was a schoolmate of the kaiser. He is also one of the homeliest members and best story tellers in congress. He is fifty-six years old and is a lawyer and planter. His recreations are writing political poetry and making Democratic stump speeches.

Gilbert M. Hitchcock, the new senator from Nebraska, also received part of his education in Germany. Although a Democrat, Hitchcock is the son of a former Republican senator and son-in-law of a former Republican governor, Lorenzo Crounse. His election to the senate occurred forty years to the day after the election of his father, P. W. Hitchcock. The present Senator Hitchcock is a lawyer and editor, is owner of the Omaha World-Herald, of which he once made William J. Bryan editor, is fifty-one years old and is serving his third term in the house. It now seems a moral certainty that Hitchcock will contend with his former friend and chief, Bryan, for the Democratic leadership of Nebraska.

Pomerene Self Made Man.

Politics turns up strange figures and now and then brings forth a really great man. It is possible that something like that has happened in the case of Atlee Pomerene, the new senator from Ohio. Personally Pomerene is something of a Puritan. Politically he is very much of a fundamental Democrat. He is forty-seven years old. In youth he had largely to make the money to pay for his education and in addition had to read all the lessons to an almost blind half brother when the two went through Princeton together. He practices law in McKinley's own town of Canton and was the only Democrat elected in the county in 1896, when McKinley reached the presidency.

Pomerene was then discovered by Tom L. Johnson. Finding that the young prosecuting attorney had ideas on the taxation question, Johnson procured his appointment on the tax commission, of which Pomerene was made secretary. Next Johnson put him up for governor to defeat Harmon, who savored too much of reactionism to suit Tom L. Harmon beat Pomerene in the convention, but this year the Canton man was given second place on the ticket, a nomination he did not want. Despite his election as lieutenant governor he became a candidate for the senate. Against him was Edward W. Hanley, chairman of the state committee. Pomerene challenged Hanley to joint debates, and when the caucus was held the honorable chairman had but ten votes.

Senator Pomerene does not smoke, drink or swear and has no vices except politics. He can be very firm on occasion and is a good speaker.

Johnson Old Style Democrat.

Of quite a different stamp is Charles F. Johnson, the new senator from Maine. He is a Democrat of the old school and if not a conservative is at least safe and sane. He has run for governor once or twice in Maine—drafted, of course, and not expecting to be elected. He has also been a candidate for other offices and has been elected mayor of Waterville and Democratic leader of the house on two occasions. He is the attorney of the Maine Central railroad and various corporations. Senator Johnson is nearly fifty-two years old and is as warm hearted and companionable as Senator Eugene Hale is cold and aloof.

James A. Reed, who beat ex-Governor D. R. Francis in the race to succeed Senator Warner of Missouri, was born in Ohio in 1861. He first removed to Iowa, where he was educated and studied law, and in 1887 went to Kansas City. Twelve years later he was prosecuting attorney of the county and for two terms was reform mayor of Kansas City.

Because of Senator Elkins' death there are two new Democratic senators from West Virginia. William E. Chilton of Charleston, who succeeds Senator Scott, missed by only one vote being Democratic national committeeman in 1908. He thought he had that victory cinched, but one man betrayed him. Chilton is not a stranger to Washington, where he is most popular. He is a wealthy man, but has not as many American dollars as Clarence W. Watson, who takes the short term so briefly occupied by Davis Elkins.

Watson Worth Millions.

Watson is a multimillionaire who owns coal mines, vast expanses of land, villages, fleets and railroads. He is only about forty-four years old and a few years ago created a sensation in society by winning a cool quarter of a million in prizes at the London international horse show. Watson started out early in the senatorial game, traveled from county to county and before the other aspirants had fairly awakened to the fact said he had things pretty much his way. Then, when the elder Elkins died and there were two senators to elect, Watson tied up with Chilton, and the game was won. At least these are the tales told in West Virginia.

One of the exciting incidents of the contest was the flight of the entire Republican membership of the state senate. As there are fifteen Republicans and fifteen Democrats the exodus left the body without a constitutional quorum, and Governor Glasscock, a Republican, refused to recognize the senate as legally organized. So long as the fifteen Republican senators remain in Cincinnati, out of reach of the West Virginia sergeant-at-arms, there seem large obstacles between Chilton and Watson and those coveted seats in Washington.

W. A. Blount, who is to be the new senator from Florida, has a unique distinction. He is a corporation attorney who refuses to lobby for his clients in the legislature. He puts in his brief in the case, and there his services end. He is attorney for the Louisville and Nashville railroad and various other concerns, but says his connections end the moment he receives his certificate of election.

Former Governor Napoleon B. Broward, a truly progressive Democrat, was orginally elected in the primaries to succeed Senator Taliaferro, but died before he could take his seat, and Blount was chosen in his stead.

Thornton's Election Sealed.

Two of the new Democratic senators to fill vacancies caused by death are John B. Thornton of Louisiana and Claude A. Swanson of Virginia. Judge Thornton was chosen after a peculiar tangle. The legislature chose Governor Sanders for senator, but after it adjourned he declined and appointed Thornton. The question was raised as to Sanders' power to do this under the constitution, whereupon the legislature met once more and removed the doubt by electing Thornton.

As for Senator Swanson, his career has a tinge of the romantic. When a boy his father's financial reverses compelled him to quit school and work on a farm, clerk in a store and do other things to earn his way. He managed to procure a university education and went rapidly to the front. Despite the fact that he is only forty-eight years old he has already been in congress more than twelve years and governor of Virginia four years.

On March 4 there will also be new Democratic senators from New York, New Jersey, Tennessee, Colorado and Montana and presumably a new progressive Republican from Iowa—that is, there will be if a sufficient number of keys are found to unbolt all the deadlocks.

HALF DOZEN OF THE NEW FACES THAT WILL BE SEEN IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE AFTER MARCH 4.

SCHENK JURYMEN WEEP

Crowd Outside Courtroom Gambling on Outcome of Trial

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 25.—Apparently unmoved by the bitter invective of Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Maury in his opening argument before the jury which is trying her on a charge of administering poison to her husband, Mrs. Schenk broke down and sobbed almost continuously while her own attorneys presented her case to the jury.

The jurymen, too, shed tears, and there were many tear-dimmed eyes in the courtroom as Mr. O'Brien drew a vivid picture of the lonely prisoner in the jail on Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year.

Deputy sheriffs were sent out to clear the streets before the courthouse, where groups of men were making bets on the outcome of the trial. For several days the betting fraternity has taken advantage of the publicity of the trial, and books are being made on the result like a horse race.

BARNARD KEEPS PROM SE

Nude Statues Arrive In Harrisburg In Plaster Suits

Harrisburg, Jan. 25.—The first of the heroic marble figures of the George G. Barnard group of statues to be placed in position along the capitol front was put in place and stripped of its covering yesterday afternoon and was found to be draped with plaster of paris.

The treatment is in line with what Barnard, who is in Paris, is reported to have promised when his attention was called to the protests against the nudity of the figures.

The men in charge of the groups say the plaster will remain until orders are received from Barnard or state officials for its removal.

The matter of the draping of the nude figures, some of which are twenty feet in height, has been widely discussed in the state.

BRIEFS

The committee on Soldiers Relief of the City Council will meet next Monday evening.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" will be the new serial story to be published in the Ledger. Don't fail to read the opening chapters Saturday.

The air this morning felt very much like snow and it would not be surprising to see a fall of snow before night although the weather predictions are for fair weather.

Theophilus King is one of the promoters of the Sattley Machinery Co., of Portland, Maine, recently incorporated in that state for the manufacture of machinery for handling corn.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon of Adams street gave a dinner Tuesday for their son Henry Hardwick Faxon, in observance of his twelfth birthday, twelve of his young friends being entertained.

Henry P. Furnald caters for the whist players at the weekly tournament of the Granite City club tonight, and after the tournament will serve fried scollops with tartar sauce. French fried potatoes and hot rolls.

Some of the ice men have commenced to house ice, although it is not over seven inches in thickness. The season is getting so late that it is feared that unless they begin to cut now they will not get any ice, for it is very rare that ice is cut in the month of February.

STOLE BREAD AND MILK

Widow Whose Son Was Starving Gets Ninety Days In Jail

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Sophie Schia was sentenced to three months in the house of correction because she stole a loaf of bread and a pint of milk from a doorstep with which to feed her starving boy.

The woman left her home and watched a milkman leave the milk. On going after the milk she saw the bread. All this she told to Magistrate Carey, before whom she was arraigned, who sent her to the house of correction. The woman's husband died about three months ago.

BROTHERHOOD.

I have no respect for the man or social fugitive who flees lest he fall. If the brotherhood of man is fact instead of fancy everybody who has fallen has the right to a helping hand. In this way it is possible to acquire a moral worth unequaled by those receiving the plaudits of the multitude—to acquire a moral heroism unequaled by the warrior. The recognition of social duty is the key to the peace of the world. The recognition of social duty will ultimately bring to the world universal peace and the end of all wars. —Senator Gore.

BULLET IN LUNG CAUSES DEATH

Phillips Fails to Rally After Pneumonia Sets In

WAS WOUNDED IN SIX PLACES

Goldsborough, Who Committed Suicide After Shooting Novelist, Believed to Have Pictured Himself and Family as Depicted Unfavorably In Novel—But Little Doubt That He Was Temporarily Demented

New York, Jan. 25.—David Graham Phillips has lost his brave fight for life. He died in Bellevue hospital late last night, a victim of Fitzhugh C. Goldsborough, an eccentric and emotional musician, who shot the novelist down Monday for a fancied grudge, and then killed himself.

Phillips fought valiantly to live, but six bullets were too much even for his grit and sturdy constitution, and as 11 o'clock came and passed he died.

One of the bullets perforated the right lung and septic pneumonia developed, causing death.

That Goldsborough was temporarily demented apepars to have been conclusively demonstrated by entries in a notebook taken from the body of Goldsborough after his suicide, in which, after writing several extracts from Phillips' sociological books criticising women, he wrote the following:

"I deem Mr. Phillips an enemy to society and a personal enemy to myself."

The assassin's real motive for attempting Phillips' life is as much a mystery as ever, although the theory generally accepted here is that he pictured himself and family as depicted unfavorably in one of the author's novels.

There is doubt on this score, however, for there was found yesterday afternoon near his lodgings what appeared to be pages from Goldsborough's diary. In these he bitterly resents what he styles Phillips' ungallant picture of the American woman, as drawn in some of his writings.

If these pages prove to be genuine, it would seem that the young musician resented not what he considered an attack on his family, but rather sought to vindicate American women as a whole. At any rate the obession grew until he shot the man he hated and sacrificed his own life.

TWELVE ARE EXECUTED

Penalty of Death Inflicted Upon Plotters Against Mikado

Tokio, Jan. 24.—Twelve anarchists, convicted of conspiracy against the throne and the lives of the imperial family, were executed in the prison here. Those put to death included the alleged ringleader, Denjiro Kotoku, and his wife.

Kotoku was a newspaper man who, because of his real radical writings, was obliged to leave Japan some years ago. He went to San Francisco, where he conducted a Socialist publication for a time. Later he returned to Tokio and is credited with having originated the plot which led to the death of twelve of the twenty-six conspirators. Twenty-four were condemned to death, but the sentences of one-half the number were commuted to life imprisonment. Two others were given terms of imprisonment.

LIBEL ON KING GEORGE

Allegations as to Morganatic Marriage to Be Heard In Public

London, Jan. 25.—The trial of Mylius, the agent in England of E. H. James' Liberator, and who is now in Buxton jail on a charge of seditious libel, will be held at the high courts on Feb. 1.

It had been generally expected that the case would be heard at the Old Bailey, and its transference to the high courts indicates the extraordinary importance which the authorities attach to the case.

The trial will be held before a jury, and the whole allegations made by James in The Liberator concerning King George's morganatic marriage will be heard in public, as Mylius refuses to apologize.

BILL CARRIES $257,000,000

High Officials Scored In Passing Postoffice Appropriation

Washington, Jan. 25.—The house passed the postoffice appropriation bill, carrying about $257,000,000. There were no votes in the negative.

The postoffice committee of the house, the postmaster general and "others higher up", came in for a scoring at the hands of the members of the house during consideration of the bill.

Representative Sisson of Mississippi declared with vigor: "The mail service all over the United States is in a h— of a fix and this house should fix the responsibility where it belongs. Some say it is in the committee, some say it is the president.

"The department has declined to spend the money appropriated for additional rural free delivery routes and is going to turn back a surplus of $1,700,000 from the service. Forscoth, upon what hath these Caesars fed that they can thus defy the mandate of the house or senate of the United States?"

PEACE REIGNS IN HAYTI

Dispute With San Domingo to Be Settled by Arbitration

Washington, Jan. 25.—The government of Santo Domingo has officially accepted the proposal of Hayti that the boundary dispute between the two countries be submitted to arbitration. The news was contained in a telegram from his government received by H. P. Sannon, minister of Hayti to the United States. The minister's dispatch added that the Dominican government had ordered its troops withdrawn from the frontier and that peace reigned throughout the republic.

It is assumed that the question will be submitted to The Hague for arbitration, as both the Haytian and Dominican governments have now accepted the proposal of the United States to submit to arbitration the delimitation of the frontier, which has been the cause of the dispute between the countries.

FAMOUS YACHTING SKIPPER IS DEAD

Captain Barr Was Sailing Master of America's Cup Boats

Southampton, Eng., Jan. 25.—Captain Charles Barr, the noted American yacht skipper, died suddenly of heart trouble here.

Captain Barr was the premier jockey of the seas. Twice he held the American cup when he sailed the yachts Reliance and Columbia to victory in the international cup races, winning for himself fame and fortune.

Barr, although not an American born, was an American citizen. He was born in Scotland and went to America with his brother in 1887.

Following his cup race victories Barr in 1906 was engaged by Commodore Vanderbilt to sail his famous sloop Rainbow. In June of last year Barr sailed the American schooner yacht Westward to victory in the race for the Krupp memorial prize, beating Emperor William's American-built yacht Meteor, with the emperor himself at the wheel.

Robin's counsel, Mr. Jerome, announced that he had withdrawn from the case on the ground that Robin was not in the proper mental condition to consult with counsel.

District Attorney Whitman announced that the report of three alienists shows that Robin is suffering from psychosis, and that in their opinion he is in no mental condition to be tried.

PROGRESSIVE LEAGUE PLANS

Said to Be to Prevent Renomination of Taft

PRESIDENT'S FRIENDS UNEASY

Two Leaders In New Movement Supposed to Be Candidates For Presidential Nomination—Some Question Whether Insurgents Will Be Helped by Organization of League—Taft Is Considered a Progressive

Washington, Jan. 25.—The chief interest excited in Washington by the announcement of the organization by Republican insurgents of the national progressive Republican league relates to the universal assumption that this is essentially an anti-Taft organization.

It was engineered primarily by Senator La Follette and its declaration of principals is signed also by Senator Cummins of Iowa. Both are reputed candidates for the presidency. It is known that ex-President Roosevelt declined to sign the paper, although he wrote a letter expressing his sympathy with the principals set forth. But for a long time it has been understood that Roosevelt has abandoned, for the present at least, any idea of appearing in the 1912 campaign as a candidate.

Granting that one purpose of the league is or will be to oppose the renomination of Mr. Taft, politicians here are seriously discussing whether the progressive movement will be helped by the new organization. While Cummins, La Follette, Beveridge and their colleagues and the insurgents of the house were unorganized fighters for progress, they made great headway. They overturned the Cannon organization in the house, they greatly modified the policies of the senate, and in the recent elections they overwhelmed in almost every test reactionary senators and representatives.

Another angle of the situation also is provoking discussion. This is the implication, in consequence of the organization of the insurgents, that President Taft is not a progressive. His friends resent this implication and point to the fact that the real opponents in congress of his legislative program are the reactionaries. Even Cummins is understood to be friendly to the Taft program with the exception of ship subsidy.

The action of La Follette in refusing to go to the White House in response to a courteous invitation to discuss supreme court appointments was regarded here as little less than boorish. The president was putting his best brains into the task of selecting suitable men to fill three vacancies and La Follette, instead of aiding him, remained away and read him a public lecture.

On the most important issue before congress, that of the tariff commission, the president and the insurgents are working hand in hand, with the president goading congress into action at every opportunity. The establishment of a permanent tariff commission would be the greatest achievement of the Taft administration and had not the president aggressively instead of passively promoted the idea, it would stand no chance of success.

If his friends are not greatly mistaken, Taft is regarded by the country as a progressive man and not a reactionary, hence if the new league purposes to oppose him for renomination, it will handicap its own cause, in their opinion.

The question is raised also whether a concrete organization of progressives will not create a breach in the Republican party which cannot be overcome during the period between nominations and elections, and thus give the Democrats a longer lease of power than hopeful Republicans of all shades of opinion desire them to have. At all events, the new league will be called upon to explain its purpose a little more clearly before it will receive the support of thousands of Republicans who are in reality as progressive as the reorganizers.

Wrecked Bank Settles In Full

Washington, Jan. 25.—Creditors of the Jewelers' National bank of North Attleboro, Mass., will receive their claims in full with interest, the final dividend having been declared by the comptroller of the treasury. The bank was wrecked by its cashier, and closed in 1907.

If improperly cooked beef kidneys are a coarse dish, but when carefully prepared they make an excellent stew. Remove all superfluous fat, trim them and cut them into chunks. Let them soak in cold salted water for about an hour. Rinse them very thoroughly and then set them over the fire in fresh cold water. When they come almost to the boiling point and begin to show scum on the surface pour off the water and add fresh cold water. A better way, if one has time, is to remove the kidneys, put them in a new pot or lay them aside a moment until the pot they were cooked in has been thoroughly washed out. Then put them back. In order to get the strong flavor out of this meat it is necessary to remove as much scum and blood from it as possible. Let them reheat in water a second time. Then pour off this second water and treat as before. It may be necessary to do it a third and a fourth time also. When the stage is reached in which the water is quite clear and free from scum cut up one or two onions—a good sized one for every kidney—one or two small carrots and one or two potatoes. Put them into the water around the meat and cook slowly for about two hours or until a gravy is formed. Some cooks add a little lemon juice or part of the yellow peel of a lemon to the stew. The carrots and onions may be left out and the kidneys stewed by themselves, the gravy being flavored only with a tiny glass of wine and lemon juice.

Potato Cake.

Two cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of flour, one cupful of butter, one large cupful of English walnuts, one cupful of potatoes, mashed and seasoned, ready to serve; one and one-half cupfuls of chocolate, grated; one-half cupful of milk, five eggs, using all the yolks and whites of three, keeping two whites for boiled frosting; two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one each of cloves, cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg, one each of lemon and vanilla. Bake either in loaf or layers. Cream butter and sugar. Add milk, then yolks of eggs, beaten high; then potatoes, soft spices, chocolate and baking powder in flour, and add to eggs and butter. Then add beaten whites and lastly the nuts. Will keep fresh for a week or ten days.

Split Pea Soup.

For split pea soup, so good in this cold weather, soak a quart of split peas overnight. In the morning put them on the stove in plenty of fresh cold water, about four times as much water as peas. Add a large piece of salt pork, half a good sized carrot, a good sized leek, two potatoes of medium size, one root of parsley, one teaspoonful of thyme, one large turnip, a bunch of celery tips, a large slice of bread and salt and pepper to taste. Let the soup boil all day, adding fresh water as it boils down. Strain before serving.

A Fine Sauce.

Apples and cranberries are very good cooked together, about half and half. Let a quart of the mixture cook with about a cupful of water or just enough to prevent burning. At the end of twenty minutes add two cupfuls of granulated sugar and let the mixture cook for about ten minutes more. Turn into molds and serve when cold. The apples seem to mellow the berries, and the sauce will be preferred to one entirely of berries by those who do not like the sharpness of the latter when cooked alone.

Tea Wafers.

For the Virginia wafers that are served with afternoon tea and other light repasts work a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter into two cupfuls of flour and mix in enough ice water to make a stiff paste. Then put the dough on to a floured board and roll into a very thin sheet—it should be little thicker than paper—and cut in rounds with a saucer. Bake in a quick oven on a floured pan. The wafers should have an uneven, bubbly surface and be eaten cold. They are delicious with a conserve or jam.

Sandwich Filler.

White raisin bread made into sandwiches with minced nuts and cream cheese is delicious. Cut the slices very thin and spread one with cream cheese and the other with the nuts. Both should be buttered first. If they are cut in the shape of card suits for afternoon refreshments at card clubs and parties they are very sightly. The card suit cutters are kept by the house furnishers.

Soup Stock.

In mixing leftovers for soups never combine fish and meat, beef and lamb, chicken and beef. Sometimes a little bacon or pork bones can be added to soup stock for richer flavoring.

TAMING A SHREW

It Was Tried at Sea and Was Not Successful

By EVAN D. BALDWIN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

How Jack Stoughton came to fall in love with Emily Gunter no one could ever find out. Jack was a fine, manly young sailor, and whenever he came home from a voyage all the girls made a dead set for him. Emily was the only girl in the village who paid no attention to him. Perhaps he was piqued on that account. Emily was fairly good looking, though she had a square jaw and the corners of her lips were drawn down, denoting a strong will.

On one of his homecomings Jack sidled up to Emily either from pique or curiosity or a little of both, and they were seen walking together on the beach or sitting on the dunes. Their friends observed that Emily usually had a scowl on her face and Jack seemed to be trying to get her into a good humor.

"What do you want with that girl, Jack?" one of his messmates who was ashore with him said to him one day. "She seems to be continually quarreling with you. You're the best natured man in our ship, so I know it's no fault of yours. If you marry her you'll get a wasp, take my word for that."

"I know you're right, Billy, but somehow there's a fascination in being treated as if she didn't care a rap for me and being hammered by her. The nearest I ever came before to an infatuation was by a little Mexican girl at Vera Cruz who tried to stab me. Singular, isn't it, how we men find a zest in that kind of women?"

"I can understand that so long as you're not married to one of 'em. But you just put your neck in a halter and give Emily Gunter the loose end and she'll make it hot for you all your married life."

"There was Petruchio, who tamed a shrew"—

"Petruchio be hanged! All imaginary! No man ever tamed a shrew. You can tame that kind of man, but not that kind of woman."

But Jack Stoughton was too intent upon tampering with gunpowder to heed his friend's advice. Shortly before they sailed he told Billy he had married Emily, that she seemed very amiable and that she was so averse to parting with him that she was bent on taking the voyage with him.

The Albatross, in which they were to go to Japan and return, was commanded by Captain Larkins. Billy Anderson was first mate, and Jack was second mate. Emily went to Captain Larkins and induced him to let her go on the voyage with them. He had never seen her before and thought a woman on board would have a refining influence on the crew. He had given his consent before Anderson told him what kind of woman Mrs. Stoughton was; but, having given it, he would not withdraw it.

The lady was very pleasant till the ship was well on her way—indeed, too far out to warrant a return—then she began to belabor her husband in no uncertain tones. What the trouble was no one knew, but Mrs. Stoughton's voice could be heard in her stateroom even in stormy weather above the whistling of the wind in the rigging.

It was not long before poor Jack was an object of pity on the part of the crew, and not a man but condemned his wife. The captain finally went to Mrs. Stoughton and besought her to let up on Jack, but got such a berating himself that he was glad to beat a retreat.

It is surprising that Captain Larkins, who had some twenty men under him, not one of whom dared to give him the least back talk, should have been driven from the after cabin and up on to the poop deck by a woman. The day this occurred and it had been discovered that Mrs. Stoughton was virtually in command of the ship each one of the crew went about his duties as if something momentous had happened. They had most of them been at sea for years, they had encountered hurricanes, some had lived for days on a raft without food or water, some had been cast upon desert lands, but none of them had ever passed through an experience like this. Their captain, whom they respected and feared, had been downed. They were as much taken aback as if their rudder had been put out of commission.

The captain had become a different man. He walked the deck with a hangdog look. He gave his orders in a humble tone, as if he would be much obliged if the men should obey them, and the men themselves did their duties languidly, as if some misfortune hung over the ship. Only one man, Jack Stoughton, seemed to have been improved by the incident. Before it occurred he had the demeanor of a whipped cur; now he went about as if he felt himself as good a man as any aboard.

The crew, sympathizing with their captain and one another in the presence of a strange misfortune, between watches consulted as to means of relief.

"What's the matter with ye, ye lubbers?" said Tom Billings, a married man. "There's 'usbands as lives their whole lives with squalls 'angin' over 'em all the time, and yet you duffers is knocked out by one 'ooman to a hull ship. Stoughton 'asn't got used to it yet, but he will. I got used to it long ago. My old 'ooman's a corker. When she's mad ye'd think the thunder was a-rollin'. When I see one o' them storms a-comin' I've l'arned to take in all sail, batten down the 'atches and let the storm blow itself out. Then there's a dead calm for a spell, and a fair breeze follers."

Billings, an experienced man, talked to those without any experience whatever. To be out on a trackless ocean dismasted was one thing—there was still discipline—but to be there with the captain and all hands subdued by one who had never studied navigation and couldn't make an observation was another. The first would be in the line of a sailor's life; the second there was no precedent for. Something must be done. One proposition after another was made, discussed and discarded. Finally Dick Smalls, one of the younger members of the crew, spoke up:

"It's plain that Mrs. Stoughton has mutinied and took the ship. I don't see that there is anything for us to do but mutiny agin the new master and take the ship ourselves."

"That's all werry well, mates," put in Tom Billings, "perwidin' you can get rid o' the 'ooman. But after ye got the ship what ye goin' to do with her? Hain't she still in command? That's my experience."

This was a poser, especially as the crew, nearly all of whom were single men, had great respect for Tom Billings' opinion on anything concerning the opposite sex.

"It seems to me, mates," continued Billings, "that ye're up agin'a want o' knowledge o' navigatin' the female craft. All ye got to do is to put 'em afore the wind and let 'em scud. Ye can't steer 'em, and if ye try ye'll sure come to grief. But I knows there hain't no use o' talkin' to you. You're bound to run this here business yer own way, so ye can count me out."

With that he went on deck.

The next day the mutiny plan was carried out. The men, except Stoughton, who was not consulted, marched aft in a body and demanded the person of the 'ooman as has took this ship." The captain made a pretense of resistance, confining himself to words instead of acts, then told them that, being powerless in face of a united crew, they could do what they liked with the woman.

A round robin of four men was appointed to take Mrs. Stoughton down into the hold and turn her adrift, where she would have plenty of room to walk back and forth like a caged lioness. They put bedding down with her, and it was understood that her meals should be let down to her regularly.

"Did ye obsarve the look on her face, mates?" remarked Billings after the woman had been safely put away. "When they looks that way it means the weather glass is a-goin' down like lead."

Three days passed without any trouble so far as the prisoner was concerned. From the moment she was put below the accustomed cheerfulness came back to the crew, enhanced by contrast with their late condition. But on the fourth day when the captain was standing on the poop deck and a large sea rolled under the vessel he noticed that she didn't rise with her accustomed buoyancy. Billings was standing by at the time.

"What's the matter with her?" growled the captain to himself.

"It's my opinion, sir," said Billings, putting his knuckles to his cap, "that there's somepin in the cargo as don't belong there."

"What do you mean?" asked the captain anxiously.

"The 'ooman."

"Well?"

"When she was put in the hold I was wonderin' what she'd do, so I've kept my blinkers open. The ship's drawin' more water, sir, than she did three days ago."

"You mean"—

"She scuttled."

The captain made a dive for the companionway, calling on Billings to follow. Entering the hold, they found four feet of water. The point of leakage was covered so that they could not see it, but they found some of the carpenter's tools of which Mrs. Stoughton had possessed herself. All hands were called to man the pumps, and when the water had been removed a large auger hole was discovered a few feet above the keel.

The hole having been plugged, the captain ordered Mrs. Stoughton locked in her own cabin, then called the crew aft and asked for suggestions as to what to do with her. Every man jack of them looked at Billings, so the captain asked for his advice.

"There's just two ways o' managin' 'oomen, sir," said the old salt. "The first is to git away from 'em, the second to let 'em have their own way. I can only judge by my own experience. After I was married I observed that to keep the family peace I'd got to knuckle under. There is 'usbands as is 'ead o' the 'ouse, but this is where the 'ooman 'asn't the usual female grit. Them as lets their wives command the family ship gits on just as well as any of 'em. Some un's got to be boss, and if the 'ooman has the dominatin' faculty in her why not?"

The captain decided that Mrs. Stoughton should have the free run of the ship for that voyage, after which no woman was to be permitted aboard. So he issued orders to that effect, and Mrs. Stoughton was not again interfered with from that moment until the vessel reached port.

Strange to say, having conquered, the lady made herself quite agreeable and when she left the ship half the crew felt a heartsickness they had never felt before.

PORTER CHARLTON.

Center of Interest In American-Italian Extradition Case.

GOING TO SUPREME COURT

Charlton Refused Writ of Habeas Corpus In Federal Circuit Court

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 25.—Judge Rellstab in the United States circuit court refused to grant a writ of habeas corpus asked on behalf of Porter Charlton, whose extradition has been requested by the Italian government to answer a charge in Italy of having murdered his wife in that country last summer.

Before the committing magistrate, counsel sought to prove that the man was insane and subsequently there was a hearing before Secretary of State Knox on the application of Italy for extradition. The secretary decided to grant the extradition and a writ of habeas corpus was sued out on an appeal from this decision. Counsel for Charlton gave notice that the case would be carried to the United States supreme court.

PROPOSED "DIRECT" LAW IS ATTACKED

Depew Says He Sees Scheme to Disfranchise Negro Voters

Washington, Jan. 25.—Senator Depew of New York, in the senate, spoke in opposition to the proposed amendment to the constitution providing that United States senators shall be elected by the people. He warned the senators of grave perils that would result.

He denounced the measure in vigorous terms, declaring the proposed amendment to the constitution is an effort under the guise of popularizing the election of United States senators to permit under the constitution the states to disfranchise large classes of their electors.

"I am sure before the debate has ended," he said, "if this resolution is adopted, the colored voters of Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania will protest in so effective a way at the polls as to be felt all over the country. This resolution virtually repeals the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution."

CONTRACTOR M'GUIRE HELD

Court Thinks Killing of Two Men Might Have Been Averted

Boston, Jan. 25.—Martin McGuire, the contractor in charge of the excavations on Boston street, where the cavein occurred which caused the death of two men, was arraigned before Judge Fallon on a charge of manslaughter. The court fixed Feb. 2 as the date for the hearing and placed bail at $5000.

McGuire was arrested after an investigation by the police. It is alleged that the accident might have been prevented if the embankment which gave way had been properly shored up, and that the danger was pointed out to McGuire some time before the accident.

CORPORATIONS.

The greatest danger menacing Republican institutions today is the overbalancing control of city, state and national legislation by the wrongful use of the wealth and power of public service, industrial and financial corporations. The influence which rules may be traced to the close association of political and corporate power. It is a complete system. It defrauds the people, defeats legislation in the public interests and passes laws for the special interests. The only power that can save the government from these corrupting interests is direct nominations, the initiative and the referendum and the recall. They are all expressions of the citizens' desire to wrest legislation from corporate control and restore it to the people.—Senator La Follette.

Parish meeting tonight of Christ church.

Thomas C. Hewson is confined to his home on Newcomb place a victim of the grip.

The social committee of John Hancock Lodge, I. O. O. F., holds a whist party in I. O. O. F. hall, Wollaston, Thursday night.

One of Ferguson's horses was taken so sick on Washington street yesterday that it had to be removed to Boston in an ambulance and another horse sent out.

The semi-annual meeting of the City Messenger club, of which City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell is vice president, will be held Saturday at the Revere house, Boston.

Several members of George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge No. 146 of this city will attend the reception to be given Grand Master Sargent at America lodge, Dorchester, Thursday evening in Bloomfield hall.

Members of Paul J. Revere W. R. C. are to attend the installation of Huntington F. Wolcott corps of Milton on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Nellie T. Libbey, Department Senior Vice President, will install the officers. Cars leave City Square at 7.10.

DAYLIGHT PICTURES.

For the first time in Boston, "daylight" motion pictures are being shown at Keith's theatre this week. They are given without extinguishing the lights of the theatre, but; nevertheless are clearer than many of the motion pictures shown in darkened halls. They are less trying to the eyes. Much of the objection to moving pictures shows will be removed where daylight pictures are general, for today one hears much about immorality at motion picture houses, which make most of them objectionable places for young people. The inventor deserves the thanks of the public, for picturs are educational and interesting to old and young.

☞Don't fail to read the Ledger's new serial story "Alias Jimmy Valentine" which begins in the Saturday Ledger. The verdict of every one is "I never saw a better play" and we can safely say you never read a better story. Whether as a play or a story it holds the attention from begining to end. tf

OFFICERS LONG IN SERVICE

Installation and Presentation of Merrymount Lodge

The officers of Merrymount lodge, A. O. U. W., were installed Tuesday evening at Wilson's hall in the presence of a large number of members and visitors. The work was performed by Past Master Workman John L. Sullivan and suite of Boston in a fine manner. The new officers ar:

Master Workman—William Vaughn.
Overseer—W. A. Geddes.
Foreman—John Cain.
Recorder—D. A. H. Gilson.
Financier—Charles H. Johnson.
Treasurer—Newell O. Parker.
Guide—Edward Pearce.
Inside Sentinel—E. G. McGill.
Outside Sentinel—Joseph L. Bean.
P. M. W.—Charles C. Mueller.
Trustee—A. H. Taber.

After the installation Charles C. Mueller, the retiring master workman, was presented a past officers jewel.

One of the interesting facts in relation to the installation was the fact that Dr. A. H. Gilson has served the lodge for 18 years, Newell O. Parker for 17 years as treasurer, and Charles H. Johnson 13 years as financier, which speaks well for the efficiency of these officers. The evening closed with a bountiful collation served by J. W. Dennen.

PICKPOCKET FOUND GUILTY

James Grant at His Old Tricks in Boston

James Grant, alias James Carney, alias the Wolf, who was arrested in Quincy six months ago for picking pockets, was sentenced to four months in the house of correction in the Municipal court in Boston, on Tuesday, for attempting to pick pockets at a fire on Portland street, Boston, Jan. 11.

At the time Grant was arrested in Quincy, he was held for the grand jury, who later found a true bill against him. The case was called for the Superior court but was continued in order to give the young man a chance to reform. He was released under $1000 bonds. Instead of reforming it is charged that Grant has lately been going under the name of Carney. It is probable that the case against him now pending in the Superior court will be taken up later.

ALL A HOAX.

There were several rumors about City Square this noon that a pair of horses attached to a dray had run away in North Weymouth, and that when they reached the Quincy Point bridge they plunged through the open draw into the river. The story was told by Motorman Myatt who had been so informed by a passenger.

Inquiry at Quincy Point brought out the fact that the draw of that bridge had not been opened since 6 o'clock this morning, and that no such accident had taken place. At North Weymouth nothing was known of any accident at the Hingham bridge and no accident of that kind has taken place at the Neponset bridge. The story was evidently told for a joke.

GOVERNMENT HELP.

A dispatch from Washington says: Former Secretary of the Navy John D. Long and other citizens of Massachusetts appeared before the House committee on inter-state commerce Tuesday and urged that Congress appropriate $50,00 for a bridge over the Weymouth Back river for which the towns of Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham will appropriate another $50,000.

NEW TAXES ASSESSED.

Quincy does not appear in the list of cities and towns where a large amount of personal property escaped taxation last April. The State supervisors however found $893,710 in Milton, $2,563,400 in Brookline, $412,575 in Cohasset, over five millions in both Nahant and Beverly, and fifteen million in Boston. A total in the State of $50,000,000.

NEW RULES AT ELKS CLUB

Day of Meeting of the Lodge May Be Changed

A largely attended meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks was held Tuesday evening at Alpha hall. One candidate was initiated, after which John H. Johnson, the chirman of the club house committee, explained the rules that will govern the house in the future.

Another matter discussed was the changing of the day of meeting. While it was not definitely decided at this meeting just what day meetings will be held, it is more than probable that the meetings will be changed to the first and third Sunday afternoons of each month.

Many Elks lodges meet on Sunday, as it is claimed that a much better attendance is assured than on a week day night when there are so many other events taking place.

NORFOLK DOWNS CAR SERVICE.

Editors Ledger:

It would seem as though the people of the Park and Downs have just cause to complain of the car service in that section. There should be patronage enough to warrant half hourly service through the day and evening. Some people of the centre wishing to go to the Quincy Mansion school to a lecture recently walked both ways much to their disgust. They supposed there would be a 7.30 car and were at the square at 7.30 where they learned there was no car until eight o'clock and none by the was of Hancock street until 7.45 so they walked, not wishing to be late to the lecture. Coming home they had bad luck again and walked to the centre as no car overtook them on Hancock street.

On inquiry we were told that the half hour service on the Downs line is discontinued after half past six. Why so early? Why not give the people an opportunity to attend entertainments in Quincy without walking? We are surprised that section puts up with such accommodation.

A Traveler.

CITY SQUARE RUNAWAY.

A horse owned by Henry P. Murphy broke out of the harness and dashed down Washington street this noon. The horse, hitched to a buggy, was standing in front of F. F. Crane's office. Mr. Murphy was just getting into the vehicle when the bridle broke. The horse became fractious and the owner barely had time to get him by the head and steer him toward a telephone pole in front of the Chinese laundry at the corner of Washington and Temple streets. The bridle came off and the breastplate fell to the ground. In his efforts to break loose, the animal broke the ends off the whiffle-tree and ran down Washington street with the traces dragging. He was stopped in front of Abbott and Miller's office, and led back to the buggy, where with the assistance of Dr. Abele, things were readjusted. The buggy with the whiffle-tree and one tire and rim broken was taken to Scammell's to be repaired. The harness was mended sufficiently for the horse to be driven home hitched to a borrowed vehicle.

BURTON HOLMES IN BOHEMIA.

Burton Holmes will continue his series of travelogues this coming week at Tremont Temple on Friday evening and again on Saturday afternoon with "Prague and Bohemia" as his title. After leaving Oberammergau last summer he and his fellow traveler, Mr. Depue, went in their motor car through the most lovely portions of that especially picturesque and beautiful country, Bohemia, to Prague, a city which in architectural beauty and up-to-dateness ranks with any of the principal cities of continental Europe. In this city they were received with a hospitality which has made the name of Bohemia famous the world over. During their stay in Prague and throughout their subsequent wanderings in the rural districts, they were practically the guests of Bohemia, a special guide being assigned to them and fetes, holidays, banquets and special celebrations being arranged in a regular itinerary all along their line of progress.

As hundreds were unable to obtain admission to the "Passion Play" travelogue given by Mr. Holmes last week, he has consented to repeat it on Saturday evening, February 11, at Tremont Temple.

Hagen, Leading Wonder Worker Of the Stage

THE illusions of stagecraft are constantly a marvel to those before the curtain. Despite newspaper and magazine articles showing the manufacture of thunder, galloping horses, and other effects that have been so plentifully exposed by illustrations the public still views them with awe and enthusiasm.

Probably the premier among stage illusions is Claude L. Hagen, who constructed the stage of the New theater, New York, and is technical director of all its effects. Mr. Hagen's career has been a long one, and a catalogue of his achievements reads like a procession of theatrical reminiscences to almost any playgoer of the present day.

For instance, Mr. Hagen was the inventor of many of the tricks and illusions used by Alexander Herrmann, the first of the celebrated trio of magicians of that name. Then there were the sumptuous productions of "Cleopatra" and "Gismonda" by Fanny Davenport. Afterward Mr. Hagen was connected with the theatrical syndicate that produced "Ben-Hur," for which he invented the world famous chariot race scene. Later Mr. Hagen produced this at the Drury Lane theater, in London, where it scored an immediate success. So great was the enthusiasm that Mr. Hagen was given the singular honor of being the only man in his line of business during the house's 140 years of history who had been forced to appear before the curtain in response to the demands of the audience to personally show their approval of the wonderful mechanism that spelled success for the Lew Wallace dramatization.

Then, being overworked, Mr. Hagen thought he would try something lighter and emigrated to Coney Island. As a result of this change of base the famous fire spectacle entitled "Fighting the Flames" appeared and has since been seen from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Then came the call to the New theater, the contribution of the artistic wealthy to the cleansing of the drama, with its opportunity for struggling playwrights.

With such a theatrical record it would seem as if Mr. Hagen must have been literally born on the stage. Instead he is a native of Chicago and spent his boyhood in Minneapolis, Philadelphia and Kansas City, arriving at the Missouri burg in 1879, when, to use his own words, the town "was practically a brickyard." But he entered the theatrical business there and erected several theaters for capitalists during his stay. Then he began his wanderings, which have carried him all over the United States and into some foreign countries as well.

One of the best of the specimens of the Hagen handicraft at the New theater is the revolving stage, probably unsurpassed in America if not all other countries as well. The idea is not claimed as original by Mr. Hagen, who said in explaining its workings:

"The first revolving stage was in use during the sixteenth century by the Japanese. It was merely a round turntable. Since then various modifications have been devised. The stage of the New theater is a distinct type, inasmuch as it revolves, moves backward and forward or transversely and up and down, as a whole or in parts. It also permits sections of the transverse stage to be dropped and the rest of the sections to be opened so as to form sinks or cuts through which to lower whole sections.

"This stage enables us to reduce to a minimum the time between scenes."

WIRELESS PAPER IN JUNGLE LAND

Porto Velho Journal Published 2,000 Miles Up Amazon.

CANNIBALS SURROUND TOWN.

Paper That Circulates Among Six Thousand Employees of Company That Is Building Brazilian Railway Around Madeira Falls Contains All the News That Is Cabled to Para.

Newcomers to the astonishing Amazon country are constantly amazed by the manner in which the white man, who has set himself to tame this wilderness and wring fortunes out of it, has applied the very latest devices of civilization to uses which in an older country are still served by machinery not quite so up to date.

The modern developer of raw geographical material arrives in Brazil with all his work to do and, finding a virgin soil, promptly applies to the task the very latest labor saving contrivances—a thing he could not do at home, where vast sums are tied up in earlier types of machinery.

It is, for instance, perfectly reasonable that what is perhaps the only newspaper with an exclusively wireless telegraph service published elsewhere than on an ocean liner should flourish in the midst of a patch of civilization hedged in by hundreds of miles of the Amazonas jungle through which the expense of running and maintaining a line of poles and wire would be quite prohibitive, the patch of civilization being accessible otherwise only by a long voyage by river.

Journalism In the Jungle.

A traveler is nevertheless hardly prepared for the shock of seeing a casual copy of the Porto Velho Marconigram, actually published in a country infested by cannibal head hunters, in such a hole in the jungle, as it were, and relying on wireless entirely for the part of its news which deals with the outside world.

The Porto Velho Marconigram is a four page weekly, neatly printed on a single twice folded sheet. It is the one newspaper of Porto Velho, a Brazilian town some 2,000 miles from the mouth of the Amazon, on the Madeira river, which enters the main stem of the greatest of rivers below this port and is reached by not too frequent steamers from Manaos.

It is from Manaos that the news which comes thus far by cable is sent by wireless to the Porto Velho newspaper, the readers of which are found among the 2,000 inhabitants of that place. All of these inhabitants are in the employ of the Madeira-Mamore Railway company, a concern actively managed by Americans which is engaged in building for the Brazilian government a line around the falls of the Madeira river. This line, 300 miles long, Brazil has undertaken to construct in order to fulfill a treaty obligation to Bolivia to give that republic an outlet to the ocean by way of the Amazon.

The Madeira above the falls is navigable for 1,000 miles. The railway when completed will link this upper stretch with the great channel of the Amazon which makes Manaos, though it is 1,000 miles from the river's mouth, to all intents an ocean port, since it is the landing place of steamships from New York and European ports.

Circulation of Six Thousand.

The railway around the falls has been under construction some four years and is now about half completed. The town of Porto Velho was founded by the railway company, which employs some 6,000 men and which in this country has to import not only all of its engineers and other responsible employees, but also all of its manual labor, the Indians who inhabit the Amazonas jungle through which the work is now pushing its slow and painful way being as unwilling as unfit to perform the tasks required of a railway builder.

Before Porto Velho reached its present size and importance as a center of European population the newspaper was merely typewritten and mimeographed. Then, too, it was merely a local organ, no wireless having then been installed. Now, with four pages printed on a modern press, the paper prides itself on its telegraph news from all the world cabled to Para, thence by cable, again up the Amazon to Manaos and finally by wireless across the jungle to the office of the Porto Velho Marconigram.

PRIZES CHINESE DENTISTRY.

American Army Officer Has Wondrous Example In Gold.

There is now on the active list of the United States army an accomplished officer who during an extensive sojourn in China had some work done on his teeth by a native dentist which is wonderful to behold. In the place of three or four missing teeth the Chinese operative appears to have anchored a single strip of gold, which seems to serve the intended purpose all right, but without a line or curve to show the contour of individual teeth. The officer who possesses this remarkable example of oriental dentistry prizes it as a Chinese curio.

There was a one-half contest between two scrub teams, and the first team played a half against a picked team. Along about 7 o'clock in the evening the St. John's team showed up but since there is a sentiment against evening games in the school gymnasium the visitors were obliged to return without a contest.

STRIKES.

The impression of the prevalence of strikes is exaggerated. Most persons fail to recognize that they are exceptional. The average workingman loses less than one day a year in this way. A strike lasts just twenty-three days on the average, and the average employer carries on his business just thirty years without a strike. It can no more be said that labor unions desire strikes because they are ready for them than that the United States wants war because it has a large fleet and army. Unionism has made its mistakes, but the life of man is short and evolution is sure. There will be the ebb and flow, and the movement is onward and upward.—John Mitchell.

CUSTOM.

The Great Need for the Development and Broadening of Our Granite Industry

A Municipal Dock with Street Railway Connection

Editors of Daily Ledger:

In your issue of the 24th inst., I read with interest the letter of J. L. Miller, regarding the developing of our water front.

By a strange coincidence I had already written an article on that same subject, which I had intended to forward. At first I thought I would not send it, and then after more mature thought made up my mind to send it along with the distinct understanding that you make it perfectly clear to your readers that I had not been appropriating any other person's ideas.

Furthermore I might say that this letter was read to George H. Field in my office on the same afternoon before the Ledger had been issued, and would further state that when the Ledger was issued the letter was in the hands of A. L. Hayden, my head man, for revision.

Respectfully yours,
J. S. Swingle.

LADIES' NIGHT AND RECEPTION

Quincy Council Entertains with Music and Dancing

The members of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, and their ladies, had a very enjoyable occasion Wednesday evening at Colonial hall. It was a reception to the incoming and outgoing officers of Quincy council in connection with the ladies' night. The affair was entirely informal and therefore all the more enjoyable. During the first part of the evening there was a short entertainment, under the direction of John W. Lynch the lecturer of the lodge.

Seated on the platform were Rev. John J. Coan, Rev. John P. Cuff, Charles J. McGilvray, grand knight of Ave Marie council of West Quincy; Edward V. Hefferman, deputy grand knight of Braintree council; Lawrence W. Lyons, the retiring grand knight of Quincy council, and John J. Cunniff the sitting grand knight of Quincy council.

The program opened with a tenor solo by Dennis Sweeney, with John Mahon as accompanist. Mr. Sweeney's opening number was the "Rosary," and he was obliged to respond to an encore.

Miss Frances Rocheford rendered a vocal solo with Miss Molly Jones as accompanist, and also responded to an encore.

At this point Grand Knight Cunniff was introduced and after briefly welcoming the ladies and brothers, presented Lawrence W. Lyons, the retiring grand knight with a handsome K. of C. watch charm as a slight token of appreciation of the council for his work in their behalf during his term of office.

Mr. Lyons in accepting the gift expressed his thanks in a few words, and said the year that he had served as grand knight would always be remembered as one of the most enjoyable he had ever had among a crowd of the best fellows in the world.

The next number on the program was a violin solo by Miss Ruth Keating, with piano accompaniment by Miss Teresa Keating. Miss Keating's solo was finely executed, showing her to have a wonderful control over this instrument.

Miss Angelina McCarthy followed with a vocal solo. Miss McCarthy's has a fine expressive voice, and it is always a pleasure to hear her sing. Her numbers were greatly enjoyed.

The entertainment closed with a baritone solo by one of the club's well known vocalists, Edward J. Sullivan. He was accorded a hearty applause and responded to an encore.

An adjournment was then made to the club rooms, where a buffet lunch was served while the hall was being made ready for dancing. Dancing closed one of the most enjoyable evenings of the many held by Quincy council.

SKATER DROPS DEAD

Employed at Pneumatic Scale Co.---Roomed at Y. M. C. A.

Kenneth Campbell, aged 27 years, whose home was at 134 Ashland street, was taken suddenly ill Wednesday evening while skating on Pond street, and died a few minutes later. The young man was employed as a machinist at the Pneumatic Scale Co., and for the past year has roomed at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Wednesday evening, with a party of other young people, he was skating on the meadow off Pond street. Shortly after 9 o'clock he had a fainting spell and fell. The police ambulance was called and several efforts made to secure a physician. When the ambulance arrived he was taken to the office of City Physician Hallowell, but the doctor pronounced him dead. The body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms, and Medical Examiner Jones called, who pronounced death due to acute dilation of the heart.

The young man had been suffering from heart trouble for a year, and had been under the care of Dr. Johnson of Wollaston. Dr. Johnson said Wednesday night that he had frequently warned the young man that he must not overdo, and that he must refrain from any excitement.

For atime it was not known who the young man was, for none of the skaters seemed to know his name. It was said, however, that he roomed at the Y. M. C. A., and word was sent there. Mr. Clee visited the undertaking rooms and identified the young man. Mr. Clee said he had been at the Y. M. C. A. about a year. The young man's parents in NewBedford were notified through the police, and the body will be removed there today.

Y. P. C. U. OFFICERS.

The Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church held its annual meeting Wednesday evening. Reports were read by chairmen of the various committees which showed a flourishing condition in all lines of work. The following officers were elected: President, Miss Edith Hyland; vice president, Frank Smith; secretary, Miss Maude Cadworth; treasurer, Alfred Brown. The installation of officers will occur in the near future.

L. H. Clee, boys' director of the Y. M. C. A., will speak at the Christian Endeavor meeting in Bethany church Sunday evening.

HEAVY SMOKE LOSS AT W. G. SHAW'S

Masonic Apartments and the District Court Threatened By Morning Fire

Several Powerful Streams Necessary Before the Fire Was Under Control in Largest Mercantile Building of the City

For a time this morning it looked as though there would be a conflagration in City Square, when flames and a great volume of black smoke were seen pouring from the windows of the second floor of the Hancock Building.

The fire started in the workroom of the furniture store of W. G. Shaw and was caused by the accidental upsetting of a pot of varnish. The varnish ran along the floor beneath a gas stove, and almost immediately ignited. Andrew Culley was at work in the room at the time, and as soon as he discovered the fire he ran down stairs and notified Mr. Shaw.

There were a number of salesmen and others in the store at the time and they rush to the room and fought the fire with hand chemicals and buckets of water. At first they thought they had the best of the fire, but as it appeared to be getting away from them an alarm was sounded from Box 26 at 10.04. This brought the Central station apparatus as well as the Quincy Point and Wollaston apparatus.

Two lines of hose were laid from in front of the Hancock Market at the corner of Saville street and other lines from the corner of Washington and Coddington streets. These were carried to the side of the building toward Coddington street through which thick black smoke and flames were pouring.

The fire department seemed to be handicapped at the start, due largely to lack of sufficient men to handle the hose, and it seemed an age before water was thrown through the windows where the fire apparently was. Once the lines were properly directed, gallons of water were thrown into the room and soon had a telling effect on the flames. The water ran down through the floor into the rooms below doing considerable damage to a large stock of valuable furniture. No fire however got below the floor and no fire got into the rooms above the work room which are occupied by Rural lodge of Masons.

The burning varnish made a heavy smoke which penetrated every part of the building. For a time the rooms occupied by the District court were almost suffocating, and when the firemen entered the Masonic apartments the smoke was so thick that it was some minutes before they could make progress. Then it was seen that no fire had penetrated the rooms, but that considerable damage must have been done by smoke. The firemen seemed very anxious to look into every closet, doubtless looking for goatship, but he was early taken to a place of safety via the roof. The firemen were sure there was a fire in one of the closets, and were on the point of breaking in when the stewards appeared.

SECOND ALARM AT NOON

Handsome Apartments of Rural Lodge Wrecked

About 1 o'clock W. A. Bradford and other Masons visited their apartments to see what damage had been done by the morning fire. As they entered the banquet hall a tiny cloud of smoke was observed coming through the floor. Feeling of the floor it was found to be hot, and it was evident that the fire had again started.

Mr. Bradford ran down stairs and sent Officeer Phillips to call the fire department. He telephoned the Central station and at the same time someone pulled Box 26. By this time the smoke in the banquet room had become so thick that you could not see across the room, and the smoke was coming up through the floor thick and black.

By this time a number of Masons arrived at the hall and entering the

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It would have been unfortunate if J. S. Swingle had withheld his letter because that of John L. Miller happened to get into print first. That both should have written letters at the same time, and along the same lines, shows that these two enterprising granite quarrymen are agreed as to what the industry needs and how it may be accomplished. First, a dock or system of docks is needed on our water front. Possibly the city of Quincy as a municipality may not be able to finance the enterprise, but it can assist in many ways. The docks should be established where direct connection may be made with the quarries and granite yards of South and West Quincy. Copeland and Water streets should be double tracked, and spur tracks run to the quarries. Then have the tracks extended from Franklin street through Water street to Quincy avenue, and thence to some point on Town river. Possibly via Scammell street, Sumner street and Edison street to the foot of Edison street, where there is an undeveloped water front of 1500 feet owned by Mary A. Gavin and others. Or by an extension of Water street to Pond street, and the establishment of docks along the old Canal, on property now owned by Miss Floretta Vining and Henry M. Faxon, which also has a frontage of more than 1500 feet. Or by some other route to Brackett's wharf, or the Coddington street meadows, or the Brackett street side of the canal. The method of abolishing the grade crossing at Water street may influence the route to be selected.

FARTHEST NORTH IN THE WAR

Place of Morgan's Surrender Marked by Monument.

A monument has recently been put in place on the Crubaugh farm in Columbiana county, O., which marks the farthest northern point reached by the Confederate forces during the civil war.

It also marks the spot where General John H. Morgan, the famous southern leader, surrendered. Many will not realize without looking at the map that Wellsville is north of Gettysburg.

For many years an old locust tree marked the place of surrender, but a short time ago it died and was cut down, the stump being taken to East Liverpool, O., and placed in the public library for safe keeping as a historical relic.

It was the idea of the late W. L. Thompson, a well known song writer, who lived near the scene of the fight, to erect a monument to mark the spot. He had a fund well started when he suddenly died, but his friends took up the work and carried it through.

A huge granite bowlder was out in place last year, but it was not until a few weeks ago that the bronze tablet was put in place and the monument dedicated.

The tablet bears this inscription:

"This stone marks the spot where the Confederate raider General John H. Morgan surrendered his command to Major George W. Rue July 26, 1863, and is the farthest point north ever reached by any body of Confederate troops during the civil war."

DARING.

He either fears his fate too much
Or his deserts are small
Who dares not put it to the touch
To gain or lose it all.
—Marquis of Montrose.

—Two new and important (?) branches of study are now proposed for the school system of the state of Massachusetts, which is always at the "Fore Front" in educational matter. First, table manners and next lessons at the wash tub and laundry. These are very important, a boy should know better than to jab his knife down his throat or grab his food from the table while blessing is being invoked, even if he gets a little behind in his reading, writing and arithmetic and a girl ought to be able to wash, iron and mend and after that learn to tell how she "done" it.—Weymouth Gazette.

TRANSPORTATION

industry, the most insistent demand seems to be that of increased facilities for quick and inexpensive transportation.

It is of the utmost importance that some plan for a large municipal dock be devised and carried out at an early date. In fact the demand for this very thing has long existed, and the longer it is delayed, so much longer will our granite industry be hampered and retarded.

These municipal docks should be planned in a comprehensive manner, which should also provide for proper means of transportation from our granite manufacturing plants and quarries.

A system of street car lines with spur tracks connecting each plant and quarry with the municipal dock, would make an insuring quick movement and reasonable charges.

Shipments being received at the dock would be handled by the most approved type of hoisting machinery, and placed on the vessels, saving much of the expense now necessary.

With the cooperation of our city, the street railway interests and the granite industry, surely it ought not to be a formidable task to bring about some such consummation, which would be of untold benefit.

By such a plan our granite shipments could get a much lower rate of freight, and could be sent by water to Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Baltimore and many other coast points which could be mentioned.

Such a plan would tend to bring the railroad people to readjust their rates on granite, which would certainly do no harm.

Many of our competitive granite producing centres north of us, in Vermont and New Hampshire for instance, have no outlet such as we have and are obliged to depend upon the railroads entirely, while we with all our natural advantages sit idly by and allow old conditions to continue

YEAR AFTER YEAR.

If the people of Barre, Vt., had such a possible outlet at their doors, how long do you think they would neglect it? There would have been enough public enterprise there to have taken advantage of every feature.

Were we to wake up and utilize these water outlets we could make the freight question one of cents rather than dollars.

If our transportation facilities were improved along these lines, we could bring immense volumes of business to Quincy, without any doubt, for we would then be in position to go into the markets and bid on building contracts which are constantly being let to other successful bidders. Our granite is favorably known in the building trade, and there is no stone that will hold it's own like Quincy, and all it needs is cheaper transportation which would equalize the differences that now exist.

Quincy has millions of cubic feet of this granite in her hills, which would immediately if we had the favorable outle t and freight facilities such as some centres now enjoy.

For example in New York and Brooklyn many of the building contractors have their own private docks and vessels from some of the Maine points deliver the stone directly to these contractors, so that there is no extra expense for teaming and handling, and it makes a big point in favor of other granites.

Many more properties could also be worked on a larger scale, and new ones developed, had we these advantages as an incentive.

Our water front is here, our mountains of granite are here, and all that we need is this the transportation problem, to be solved, and we will see a rapid stride forward in our granite industry.

While many of our citizens in a measure have sensed the need, there seems to have been no individual or combination who has been willing or able to come forward and push the matter with sufficient energy to start the ball rolling.

WHO IS HE

who has the power to stimulate our people to action, that shall lead on to more fame and fortune for our celebrated Quincy granite?

It can be done, for brains, executive power and money can accomplish untold wonders right here in our midst. Where is the master of the situation?

Let us hear from all who can suggest feasible plans, let us discuss the matter freely, and perhaps before we are aware of it, this agitation and discussion will assume shape in some organization which will have for it's aim the consummation of a definite plan, and will not cease to work till such plan shall be brought to full fruition and realized before our eyes.

At all our public banquets and association meetings, much stress is laid upon the matter of bringing new enterprises to establish themselves upon our water front and within our limits. But why would it not be a profitable idea to give existing industries some assistance, and then we should be in better position to appeal to outside capital.

J. S. Swingle.

Quincy, Jan. 24, 1911.

A BAR TO BEAUTY.

[Miss Mildred Holland told the Professional Women's league that one aid to acquiring beauty was to keep your mouth shut when asleep.]

She has longed to have radiant beauty,
Though it seemed very far from her reach;
She has sought for a skin that is fruity
(Which refers not to lemon, but peach);
She has toiled to acquire a complexion
And has laughed at the size of the bill,
But she will not obey the direction:
"Keep still!"

She has laved in the tonic that's ocean's,
She has dabbled in sulphurous streams,
She has tried many hundreds of lotions,
Also powders and bleaches and creams;
She has rubbed in the lemon juice cutting
Till it burned like a blast from the south,
But she's never sought beauty by shutting
Her mouth.

She has put on a mask when retiring,
And her husband's exceedingly gay,
For her voice should be close to expiring
When it's covered by papier mache;
But, alas, as he falls into dozing
He can hear her, relentless as law,
For no commonplace mask can be closing
Her jaw.

Yea, to garner the beauty that's facial
There is only one thing she won't do,
She will live in a region that's glacial;
In the tropics she'll broil herself through;
She will starve in determined endeavor,
She will banish the bite and the sup,
But she'd rather stay homely than ever
Shut up.
—John O'Keefe in New York World.

72 YEARS REQUIRED FOR LETTER TO GO 335 MILES

No Explanation In Sight For Delayed Journey of Missive.

If it takes a letter seventy-two years to travel 335 miles and both the writer and the addressee are dead when Uncle Sam at last gets around to delivery, how long will it take a postcard to make the journey? This is puzzling not only Nathan Warren, the postmaster at Yonkers, N. Y., but Mrs. Walter Paddock of the same place, who recently received a letter mailed from Geneva, N. Y., in 1838, directed to the great-uncle of her husband, D. O. Paddock, who has been dead forty years.

Mrs. Paddock says the letter was written by Peter Beatty and concerned the shipment of a consignment of lumber. Mr. Beatty informed Mr. Paddock that he would remit $2,000 on receipt of the lumber. Whether Mr. Paddock shipped the lumber or not is likely to remain as great a mystery as the history of the letter from April 29, 1838, until it turned up at the Syracuse postoffice on Dec. 27 last.

It is faded with age and instead of being inclosed in an envelope was folded square, with the edges pasted together. It had apparently never been in the dead letter office.

FREE MUSIC SCHOLARSHIPS.

Funds to provide at least ten new scholarships for deserving students of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, are being sought in a quiet campaign which has been going on for some weeks past. The management has been so far successful that three of these scholarships are now assured and several other friends of the institution have the matter under advisement. The movement started early last fall when Mr. John G. Wright, one of the trustees, announced that he would provide a scholarship fund of $5,000 if nine other persons would do likewise during the present school year.

The need of increased facilities to assist ambitious and promising young musicians to obtain an education in Boston has long been felt at the New England Conservatory. The music school with more than half as many students on its rolls as Harvard University with which it is affiliated, had, up to the beginning of the present year, only five specifically named scholarships; the Sinfonia Scholarship, representing the income of $1,000 available for a member of the music students' Greek letter fraternity; the Carl Baermann scholarship; providing free tuition in the pianoforte department for one year; the Alumni scholarship offered by Mrs. Austin C. Wellington, giving one year's tuition in voice culture; the Walter Langshaw scholarship, with one year's tuition in voice or organ with the required additional studies; the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand pianoforte, worth $1,100, to the most proficient pianist of the senior class.

Reasons why well to do New England people should consider the endowment of musical education in this section are set forth by Manager Ralph L. Flanders of the New England Conservatory, who has been brought into very close contact with the financial troubles of music students.

"Because of their temperament and the exacting conditions of professional success," he says, "no other class of students, except possibly those of drawing and painting, are so likely to require a little financial help in completing their education. Pitiable cases every now and then come to our attention of really talented young men or women who have to give up or whose health is injured by the struggle to earn a living and still keep on with part of the school work.

"Harvard College has 201 scholarships ranging from a nominal sum up to $4,000. Any ordinarily bright boy who goes to Harvard knows that by attending strictly to business he can get a scholarship if he needs it. Nobody could wish that it were otherwise in the university at Cambridge, but it does seem as if this music school ought to get a little more attention from people who intend disposing of a portion of their property to educational causes. Scholarships are our especial desire just now, though other bequests, of course, are always welcome.

"Boston has been the leading centre of musical education in the United States since Dr. Tourjee established the New England Conservatory of Music in 1853. The country still looks up to this city for its many musical advantages. But the competition of the music schools that are growing up in cities outside of New England will be felt more and more. If we are to hold our own we ought to be able to offer special aid to talented young people to come here for study. Experience has shown that one student from a distant place is pretty likely to be followed by others from the same neighborhood.

"A good many people have no idea what a financial benefit it is, not only to Boston but to this whole section to have a big music school located here. Many of the students who come into New England to study music are well taken care of in the matter of income. Including the well to do, average expenses of the music student in Boston may be set safely at not less than $800 a year. Last season there came to the conservatory from outside New England 535 students. Their disbursements in the community must have reached a total of more than $400,000. Simply as a matter of business such a sum of money, gradually increasing year by year, means a very respectable contribution to New England prosperity. It is good policy to do everything possible to keep the music students headed this way instead of permitting them to be diverted to New York or Chicago.

"Then we need the scholarships for the sake of bright pupils of this neighborhood. The New England pupils at the Conservatory last year numbered 2,160. Some of these were well to do, taking courses for reasons of culture, but the great majority were young people who intend to make a living from music. Most of them become teachers. They go to every part of the world and spread the New England influence. Every year several score of Conservatory graduates are placed by our teachers' bureau in western and southern universities, colleges, military institutes, seminaries and public school systems. The demand for these teachers far exceeds the supply.

"The way western people are coming back to New England to give their sons and daughters the advantages of this community for musical education is another test of the virtue of an institution like the New England Conservatory as well as Opera and the Boston Symphony. Students who have been assisted with scholarships and who have gone to other parts of the country are always faithful missionaries of their alma mater and are ready to tell their friends and neighbors where to get the best musical training.

"This is not a case of passing the hat for our needy music students, but we feel sure that if people generally understood the good a scholarship can do in a music school the nine special funds we are after would easily be secured.

"It may be well to state in this connection that the New England Conservatory of Music is a public institution, chartered just as other great educational undertakings of the Commonwealth are incorporated. It is stated in the charter that any profits from operation of the institution are to be devoted to free education of students. No such provision for gratuitous tuition has been made up to this time for the reason that the Conservatory is still carrying a debt, contracted in earlier years and although under the present management this has been reduced by about 25 per cent in five years it will still be some time before any surplus can become available for such a purpose. In the meantime the needs of worthy students are immediate and pressing."

The new scholarships which have already been authorized at the New England Conservatory since the present quest was started are as follows:

The Converse scholarship. The income of $5,000, given by Mrs. Ida M. Converse of Malden.

The Baermann scholarship, given by friends of Carl Baermann of the faculty.

The Langshaw scholarship. Given by Walter Langshaw of New Bedford.

SCHOOL AT SHIPYARD.

The Fore River Ship Building Co., ever mindful of the welfare of its employees, has opened this week a night school for all employees. Schools for apprentices are not uncommon among large corporations of this kind, but a school for all employees is an innovation, the Fore River Co. being the first as far as known to establish such a school.

Sessions of the school are held four evenings each week between the hours of 4 and 5.30 P. M., and are in charge of James E. Neary, the instructor of the Apprentice school. The nights of the school are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

On Monday and Thursday evenings instruction is given in drawing and blue print reading, two matters in which all employees are interested, especially blue print reading.

On Tuesday and Friday evenings instruction is given in arithmetic and shop problems that are constantly confronting the workmen.

That the school is appreciated by the workmen is shown by the attendance that has characterized the sessions held this week, for they have been so large that it has been difficult to find room for them in the school room.

ARGENTINA BOYS.

A Boston paper says:

Five boys from the high school of commerce of the Argentine Republic are expected in this city next Monday. They will spend about a week here studying the high schools of this city. They will be the special guests of the boys of the high school of commerce next Wednesday. These boys have been sent on a tour of the big commercial cities of this country and in Europe on the Atlantic seaboard and its immediat tributaries, by the Argentine Republic. They are now in New York studying the high schools there. When the boys come to this city they will be shown how to play basket ball, as it is understood that the boys and girls of that South American republic are anxious to know something about the game. While here they will be in the charge of Charles Lyon Chandler, U. S. consular agent of the Argentine Republic.

Don't Be Fussy.

Don't! Even if you can't try to overcome the failing for the sake of your own health and peace of mind try to do so for the sake of the man you will certainly render wretched one of these days. It is said that no woman has a proper sense of proportion. The fussy woman certainly hasn't. On her horizon trifles loom like battleships. She never recognizes what really matters and what is unimportant. As a worker the fussy woman is always a failure. She neither gets through as much work nor allows others to do so. Like a high stepping horse, she is all action, yet makes but little progress. Nevertheless fussiness will age her before her time.

LAW.

There is too much partisanship and not enough patriotism in America. There is much wrong done owing to disrespect for the law. The laws may be sufficient, but they are not efficient. The greatest thing in our own country is law, and it is the greatest thing in the universe. Law has been and ever will be. In our country the law is made for the benefit of the people—to protect the poor, to enable the workman to collect his wages and to maintain him in the enjoyment of his rights under the constitution. Disrespect for the law by public servants and corporations drags the respect of the law in the dust.—John A. Johnson.

BURNS NIGHT QUINCY POINT

Praises and Songs of the Poet Sung at Men's Club

The 158th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns was observed Wednesday evening at the meeting of the Point Church Men's club. The program was educational and at the same time thoroughly enjoyable. It was the best means of commemorating the life and works of the great Scottish bard.

A quartet composed of Mr. Hendry, 1st tenor, Mr. McGeachie, 2nd tenor, Mr. Eggleshan, 1st bass, and Mr. Marr, 2nd bass, accompanied by David Henderson, opened the program with an excellent rendering of the old Scotch melody "My love is like the red, red rose."

Before the beginning of Mr. Hendry's speech, a picture of Robert Burns, an old-fashioned but well-preserved oil painting was brought in and hung on the wall at the back of the platform amid cheers and applause.

Mr. Hendry said in part: When it was first noticed that the two meetings of the club came on January 25, and February 22, the birthdays of Burns and Washington, it was decided to celebrate each of them. I was given charge of Burn's night, and we are met tonight to celebrate the birthday of a man famous not only in his own country but abroad. It is a huge task that has been given me and to use the homely simile, "I have bit off more'n I can chaw." I have never been connected with one of the many Burns clubs, although a Scotchman, and therefore I ask the indulgence of my hearers, especially my countrymen. George Washington was first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen. Robert Burns through his songs of war and peace was first in war, first in peace and surely first in the hearts of his countrymen.

In many places tonight there are bands of true Scotchmen gathered to celebrate the birth of the bard. Now what is the secret of the charm of his personality and his poetry? Briefly, he told what he observed; his powers of observation were keen; he wrote what he felt and had a lively imagination. He wrote from the bottom of the most human heart that ever beat. He was born in 1759 in North Scotland, a short distance from the river Doon, which he has commemorated in song. The quartet here sang "Ye banks and braes of Bonnie Doon."

As a boy, Burns had little schooling. His education was gained principably in the home, and he read many books including the Spectator, Pope's work, a history of the Bible, and a collection of songs.

Burns has been called the "Purifier of Scottish Songs." He elevated the national melodies by changing words. He wrote the words of Auld Lang Syne, and got the tune from the singing of an old man. This song has been called the "International anthem."

Although many of his poems would better have been left unwritten, his generous, lovable nature, attractive in every mood, charms us and makes us blind to his faults. He wrote song after song, in peerless style, lyrics of love and courtship. Many of his best works were written while living in pitifully inadequate surroundings. One of these "Afton Water" was here sung by Mr. Hendry as a tenor solo.

Not in his love songs alone does Burns shine as a poet. He shows a versatility remarkable for one in his station of life. The "Ode to a field mouse" which shows the utmost compassion for the "wee timorous cowering beastie" is at the opposite pole from the extreme satire he used in criticizing the hypocrisy of the church. He also had a humorous side.

Here a trio, a rollicking Scotch drinking song was sung and vigorously applauded.

Burns wrote in addition to songs of love, his satires and poems of nature, a number of political ballads which were of great power and were the cause of much national controversy because of their straightforwardness.

On July 2, 1796, he laid down the pen which caused his name to sound throughout the centuries. For years after his death he was considered a blot on the country, and no monument was raised over him. Later, the Scottish people went to the other extreme and erected a mausoleum over his remains. Each year, Robert Burns occupies a stronger position as a poet, not only in Scotland but all over the world.

Mr. Hendry then sang "The Star of Robbie Burns," and all joined in the chorus.

John Young, a past president of a Burns club was then introduced. Mr. Young recited several poems in the Scottish dialect. He told of Burns as a reformer, and gave a picture of the life of a Scotch peasants' home in the time of Burns. He closed with an enthusiastic and eloquent eulogy of Burns as a man and a poet.

Dr. Emery of Boston when introduced said that he was not a Scotchman, but was a lover of the country and the poet. He stated that he had come not to speak but to listen, and he had been amply repaid for coming. He told of experiences during a visit in Scotland. In conclusion he said that he had nothing but the highest praise for the beautiful country and the superb social condition existing there.

The pastor, Rev. Charles P. Marshall, was called upon last. He said that he was a Scotchman himself. The Scotch, he said, are called a cold, stolid race, but is there any other country where the greatest man is not a statesman or a warrior but a poet The character of the people and the country are personified in Robert Burns.

Refeshments consisting of coffee, rolls, pastry and fruit were served, while Mr. Young amused the company by reciting a Scotch poem in dialect. After the refreshments, a hundred voices united in singing Auld Lang Syne.

Notice was given of a meeting on Feb. 8, which will take the form of a debate with two skilful participants.

SPARK FROM MINER'S PIPE

Responsible For Seven Deaths and Destruction of Part of Mine

Pittston, Pa., Jan. 26.—Seven men were instantly killed in the mine of the Erie Coal company near here when a miner smoking a pipe contrary to rules carelessly shook a live spark into a quantity of black blasting powder, causing an explosion which destroyed a portion of the mine.

Michael Roach, the foreman, and six of the miners were blown to bits. Fifteen other miners were entombed by the explosion but were rescued. The powder was being hauled into the mine and the men had extinguished their lamps, but one of the foreigners forgot about his pipe.

DESCEND UPON "CIGAR STORES"

Raiders Secure $10,000 Worth of Prepared Opium

OTHER PROPERTY IS SEIZED

Twelve Hundred Pounds of the Drug Found In Shops Where White Lights of the Tenderloin Are Brightest—Four Chinamen Are Arrested After Evidence Had Been Obtained by Agents of Customs Service

New York, Jan. 26.—Customs agents and the police raided two "cigar stores" in the heart of the Tenderloin last night, where they seized 600 two-pound cans of prepared opium, enough raw opium to bring the value up to an estimated total of $10,000, and a quantity of wires, lamps and other paraphernalia of the opium smoker's "lay-out."

Four Chinamen were arrested, charged with violating the federal opium exclusion act of 1909, and a bundle of letters, said to implicate a number of police officials high up in the departments of several Pennsylvania cities, was placed in the custody of the United States district attorney. The contents and addresses were withheld.

Both shops are on Seventh avenue, between Thirty-sixth and Fortieth streets, where the white lights are brightest, and the raids caused much excitement among the floating population, which soon learned what was going on.

The Chinamen arrested are held in $1500 bail each, for lack of which they are locked up in the Tombs.

Some resistance was made by the surprised Chinamen at first, but they were quickly overawed and when the customs agents were reinforced by the police, a thorough search of the premises began.

The firm name over the doors was the Tuck Lung company, said to have headquarters in San Francisevo. The seizure is the second largest made since the passage of the exclusion act.

Evidence for the raid here was obtained by two customs agents who made affidavits that they bought opium with the understanding it was to be used for smoking. The shops have been under surveillance for some time, and the customs agents say that a list of the customers who "bought cigars" would make interesting reading along Broadway.

LIQUOR SOLD IN JAIL

Further Charges by Representative Who Seeks Investigation

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 26.—Charges that liquor, morphine and tobacco were openly sold to prisoners and that prisoners were brutally treated by the keepers were made last night by Representative Flanagan in discussing the administration of both the Worcester county jail in Worcester and the house of correction at Fitchburg.

Representative Flanagan is particularly jubilant because his order calling for a rigid investigation of the Worcester jail has passed the house of representatives and has been sent to the senate. He feels sure that the senate will concur with the house.

Court Refuses to Lessen Assessment on New York Property

New York, Jan. 26.—John Jacob Astor's plea to have about $1,000,000 taken off the tax assessment on his various properties in New York has failed. A writ of certiorari directing the board of tax commissioners to review the assessments was dismissed by Justice O'Gorman in the supreme court.

"HOME" IN CEMETERY

Woman and Her Two Daughters In a Pitiable Condition

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 26.—Boys wandering through an abandoned cemetery in the Sandy Hill section of the city found a woman and two girls living in a vault. All were suffering from hunger, cold and exposure, and they were removed by the police last night to charitable institutions.

The woman said her husband was killed in a mine accident two years ago, since when she had been working in silk mills, but two weeks ago she lost her position. Bringing herself and children here left her almost destitute.

For several nights they slept under stoops or other rude shelters until they discovered the old cemetery vault. When the boys found them they were trying to bake a potato over a crude little fire of faggots.

ANARCHISTS BEING CLOSELY WATCHED

Fear of Bomb Plot Leads to General Roundup In London

London, Jan. 26.—Scotland Yard has begun a great roundup of international anarchists in anticipation of the opening of parliament on Feb. 6, when King George and Queen Mary, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and many high nobles of the realm, drive from Buckingham palace to parliament building. A score of men are under arrest.

Although it has been the custom to clear London of anarchists upon the eve of a function which takes the royal family into public, the fears have been doubled by the boldness of the band whose leaders fought to death in the battle of Sidney street against an army of police and soldiers. Secret service agents of Russia, France, Germany and Italy are in England to assist in the campaign.

A sensation has been caused by a report that a plot has been discovered against the lives of the king and queen and that the anarchists have been planning to explode a bomb on the 6th.

Concord, N. LORIMER HAS NEW CHAMPION

Paynter Argues In Favor of the Illinois Senator

HE INVOLVES THE PRESIDENT

Says His Interference In the Matter Would Be "Calamitous and Humiliating"—Would Disregard Demand of Kentucky to Unseat "Man of Perfect Morals" Even If His Vote Retired Him From Public Life

Washington, Jan. 25.—For the first time since the debate in the senate in the case of Senator Lorimer of Illinois began, mention was made of the reported interest of the president in the unseating of that senator because of the charges of bribery made in connection with his election.

The reference was made by Senator Paynter of Kentucky, who was a member of the sub-committee which made the investigation into the charges and of the full committee on privileges and elections, which brought in a report exonerating the Illinois senator.

Declaring the question to be a judicial one, Paynter said: "I did not approach the investigation with any feeling or thought that the country demanded a victim to appease its wrath, or that any member of this body, if such demand were made, would subserviently yield to it; neither did I suppose that a sacrificial offering should be made of the accused senator to satisfy a popular demand, nor did I suppose it was necessary to do so to give character and standing to the administration."

Having brought the president into the discussion, the Kentucky senator professedly undertook to eliminate him from it. Referring to the frequent assertion in the public press that the president is using his personal, if not official, influence against Lorimer, Paynter said he desired to resent the imputation against the president. "I have had," he said, "an exalted opinion of the president's character, and have believed that he has chosen wisely in many of his selections for judical positions. He has been a judge and knows the rights and liberties of the people are safe only with an honest and independent judiciary.

"The president is a great lawyer, and knows that the constitution divides our government into branches, and that it was intended that one branch should not invade the province of another. The president knows that the senate is made the judge of the election of its members; therefore, the constitution denies to the executive and judicial branches of the government the right to determine who is entitled to a seat in this body. Certainly the president would not attempt to violate the spirit, if not the letter, of the constitution, which he has promised to obey. Surely he does not want to do that."

Declaring that such a course on the part of the president would be "calamitous and humiliating," he said the president could as well advise the supreme court as to the tenor of its decisions in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases as undertake to influence the senate's course with reference to its action for or against Lorimer.

Referring to Senator Beveridge and the minority report he presented attacking the Lorimer election, Paynter remarked: "If he committed an error in the preparation of the minority report I think he is entirely excusable. The senator had to prepare it in great haste because he and another distinguished senator, Mr. Owen, were in a mad rush, in a frantic effort to strike the first blow in this contest. Both, from their point of view, were endeavoring to enlighten an expectant public upon a question affecting the honor and dignity of this body. It presented a scene the like of which I had never witnessed during my brief service here."

Mr. Paynter defended the character of Lorimer, who he said was "a man of perfect morals," and also spoke in terms of praise of Speaker Shurtleff of the Illinios house of representatives, and state Senator Browne, the Democratic leader, who gave their support to Lorimer. Taking cognizance of the demand upon him from his own state to oppose Lorimer, Paynter declared that he could not yield.

"In the consideration of the judicial question that is before us, if I knew that every man, woman and child in Kentucky were of the opinion that I should vote to unseat Lorimer, I would not do it," he said. "If I knew that my vote would retire me from public life, it would not alter my course in this matter, nor should I have the slightest regret that I had reached the conclusion I did in this case."

P. J. Garrity, 367 Granite St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do, as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes, I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

A ROMAN COMEDY

An American Girl Is the Heroine, but There Is No Hero

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Two Italian noblemen were sitting on a sidewalk in the Piazza Colonna in Rome, smoking cigarettes and drinking the wine of the country. They were both descended from families that had been prominent several centuries ago, the one from Barbarini, the other from the Sforza. Count Leo Barbarini was speaking to Prince Brunelli Sforza.

"So the fair American has refused you too!"

"She has," snapped the prince.

"You do not seem well pleased with your failure."

"Were you pleased with yours?"

"Oh, there are more of these American fish as good as any that were ever caught in the sea. I shall try again elsewhere."

"I would like," replied Prince Sforza, "to palm off upon her some low-born man as a prince with a fortune."

"It would require at least a thousand lira even to dress him."

"I can borrow that much."

"And I can raise a thousand more. We can place his estates in some inaccessible country."

"Good!" laughed the prince. "Your suggestions are admirable. Shall we really try it?"

"By all means."

Soon after this interview it was intimated to Miss Evaline Henderson of Idaho, U. S. A., that Prince Gregorio Colonna desired to be presented to her. The Colonna family was already known to Miss Henderson as one of the two great factions—the Colonna and the Orsini—that dominated Rome during the middle ages. She had not come to the Eternal City without preparing herself by historical reading to enjoy its antiquities and was curious to see a lineal descendant of a family that had taken so great a part in past struggles between the holy Roman empire and the papacy. She therefore received Prince Colonna graciously.

Prince Gregorio had been selected to play his part more from his personal appearance than his intellect or education, though he was really above his business, which was that of waiter at a hotel at Frascatti. He was tall, massive and solemn as the column standing in the piazza named for his (supposed) ancestors beside the Corso in Rome. His hair was combed straight up from his forehead, and his mustache was elevated from the line of his lips at an angle of forty-five degrees. His estates had been near Perugia; but, they having passed away, he had invested money in Siberian mines that had made him rich. The only means he had of palming himself off as a real Colonna was the 2,000 lira furnished by Count Barbarini and Prince Sforza, the reading of a brief history of his ancestors and these Siberian mines, which were not likely to be hunted up by Miss Henderson. But his chief attraction was his personnel. No American can visit Italy without being impressed with the solemn grandeur of some of their knights of the napkin whose battleground is the restaurant and whose fortunes consist of American tips. Prince Colonna was one of the most magnificent of these.

Now, the American girl is regarded all over Europe as a wonder. Europeans are used to their own girls, who are guarded till after their marriage and must then endeavor to throw off that want of familiarity with the world to which they had been heretofore doomed. The American girl begins to use her wings almost from the crib. Miss Henderson was as well able to take care of herself as a corps of guardians and duennas could have taken care of her.

The day after the presentation Henry Blackwelder, a young man from South Dakota, who raised wheat enough in one season to fill half a dozen elevators, came to Rome for the purpose of getting from Miss Henderson a reply to a suit of several years' standing. He came at a very inopportune time. Prince Calonna had just appeared on the scene and had evidently been very much struck with Miss Henderson. Mr. Blackwelder could not make out whether Miss Henderson was bent upon assuming Prince Gregorio's historical name or whether she was laughing at him. The prince had the good taste never to mention his family glory unless compelled to do so. When Blackwelder and Colonna and Miss Henderson were together the latter expatiated to the American on the marvelous deeds of the Colonnas of old, showing a remarkable familiarity with them—indeed, a familiarity which at times would startle the prince himself, especially when she gave the names of five Colonnas he had not met with in his historical studies, who had been hanged before the castle of St. Angelo.

Nothing will so fret a man, especially a man in love, as uncertainty. If Miss Henderson had announced her intention to buy her way in among the Colonnas or if she had openly made fun of the prince Blackwelder would have settled down to his fate, whatever it was. Unfortunately she seemed to be wavering between the two. The only persons who seemed to have been made happy by the introduction of the prince were the conspirators, Barbarini and Sforza. One day Miss Henderson, driving along the Corso in an open carriage with Blackwelder and the spurious prince, saw them sitting together in the Piazza Colonna drinking and smoking. They both rose and took off their hats to her, while she seemed to be very proud of the Italian portion of her company. After this she seemed bent on driving by the Piazza Colonna frequently at an hour when she knew her two discarded suitors would be there. If Prince Colonna on these occasions felt embarrassed he concealed his embarrassment under that stolid grandeur of mien which was born in him.

"Upon my word," remarked Count Leo Barbarini to Prince Sforza, "I believe our scheme will be a success. Our waiter will marry the American."

"You see, it required those Siberian mines to make it so. Though Americans spend money like water, they value it all the same."

"Who is the other fellow in the carriage, I wonder?"

"An American. But whether he is a suitor, too, cannot matter much to us—that is, provided we can keep up the sham. It is the Colonna name and the right to write princess after it that will win."

"In any event we have had the satisfaction of passing a waiter off upon her as a prince. Did you notice how proud she seemed to be of him as she passed?"

"And the smile she gave us."

And so the comedy went on, much to the satisfaction of the conspirators. Prince Colonna's capital was nearing an end, and one day he mentioned before Miss Henderson that a dividend from his mines had been delayed. She promptly asked him how much he required for his present expenses, and while he was refusing to be supplied by a lady she sat down at a desk and, writing a check for 3,000 lira, handed it to him.

"But my remittance will soon be here," he protested.

"Take it and pay when your remittance comes," she replied.

The same afternoon Miss Henderson telephoned to her bankers to know if Prince Colonna had drawn the check and learned that he had done so. Then she telephoned to the prince asking him to call during the evening. When he did so, magnificent in a fresh accession of jewelry, she asked him to be seated and said:

"Giovanni"—

The prince started.

—"you are not Gregorio Colonna. You are Giovanni Something-or-other, and you have this afternoon committed a fraud. Some one has been putting you up to this playing prince, and I wish to know all about the scheme. You are welcome to the 3,000 lira, but hereafter I own you, for the moment you refuse to obey my orders or try to deceive me you go to jail. Do as I direct and you are safe from the results of your crime."

Giovanni confessed that he had been a waiter at a hotel at Frascatti and that Barbarini and Sforza had hired him to play the part of Prince Colonna and marry Miss Henderson if possible. He further stated that he had agreed to pay each of them an annuity after his marriage.

"Indeed!" she said, with much surprise. "I did not suppose that Barbarini and Sforza had sunk to that. However, since it was murder in the middle ages, I suppose it must be swindling in the twentieth century. Go and steal the paper you signed agreeing to pay this annuity."

"It is not necessary, senorina. There were duplicates made. I have one in my pocket, but I do not like to part with it."

"Either give it to me or"— She went to a telephone and took down the receiver. The waiter knew the meaning of this, and Miss Henderson knew that with the transmitter near her lips she had little to fear. Giovanni opened a pocketbook, drew out a paper and handed it to her. She took it, read it and said:

"Now go to Frascatti and tell the keeper of the hotel at which you were employed that I desire dinner for four persons to be ready at 7 o'clock this evening. Any failure to do as I direct will result in your arrest at once."

With 3,000 lira in his pocket and jail as an alternative there was not much expectation that he would disobey.

The next morning Count Barbarini and Prince Sforza received an invitation to drive with Miss Henderson to the hills near Rome for dinner. She said she had an important announcement to make to them. They accepted, feeling assured that they would learn of her engagement to Prince Colonna. They called at her hotel and were introduced to Mr. Blackwelder. Seeing that they were surprised at not meeting Prince Colonna, she told them that he would be of the party at dinner, but would go in his own conveyance.

The four entered a carriage waiting at the door and, driving across the Campagna, ascended the hill to Frascatti and stopped before the —— hotel. Dinner was served, but the prince did not appear.

"He will be late," Miss Henderson explained.

It was not till the coffee was brought on that he appeared, and then it was in the dress of a waiter, with a napkin on his arm. The guests stared at him astonished, but he avoided the gaze of all, serving the coffee with lowered eyes. The two conspirators paled.

"Gentlemen," said Miss Henderson, "I told you I would make an announcement. It is this—I am betrothed to Mr. Blackwelder."

Then the party broke up, the two noblemen retiring in confusion.

Morosini Palace Looted During Absence of Newlyweds

PLACE CAREFULLY GUARDED

Daughter of Rich Banker, Who Married a Policeman, Returns From Honeymoon to Find Her Wardrobe Destroyed and Some of Her Most Treasured Possessions Scattered About—$60,000 Loss by Vandalism

New York, Jan. 26.—"Elmhurst," the wonder palace at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, and sometimes a house of mystery during the lifetime of Giovanni P. Morosini, was visited by vandals during the honeymoon of trip of its chatelaine, who was Miss Giulia Morosini.

Miss Morosini, who was known as the best dressed woman in America, was married on Jan. 12 to Arthur M. Werner, a former policeman, who saved her life while he was serving as a mounted officer on the speedway. The Werners left immediately after the ceremony on a fortnight's journey in the south.

For years the house has been carefully policed by private watchmen, and the grounds guarded by dogs. In addition there was a deadly electric circuit which was employed at night to protect the store of treasures in the rooms on the main floor of the house.

Werner was employed as superintendent of the place as a reward for his gallantry in rescuing Miss Morosini from peril and also because of his police training. His wife obtained a divorce from him, and after the death of the wealthy banker, Werner assumed full charge of the estate. When he married Miss Morosini and left on his honeymoon trip his last duty was to see that the house would be amply protected during his absence.

Yesterday when they entered the house, which had been closed and guarded during their absence, they received a first impression that it had been ransacked by burglars.

Drawing room, library, and the celebrated armory, a 100-foot wing of the house which contains the greatest private collection of arms and armor in this country, if not in the world, were turned upside down, topsy-turvey, as though a cyclone had swept through them. Figures were overturned, rugs trampled and torn, and the celebrated Gobelin tapestries ripped down and mutilated.

In Mrs. Werner's apartments the scene of ruin was more complete than on the first floor. Some of her most treasured possessions had been scattered about, her closets, which contained her magnificent gowns and hats upon which she had spent a large fortune, had been forced open. There, finery had been ripped from hooks and torn from chests and boxes and slashed or torn into ribbons.

Werner went through the rooms which he had left but two weeks ago, rich in treasures from all parts of the world, and especially in the art of Venice of the Middle Ages, and made a mental inventory. To his great surprise he failed to note any of the chief objects missing, and when he heard his wife's report he decided that it was vandalism rather than burglary that they had to deal with.

Several articles of value, notably some gifts from Mrs. Werner to her husband before their marriage, were missing, and this added a more puzzling feature to the strange visitation to the doubly guarded palace, but it enabled Werner to call the police to his aid by making a confidential report of burglary.

The articles missing and the destruction of Mrs. Werner's wardrobe, the smashing of the old silver plate, the ripping up of rugs and tapestries and other acts of vandalism will entail a loss of $60,000 to Mrs. Werner.

Prosecuting Attorney Says That It Looks Like a Disagreement

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 26.—Late last night the Schenk jury, having reached no verdict, was ordered locked up for the night.

A crowd of several hundred impatient persons stood in the corridors of the courthouse through the weary hours while the verdict was awaited. A dozen deputy sheriffs kept the crowd within the limits which the court ordered.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Maury said: "It looks like a disagreement."

FIRE LOSS OF $60,000

Sydney's Only Fire Engine Wrecked on Way to Scene of Blaze

Sydney, N. S., Jan. 26.—Fire which broke out in the general offices of the Dominion Steel and Coal company had such a good start that the building was destroyed, together with many valuable plans and books, with a loss estimated at more than $60,000.

In answering the alarm the city's only fire engine was wrecked. The steam fire engine skidded on an icy street over an embankment.

The fire started in the telephone repair room on the top floor of the building, a three-story brick structure, and when it was discovered the telephone lines were useless.

When it was found that the telephone was useless the whistle on the works a short distance away was blown repeatedly, but even this did not have the desired effect of calling the firemen and a messenger was finally dispatched. He could secure no team and was obliged to make the trip on foot.

TARIFF BOARD BILL WILL BE RUSHED

Vote In House Looked For Within Ten Days

Washington, Jan. 26.—President Taft's demand for prompt action looking to the creation of a permanent tariff commission will be heeded in the house, regardless of the attitude of the senate.

The house committee on rules will hold a meeting today for the purpose of drafting a rule whereby the tariff board bill agreed upon by the ways and means committee yesterday may be voted upon in the house at an early date. The vote probably will be taken within a week or ten days.

President Taft is anxious to get the bill over into the senate at the earliest possible moment because of the protracted debate which is certain to be precipitated during its consideration.

Senator Bailey reiterated his assertion that no tariff commission legislation of any kind would be passed at this session of congress. This means a filibuster, and the president wants the bill sent to the senate early for the purpose of exhausting the debate before March 4.

Mr. and Mrs. James Watson of 155 Quincy street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

The officers of Manet encampment, I. O. O. F., will be publicly installed tomorrow evening at Odd Fellows hall.

A very enjoyable party was held at the home of Miss Nellie Cumming, 33 Totman street, on Tuesday evening. A company of some 30 young people were present to enjoy the music, games and refreshments.

Rev. Walter C. Roberts and Mrs. Roberts left Monday for their home in Pennsylvania after a visit with their daughter Mrs. Frederick H. Steenstra at the rectory which was shortened on account of the death of a parishioner at St. Marks church Mauch Chunk, where Mr. Roberts is the rector.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Although there was much going on Wednesday evening, it did not seem to interfere much with the attendance at the weekly whist tournament held in the rooms of the Granite City club. The usual twenty-five hands were played, the highest scares being made by Henry F. Tilden and James H. Lalley, their percentage being 70 and 61. While the tournament was in progress, Henry P. Furnald was busy in the dining room preparing a lunch, the odor of which penetrated the rooms during the tournament, causing mouths to water in anticipation of what was coming. Lunch was served at 10.30, the menu being fried scallops, French fried potatoes, hot rolls, coffee, crackers and cheese. The lunch was a very appetizing one, and a majority of the players passed up their plate for a second helping. Next week Mr. Furnald will serve escalloped oysters.

TODAY'S COURT.

H. McComach and R. B. Courtney were fined $5 each for drunkenness at Quincy.

Henry McCreedy was arraigned for attempted felonious assault at Braintree and was held in $2,000 bonds until Saturday.

—Paul Jones is to have a crypt at Annapolis costing $135,000, but if Congress had been asked to give him $1.35 for a square meal during his lifetime, it would have come hard.—Beverly Times.

COMMITTEES OF GUILD

Appointed at Meeting of St. Chrysostom Ladies

The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church met in the parish rooms Wednesday afternoon for its regular monthly missionary meeting with a good attendance, Mrs. David Fulton presiding. Miss Agnes Clean, secretary and treasurer, read the usual reports.

The president appointed the different committees to serve for the year: Executive committee, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Steenstra, Mrs. Cleveland and the president and secretary, Custodian, Mrs. Miller. Missionary committee, Mrs. Jewell, chairman; Mrs. Steenstra, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Fowler. Entertainment committee, Mrs. Hennigar, chairman; Mrs. Atkins, Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Vibert, Mrs. Bean and Mrs. Reid. Social committee, Mrs. Bainbridge, chairman; Mrs. Croucher, Mrs. Goodrich, Mrs. Hight, Mrs. Lightfoot, Mrs. Parlee, Mrs. Poch, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Purdom, Mrs. Rundlett, Mrs. Shultz, Mrs. Wheelen, Mrs. Walter, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Waite and Mrs. Wyatt.

Several matters of importance were decided, and it was voted that the sewing during Lent should be done for St. Mary's school for Indian girls at Rosebud Reserve, South Dakota, which greatly needs assistance as the building was totally destroyed by fire last August. A temporary building has been erected where about half the usual number of children are being cared for at present.

Mrs. Davidson reported the Auxiliary meeting of Jan. 18 at St. Paul's chapel, Boston, which included the addresses of Rev. William E. Gardner of Cambridge and Rt. Rev. Arthur S. Lloyd D.D., the newly elected president of the Episcopal Board of Missions.

The next regular business meeting of the Guild will be held Feb. 8, with Mrs. Elisha D. Atkins, 15 Bromfield street.

ELEVEN CANDIDATES.

The meeting of Court John Ericson, No. 155, F. of A., at Wilson hall, Wednesday evening, was largely attended. Eleven candidates were initiated the degree work being performed by the degree staff of Court Roger Walcott of West Quincy. This degree team is one of the bes t in the State, and its work was greatly enjoyed. In addition to the eleven candidates initiated two applications for membership were received. After the business meeting refreshments were served and was followed by a social hour with vocal and instrumental music and speaking.

PROMPTLY ARRESTED.

Chief Loring of Braintree arrested Henry McCreedy, aged 48 years of Quincy at Braintree, on Wednesday for attempting to assault Mrs. Alice C. Ashworth. Mrs. Ashworth left an electric car at Newcomb square about 3 o'clock and started to walk to her home on Howard street. As she passed the grove that lines part of the street, a man jumped from the bushes and grabbed her. She screamed and fought the man who tried to drag her into the woods. Becoming frightened at the woman's screams the man let go of her and she ran home.

Chief Loring was notified and later arrested McCreedy from the description the woman gave him of her assailant. McCreedy denied that he was the man who had assaulted the woman, and declared that he had been in Boston al the afternoon. When taken before Mrs. Ashworth she positively identified him as the man.

McCreedy at first said he was employed in North Weymouth at the fertilizer works, and lived near the Fore River yard. Later he said he was in a store on Howard street at the time of the assault. He was arraigned in court and held in $2,000 bonds until Saturday.

SPORTING NOTES.

The first and second teams of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. were defeated at Lynn on Wednesday, the seniors by a score of 38 to 22, and the second team 29 to 19.

At hockey on Wednesday the Somoset A. C. defeated the All Stars 17 to 6. The Samosets would like games with all 14-year-old teams; address Joseph Roach, 90 Field street.

LAUNCHING IN JUNE

Good Progress Being Made on Argentina Battleship

Announcement was made this week at the Fore River shipyard that the Argentine battleship Rivadavia is between forty-three and forty-four per cent. completed and that it is expected that the 27,000-ton ship will be ready for launching early in June. It is expected that the ship will be about sixty per cent. finished when she is sent down the ways. The present rate of progress is five per cent a month.

The armor is coming along in good time and there is no reason to fear that the Bethlehem Steel Works, which has the contract for the plates, will disappoint the builders as certain other contractors did on the armor for other ships which were built at Fore River two years ago.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company is considering bidding for the contract for constructing the two new battleships authorized for the Chilean navy. These ships, which are to be of about 21,000 tons displacement each, slightly larger than the North Dakota and Deleware, are not tempting bait for American builders, however, because of the restrictions which have been placed upon the awarding of the contracts. It is said at Fore River that only for the intervention and good offices of the State Department at Washington, American shipbuilders probably would have let the contracts go by default, and that they may even now.

At first it was provided that the armor and guns must be of British make, which of course threw out all hope for getting the work on this side of the water, as to build the hull and then buy the armor and armament in England would be prohibitive on winning by competitive bids against English shipyards.

After the State Department took a hand there was a nominal concession. How insignificant this really was did not became known hereabouts until today, when it was said at Quincy that a specification for one set of bids still requires that the armor and guns be of the British type, and there is reason to believe that this is the plan of bidding which alone will meet favor and that he scheme is really intended to keep the contracts in England. Nevertheless, the State Department's good work has had its effect, it is said here.

HEAVY SMOKE LOSS

Court had just adjourned when the fire was discovered, and the one man in the prisoners cage was somewhat alarmed at first fearing that he might be left to his fate. The police patrol was summoned by telephone however and the prisoner was quickly hustled into the wagon and taken to the Police station.

In the meantime the firemen had entered the repair room, and it was seen that the fire had been practically confined to that room. As stated above, however, the smoke had gone all through the building and the water had gone down through. Just what the damage will be is hard to tell although it will be largely by smoke and water: It is estimated however that the total loss will not be far from $5,000.

While the fire was in progress an officer was stationed at the door leading to Shaw's store, and the electric cars were held back of the lines, so that passengers had to be transferred. The recall sounded at 10.45 although the firemen remained at work cleaning up about the building for sometime after.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SOCIAL.

The first in a series of socials under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church was held at the home of H. W. Williams, Barry street Wednesday evening.

The program was in charge of Miss Maude E. Hodgkinson, Fourth vice-president of the League, and consisted of chorus singing, readings by Miss Ada Williams, and a duet by Miss Ada and May Williams. Mrs. F. W. Fuller took the prize for guessing the names of flowers. A whistling brigade helped contribute a good share of noise.

Games were played until a late hour. Ice cream, cake and cookies were served by the hostess. A goodly number were present and an enjoyable evening was spent.

TO ENLARGE PARISH HOUSE

And Make Other Improvements at Christ Church

The annual meeting of Christ church was held Wednesday evening. Preceding the business session, an excellent supper was served by the Women's Guild. Over 200 people were gathered around the tables and all partook of a well served and thoroughly enjoyable repast. Owing to the splendid executive ability of Mrs. Hazen Ricker, the president of the guild, all the preparations were made and the arrangements carried out without the slightest friction.

The business meeting was opened by prayer by Rev. R. E. Armstrong, the rector. The usual order of business was then followed including the reading of the warrant by the clerk, Mr. James Smith, the roll call and reading of the minutes and the treasurer's report which was read by Mr. Walter E. Burke. The budget for 1911 was then given.

The report of the nominating committee was read and accepted and the following officers elected: Warden for two years, William L. Thomas. For 1 year: clerk, Roy Prout; treasurer, Walter E. Burke; vestrymen, Weston W. Osborne, Edwin W. Newcomb, Albert L. Barbour, Charles M. Chase and Byron C. Miller.

Delegates to Diocesan convention—William L. Thomas, William H. Haslett and Albert L. Barbour.

Delegates to Archdeaconry—William H. Deacon, Thomas E. Furnald Horace H. Bemis.

Reports from the various organizations showed successful work in all branches. The report of the Sunday school read by William L. Thomas, the superintendent, showed an enrolment of 323 and an average attendance of 215.

The report of the Woman's Guild was read by Mrs. George H. Brown. The St. Margaret's Guild's report was read by Miss Emily H. Moyle and that of the Junior Auxiliary by Miss Alice M. Dickie.

The year's work in the Men's organizations were reported by the efollowing: Men's Club E. J. Townsend, Galahad Brotherhood, Roy Prout. Galahad Club, H. C. Hallowell, Jr., Boy's Club, James E. Smith.

The annual report of the rector was then read: During the year two loyal communicants were lost, Alexander C. Smith who died a few weeks after the meeting a year ago and Elisha Packard. Both were active in the work of the church and their loss has been felt deeply by the parish. Mr. Packard was in the vestry for 27 years.

The vestry has been commendably active during the year. Additional funds for current expenses have been raised, a new roof has been placed on the parish house at the cost of $153. Of this sum $100 was raised by the vestry. Careful and business-like methods of financial management have been used by vestry in handling all the funds of the church.

All the organizations are in health and strength and all have cheerfully responded to all the appeals of the Rector and the Vestry. The Women's Guild has reduced its deficit $400. The Sunday school, the organization which is doing great good in the life of the church has been enlarged in membership and in the official and teaching staff. Roy Prout has been made Assistant Superintendent. Upon the resignation of Mr. Samuel DeForest after a number of years of service as secretary, Mr. Henry Boutilier took up the work and has carried it on with energy and ability.

A few figures of interest are given below: Number married men in parish 280. Number of married women 341, unmarried men 151, unmarried women 130. Number of persons under 18 years of age, 451. Number of families represented 410. Number baptized 580. Confirmed 515. Not baptized 270. Total number of persons in the parish 1365.

Two bequest one of $1800 from the late Miss Ann Curtis and one of $200 from Miss Abbie Gregg the oldest communicant were acknowledged. Miss Curtis attended the church for 43 years and was active in the Woman's Guild and in charitable organizations outside the church. The money was depositel in the Quincy Savings Bank in small amounts and has been allowed to accumulate. Miss Gregg her niece desired to contribute $200 to be used in connection with the gift of Miss Curtis.

An increase of 22 percent in attendance at services has been very encouraging. The Rector's report of personal work is as follows: Services during the year 160. Sermons addresses etc 125. Visits made 735. Visits received 153, total 888.

Conference and Guilds attended 128. Celebration of Holy Communion 63, baptisms 46, confirmed 31, marriages 17, burials 23.

Plans for the redecoration of the interior of the church are being formulated and a fund will be started during the year for building a larger Parish house. The building committee is: William L. Thomas, Walter E. Burke, W. H. Haslett and G. H. Crocker.

SECOND ALARM

lodge room began to move the paraphenalia toward the street.

The work was nearly completed when the lights were cut off, and it became so dark and thick with smoke that the workers were obliged to stop.

Out in the banquet hall and main room the smoke had become so thick that it was imposible to remain there but a few minutes. In the meantime the firemen began to chop away the floor and chemical streams were used to get at the seat of the smouldering fire Evidently they reached it for the smoke began to cease.

The skylights were knocked out, and the air cleared considerable. It was then found that the walls of the rooms under the hall were hot, and plaster hooks were sent for. When they arrived the plaster was pulled down, and the firemen began to chase after the fire.

After the fire this morning Chief Williams left two firemen with hand chemicals, on duty in Shaw's store, but they were somewhat mystified in trying to find their way to the Masonic apartments.

This noon, Mr. Shaw, when asked what he considered his loss, said that his goods had been considerably wet by water and damaged by smoke which had penetrated the upholstered furniture, and he considered that his loss would be fully $10,000.

Chief Williams, when interviewed, said that he placed the loss on the building at $5,000 and the loss on contents $5,000.

Taking the Chief's esetimate of $5,000 on the building and Mr. Shaw's estimate of $10,000 on his stock the loss would be $15,000.

The loss by the second fire is somewhat difficult to determine. While the Masonic rooms were pretty well filled with smoke this morning it was nothing compared with that at the second fire, and the loss to Rural lodge and St. Stephens chapter by the second fire will be heavy, as their furnishings and robes were costly.

When the Daily Ledger went to press at 2 o'clock the firemen were still at work tearing away plastering trying to reach the seat of the fire and they will not leave it until every spark is extinguished.

The front part of the upper story of the building is occupied by the officers of the International Granite Cutters' union. While no fire entered these rooms, there was so much smoke there that the clerks were obliged to leave their rooms. The windows were opened however and the air soon cleared.

The building is owned by the Quincy Real Estate Trust, and is the largest mercantile building in the city, being over 260 feet long and three stories high. It is built of brick.

The building stands on the site of what was formerly the car barn of the Quincy & Boston street railway, which was burned several years ago, and was one of the most disastrous fires that Quincy ever had. The fire broke out in the night and the first alarm was followed by a general alarm. A large number of street cars were burned and it looked as though the street railway service would be crippled.

The street railway officials, however, telephoned to Brockton, Milton and other places and the next morning had cars enough in Quincy so that service was not interrupted.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

Wednesday evening the officers of Wampatuck Encampment, No. 18, I. O. O. F., of East Weymouth were publicly installed in their hall by District Deputy Grand Patriarch, Charles H. Wood and suite of Manet Encampment, No. 75, I. O. O. F., of Quincy. Mr. Wood's suite consisted of Deputy Grand High Priest, Frank W. Flowers; Deputy Grand Senior Warden, Horace J. An event of the evening was the presentation of the "travelling pillars" which have been in the possession of Manet encampment, to Wampatuck encampment in due form.

During the installation and throughout the evening Charles H. Barron of Quincy presided at the piano very acceptably. Most prominent during the evening was the brotherly love which is so strong between the members of Wampatuck and Manet encampments. The Patriarchs are entirely at home whether in East Weymouth or Quincy and each meeting is eagerly looked forward to. Credit is due the committee of arrangements: C. Q. Marion, East Weymouth; A. N. Great Enthusiasm At West Quincy Panquet

MAYOR FITZGERALD GUEST OF HONOR

Opposed to Annexation of Quincy to Boston Tells of Quincy's Great Possibilities

Mayor Shea, the Toastmaster, Introduces Interesting Speakers

An excellent supper, rousing speeches and unbounded enthusiasm characterized the second annual banquet of the Ward Four Improvement Association Thursday evening at St. Mary's hall. It was by far the most successful gathering of its kind ever held in Quincy and never at any banquet was there more enthusiasm shown. If West Quincy was never on the map before it took its place there Thursday night, and the three hundred ladies and gentlemen who participated will remember the occasion for many a long day.

A few over 300 tickets had been disposed of, and every ticket was accounted for. The hall was taxed to its utmost capacity, and even then it was necessary to touch elbows at the tables, to accommodate the party. It was an animated scene that greeted the eyes of the guests and speakers as they entered the hall a little after 7 o'clock, and marched to the head table that was set in front of the platform. The tables were set as thick as possible, and each was laden with many appetizing things. Large bouquets of pinks adorned each table at the start, but later the pinks found a resting place in the lapels of the gentlemen's coats or the corsage of the ladies. The hall itself was also

DEDICATION BANQUET

Secretary of National Council One of the Speakers

The "Dedication banquet" of the Atlantic Memorial church was held in the vestry Thursday evening. Nearly 200 people gathered around the tables to partake of the bountiful and excellent repast furnished by the Ladies' Benevolent Society. The banquet was served under the direction of Mrs. Isabel S. Smith, assisted by ladies of the society, while members of the Christian Endeavor society acted as waiters. The whole matter of arrangements and service was so successfully carried out that too much cannot be said in praise of those who were responsible.

The menu:

Roast turkey, cranberry sauce
Riced potatoes, Celery, Mashed turnip
Chicken pie, Memorial jelly
Plum pudding, hard sauce
Apple pie, Mince pie
Lemon sherbet Sponge cake

At about 8.30 the tables were cleared, all pushed their chairs back, the men unbuttoned their vests and everything was in readiness for the post prandial exercises.

A musical monologue, "An old sweetheart of mine," was beautifully rendered by Miss Maude Read. The familiar words of James Whitcomb Riley's poem seemed to take on new significance with the musical setting by Leslie Harris, and the fine interpretation of Miss Read. Miss Margaret Reed accompanied her sister on the piano. The second musical selection was a song written by Charles W. Tory and arranged by James D. Bartlett, entitled "A dream." Miss Read rendered this also in a very pleasing manner.

Rev. Ascher Anderson, D. D., was the first speaker of the evening. As sec-

FIFTY YEARS MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Litchfield Observe Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Litchfield of Pearl street, who have been residents of Quincy during most of their married life, are quietly observing the 50th anniversary of their marriage today. Mr. Litchfield is the well known carpenter and builder, and veteran of the Civil War.

A few intimate friends were entertained at dinner, followed by whist in the afternoon. It was not the desire of the couple to make any demonstration over the event, and the date was so carefully guarded that only a few knew of the golden anniversary.

They were married on Jan. 27, 1861, at Braintree, by the Rev. Dr. Storrs, Mr. Litchfield at that time being a resident of South Weymouth and the bride, Miss Eliza J. Wales, a resident of West Randolph, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wales.

For a few years they lived at Scituate, and in 1864 Mr. Litchfield enlisted in Co. C., 4th Heavy Artillery to serve until the end of the Civil war. This company took nearly every man in the town. The regiment was recruited by Capt. James H. Wade for coast defence, and was stationed at Gallops island, Fort Meigs, Fort Corcoran, Fort Tillinghast, Fort Buffalo, and was at Fort Richardson at the close of the war.

Returning from the war, Mr. Litchfield established a home in Quincy at his present residence on Pearl street in April 1867, and has built many houses. He erected several of the first houses in the Lincoln school district, then known as "the plains." He also built the Plumer block on Hancock street, the large house for the late Joseph F. Berry near by, and many others.

For many years Mr. and Mrs. Litchfield were active members of the Universalist church, and Mr. Litchfield was a member of the Knights of Pythias and Knights of Honor during their balmy days.

They have had four children, but only one is now living, Jesse I. Litchfield of Wollaston, who married Miss Jennie Field, a daughter of John Q. A. Field. Their daughter Sylvia is the only grandchild.

Mr. Litchfield has two brothers and a sister living—Amos M. Litchfield of Quincy, and Webster Litchfield and Mrs. Rebecca Litchfield of Scituate. Mrs. Litchfield has one sister living, Mrs. Clara E. Foye of Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Litchfield are respectively 77 and 71 years of age, and their friends wish them many more years of happiness.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Little Rhody wants a waterway across it and this week sent a special message to its governor urging an act empowering the state commission on inland waterways to secure rights of way across Rhode Island at an estimated cost of from $15,000,000 to $22,000,000. Now let us hear from Massachusetts that our little neighbor on the south has set the example.

Pictures of the proposed new school for Framingham look good, $65,000 have been appropriated for building and furnishing. There are to be ten class rooms, assembly hall, corridors, etc. The structure is to be of red brick, with cornices of white terra cotta, front doorway of white marble and roof of red slate. The architectural character will be adapted after the old New England academy or college building, every attention being given to prevent the school from dwarfing neighboring houses and public buildings, facing Framingham's beautiful common, particularly the old stone academy and the private schools and charming country seats that abound in that section of the town.

Secretary Wilson and Assistant Secretary Hays of the Agricultural Department were evidently not in harmonious consultation before they went into print. Mr. Hays says that the drift of population to the cities makes it impossible for low prices ever to return, while Sec. Wilson reports an increased production per acre, outstripping the increase in population, and predicts a decrease in the cost of food stuffs. It is difficult to see how prices can come down when farm lands and farm hands are going up. There is however, ground for expectation that the denizens of American cities may, like the inhabitants of the villages of Europe, turn farmer. It is not unusual for Swiss and Russian farm peasantry to live considerable distances from the land which they till. Moreover, they walk to their places of work. Possibly the time is not far distant when many thousands of American farmers will live in towns and cities and be conveyed cheaply to and from their fields by electric cars.

DRIFT OF OPINION

The most aggressive bit of new legislation so far as appearing in the proposal stage at the state house appears to be a bill repealing the so-called bar and bottle act of the last session. This repeal is being demanded by the liquor interests, and the early appearance of the demand in the legislative proceedings goes to support the charge made during the campaign that the said interests were opposing Governor Draper because of his signature to the act of last session, and were supporting Mr. Foss in the idea that he would not oppose a repeal. This repeal should be resisted by all friends of a reasonable regulation of the liquor traffic in the legislature—and out of it. The new law has not as yet taken effect, and it should at least be given a trial. It merely denies to those having licenses to sell liquor to be drunk on the premises a license also to sell liquor to be carried away. The idea of this change is to limit excessive drinking, which is undoubtedly promoted by enabling the retail saloonkeeper to take advantage of the half-intoxicated condition of any who resort to his place and send them away at the closing hour with ample bottled provision for a continuance of the over-drinking elsewhere. It was also sought to prevent the resort of children and women to retail drinking places on errands of purchase for carrying away. The act simply confines purchases by the bottle or in any bulk to the liquor stores given exclusively to that business. No good purpose can evidently be served by the repeal of the act in question, and the liquor interests are only courting an increased measure of public antagonism in demanding the repeal.—Springfield Republican.

Massachusetts prestige will not be dimmed, nor will the patriotism of the early volunteers suffer any loss, if the bill introduced in the senate for an appropriation of $25,000 for a fitting commemoration of the departure of the first Massachusetts troops for the front in 1861 is defeated. What these troops dared, what they did, and the patriotic impulses to which they were responsive, are too well appreciated to require any semi-centennial commemoration, on lines contemplated by the bill in question. There is no need, everything considered, why such a celebration should be planned. Twenty-five thousand dollars is not much to so rich a commonwealth as Massachusetts, but the money can better be expended in other directions than the one here proposed. It is tolerably safe to assume that the legislature will take a like view of the rule to final action.—Salem News.

ADVANCE QUINCY ! !

Make It One of the Most Beautiful Suburbs

Editor Daily Ledger:

We are all more or less familiar with the battle cry of the Boston Chamber of Commerce "Advance New England!" But how many of us are hustling to "Advance Quincy!" We are familiar with the attempts which our Board of Trade, Merchants' Association and kindred organizations have made from time to time to induce Capital to locate here; to foster manufacturing enterprises. But the most profitable business of all for a Boston suburban city to foster is that of inducing people who are engaged in business in Boston to take up their habitation here. This aspect of booming our city has been studiously avoided by our business organizations. A huge plant for manufacturing purposes adds but little real wealth to any city which might more successfully engage in the building up of suburban homes each of which represents an assessed value of from $3000 to $12,000 on small lots of land.

Quincy is handicapped at start by excessively high water rates charging two and three-tenths mills per cubic foot against Malden's one and six-tenths or a minimum meter rate in Quincy of $16.00 for 7000 cubic feet and 23 per 100 cubic feet in excess, against Malden's $7.00 for 4375 cubic feet. and 14 cents per 100 cubic feet in excess.

Gas $1.40 per 1000 against Milton's 80 cents.

Reckless extravagance in the City Council making a $20.00 tax rate when by the judicious exercise of business economy it should range from $16. to $17. Some Wollaston people run away with the idea that they must have a new brick schoolhouse. In getting this idea into operation the finest school site in the ward is wilfully thrown over and a low marshy piece across the street is purchased. A little careful figuring upon somebody's part could have saved the old site to the city and the new building could have been erected thereon. But no, it must be accomplished in the most extravagant way at a loss of thousands of dollars to the tax payers and now what is to become of the old lot which is entailed by the Safford heirs? Will some of our smart financiers answer that problem in arithmetic.

Some people in the city thought we needed a new steam fire engine. Perhaps we did. At any rate one was bought at a cost of five or six thousand dollars and the old one was given as part of the trade for two or three hundred dollars. No one was bright enough to think that the old steamer with a few repairs would have made an efficient reserve engine. Another city did and took it from the fire engine company and is now using it as a reserve. And then again every school boy knows that the fire engine is at present in a transition state from horse drawn to motor driven. For a city with a large area like ours and dependent upon one active fire engine to go blindly ahead without thinking, as our Council did and bank everything on an old style, out of date, horse drawn engine was a decided lack of business judgment and a waste of six thousand dollars. The new steamer is only fit for reserve service and should be replaced with a modern motor propelled piece of apparatus. So much for the "Hurrah!" way if doing public business. And so on ad infinitum. The city is full of just such foolish, blundering ways of doing business.

What we need is a strong active Commercial club with a membership drawn from each ward to nip these extravagant schemes and inject a little common sense in the conduct of our cities affairs.

I believe as Commissioner O'Rourke of Boston—Pay our mayor an adequate salary. I believe that the Mayor should be paid $5000; be elected for three years; have full authority to conduct the city's business; and that the Council should be abolished.

Mayor Shea, or, whoever else was mayor, would then have an opportunity to formulate a common sense policy and carry it through for the best interests of all concerned.

"Advance Quincy!" I believe that with careful nursing this can be done and that we can upbuild one of Boston's most beautiful suburbs. But we cannot do it on the lines which have been followed in years past—a new leaf must be turned over.

Who will do it?

Oliver Harte.

She Is Charged With Poisoning of Husband

SCHENK JURY DISAGREES

One Man Could Not Be Convinced of Woman's Innocence

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 27.—After struggling for more than twenty-four hours with the mass of technical and sensational testimony, the jury in the case of Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, charged with poisoning her husband, John O. Schenk, announced that they were hopelessly divided and could not reach a verdict.

Judge Jordan importuned them to make further efforts, but last evening he discharged them, and the long drawn out trial resulted in a disagreement.

The final vote taken by the jury after their long session stood eleven for acquittal and one for conviction.

TOO MUCH WATERED STOCK IN METHODISM

"Daffy on Organization and Machinery," Says a Minister

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 27.—Declaring "there is too much watered stock in Methodism," and that he is "cutting in earnest at the roots of the evils sapping the vitality of Christianity," Rev. Henry S. Booth of the Centenary Methodist church of Morristown, who has resigned his charge, gave out an open letter addressed to Rev. William F. Anderson, presiding elder of the Holton conference.

Mr. Booth asserts the church has "gone daffy on organization and machinery, and thus largely crushed the very life out of what real religion we have had."

INVESTIGATION IS ORDERED

House Wants to Know Why Ballinger-Pinchot Report Is Delayed

Washington, Jan. 27.—Representative Hitchcock of Nebraska sprang a sensation in the house by demanding an investigation of the "irregular proceeding" which has resulted in a delay of forty-nine days in getting the reports of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee printed and into the hands of the members of the house.

An acrimonious debate followed, in which Speaker Cannon took an active part, resenting what he termed an implied criticism of the chair. The house, after listening to various explanations voted almost unanimously in support of a resolution ordering an investigation by the committee on rules.

FORGET THEIR TROUBLES

Returning Travelers Are Glad to Learn of Election of Lodge

New York, Jan. 27.—A party of Massachusetts folk who got back from a twenty-nine day cruise of the West Indies and British Guaina did not enjoy the latter. According to William S. Draper, a banker, the main attractions were negroes, flies and dirt. Mr. Draper added that he understood there were some fleas.

The new arrivals asked eagerly about the result of the senatorial election in Massachusetts and were so overjoyed about the success of Senator Lodge that they forgot all about the discomforts of Demerara.

LIPPITT IS UNFETTERED

Providence, Jan. 27.—In his first public speech since his election to the United States senate to succeed Nelson W. Aldrich, Henry F. Lippitt declared that although he was a Republican at heart he will not be bound by partisan principles when he goes to Washington.

He will go simply and solely as a representative of his state, he said, and would strive to work for the best interests of all, whether Republican or Democrat, rich or poor.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, FRIDAY, JANUARY 27, 1911

Good Grippe Weather

This kind of weather produces epidemics of grippe and heavy colds.

Protect yourself by—
1st. Wearing warm, dry clothing.
2nd. By keeping your feet dry.
3rd. By eating plenty of nourishing food.
4th. By taking a dose of pleasant-to-taste Sirolin night and morning.

With these precautions you need not fear the grippe, or any other pulmonary affection.

Modern medicine is largely a science of means to prevent disease.

Sirolin—the celebrated Swiss preparation—not only prevents colds and coughs, the grippe and other disorders of the respiratory organs, but it relieves these ailments, when they are developed, in a few days.

Always Keep A Bottle of Sirolin In the House.

Sirolin is the leading remedy for coughs and colds for both adults and children.

It is commended by physicians in every medical centre.

It is wonderfully useful in treating consumption. It absolutely prevents the occurrence of it.

It is a cure for wasting diseases.

It is universally popular.

Its value is unique.

Your Physician Knows Sirolin. Your Druggist Sells It

Sirolin is very agreeable to the palate. It is a preparation possessing all the virtues of guaiacol and creosote, without the disagreeable taste of these most valuable drugs. Sirolin is compounded with a palatable non-irritating derivative of guaiacol, the active principle of creosote. Sirolin is not only palatable but it also improves the appetite and aids digestion and aids nutrition.

Sirolin is a physician's remedy—not a patent nostrum. It comes to America with the highest European reputation.

Sirolin

contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug.

Individuals who "take cold easily," upon exposure, can defend themselves against the attacks by the use of Sirolin, together with the proper observance of the rules of hygiene.

SIROLIN, the Famous Remedy for the Grippe, is at your Druggist's.

ALEXANDER IRVINE.

An audience of more than three hundred people assembled at the Town hall, South Braintree Thursday evening to hear the address by Alexander Irvine, the celebrated socialist lecturer, who tours the country under the auspices of the socialist paper "The Appeal to Reason." Those purchasing tickets received a forty weeks subscription to the paper. Mr. A. D. Atkinson presided and introduced as the first speaker James F. Carey the state secretary of the socialist party. Mr. Carey spoke briefly but to the point upon the general principles of socialism and was loudly applauded.

Mr. Atkinson next presented Alexander Irvine who spoke for nearly two hours on the theme of socialism which is of such absorbing interest to so many people. His address was given entirely without notes and he held his listeners spell bound by his marvellous flow of eloquence. Seldom if ever has the Town hall resounded to the tones of such a silver tongued orator and those who stayed away whether socialists or otherwise missed a rare treat. Mr. Irvine has had all sorts of experiences and relates them with so much humor, pathos and wit as to make an evening in his company worth many times the price of admission.

He presented some powerful arguments in support of his doctrine and told of many fallacies which are prevalent regarding its teachings. He was interrupted scores of times by prolonged applause from his interested hearers. Mr. Irvine who is in demand from one end of the country to the other as a speaker was induced to come to Braintree by the efforts of the members of the socialist club of this town.

The exhibit will be under the general supervision of Second Vice President George S. Hobbs of the Maine Central railroad, and will be mainly devoted to the advertising of New England's farming opportunities.

Thinness Easily Overcome.
(From "Health and Beauty".)

Further evidence is being presented almost daily that a recent compound of new chemical elements combined in a tablet with hypophosphites is in reality proving a blessing to the abnormally thin men and women, for it can be demonstrated beyond doubt that a regular course of three or four months' treatment brings an increase in weight of from 10 to 30 pounds with a decided improvement of health and color too. For self administration the most popular form is to be found in three grain hypo-nuclane tablets, obtainable in sealed packages from the best apothecary shops, with full directions.

COSTUME PARTY BOYS' CLUB

Some Great Stunts and a Good Time at Wollaston

A large number of the younger element attended the first costume party of the Wollaston Boys' club, which was held with great success in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church on Thursday evening.

At first sight it would be hard for the onlooker to tell whether the aggregation was a party from "101 Ranch," "Barnum and Bailey's" or "Pastry Cooks Union, No. 105." In the motley assemblage were cowboys, Negroes, clowns, Indians, sailors, cooks and many others. All enjoyed themselves in a most enthusiastic manner. The evening's program included a grand march and a review by each patrol. Each patrol also did their "stunt."

Leonard Cross did a neat act of lasooing, while Gordon Rowe and Revere Dresser performed the Houdini trick. Prizes were awarded to those with the best costumes, and the evening closed with the serving of refreshments.

The evening was under the efficient charge of Theodore Du Plessis, while Edward Bullock presided at the piano.

A few of the costumes included: Sewall Sayward, Cream of Wheat; Frank Fulton, sailor; Allen Stearns and Howard Johnson, clowns; Franklin Streeter, Dick Ford and Leonard Cross, cowboys; Howard Seavey and Russell Sanborn, Indians; Arthur Bullock, John MacDonald and Gilbert Hamlin cooks.

retary of the National council he brought to the new church the greetings of the 700,000 members throughout the country. The keynote to his speech was service. A church is the great manhood maker, and the membership of the church should let their light shine and render service to the whole community.

Henry Richardson, L.L.D., of Boston, a man very deeply interested in church work gave a splendid address on fellowship among the churches. He spoke of the larger interests of mankind as represented in the church and not in the denomination.

John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee, gave a forceful addres on the "Unity of forces in the city." The granite for the church came from Ward Three, the builder from Ward Five, etc. Ward Six has contributed leaders in political life each year. The different forces, political, social and religious are becoming more and more united as time goes on.

The last speaker of the evening was Rev. Edwin N. Hardy, Ph. D., pastor of Bethany church. He gave an eloquent and powerful address on "The ozone of earnestness and unity of purpose." A band of men who are dead in earnest, and who have the spirit of team work, can accomplish great things. God can make the best possible use of such a group of men consecrated to a definite purpose. The work of making manhood and womanhood is the noblest and greatest in the world and with the dedication of this new church an unparalleled opportunity is offered to start right, and make the church count for manhood and womanhood in the community.

The first prayer meeting will be held in the new church this evening. There will be addresses by the pastor, deacons and other church members.

W. QUINCY BANQUET

very attractively decorated with red, white and blue bunting, while the orchestra on the platform was hidden behind a hugh bank of ferns and palms. The decorations were in charge of George F. Elcock, and he did his work well.

The invited guests and speakers occupied the head table. Those of the side facing the other tables were Mayor Shea, President Stephen B. Little, Charles M. Bryant, president of the City Council; Rev. Henry T. Grady, Rev. Carl H. Raupach, Representative L. F. R. Langeller, Eugene R. Stone, president of the Board of Trade; Rev. William J. Duffy, W. Ward Whicher, Dr. John H. Ash, Tax Collector John J. O'Hara, Assessor Warren W. Adams, W. F. Lakin, Joseph Walker and James H. Elcock.

On the opposite side were Mrs. J. H. Elcock, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Collins, George T. Magee, Miss Falvey, Mrs. S. B. Little, Miss Kelley, Frank Kesler, president of the Montclair Improvement association; Mr. and Mrs. John Evans, Mrs. Joseph Walker, Mrs. W. F. Lakin, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Burke.

After the blessing had ben invoked by Fr. Grady, the dinner was served, twenty of West Quincy's fairest daughters acting as servers. The menu included turkey, ham and roast beef, canberry sauce, potato salad, rolls, coffee, lettuce, celery, ice cream, cake and cigars. Nearly an hour was passed in the pleasant task of eating the supper, an orchestra playing continuously during the dinner. Andy Dinnegan the well known minstrel man also contributed a solo.

GUEST OF EVENING.

The guest of the evening for whom all eyes were looking was Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston. It was a little after 9 o'clock before he arrived at the hall, and as he was escorted through the long line of tables to the guest table he received an ovation such as is seldom accorded one at a banquet.

Dinner over, and cigars lighted, President Little rapped for order, and announced that the speaking was about to commence. He said that he would not detain his hearers with an account of the aims and objects of the association at this time. The association had prospered last year and had accomplished some things. The association is composed of all classes and creeds and it was intended to keep it so. It was an organization solely for the betterment of conditions of our section of the city. President Little said that he was born in West Quincy and expected to die there. The ward was proud to have one of its citizens as Mayor and the bouquet he received last December was sufficient and he would offer none at this time, but simply introduce Mayor Shea as the toast master.

MAYOR AS TOASTMASTER.

Mayor Shea received an ovation when he arose to speak, and after the applause had died down he said that this was the greatest banquet ever held in Quincy. He was proud of the association and proud of his ward. He wanted to congratulate the association on this splendid gathering. It is certainly doing a good work and Ward Four is getting its share of the things that the city has to give out. Keep at it and come to City Hall and tell the Council what you want. We have got something like $8,000 that is to be expended in the ward the coming season and we have the first branch of the Public Library. What helps West Quincy helps the whole city and he hoped that the association would keep up its good work.

MAYOR SHEA.

REV. H. T. GRADY.

He then introduced as the first speaker, Rev. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's church. Fr. Grady said that he was not born here like your president, but he expected to die here. That was the next best thing. He hoped that the success that the association had experienced the past year would continue, and that instead of 100 members it would not be long before it had one half of the voters of the ward. Cast your little individualities one side and let your purpose be the one common good, and success will crown your efforts. Last year at the banquet he had asked for a new depot and other things, but had not got them all yet. His heart and soul were with the association. If we look into it we will find that we receive in proportion to what we ask. In closing he wished the association every success and hoped it would be many years before it died.

PRESIDENT BRYANT.

President Bryant of the City Council was introduced as "It." In rising to reply, Mr. Bryant picked up the menu card had the picture of Mayor Shea on the first page, and said, I see that "It" is on the first page, and as I look through this program I find I am "Nit."

Continuing, he said, that he did not believe there was ever a banquet in Quincy that equalled the enthusiasm shown here tonight. It was a credit to the association and to the ward that you have turned out so well. He did not see why it was that with all the grace and beauty he saw before him that the Mayor remains immune to the fact. If I was in his position I would be able to pick out one at least.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD

This is a thing that every ward should do, as it benefits the whole city. Enthusiasm in one ward creates enthusiasm in every ward. That is what the citizens should endeavor to do. Every man and woman should endeavor to improve the City of Quincy. What helps on helps another. If we get together and demand improvements he believed the people would back you up. Do not be one who tries to put sand on the wheels of progress. He did not agree with the Mayor in his bill to eliminate party designation at the municipal elections. If the Mayor's administration is critisized, be charitable; believe that he is trying to do the best he can. Mayor Shea is a credit to Ward Four and to the city. I have followed him closely and I believe he is the best Mayor the city has ever had. I know that he is faithful to his duty and in him we have a man absolutely honest and fearless.

REPRESENTATIVE LANGELIER

Representative Langelier also congratulated the association on its splendid gathering. One little appreciates the amount of work it requires to carry along an association like this, it means a great deal of sacrifice on the part of its officers to bring out the success that this association has. He had never in Quincy seen anything that surpassed the enthusiasm shown here tonight. It makes me feel that if at any time I should aspire to be Mayor I should first move to West Quincy. Until he became a candidate he knew little about Ward Four. In the last campaign after the election there was one little incident that touched him deeply. That was to receive a letter of congratulation from his opponent John J. McDevitt. It was the first time any opponent had ever done this, and he appreciated it. You people at West Quincy deserve all the encouragement you can get. His pet hobby was shade trees and he hoped the time would come that when a sidewalk was built that it would provide for shade trees.

REV. C .H. RAUPACH.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach, pastor of the Hall Place M. E. church, thought that he might be called upon first to speak, so that he could be like the little riverlets that start in the mountains and grow larger as they flow, so that they empty with a rush. But here the rush had come first. He was interested in the association and the work it was doing, and he was proud to be a member of it. He was deeply impressed with the unanimity of this meeting all creeds and classes working to one purpose. If the association does as it advertises it will solve for the community one of the greatest problems that is confronting it. That is the bringing together into a greater Boston all of the suburban cities. It may be many a day before Quincy becomes a counterpart of Boston, but you people can solve the question, by bringing Boston to Quincy. Many have looked on associations of this kind as visionary crowds, but I want you to believe that there is no need for discouragement. No one ever obtained a victory without first having a vision. Solomon Willard had a vision years ago that gave us Bunker Hill monument, which was the incentive of the building of the first railroad that has brought about the great railroads of the country. We believe in this association and are here to give you a boost, and there will come a time when the ward will bud and blossom like a rose.

Mayor Fitzgerald came into the hall while Mr. Raupach was speaking and as noted above received an ovation.

PRESIDENT STONE.

President Eugene R. Stone of the Board of Trade said there was not much left for him to say after what had been heard, and what was to come. One thing particularly nice about this banquet is the presence of so many ladies. He congratulated the association on the good work it was doing, not only in West Quincy but for the whole city. He represented an organization made up of citizens from all parts of the city which is working for the city at large. We want the corporation of associations of this kind. He wanted to say a word of the enthusiasm shown in West Quincy for the July Fourth celebration held last year. Ward Four not only gave its help but gave its money, and none did better work than did George F. and James H. Elcock.

PRESIDENT STONE.

MAYOR FITZGERALD.

Mayor Fitzgerald was the next speaker and for an hour he occupied the closest attention of his audience. He said that he had no fear of annexing Quincy to Boston, but what puzzled him was that when he came to West Quincy and saw so many beautiful ladies, that someone had not annexed Bill Shea before this. He could imagine how much larger this banquet would have been if that had happened 25 years ago. He then told several stories that set his hearers at ease, and prepared them for the flow of oratory that was to follow, the like of which was never heard in this section of the city before. The government of a city like this is very important and very difficult, where every citizen is a stockholder. It is one of the greatest problems of the age, said the speaker.

He then compared the position of the Mayor of the City of Boston with a salary of $10,000 a year, and the amount of work he was obliged to do, with the salary of the presidents of some of the corporations who received salaries of $100,000 a year which made it difficult to get the men to govern the city that they should have. He then spoke of the organizations of the great trusts that had taken place during the past 12 years, where complete control had been obtained of all small companies.

He spoke of the government of foreign cities where one must be a property holder to be an office holder. There was not the opportunity for men there as there is here. He spoke of the many problems that were daily confronting him as Mayor of Boston that are generally understood, and contrasted Boston with Quincy, where the Mayor could come before his people in gatherings like this and discuss the various problems with them.

ANNEXATION QUESTION.

No one in Boston is anxious to annex Quincy, for any selfish or ulterior motives. Boston is easily the best governed city in the Metropolitan district. He did not believe the people of Boston were anxious to annex to absorb the city of Quincy and other cities within the ten mile radius of the State House. He was opposed to any such absorption, as it would mean a higher tax rate. It would mean that a second class city like Quincy with a second class equipment would be obliged to pay the high rate of wages now paid by the city of Boston. The minute they were annexed the salaries of teachers, firemen and policemen would be increased to that paid by Boston and would raise the expenses at least 25 per cent. All these problems we in Boston are trying to solve would be more acute. Quincy is unfortunate in having so large an area. Think of Somerville and Cambridge with one-half the area of Quincy. It is a different problem to take care of a city with 250 miles of streets than one with 100 miles. While there are some advantages in being surounded by beautiful suburbs there comes the responsibility of taking care of the millions that come to Boston. It is the only city in the world that enjoys such a privilege. Boston is not known in the world as other cities, as it does not figure in the population as the statistics go. If the annexing should ever come to pass it will be at the cost of Boston, and everything will have to be on a Boston basis.

QUINCY OPPORTUNITIES.

Quincy has splendid opportunities, and he was glad to see the spirit that exists here. He touched upon the banks and their failure to give the support they should to local business enterprises, and told what had transpired in Lynn to build that city up with manufacturies when the banks had stood behind them.

He called attention to Quincy's 29 miles of water front, and the possibilities for its development. He urged the widening of the rivers and the deepening of the channels, so as to encourage the establishment of other plants like the Fore River Ship Building Co. He said here was a tremendous opportunity that was being neglected. Other countries with not near as good a water front were spending millions in their development. With these things it would be possible to make Quincy the most attractive city of the world, and Quincy is a part of the Metropolitan district. We must pay attention to these opportunities. He spoke of the possibilities that would come to New England by the development of its water front, and in closing said he hoped that the association would stand for a "busier Quincy" for a busier Quincy meant a busier Boston.

SWEET ADELINE.

As Mayor Fitzgerald finished his talk there were cries of "Sweet Adeline" which brought a broad smile to the face of Boston's chief executive. At that moment the orchestra began to play the air, and the Mayor arose and sang the song that has made him famous. As the chorus was reached he cried out "now all sing" which they did and the hall rang out with the beautiful words of the song.

WARD WHITCHER

The last speaker was W. Ward Whitcher of Atlantic. Mr. Whitcher, in opening said we have heard about people being born here and dying here, but he wanted to say that he was not born in another part of Ireland. He then spoke of his sore finger upon which a plank had fallen and of his visit to the doctors. Last year he said he had spoken at the banquet of branch libraries. Since that time, Jim who is one of the trustees of the library, and Bill got their heads together and you have a branch library here. In the first six months there were 14,123 calls at the library and 8,164 books were taken out showing that the branch library was appreciated.

He then spoke of Mayor Fitzgerald. How when a young man he read books and was a close student. He acquired his present ability because he read books when a boy. The reading of books formed a desire for education which he acquired and the fruits of which you have enjoyed here tonight. He then referred to the birthday anniversary of Bobbie Burns and closed by reciting a medley of poems from Burn's works.

As he sat down there were cries for the frog story, and Mr. Whitcher complied with the request, closing by urging his hearers not to kneel and pray that they would not be late, but to run and pray.

The banquet closed with the audience rising and singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

THE COMMITTEE.

As noted in the beginning the banquete was the most successful affair ever held in Quincy, for which great credit is due to the following committee of arrangements: John Evans, Stephen B. Little, Maurice F. Cohen, Alphonse E. LeClair, John Burke, Joseph Walker, Joseph H. McPherson Thomas F. Cahill, James H. Elcock, John Casey, William H. Callahan, Frank Dufour, John D. Smith, Robert Newcomb, Robert J. Teasdale, Michael Monahan, George Elcock, James E. Halligan.

The guests who had the pleasure of being present owe their thanks to the following reception committee who looked carefully after their wants: Stephen B. Little, James H. Elcock, John D. Smith, John Casey, Dr. John H. Ash, James F. Burke, Patrick W. Manex, Wilbur F. Lakin.

BRIEFS

A musicale is to be given this evening at the Cochato club, Braintree, under the auspices of the house committee.

The executive committee of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C. 103, will meet at the home of Mrs. Alberta Hewson, Newcomb place, Saturday evening.

Owing to unexpected circumstances, Mrs. W. E. Gardner will be unable to be in Quincy this evening. Another entertainment has been provided by St. Margaret's Guild for its meeting this evening in the parish house.

Mt. Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, is the final resting place for Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, her body being buried on Thursday afternoon in a lot on the shore of Halcyon lake. There was a simple appropriate service attended by some thirty directors and prominent members of the Christian Science church. In Boston or its near vicinity seemed the appropriate place for the grave of this well known woman and the selection of Mt. Auburn is pleasing to her followers.

McKINLEY'S BIRTHDAY.

Sunday being the anniversary of the birth of our late President, William McKinley, appropriate exercises will be held by Paul J. Revere, W. R. BOOST TOWARD FREE TRADE

Congress Receives Canadian Reciprocity Agreement

HEAVY SLASHES IN TARIFFS

Cattle, Vegetables, Milk, Eggs, Fish, Wheat and Many Other Food Products Placed on Free List, While Reduction Is Made on Meats—President Urges Ratification of the Treaty by Congress

Washington, Jan. 27.—The reciprocity agreement made between Canada and the United States was sent to congress by President Taft yesterday afternoon with a special message urging its ratification.

When the terms of the formidable document were made known on the reading of the special message of President Taft, it was found that an agreement had been made, and an epoch in the history of the Republican party as well had been made. The barriers are down as low as they can be laid at this time. The ground has been prepared for ultimate free trade between the two countries.

There is free trade in nearly all articles of food. Where free trade is not recommended in food, then the duties have been lowered to the rates of the Canadian intermediate tariff from 2½ cents to 10 cents on the value.

Among the articles now dutiable that go on the free list are cattle, which are now dutiable at the rate of from $2 each to 27.5 percent coming into the United States and at 25 percent going into Canada. Every Canadian hog pays a $1.50 tax when he crosses the line, and so does a sheep, while the American porker is taxed 1½ cents a pound when he enters Canada, and sheep pay 25 percent. Canadian poultry pays a duty of 5 cents a pound dead and 3 cents alive, and American poultry crossing into Canada pays 20 percent.

Canadian wheat is taxed 25 cents a bushel entering America, which is more than double the rate American wheat costs imported into Canada. All food products like oats, barley, buckwheat and the like now pay duties ranging from 15 to 45 cents a bushel, coming from Canada, and from 10 to 25 cents entering Canada from the United States. Hay pays $4 a ton going to Canada and $2 returning.

All these will now be free, if the agreement is ratified. So will onions and potatoes, dried fruits, cheese, fresh milk and eggs, which now pay considerable duties, as much as 25 cents a bushel in the case of potatoes and 5 cents a dozen for eggs of Canadian production.

While the Canadians will get their cottonseed oil free, where they now pay a duty of 17.5 percent, on the other hand, Canadian flaxseed, which is now taxed 25 cents a bushel, will come into this country free. All kinds of garden seeds will be free; they now pay duties ranging from 4 to 10 cents a pound.

The Canadians can ship codfish into the United States, fresh or salted or smoked, free, where it now pays a duty of ¾ of a cent a pound. The same is true of halibut, now dutiable at 1 cent, and herring, which pays ½ a cent a pound fresh and ½ cent pickled or salted. Any kind of mackerel will be free, where it now pays 1 cent a pound coming from or going into Canada.

All other sea fish and salmon, fresh and smoked, and prepared in various ways, will be free, where they now pay as much at 30 percent duty on each side of the line. American oysters are given free entry into Canada, where they are now taxed 10 cents a gallon, or 3 to 5 cents a can. Fish oil goes on the free list. It now pays 8 cents a gallon entering into the United States and 22.5 percent entering Canada.

The present duty of 15 cents a gallon on cod liver oil imported into the United States is completely wiped out. So is the duty of 11 cents 100 pounds on salt coming from Canada, while the Canadians also remit their duty of 7½ cents on American salt.

Canadian timber, now dutiable at ½ cent a cubic foot, and all kinds of planks of different woods, now dutiable at 50 cents to $1.25 a thousand, and telegraph poles, now paying 10 percent, and pickets at 10 percent, all go on the free list.

American tin-plate and crucible steel wire, which now pays 5 percent, will be admitted in Canada free, and the same is true of barbed fencing wire coming from Canada, which now pays ¾ of a cent a pound.

Some of the articles that are to be admitted at reduced rates of duty on both sides follow:

Mutton and lamb, 1¼ cents a pound, a reduction of ¼ cent on Canadian mutton and of 1¾ on American mutton. The same rates apply to other fresh meats. Bacon is reduced from 4 cents to ¼ cent coming from Canada and from 2 cents to the same figure entering Canada. About the same rate of reductions holds good in the case of salt beef, pork, dried and smoked meats and salted meats. Canned meats coming from Canada are reduced 5 percent to 20 percent, and crossing from the United States they will pay 20 percent instead of 27½. There is a reduction of ¼ cent a pound on Canadian lard and ¾ of a cent a pound on American lard.

Wheat flour from Canada, instead of paying 25 percent, will pay 50 cents a barrel, and American flour will pay the same rate in Canada, where it is now 60 cents. Corn meal from Canada will pay 12½ cents on 100 pounds, instead of 40 cents, and the same meal from the United States will go in at 12½ cents a hundred, where it now pays 25 cents a barrel.

There is no reduction in the case of Canadian agricultural implements entering the United States, which will still continue to pay 15 percent, but the American implements entering Canada will do so at 15 percent, where they now pay 15½ to 20 percent. Some special Canadian implements, such as horse mowers, portable engines, hay loaders, potato diggers, rollers, windmills and hay tedders, which now pay from 30 to 45 percent duty, may hereafter come in for 20 percent, while the Canadians reduce their own duties on the same articles from 25 percent to 20.

American cutlery, which now pays 30 percent entering Canada, will be reduced to 27½ percent, and Canadian cutlery may come in at the same figure, where it now pays rates as high as 40 percent.

American clocks and watches, now taxed 30 percent, will go into Canada at 27½ percent, and Canadian canoes and small boats, which now pay 35 percent, may enter at 22½ percent. Automobiles and motor vehicles, which now pay 35 percent entering Canada, will be reduced 5 percent, and Canadian automobiles, which now pay 45 percent when they cross the line will enter at 30 percent.

Bituminous coal, which now pays 52 cents a ton, may enter Canada at 45 cents a ton, and the United States affords the same rate on Canadian coal.

FLYWHEEL BURSTS IN A LOWELL MILL

Shoots Through Section of Five Floors and the Roof

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 27.—One hundred and fifty operatives in mill No. 7 of the Boott cotton mills had a remarkable escape from death or injury when a twenty-five-foot flywheel in the basement burst and shot through a section of the five floors and the roof, tearing out a fifty-foot space from top to bottom of the building as if it had been paper.

Only one operator, Miss Vesarious Tappas, was injured. She was cut and suffered from shock. She is in the Lowell hospital.

The interior of the mill and the machinery was wrecked, including the big engine in the basement. The damage is roughly estimated at $100,000 to the engine and other machinery, while that to the building will amount to several thousand dollars. Mill No. 7 will be put out of commission for several weeks until a new engine and flywheel and new spinning machinery can be installed.

The resolution instructed the committee to report upon the possibility of securing for New Hampshire equal authority with Massachusetts over the holding company.

WAS TO HAVE BEEN PREMIER

Sir Charles Dilke Fell From Great Political Heights

HIS DEATH OCCURS IN LONDON

Statesman Who Was Recognized as Expert on International Affairs Returned to England After Long Exile and Redeemed Himself by Great Brilliancy—Given High Offices Despite His Republican Tendencies

London, Jan. 27.—Sir Charles Dilke is dead. The immediate cause of death was heart trouble, though he had been in an enfeebled condition since the recent election, the strain of campaign having affected him severely. He went to the south of France to recuperate, returning to London last Saturday. Soon after reaching home he took to his bed.

Admittedly one of the best informed men of his time, a renowned authority on all international affairs, Dilke was to have been premier of England. This was as generally understood, they say, as if Fate herself had sent out the advance notice. Yet without warning he fell, from the political heights he had already attained, into the mire and darkness of a black domestic scandal.

It was the sort of a scandal that Queen Victoria especially abhorred and Dilke, though protesting his innocence, had to leave the country and relinquish unusually brilliant prospects. He lived abroad for several years.

Sir Charles inherited his baronetcy from his father, and won the "Right Honorable" which goes before his name by his appointment to the privy council. He was born in 1843 and was graduated from Trinity Hall, Cambridge, as senior legalist in 1866, and in the same year was called to the bar. Instead of setting down to his profession he determined to travel and proceeded to Canada and to the United States. Then he continued on his way, making a circuit of the globe. The result of these journeyings was the publication of "Greater Britian: A Record of Travel in English Speaking Countries During 1866-67," a work that had a remarkable sale.

Sir Charles returned to Britian from his extended tour of the world, a convinced Republican. In those early years of the seventies he was the best abused man in Great Britian, caricatured as "Citizen Dilke." The United States hailed him as the future president of England.

His general success and renown won him an election to parliament in 1868 and he was at that time the youngest man who had ever represented a metropolitan constituency. During these earliest years of political activity he took a progressive interest in legislation. He caused a bitter outburst of anger and indignation by a carefully prepared parliamentary speech against the royal establishment in 1872. When called to account for his radical tendencies he replied that "he made no concealment of the fact that he was a Republican." The Tory journals incited the mobs to break up his meetings, and at Bolton one man was killed by the furious Royalists.

Sir Charles retained his Republican leanings to the end, though age did much to mellow his activity.

Despite his radical tendencies, he was made under secretary of state for foreign affairs in 1880-82, and president of the local government board in 1882-85. Subsequently he was a member of several royal commissions. His first wife, died in 1874 and in 1885 Sir Carles married the widow of Mark Pattison, rector of Lincoln colige, Oxford. It was during their engagement that the scandal resulting in the seperation of Donald Crawford and his wife occurred. Mrs. Pattison remained loyal to Sir Charles throughout this trouble and accompanied him abroad. She died in 1904.

Sir Charles returned to England in 1891. He was re-elected to parliament the following year and thenceforth continued to give his country the benefit of his surprising grasp of international affairs. He clung to his liking for literature and published many books, most of them on political and war questions.

Sir Charles Dilke had the reputation of being able to see farther through a war cloud than any other man living. His foreign relations were remarkable. France, it is said, thought more of him than of any other Englishman. Bismark was one of his strongest and firmest friends, and Count Herbert Bismarck usually stopped at the Dilke home when he was in London.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Mrs. Fiske, America's foremost dramatic artist, will be seen in the greatest role of her career, "Becky Sharp" at the Hollis Street Theatre Boston during the week of Jan. 30, only, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. "Becky Sharp," in which Mrs. Fiske's realization of the "immortal Becky" stands as one of the most signal contributions that the American stage has known, is a dramatization of Thackeray's famous novel, "Vanity Fair," made by Langdon Mitchell. With its various groups of strongly differentiated characters and its multiplicity of incidents, "Vanity Fair" has always been held to be replete with dramatic material. It has been said that there are a dozen plays in the novel. Many have been made, but none other than this by Langdon Mitchell, ever scored any particular success. No skillful dramatist should ever attempt to to make a play of the book without making Becky the central figure, since the interest centers and radiates with her as the principal object of the story. Mr. Mitchell, in making his play, put every important incident in which Becky predominates, into his work. He displayed remarkable appreciation of the dramatic values of the novel, and an equally pronounced ability in assembling them in dramatic sequence. "Becky Sharp" is the most popular play in Mrs. Fiske's comprehensive repertoire, and her characterization stands as one of the creations that will be remembered as long as the history of dramatic art in America endures. Every nuance of Becky's volatile character is brought out by Mrs. Fiske's delicately moulded art, and there is a buoyancy about her portrayal of the role that is deliciously infectious.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The emphatic stamp of approval which Boston has placed upon Madame X, "the supreme drama of thrills," is evinced in the throngs which beseige the Majestic theatre at every performance of the great human drama of the emotions. Not in years has the play awakened such an universal interest. It has become the topic of society and clubdom and many people who seldom attend theatres at all are among those whom it has attracted. While it is primarily a play of the heart, dealing bluntly and with telling realism of phases of human conduct seldom approached by the dramatist, it is entertainment as well and there are quite as many smiles as there are sobs in it. The comic relief really rescues it from being grim tragedy. The character of the villain, for instrance, is one readily recognized as an adjunct of great city life. He is a scoundrel, a jail-bird, living upon the weaknesses and follies of his fellows, but he is a jovial, vain likable chap until he is pushed at bay and those who see him find his performance high comedy until the critical moment when the unfortunate woman he goads and abuses turns upon him and kills him to save her son from disgrace.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Christy Matthewson, the famous pitcher of the New York "Giants," is an actor as well as a ball player. When a celebrity is announced to go on the stage it is usually regarded as simply an effort to satisfy public curiosity, but in this instance Mr. Matthewson does more. With "Chief" Myers, the catcher of the "Giants," and Miss May Tully, the prominent comedienne, he appears in a sketch that aside from the prominence of the players would attract immediate attention. The action takes place outside of the Polo Grounds, the dialogue is bright and the comedy situations are most amusing, and it is confidently predicted that nothing that has been at B. F. Keith's this season will cause more favorable comment than this feature next week. It will be surrounded by an exceptionally good show with lots of amusing features. One will be the Charles Ahearn troupe of comedians, who create one roar of laughter with their bicycle stunts. Jesse Lasky's big new production, "The Pianophiend Minstrels," are also on the bill, and other features will be Max Hart's Dancers; Lucas and Fields; Mlle. Daiz's Trained Monkeys; The Kemps; and the Woods and Woods Trio.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The play to follow "Jack and the Beanstalk" at the Castle Square Theatre next week will show by contrast the resources of John Craig and his players. "Hamlet" is too well known to require much heralding. For three centuries it has been acted wherever the English language is spoken, and also in many foreign tongues, and it still remains the most frequently produced and the most talked about of all Shakspeare's works for the stage. A little over a year ago, Mr. Craig produced it with great success, and its revival on Monday promises to have no less popularity.

Mr. Craig's interpretation of Hamlet has received high praise, and no less commendation has been bestowed on Mary Young's Ophelia. These two players will reappear in these roles at the Castle Square next week, and the other important characters will bring forward the other leading players of the stock company. In every detail the long cast will do full justice to the play, and the extra characters will be carefuly selected.

"Hamlet" wil be staged at the Castle Square with illustive scenery that will bring before the eye the picturesque ramparts and palaces of ancient Denmark, and carefully selected orchestral music will stimulate the imagination of the audience. Nothing will be left undone to make this one of the most effective and artistic of Mr. Craig's Shakspearean's production.

WITH THE ACTORS.

John Drew in "Smith" comes to the Hollis Street theatre Feb. 6.

A revival of "The Road to Yesterday" is booked for Feb. 6 at the Castle Square theatre to follow "Hamlet."

Julian Eltinge in "The Fascinating Widow" appears at the Boston theatre Feb. 6.

Rowland and Clifford will next season produce Edward E. Rose's new play "Rock of Ages." This firm has met with much success in its six productions of "The Rosary."

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen will make her second appearance of the season on the stage of the Park theatre when she comes there Feb. 9th with William H. Crane in "U S Minister Bedloe." She was there earlier in the dramatic year with Marie Doro in "Electricity."

"Arms and the Man," George Bernard Shaw's comedy upon which is founded the plot of that delightful operetta "The Chocolate Soldier," will be given by Mr. Craig at the Castle Square in the spring.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

There will be an immense gathering in Mechanics building Boston Saturday evening, the occasion of the opening of the eighth annual Motor Boat & Engine Show under the auspices of the New England Engine and Boat Association. There is sure to be something doing in the enthusiasm and purchasing line when the diversified display of boats, engines and accessories are seen. Such a complete line of hulls was never before on exhibition at any on time and there will be no difficulty for the man of limited means to pick out the boat he wants as the line is most extensive and the prices are right.

A special feature will be the famous "Br'er Fox" which has been especially arranged for with the owners Messrs M. B. and A. G. Dean of Newport Ky. This boat holds the record for long distance endurance races covering a distance of 1554 miles, Cincinnati to New Orleans in a total, elapsed running time of 53 hours, 25 minutes, 58 seconds. In connection with this celebrated boat there will also be on exhibition an eight cylinder 1911 Model Fox De Luxe Motor and announcements will be made at the show by the Dean Bros., of a number of long distance runs which they propose to make for 1911.

There will be lectures with stereopticon slides by Clarence Manning Fait the well known and interesting Gloucester marine poet and author of "Wharf & Fleet." Mr. Fait is so saturated with the spirit of the hybrid little army who go down to the sea in fishing smacks, that his ballads reek with saline vernacular puzzling to a land lubber. These lectures will prove of much interest to all lovers of boating.

An aero ice boat will be another novelty shown and will no doubt appeal to many who enjoy ice sailing. The above are a few of the many novelties that will be shown.

Music will be furnished by a first class orchestra and everything will be done to make this exhibition the very best of its kind ever held in Boston or elsewhere.

IN REAL BOHEMIA.

On Friday evening and Saturday afternoon of this week Burton Holmes will give the third in his present series of finely illustrated travelogues, the subject being "The Real Bohemia." This is a vivid description of his recent motor-tour to Prague and through the beautiful Bohemian rural districts, a land especially adapted to the highest enjoyment of the enthusiastic motorist.

To satisfy the unprecedented demand for seats which exceeded the limits of Tremont Temple this last week, Mr. Holmes will repeat "The Passion Play of Oberammergau" travelogue on Saturday evening, February 11th.

WHY PHILLIPS WAS MURDERED

His Criticism of American Women Was Resented

MOTIVE OF GOLDSBOROUGH

Letter Written to Newspaper, but Never Published, Given Out by His Sister—Quotes Mrs. Catt and Senator Bailey In Support of His Contention That Novelist Was In the Wrong In His Conclusions

New York, Jan. 27.—A letter given out in Washington by Miss Julia Goldsborough, sister of the man who shot David G. Phillips to death, indicates that the killing was inspired in Goldsborough's mind by reading in the New York Evening World an account of Phillips' criticism of American women. The letter was written by Goldsborough with the intention of sending it to the newspaper, but it was never mailed. It reads:

"I have a great interest in the suffrage movement, and am unwilling to see women representing such fine standpoints as are implied in that movement in the Federation of Women's clubs placed in a position which might be even distantly construed as undignified.

"A marked degree of interest has recently been shown in the press and by the Federation of Women's clubs in the views on American womanhood held by the novelist, David Graham Phillips. In particular I refer to an article entitled, 'Are American Women Feeble Wits?' in the New York Evening World of Nov. 2.

"Mr. Phillips has gravely told us therein how utterly unfit the American woman is to be a wife and a mother. He also says that we should have a single moral standard, but that he cannot see that it matters whether it is a man's or a woman's—nor can he 'see just why one person's morals should matter very much to another person.' But then, why should the American woman honor with her attention the opinions of any one who expresses such views?

"In the article in question Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, referring to the last quotation, remarks: 'I wonder does he realize what he says, perhaps.' Yet, although Mr. Phillips is not interested in the morals of his readers, possibly they are in those of their critic.

"Some of the acts relating to Mr. Phillips' 'The Treason of the Senate,' may be recalled as both timely and significant in this connection. It will be remembered that 'The Treason of the Senate' was published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine in 1906.

"Senator Joseph Bailey of Texas, who was among those attacked in that serial, replied with a speech, in which he conclusively proved that the novelist, being unable to find sufficiently damning evidence against the speaker for his literary purposes, had given out a number of deliberately distorted versions of public records in his attempt to defame the speaker's character. This speech may be found under the heading of 'Personal Experience' in the Congressional Record of June 27, 1906.

"No, Mr. Phillips does not see why one person's morals should matter to another, and Mrs. Catt and the other American women and men readers of this letter and of the Congressional Record will have no difficulty in realizing who he 'does not see.'"

BRIEFS

Merrymount Lodge No. 617 Knights Honor will be installed this evening by D. V. G. Fraiser and suite of Boston.

John Thomson and Miss Annie A. Kemp both of this city were quietly united in marriage Sunday evening, at the home of Rev. Richard Wright of the First Pilgrim church, Cambridge. The bridesmaid was Miss Nellie A. Rowbin of Cambridge and the best man George A. Thomson, brother of the groom.

The following have been elected as officers of the Holy Name society of St. John's church for the ensuing year: President, Michael T. Sullivan; vice president, Alphonse McKinnon; financial secretary, James Grant; recording secretary, Alex. McLaughlin. After the election of officers, Edward J. Lennon entertained the members with war reminiscences.

ANNUAL POLICE BALL.

The members of the Police department and their many friends are looking forward to the annual concert and dance of the Quincy Police Relief Association that is to be held Friday evening, Feb. 3, at Music hall. While the affairs of other years have been a success, as well as very enjoyable, it is planned to make this year's annual eclipse any of their efforts of the past. The proceeds of the affair are to swell the relief fund of the association, which seeks to aid and assist sick members, and is therefore a most worthy object, one which merits the support of the citizens at large, who look to these guardians of the peace to watch over their property during the long hours of the night. It is understood that many tickets have already been sold, btu the officers still have a few left and would be glad to dispose of them.

SPORTING NOTES.

Quincy High first and second teams will meet the Boston Latin school teams this afternoon in the school gymnasium. Close and exciting games may be expected.

The results in the Makaria league yesterday were interesting. The tail-enders took a brace and won four points and the Tigers and Cubs rolled evenly in their match.

Q. Y. C. ANNUAL.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club will be held in Colonial hall Thursday evening, Feb. 2, at 8 o'clock. Among the matters to come up in addition to the annual election of officers for the ensuing year, will be an article to see if the club will contribute a sum of money to the Harbor and Land Commissioners toward the expense of dredging at the clubhouse for which the sum of $3,000 is asked in a bill now before them. Other matters are to see if the club will elect the U. S. District officer, Col. Francis V. Abbott, an honorary member, and to see if the club will vote to limit the club membership to 600.

Much interest is being taken in the meeting from the fact that Commodore Robbins retires after two years' service, and a new commodore probably. Ira M. Whittemore will be elected.

FIRE LOSS NOT ADJUSTED

Building and Stock Covered by Insurance

It was nearly 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon before the all-out sounded for the second fire in the Hancock building, and even then some of the apparatus was kept at the building until after 4 o'clock and firemen remained on duty until 6 o'clock.

As noted in Thursday's Ledger, the second fire was behind the plastering between the ceiling of the work room in Shaw's store and the banquet hall of the Masonic apartments, one of the most difficult fires to chase out.

Fortunately but little cutting was necessary in the Masonic apartments, and as soon as the second blaze had been extinguished, Chief Williams put some firemen at work in Shaw's work room tearing down the plastering so that every possible lurking spark might be found and extinguished. The firemen found a space of nearly two feet between the ceiling and the floor of the Masonic apartments, and the timbers were found to have been considerably burned, showing that there had been a hot fire in progress there and that it was extremely fortunate that W. A. Bradford and others visited the Masonic apartments to see what damage had been done, otherwise the fire would have got a much better start than it did.

Just what the damage will be to the Masonic apartments is not known. The furnishings of the hall are upholstered and they are so permeated with smoke that it will be a long time before that odor disappears. Then again, the valuable robes also got a severe smoking. Masons at the hall Thursday night said that not even a hair of the goats had been singed, and that these mysterious animals had seemed to thrive on smoke. But they may take revenge on the next candidate initiated.

In Shaw's furniture warerooms the greatest damage was by smoke and water. Near the work room was a large line of highly polished furniture, and these will all have to be repolished and finished. Then again the water going down through the floors did a great amount of damage to mattresses, carpets and things of that nature. It is expected that the insurance adjusters will be in town very soon, when the loss will be determined.

PROGRESSIVE LUNCHEON

Ladies of Wollaston Methodist Church Have a Great Treat

A novel entertainment in the form of a progressive lunch was held in the vestry of the Wollaston Methodist church on Thursday evening by the Ladies Aid society, of which Mrs. George Crothers is president. Around the vestry were arranged tables laden with attractive edibles where one could eat to her hearts content, limited only by her purse and inclination.

Buying a check from the cashier, Miss Florence Bennett, one might proceed to the chafing dish table, at which Mrs. Paul Brodbeck, Mrs. Wesley Wiggin and Mrs. O. E. Robinson presided.

Next in order came the biscuit table where Mrs. E. H. Ewertz, Mrs. O. E. Estes and Miss Doane were in charge. At the doughnut table were Mrs. E. V. Estey and Mrs. T. E. Lane.

Miss Bessie Wilbur and Miss Bertha Teed were in charge of the candy table, while the journey ended with the dessert table at which were numberless delicacies with Mrs. Frank G. Bennett and Mrs. Warren Wilbur were in charge.

During the evening vocal solos "Esmeralda" and "Garden of Roses" by Miss Irma Douglas accompanied by Mrs. Frank G. Bennett were enjoyed while Mrs. Warren Wilbur contributed a reading entitled "Not an angel."

WATER INCOME TOO SMALL

Possible Earnings Might Be $337,512.00 Says A. L. Baker

Editor Daily Ledger:

In ar eecnt issue of the Ledger our city was advised to follow the Gas Co. in reduction of water rates. The following figures will show why water rates under existing conditions cannot be much reduced. The income of the Water department for the yeai 1910 according to figures recently, published in the Ledger was $115,000. While the cost of maintenance was quite a number of thousand in excess of this sum.

The amount of water charged to our city by the Metropolitan water commission for the year 1910 was 141,-116,845 cubic feet. Had this water all been sold at the rate our families are paying for metered service, $2.25 per 1,000 cubic feet the income of the department would be $337,512.80. If one quarter of this water was used for city purposes and wasted through defective service pipes we should still have an income of $253,154.60. Estimate that $53,000.00 is given to industrial plants by way of discount or rebate on rates, if our entire service was metered, we should have an income exceeding $200,000.00

Is not this sufficient reason, if the increased income for a single year will pay the total expense, that our City Council should pass an order sufficient to complete the meter service?

Again our city should not sell water to any industrial plant for less than it costs delivered at place of consumption. If this is done the family consumer and not the city treasury is called upon by excessive water rates to keep up the income equal to the cost. The experience of the city of Melrose (services entirely metered) shows that the average metered service need not cost over $10.00 per year.

In view of the above figures of consumption received from Metropolitan Water Commission (and therefore correct) have we not good reason to ask what is the matter with our water debt?

Have we not a city government capable of taking a plant whose possible earnings might be $337,512.00 and getting more than $115,000.00 out of it? Any corporation making a showing like the above would at once discharge its manager for incompetency and try again. Real estate dealers, better than any others, know what we are up against, when we are compelled to compare our gas rates, water rates and electricity with other cities in the Metropolitan district. Why not the City Government and City Council this year get down to business and give us a chance to increase our taxable property.

A. L. Baker.

(The Daily Ledger will make some comments on the above letter in a few days. Letters are also solicited from water takers and taxpayers of Quincy.—EDS.)

JOLLY SIXTEEN.

The Jolly Sixteen met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Smith, Washington street for their annual whist party On entering, Mr. Smith presented each gentleman with a mammth cigar, large enough to last the whole evening, for Mr. Smith believes in providing enough at the first hand out, so they won't ask for more. Mrs. Smith gave each lady a handsome stein, tied with a ribbon to match the ribbons on the cigars. These when matched were partners at the first hand of whist. After two hours of cards the prizes were awarded to Mrs. Dexheimer, Mr. J. Smith, Mrs. J. Smith and Mr. Claflin.

Mrs. Smith then asked all to be seated at the dining table which was laf with many dainty things to eat, among which was served one of the clam chowders for which Mr. Smith is so well known. But all pleasant evenings must come to a close, and as each member bade their host and hostess good-night they all wished they might soon again be allowed to meet at Tommy's.

COURT ENTERTAINED.

Mrs. Mary D. Mahoney retiring chief ranger of St. Ambrose court, M. C. O. F. entertained the court at her home 8 Barry street, Wednesday evening. Whist was enjoyed for an hour, after which refreshments were served and a fine musical program rendered by members of the court. The special guests of the evening were Rev. William J. PARISH HOUSE FOR LUTHERAN

Committee Appointed to Obtain Plans and Estimates

A meeting of the Swedish Lutheran church was held Thursday for the consideration of the building of a hall on the church property adjoining the lot on which the church itself is located. There is so little room in the church beside the auditorium that it has been necessary to hire a hall for socials, entertainments and the annual fair. If the hall were erected next to the church, the Sunday School. Ladies' Aid and Young Peoples society could meet there, and socials, concerts, fairs and all the church gatherings could be held in a building owned by the church.

A committee of eight, with the pastor as chairman, was appointed to look into the advisability of erecting such a hall and to get estimates, plans and specifications for its erection. Estimates for the cost of construction of wood, cement and stone will be called for.

The chairman of the committee has power to call the congregation together again, and submit the plans and estimates for its consideration. The meeting was well attended and there was a lengthy discussion of the question before the church.

GOVERNMENT TO PAY HALF

A Washington dispatch of Friday to the Globe says: "Senator Lodge today introduced a bill appropriating $50,000 to pay half the cost of the proposed new bridge across Weymouth Back river. The government has ordered Norfolk county to build a bridge to cost $100,000 and Senator George Barnes and Ex.-Gov. John D. Long recently appeared before the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce to ask the government to bear half the expense.

"Congressman Weeks will introduce a similar bill in the house and its passage is confidently expected. Representatives Washburn and Peters are looking after the bill in the committee on interstate and foreign commerce."

LADIES' NIGHT COLLEGE CLUB

Games, Refreshments and Good Time at Y. M. C. A.

Ladies night of the Y. M. C. A. College club Friday evening was attended with great success. A company of fifty young people gathered in the Assembly hall which was properly garnished for the occasion. Decorations consisting of bunting in the Association colors, a large banner bearing the Y. M. C. A. emblem and a quantity of ferns and palms not to mention "the ladies," gave the hall a very attractive appearance.

A series of games in charge of Delcevare King furnished a great deal of fun for all concerned. Prizes were given to winners in the various contests. These were chantecler bonnets a' la Dennison, which were arranged very becomingly by certain of the young ladies without the aid of a mirror.

Refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake were served by members of the club under the direction of I. T. Gumb. After the refreshments there were more games, and then all joined in singing familiar songs while Miss Gladys Hunt "tickled the ivories" on the piano.

The committee for the occasion included H. Trask, L. White, D. Gearwar, R. McFarland and S. Prout. The patrons and patronesses were: Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gay, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. LaRose, Mr. L. H. Clee and Miss Catherine Steele and Mr. D. King.

Among the others present were H. Trask, H. Sutermeister, D. Gearwar, R. McFarland, R. Findlay, R. Estey, F. Tirrell, S. Hunt, W. Safford, L. White, A. McFarland, L. Randall, R. Sidelinger, R. SCHOOLMATES ATTEND.

The funeral of Edith May, daughter of Mr. William P. and Mrs. Isadore F. Gould, was held Friday from her home, 72 South Central avenue. The services were conducted by Rev. Edward A. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church. They were largely attended, the members of the freshmen class at the Woodward Institute being present in a body. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

ROBERT BURNS ANNIVERSARY

Supper Came First, then Entertainment and Dancing

The celebration of the birthday of Robert Burns at Music hall last evening by Loyal Ladies of Clan MacGregor No. 1, and Clan MacGregor, No. 5, O. S. C., was one of the most successful events of the kind ever held in this city.

The supper was excellent in every particular, and the concert was fine. The singing of Miss Evelyn Blair and Mr. D. P. Wilson, also the dancing of Misses Eva White and Lois LaBud was well received.

The orator of the evening, Rev. A. D. MacKinnon, surpassed himself, and that is saying a great deal. Mr. MacKinnon showed very clearly that he was a student of the works of Robert Burns, and that he was fully in sympathy with his theme.

Music hall was taxed to the limit, about five hundred and fifty people were seated at supper, which was served about 8.45 o'clock. The concert commenced about 9.45, and after the concert was over the hall was cleared for dancing.

Two hundred and seventy-five couples participated in the grand march, which was led by Chief Alfred O. Diack, chief of Clan MacGregor, and Mrs. Margaret Stronach, president of Loyal Ladies, No. 1. The floor director was Alex. W. Russell, and the floor directress, Mrs. Josie Daw, who were assisted by an able corps of aids.

A large number of the clansmen wore their plaids, the bright colors of the MacGregor tartan and the many pretty dresses worn by the ladies added picturesqueness to the scene.

The committee in charge deserve credit for the excellent entertainment offered, and have set a high mark for Burns' entertainments.

DEATH AT WOLLASTON.

After a long illness Axel M. Bjorkman, of 200 Farrington street, died early this morning of heart disease. Mr. Bjorkman is survived by one daughter, Miss Emma Bjorkman, who has been keeping house for her father since the death of Mrs. Bjorkman some years ago.

WHY I NEVER MARRIED.

The monthly social of St. Mary's Guild was held in the music room Friday evening, and in spite of the inclement weather was well attended. During the first part of the evening the entertainment committee presented a short sketch entitled "Why I Never Married." The sketch was well rendered and received merited applause. A musical program followed, after which refreshments were served by the hospitality committee.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Rev. John O. Haarvig is another Congregational clergyman with a long pastorate to resign. This week he sent a letter to the Allston church after a pastorate of sixteen years. Nearly 500 united with the church during his stay. Perhaps the Quincy and Allston churches might exchange.

How is it that Quincy has no candidate for the Superior bench? Gov. Foss makes public a list of sixty who have been recommended, including M. S. Morton of East Milton, Asa P. French of Randolph, Thomas H. Buttimer of Hingham, Charles A. Reed of Dedham, Winthrop H. Wade of Dedham and others.

Haverhill is another city that does not put its temporary loans over into the next year, and therefore secures a better discount. This week it awarded temporary loans of $150,000, maturing on Sept. 26, and $167,000, maturing on Oct. 26 to the First National bank of Boston, at 3.29 percent discount. The loan of $133,000, maturing on Jan. 2, 1912, was not awarded.

Do you know that our local Young Men's Christian Association is taking an active interest in the boys and minors of our city whose wrongdoings bring them into the hands of the law? The work done along this line has checked many boys who were getting into bad ways and has been more effective than the usual punishment meted out to juvenile offenders. Those familiar with the work being done are hearty endorsers of the methods adopted. While prevention of crime may not be altogether possible it is a long step towards it when the proper interest is shown in the boys of our city who get into court, perhaps for trivial offenses, but which might grow more serious under other conditions. The Association is to be commended for this branch of its work.

Let us hear more about the enthusiasm of Ward Four during the year 1911. One of the greatest needs perhaps is a "Community house" such as is proposed for Wollaston, or an enlargement of St. Mary's hall with more of the conveniences. There should be a small hall or banquet room where the Improvement Association could meet monthly; also a well appointed kitchen, equipped with a large gas range. Then get down to work. Work individually to beautify about the homes, and collectively to beautify the streets, public squares, depot, churches, cemeteries, playgrounds, etc. Boom a municiapl dock with street railway connection with the quarries and granite yards, which will open up a market for growth and develop the granite industry. The street railway should be permitted to double track Copeland street and Water street, and thus give the greatly needed street railway service, and provide for the trolley freight business. Let West Quincy also take a more active interest in the Board of Trade, which should have 500 members.

When the United States bought Alaska about fifty years ago for seven millions of dollars, and a facetious editor referring to its great distance and to its Russian origin, proposed to call it "Damlongwayoff," no one imagined how incalculably rich in gold and iron and fisheries and coal, to say nothing of vegetable productions, that country would become. There are people but little past middle age who can recollect that that part of the country where Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and other prosperous states are situated, was supposed to be a desert utterly unfit for agriculture. A great part of Texas was at that time regarded as a sterile waste, but it is now covered with cities, towns and villages. Within a generation Canada has doubled her population and multiplied many times her wealth, and yet the rich forests of Labrador and splendid regions about Hudson Bay are almost untouched. It is not improbable that the younger generation in America will, during the next half century, witness such financial and industrial power in the northern half of the Western hemisphere as the world has never before known.

Argentina has the United States far outdone in civic pride, Public works, and municipal improvement, according to Charles H. Sherrill, United States Minister to Argentina, during a banquet in Chicago. He is making a tour of 28 cities to urge the possibilities of South American trade and gave the members of the Association of Commerce something to think about. "Talk about Chicago energy," he said. "I don't depreciate it a bit, but here is what Buenos Ayres did when the people demanded green places in the heart of the city. Eight whole city blocks of five and six story buildings were torn down and planted with trees, shrubbery and green grass. It was all done in five weeks. During the recent Centennial the people of Buenos Ayres spent three million dollars for the festivities, which continued only three weeks.

"In that city there are more beautiful buildings, there is better municipal life and there are better living conveniences than in any city of North America. Living expenses are about twice as high but wages are much higher. Woman servants get $15 and $20 a week, and bank clerks $150 to $300 a month. In my opinion there is no market in the world which affords better opportunity for exploitation than South America, but the United States knows little about it, while Great Britian last year took $250,000,000 in dividends from Argentina alone. That country is richer than the United States, it has a population of seven millions, of which 1,500,000 are in the capital city, and the foreign trade last year was $700,000,000."

DRIFT OF OPINION

Massachusetts has done much in the way of preventing crime by reforming the prisoner. Formerly they were merely punished, coming out as bad as they were when they went in or worse. This was due mainly to the fact that the state had the theory that the punishment of crime was a county function. The state took care of a very small number of very bad offenders in the state prison; the others went to county prisons. A generation ago this theory was abandoned and the state established a reformatory for women; later a reformatory for men. The state farm, too, grew to be the largest institution in the commonwealth, and the state now supports nearly one-half of all the prisoners.

It is now proposed to go a step further, by establishing a branch of the state reformatory, partly to make it possible to classify the reformatory prisoners, and partly to provide for the reformatory treatment of many now held in the county prisons on strictly penal sentences. Many of these men are bad, but one of the fundamental principles announced by the recent international prison congress was that no man should be considered hopeless. They would be out of place at Concord, and would not fit into its scheme of discipline, but they could be handled in a branch, and many of them could be restored to lives of usefulness.

It is not easy to conceive of anything more destructive of all manhood than to put a man into a house of correction for one or tow years or more, leaving him to his own thoughts, without trying to improve him; and without giving him a single impulse toward a better life. It is not surprising that so large a part of them relapse into crime.

The state is under obligation to do something for these men. The fact that there is a large, new prison in Fall River, which has never been occupied, seems to make it possible to do what ought to be done.—Boston Herald.

BOYCOTT APPEAL DROPPED

Supreme Court Passes It and Takes Up Contempt Case

Washington, Jan. 28.—Reaching the conclusion that the Bucks Stove and Range company of St. Louis and the American Federation of Labor had settled their disputes out of court, the supreme court of the United States stopped the oral argument of the so-called "boycott" case of the former against the latter on the theory that no issue in it remained for the court to pass upon.

Following the action the court listened to oral argument on the "contempt case," embracing the charges of Bucks Stove and Range company that certain officers of the American Federation of Labor violated the injunction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia in the "boycott case." Each was held to be guilty and sentenced to jail. Argument will be continued on Monday.

NOT FOND OF NOTORIETY

Baldwin Therefore Concluded That He Would Not Sue Roosevelt

Hartford, Jan. 28.—Governor Baldwin has made known his reasons for not bringing suit against former President Roosevelt for the alleged criticisms the latter made during the course of a campaign speech in New Hampshire on Baldwin's judicial action in a case involving a workman's compensation for damages.

In the letter written Dec. 15 Roosevelt refused to retract or modify his criticism and in speaking of that letter, Baldwin said that he had not found time to give any consideration to the last letter written by Roosevelt until early in the present month, on the eve of his inauguration as governor, and then came to the opinion that it would comport better with the proprieties incident to that position if he did not bring a suit, which experience had shown him would be likely to be made the subject of wide newspaper notoriety, not to say sensationalism.

HAS TEN FOSTER CHILDREN

Philadelphia Lawyer Wants to Know What to Do With Them

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.—Carroll Fow, lawyer, practical joker of the Philadelphia bar, and still in his twenties, is the foster-father of ten children, ranging from 6 weeks to 6 years, and he is wondering what to do with them.

Some time ago Fow befriended Mr. and Mrs. Edward Draper, who ran a foundling asylum. Upon the death of Draper two weeks ago Fow learned not only that he was the executor of a small estate, but had been made the foster-father of the ten infants.

Yesterday Fow went into the orphans' court and requested the court to tell him what to do with his children.

HETTY GREEN DROPS HER BUSINESS CARES

Son to Form Trust Company With Substantial Capital

New York, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Hetty Green, the world's richest woman, and the "queen of American finance," has abdicated. Her son, Edward H. R. Green, who "made good" in the great southwest after an eighteen-year test in Texas, has taken over the management of his mother's vast fortune.

"We expect to form a trust company of our own with substantial capital," said he. "The details are now being worked out. It will be incorporated under the laws of New York and be a new enterprise in every respect."

The headquarters of the management of the great Green fortune will be centered in the trust company. The fortune as it stands today is estimated at $100,000,000, including various properties ranging all the way from real estate holdings in Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Boston and Toledo to paper mills at Bellows Falls, Vt., cotton mills at New Bedford, Mass., gold mines in California, railroad holdings in Texas and bonds and stocks in nearly every railroad of importance in the country.

JUMPS INTO RIVER

Suicide of Former Town Treasurer Who Was Facing Suit For Shortage

Union, Me., Jan. 28.—Ardennis Shuman, former town treasurer, who three years ago was tried and acquitted of the charge of embezzling $1400 of the town's funds, but who was facing a $1400 civil suit brought by the town, committed suicide by escaping from the custody of a nurse in his home and leaping into the Georges river.

His method of bookkeeping was crude, and it was due to this rather than dishonesty that there was a shortage in his accounts, it was claimed at the trial. He had been sick a week.

JIMMY VALENTINE, WARDEN HANDLER AND ROSE LANE.

PROLOGUE.

You're not so sure about Jimmy Valentine as you might be—not until the very last chapter, when he "finds himself" in a scene that is as cleverly conceived as anything ever presented in American fiction or drama. What you are sure of as you read—very, very sure, in fact—is that you are following the story of a most interesting character, one whose doings on the stage have held the interest of many thousands. Jimmy Valentine becomes a "crook," with most of the failings and weaknesses of a man who doesn't recognize the difference between mine and thine, but he winds up as a—well, read the story and find out for yourself how he winds up. It will be worth your while, for this absorbing, thrilling romance of both the under world and the upper world as well proves that a man has never sunk so low but that he may again regain the honor he has thrust aside when the true spirit of manhood throbs within him.

[The Armstrong drama, of which the following is the novelized version, is based on O. Henry's story, "A Retrieved Reformation."]

CHAPTER I.

THE warden's office in Sing Sing prison is not a pleasant spot in which to linger, whether you may be innocent or whether guilty of a crime. And no more reassuring could be termed the abrupt, dominating personage who presided over the dismal destinies of the office and institution when occurred the events chronicled in this narrative.

That a man fated by his choice of occupation to daily associate intimately with criminals of high and low degree and to come constantly in personal contact with all the misery and depravity going to form the life of a state's prison—that a man so fated should find exquisite enjoyment in accentuating these depressing conditions is surely a contradiction of what ordinarily would be expected. Humans of normal mold are generally occupied in ameliorating the evils and annoyances of their surroundings. That is nature's way. Not so with Warden Handler. That which is bad can be made to be worse. Innocence can be shown to be guilt—with the aid of trained witnesses. Repentence is always insincere, and if it is not it can be made so. A murderer should be made to remember always his ignominy. A thief should be reminded of his amateurish clumsiness which led him into the clutches of the central office men. That was Handler's philosophy. That was Handler's way.

And underlying all his petty oppression and gross inhumanity was a cause, deep rooted in a system of his own and of a race of jail keepers that went before him. Exposure? Removal? Bah! He had considered all that. And, if worse came to worse, had he not friends in the state senate? Was there not a governor who would need his assistance in the state convention when it came to a question of delegates? Clearly the possibility of removal was the least of his worries.

Warden Handler sat at his polished oak desk in the middle of his office. At his left was another desk used by Smith, his secretary. At his back the barred windows looked out into the prison yard, where at prescribed intervals gangs of convicts were allowed to take a brief outing to breathe in the air from the hills that mocked them, thus to prolong the lives of those who hoped to live as well as of those who hoped to die, thus to strengthen the nerves of the unfortunates whom justice had decreed must some day at sunrise go to a shadowy little stone room to sit in a sinister wooden chair equipped with stout straps and electric wires.

The warden was in his customary pessimistic mood. Good reason for it this time, too, for "Chicago Whitey," a trusty, doing a "bit" of seven years, had got through the guards and dropped over the wall on to the top of a car of an "up bound" freight train the evening before. Not a trace of him yet. Handler's pride in his record as a pen master was at stake, and he blamed himself and the whole universe for the official explanations which must soon be forthcoming. His dark eyes gleamed vengefully; his short cropped black hair fairly bristled with the rage that surged in the thick skull beneath it; his strong, square jaws were grimly set, though now and again his upper lip would curl slightly back as he gritted his teeth, revealing a row of tobacco stained incisors. Yes, Warden Handler was disturbed.

He flagered a glistening letter opener impatiently, and his lips seemed to move.

"Serves me right for makin' a 'trusty' out of a bloomin' yegg," he muttered. "Might have known one of them wouldn't stay put in one place any length of time, not even in a coffin."

The door at Handler's right opened. He half turned and glowered at a trusty who shuffled in, carrying a bottle of drinking water.

"It's pretty soft for you around here, eh?" grunted the warden.

The convict hastened to place the bottle in the holder at the sound of the official's voice. He then hurried toward the door, mumbling a faint "Yes, sir," as he went.

"Suppose he'll be tryin' the west wall next," commented Handler, pounding his fist on the desk. "But I'll trim 'em all yet. I'll"—

"A visitor for you," announced his secretary, Smith, entering. "His name is like a roll call in the German navy." He handed Handler a card.

The warden took the pasteboard.

"Blick-en-dol-fen-bach," he read slowly. "A man with a name like that has no right on the outside of a prison. What's his graft?"

"He has a letter from the state board

IN LUXURIOUS NEST IN DINGY FACTORY

Missing Girl Is Discovered by Pittsburg Sleuths

Pittsburg, Jan. 28.—A willing prisoner in a luxurious apartment, fitted up with splendid and costly furnishings, in the loft of a dingy factory building, Mabel Lewis, aged 17 years, a stenographer, who started from her home for work ten days ago and had not been seen since, was found by the police in the tool plant of the John Naughton company.

Naughton was in the company of the girl, and both were placed under arrest. They were taken to central station, where the girl met her father, who took her home.

Naughton was finally released, as the girl's family wished to avoid the notoriety of prosecuting him. Naughton is married and about 30 years old. He lives in splendid style, but told the police that he loved the girl violently and intended to get a divorce and marry her.

From his private office Naughton had built a secret stairway running from a hidden closet into the loft of the factory, where magnificent quarters had been arranged for the girl.

RAP ON FUNNY BONE

Discloses Presence of Burglar Who Was Posing as Statue

Pittsburg, Jan. 28.—Notified by a burglar alarm that thieves had broken into the storerooms of the Fidelity Loan company, where almost $[illegible] worth of gems and valuable jewelry are kept, police, detectives and a private watcheman ransacked the building for almost two hours.

Then Policeman Keenan, who had been stationed on the second floor of the building, where an artist has a studio, idly tapped a sheeted statue with his mace. He hit the statue's funny bone, and with a yell it cast aside the sheet and started for the door.

Keenan had enough self-possession left to rap the statue on the head as it reached the door. The statue, which had been standing on a pedestal for two hours, turned out to be named Fred Fitch. He is now held on a charge of burglary.

Rev. E. A. Chase of Wollaston spoke on "Playmates." Every one of the 175 boys present was held spellbound during the entire speech.

Mr. Chase will speak at the Sunday afternoon meeting on the subject: "First things first." Special illustrated songs will be a feature.

Great preparations are being made for a three days' campaign which will begin on Feb. 9 and continue through the week.

A building committee from Beverly Y. M. C. A. inspected the local association building a few days ago. They were greatly pleased with the pool and the "gym," as well as with the general arrangement of the building.

The basketball championship series of the boys' department will begin this evening, when the first and second teams of Intermediates and Employed Boys will meet on the floor.

The Senior first team will go today to Lawrence, and the second team will meet Clapp Memorial in Weymouth.

The next games in the city championship will take place on Feb. 11.

Mr. LaRose took a team to Lynn for the boys' indoor track meet this afternoon.

The Extension clubs had very agreeable meetings this week. The Quincy Point club was given a stereopticon story of the French revolution. At the Quincy Adams club, the life of Napoleon was the subject of an illustrated talk. The Wollaston club held a very enjoyable costume party on Thursday evening.

L. H. Clee, the boys' work director, will speak at the meeting of the Bethany C. E. society on Sunday evening at 6.15.

The College club ladies' night was enjoyed by over 50 young people. An encouraging feature of the occasion was that only one member went "stag."

Y. M. C. A. ACTIVITY.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. is doing business these days as every department is hustling. The daily average at the building is above the 200 mark, and over 300 more men and boys are being worked with each week outside the building.

The swimming pool is a great attraction, not only as "the greatest fun ever," but in teaching boys and men how to swim; ten have been taught this week.

On the whole it seems to be about the busiest place in Quincy. If the schedule of activities could be reproduced in print it would hardly be believed that so many activities were possible in this city, but they are there.

Keep your eye on the Y. M. C. A., during the next few weeks, and help them raise their current budget; a three days hustle is the plan.

GLOVER A. C. DANCE.

A largely attended dancing party was held at Alpha hall Friday evening under the auspices of the Glover A. C., it being their second annual affair. Wilson's orchestra furnished the music and dancing was in order from 8 to 12 o'clock. Timothy DeCoste, the president of the club, was the floor director; Sewell Rose was assistant floor director; Thomas Hogan the chief of aids and Robert Girstel, Vincent Stevens, Jerry Monyhan and Thomas Kennedy the aids. The order of twenty numbers including extras was made up entirely of modern dances each of which was dedicated to some familiar sentiment.

FEBRUARY MAGAZINES.

The mere fact that it contains George Randolph Chester's latest novel would be enough to interest most people in the February Lippincott's yet the said novel is only one item—though it is perhaps the most important—in a long and imposing table of contents. Mr. Chester's new story is called "The Forty-Third Pumpkin"—an unusual title, but then, it is an unusual story. It is a tale or rural life, a bit farcical perhaps, yet full of shrewd character delineation. Rustic superstitions play a considerable part in the plot, and there are many uncanny happenings, all of which, however, are satisfactorily explained in the end. The yarn is fully up to the standard set by this author's other popular works, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," "Bobby Burnit," etc. A series of historical documents of extraordinary interest are the letters written by two young French noblemen during their visit to America in 1783. These letters mellowed in the family archives until very recently one of their descendants—a Member of the French Academy—loaned them to Mrs. John Van Vorst, who translated and edited them for Lippincott's Magazine.

Suburban Life for February deals largely with the house, inside and out, yet it has a spring flavor and contains also several articles dealing with the Pacific Coast. The leading article by Mr. Frank A. Arnold is entitled "The Empire of the Pacific," and is a record of personal observations concerning business, social, and suburban conditions in the Golden West. An unusually readable article is entitled "The Cost of a Home in Suburban Chicago" and will prove of interest to commuters everywhere. "Overcoating an Old House" is the first of a series of helpful and practical articles on remodeling. Other articles are "A White Wicker Home," "When Buying Your Building-Lot," "The Humor of Suburban Life," "Window-Garden Plants," "Reducing the Coal Bill," "The Kitchen Window-Garden."

The leading feature in the February McClure's is the first instalment of the series of true detective stories, "Great Cases of Detective Burns," recorded by Dana Gatlin. Burns is unquestionably the most famous detective in the United States, and these stories of his most interesting cases are told in his own words. The first of these, "How Abe Ruef Confessed," is a story of the famous San Francisco graft prosecutions. "The Case of the Reporter," by Hugo Munsterberg, deals with the methods of the newspaper reporters. Burton J. Hendrick's second article on "The Mormon Revival of Polygamy" gives many instances of polygamous marriages that have taken place since the manifesto was issued, and proves positively that plural marriages are now the rule among the Mormons, and that they are sanctioned by the Mormon Church.

Some of the leading articles in Technical World for February are: Holding Up Mail Frauds, Bailey Millard; Cleaning Up the Philippines, Rene Bache; Machine Picks Cotton at Last, Carl Crow; Growing Stock by Electricity, Charlton Lawrence Edholm; To Boulevard the Oregon Trail, Frank C. Doig; To Save the Seal, William Thornton Prosser; Twenty Millions for a Station, John Anson Ford; State Fair and the City Man, Edward I. Pratt and Checkmating the Meat Trust, Carl Crow.

—It is every way likely that if the senate bill to provide that stamps shall be furnished such persons as are entitled to free postage is adopted, the postal deficit will be cut down materially. It would be possible to charge to the people receiving these free stamps the amount of postage, and then the extent of abuses of the franking privilege, if any, could easily be established.—Salem News.

BRIEFS

Rev. Martin D. Kneeland of Winchester is to preach at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Sunday morning on "The Continental vs. the New England Sunday." Other services will be as usual.

The young people of First church are arranging for a ministrel show to be given March 3. It will be one of their series of entertainments.

The after meeting whist contest inaugurated by John Adams Council of Wollaston under the wise and thoughtful administration of the committee of amusement proved a success. It was very interesting to watch the progress of the game as Brother Kappler and Brother Miller came to a tie. It will be well worth watching the contest on Feb. 13.

Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman of All Souls' church, Braintree, is to address the meeting of the Young People's Religious union of First church on Sunday evening, on "Use of Shame." The music will be in charge of Miss Blanche Morrison.

Prof. Atwood, choirmaster and organist at Christ church, Hyde Park, has accepted a similar position at St. Alban's church Scranton, Pennsyvania. Prof. Atwood is well known to parishioners of St. Chrysostom's church having given his services to several of their entertainments, including the last one which was held in November.

Not only club women but all women of the city are urged to attend the meeting at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon Jan. 31, under the auspices of the Home Economics committee of the Quincy Women's club. The speaker Mrs. C. O. Tyler of Abington, a member of the food sanitation committee of the State Federation, will speak on "Let the label speak for itself" something all women should be interested in. The meeting is public, free to any who care to attend.

The Junior Laymen of First church have secured Dr. Glover M. Allen, secretary of the Boston Society of Natural History to give an account of his trip collecting animals in Africa. Dr. Allen's party went over the same region hunted by Col. Roosevelt. The lecture will be illustrated and given in the chapel Monday night at eight o'clock. The lecture is free an invitation being extended to all to attend especially young men.

ARE NOT READY TO BE QUOTED

Statesmen Inclined to Balk at Reciprocity Treaty

ITS RATIFICATION DOUBTFUL

Opinion That It Cannot Be Secured at Present Session of Congress, Although Democrats Stand Ready to Support It—New England Will Fight to Preserve Fisheries and Pulp and Paper Industries

Washington, Jan. 28.—The battery of newspaper men who hurled themselves against the house and senate in a despairing attempt to get interviews on the Canadian trade agreement secured very few statements, but gained unanimously one impression, that the agreement stands only a remote chance of action at this session.

The westerners like Bristow of Kansas are non-committal, but criticise the agreement sharply for admitting cattle free while retaining duties on packing house products. This undoubtedly will be a stock argument against the agreement.

But these critics have not yet taken the ground that the free admission of grain necessarily will break prices or narrow their markets. New England senators are indicating their position by saying that the United States grants much but gets little in return, but they hesitate to range themselves against the administration.

John Norris, chairman of the committee on paper of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, sends word that the pulp and paper provisions are wholly satisfactory to him, and states that if the agreement is ratified by both countries, the price of news print paper should be reduced immediately.

Members of congress are more fearful of the position of the newspaper press in this controversy. They expect the newspapers to support the agreement warmly in their own interest, and of course, to make trouble for statesmen who oppose.

The senate no doubt will insist that the house act upon the agreement before it is taken up in the senate. Some talk is being made about sending the resolution to the committee on foreign relations instead of finance, which is dominated by stand-patters like Burrows and Smoot, but if the senate waits for the house this hardly can be done.

Democrats of both branches are delighted with the agreement. They stand ready to support it very generally and believe enough low tariff Republicans can be found in the house and possibly the senate to put it through. In the upper branch, however, it will be practically impossible to get the resolution to a vote at this session.

It would of course stand a better chance next winter or even in an extra session, which will be necessary if the president insists upon action at once. The Democrats have seized upon the point that although the agreement may not actually reduce the cost of living at once, it will operate powerfully if not conclusively to check a further increase of prices.

An unusual number of Republican representatives were at the White House yesterday, and while they were, as a rule, unwilling to say how they will vote on the ratification of the agreement, they did point out objections that would be offered.

It must be conceded that the free fish provisions, including as they do all forms of manufactured fish, except such as are canned in oil, will seriously menace the New England fisheries. Presumably they would, if enacted, drive the manufacture of fish out of the United States, as the preparation of fish for the market is almost wholly hand labor, which is cheaper in Canada than here. This fact must be admitted at the outset, and New England statesmen probably will divide on this question.

Wood pulp and white paper will not come in free unless Canadian provinces remove their restrictions. It has been said that they would not do this, hence American pulp and paper men need not be alarmed over this legislation, but the prospect of a free American market for Canadian pulp and paper is a very tempting one.

If New England should become convinced that through the operation of this treaty she would be in danger of losing her fisheries and her pulp and paper mills, she would fight the treaty to the last ditch. It is expected that she will, but it is by no means certain that all her representatives in congress will oppose the agreement.

Senators Lodge and Crane both decline to state their positions at present, as does Representative McCall of the ways and means committee. Almost all members of congress who find themselves in ticklish positions are silent.

FOSS MAY EMPLOY EXPERT ASSISTANTS

Resolve Authorizes Probe of State Departments

Boston, Jan. 28.—With one dissenting vote, the committee on ways and means of the house reported a resolve giving Governor Foss the authority requested by him to employ expert assistants to enable him to carry on an investigation of all state departments which receive appropriations from the state treasury. Representative White of Newton was the dissenting member of the committee.

The resolve reported follows: "Resolved, that the governor is hereby authorized to employ such persons as he may deem proper to make such investigation of any of the commissions, departments or institutions of the state as he believes necessary. For this purpose he may spend such sums as may be approved by the governor and council."

LAST TRIBUTE TO PHILLIPS

Public Funeral Services Over Remains of Murdered Novelist

New York, Jan. 28.—Last honors were paid to the memory of David Graham Phillips, the author who died as the result of bullet wounds from the pistol of Fitzhugh C. Goldsborough, an eccentric young musician who had a fancied grievance against the writer and who killed himself after he had shot Phillips.

After the holding of public funeral services in St. George's Episcopal church the body was placed temporarily in a vault. Archdeacon Nelson, assisted by Rev. Hugh Birkhead, rector of St. George's, officiated.

STORY NOT FABRICATED

Cummins Believes That Bribery Evidence in Lorimer Case Was True

Washington, Jan. 28.—His argument against the adoption of the committee resolution exonerating Senator Lorimer of Illinois from the charge of having procured his seat by corrupt means was resumed in the senate by Mr. Cummins of Iowa.

He declared it would have been impossible for the human mind to have fabricated such a story as that supplied to the Chicago Tribune by Representative White of the Illinois legislature without having it refuted by the facts.

PROTEST FROM GLOUCESTER

Fishery Port Condemns Proposed Reciprocity Treaty With Canada

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 28.—Strong resolutions condemning and protesting against the proposed reciprocity treaty with Canada were adopted at a special meeting of the municipal council.

Immediately after the meeting the resolutions were forwarded to President Taft, to Senators Lodge and Crane and to every congressman from Massachusetts, asking their combined help in the fight Gloucester will make against reciprocity.

Racing Doomed In California

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 28.—The doom of the racetrack in California was sounded when the senate passed Walker's anti-gambling bill. This measure was adopted by the house and probably will be signed by Governor Johnson on Monday.

MISS ARNOLD STILL MISSING

Letters Indicate That She May Have Been Kidnapped

TWO DEMANDS FOR RANSOM

Father of Young Woman Inclined to Believe That One Is a Case of Ordinary Blackmail—Believes Daughter Has Met With Foul Play—Offers Reward of $1000 For Information Leading to Her Discovery

New York, Jan. 28.—Lawyers of Francis R. Arnold, the wealthy perfumery importer, whose daughter Dorothy has been missing from her home since Dec. 12, admit that two letters demanding a ransom for the young woman have been received by Arnold within the last two days.

Garvan & Armstrong, the lawyers, are not inclined to regard the missives seriously. They declare that anyone holding Miss Arnold for a ransom would have communicated with her relatives weeks ago.

"Both of the letters are plainly from criminals," Arnold said. One of them is evidently from an ordinary blackmailer. I attach some importance to the other, for the man who wrote it seems to know something about what happened to my daughter. Both letters are postmarked New York city.

"I am still certain that my daughter has met with foul pay. She has either been kidnapped or murdered."

Stories are afloat that Miss Arnold was very friendly with a foreigner of excellent family, and it is known that when her private desk was searched, subsequent to her disappearance, a little bundle of letters was found, indicating that she had carried on for some time a clandestine correspondence with a man who is now abroad.

Miss Arnold is 25, strikingly good looking and well known socially in New York. Not one of her friends or relatives has seen or heard of her since her disappearance.

The family has searched in three cities, the hospitals, morgues and employment agencies, and the wireless has taken up the call for her to ships now on their way to Europe. Thousands of dollars have been spent in the search and her father has said that there is no limit within sanity to the amount he will pay for information. He is 74 and his health is breaking under the strain.

Arnold has offered a reward of $1000 for information leading to the discovery of his daughter. Circulars giving notice of the reward and bearing photographs and a description of the missing girl will be sent to the police of every town and city in this country, Canada and Mexico, as well as cities in England and continental Europe.

Dorothy Arnold walked out of Brentano's on the afternoon of Dec. 12 last with a copy of Emily Calvin Blake' "An Engaged Girl's Sketches" under her arm. A young woman friend greeted her casually as she came out of the store and that is the last seen of her by relatives or friends.

STANDARD OIL HITS BACK

Asks For $250,000 Damages Against Magazine and Writer

New York, Jan. 28.—The Standard Oil company brought suit here in the United States circuit court for $250,000 damages against the Broadway Publishing company, Inc., publishers of Hampton's Magazine, and Cleveland Moffat, the writer.

The current issue of the magazine contains an article in which it is alleged that subsidiaries of the Standard sell glucose to confectioners.

So far as it is recalled, the Standard Oil company has never brought suit before against any of the many publications that have attacked it.

MARRIAGE AND CONVERSION

Principal Causes of Disappearance of Jews From Italy

Rome, Jan. 28.—It is estimated that Italy has no more than 170,000 Jewish citizens. Forty years ago there were nearly twice as many. The decrease is said to be due to mixed marriages and conversion to the Christian faith.

Pisa used to be a sort of Jewish metropolis, supporting several Jewish academies and a great Jewish printing house, where the Talmud was published. This printing house has ceased printing Jewish literature because there is no demand.

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of it in Quincy But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.

Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed.

Not one so important to health.

It is the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.

Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.

Are just what overworked kidneys need.

They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Read the proof from a Quincy citizen.

Mrs. E. Burke, 143 Quincy street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent remedy for kidney trouble. I used them and the results were of the most satisfactory nature. Doan's Kidney Pills were procured at the Cox Drug Store and have my highest recommendation."

WOMAN PARTS WITH $60,000

Has Reason to Regret Faith In Her Husband

ASKS COURT FOR DIVORCE

Daughter of Late General Ewen, Who Inherited Close to $250,000, Married Bogus "Nobleman" Who Portrayed a Great Future For Them—Finds That He Has Served Time For Blackmail and Grand Larceny

New York, Jan. 28.—In an action brought before Supreme Court Justice Garretson, in Long Island City, for the annulment of her marriage to a man she believed to be a nobleman, Mrs. Louise Von Koenitz told a pathetic story of her blighted romance.

The action was brought on the grounds that her husband, "Baron" Boto Von Koenitz, was no nobleman at all, but actually had been in jail; that she had been trapped into marriage with Von Koenitz through fraud and deceit, and that the marriage would never have taken place had she known the true character of Von Koenitz and the story of his life.

The action was undefended for the reason that the whereabouts of the husband is not known. Mrs. Von Koenitz and the clerk at the state prison at Trenton, N. J., were the only witnesses.

In telling the story Mrs. Von Koenitz avoided going into detail further than led by her attorney and seemed to feel her humiliating position keenly. There also figured in the woman's testimony gifts of money aggregating about $60,000, which the bride made to her husband, who talked fascinatingly of his noble ancestry, his vast mining properties in Mexico and of the swath they would cut in the different European courts.

Mrs. Von Koenitz was one of three daugters of the late General John Ewen and, together with her sisters, Miss Caroline Ewen and Miss Eliza Ewen, inherited a large fortune upon the death of her father. It is said that the share of Mrs. Von Koenitz was close to $250,000.

The papers in the case state that Mrs. Voe Koenitz was married to Boto Von Koenitz in Jersey City on Nov. 28, 1909. It was stated in the complaint that for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to marry him, the defendant falsely represented that he was of noble and aristocratic lineage, a member of the noble family of Von Koenitz of Thuringa, Germany, with the title of baron.

He is said to have informed her that he was the owner of a castle in that place and that he was possessed of great wealth. It is further alleged that the defendant was a man of bad reputation and had been convicted of blackmail and confined in the Essex county jail in New Jersey for one year, from 1903 to 1904, and that he has also been convicted of the crime of grand larceny and confined in state prison in Trenton for two years, beginning in 1906.

It is also alleged that at the time of his marriage his picture was in the rogues' gallery of New Jersey, that he was not of noble ancestry, but, on the contrary, obtained his livelihood by objectionable means.

"OPIUM DEN" IN SHOW

Objections to Its Being Tolerated In Religious Exposition

Boston, Jan. 28.—Shall an "opium den" be one of the "sights of China?" is disturbing the missionary and religious circles of the city. For two hours yesterday afternoon the board of trustees listened to reasons why such a thing should not be tolerated in a religious exposition, such as the "World in Boston" is to be, and which is to be presented in April and May.

At the end of the session the board took the matter under advisement and will take definite action on the same at their meeting on next Friday.

WINS ON THIRD TRIAL

Child Plaintiff Awarded $5000 Damages In Suit For Assault

Boston, Jan. 28.—Bertha M. Powers, 14 years old, was awarded a verdict of $5000 by a jury in the superior court in her suit against Joseph L. Bergman for assault.

The assault was alleged to have been committed in November, 1901, when the child, then 5½ years old, was visiting Bergman's son, who was her playmate, at Bergman's house in this city.

The case has been tried three times. The first trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury and the second trial in a verdict for the defendant.

AN OMINOUS WARNING

Autoists Are Likely to Fare Badly If It Is Not Heeded

San Jose, Cal., Jan. 28.—"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth and a life for a life," is the inscription appearing on huge signboards along the mountain road between San Jose and Santa Cruz. It is intended as a warning to speeding automobilists.

A device of skull and crossbones makes the warning more vivid. It is said that the mountaineers and ranchers of the district have threatened to take the law into their own hands if the speeding nuisance is not abated.

TOM JOHNSON SERIOUSLY ILL

Friends of Ohio Democratic Leader Are Greatly Alarmed

Cleveland, Jan. 28.—Ex-Mayor Tom L. Johnson is reported to be dangerously ill at his home here. It is said he is suffering from Bright's disease. Members of the family decline to discuss the matter, but close friends of the famous Democrat are alarmed for their leader, who has been looked upon to again be the party's candidate for mayor.

He has appeared in public but few times in the past year and then he shocked those who saw him by his appearance of illness.

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE."

of prisons. He has invented a lock, I believe, that"—

"Let's have him."

The secretary ushered in an earnest looking man with long, wavy black hair. He was short and thin.

"I am Gustave Blickendolfenbach, the great inventor," said the visitor to the warden. "I have a lock for you to inkeep the prisoners mit." He bowed to the warden and rubbed his hands complacently.

"So I hear. Your lock can't be picked, eh?"

The inventor raised his hands in horror at the suggestion.

"Picked! Picked!" he ejaculated. "My lock picked? The whole vorld it haff tried it—Germany, France, England—and even the cleverest thieves in Naples. The whole vide vorld it all it haff not open without they the key haff."

"So I've heard, but still it might be picked at that."

"It is maybe I don't understand picked—you mean open mit not my key?"

"Yes; with a wire or"—

"A vire!" exclaimed the inventor. "My lock open—that I haff spend fourteen years to perfect? Nein. It is laughter, yas, but"—

Handler was growing impatient.

"It will be accepted only on the condition that it cannot be opened without a key," he pronounced.

The inventor drew himself up proudly. "Yaw, und I challenge the vorld," he cried confidently.

"Well, all the world's champions are in America, you know," answered the warden, "and when it comes to genius in mechanics most of them are in jail. We'll have it tried before noon."

The visitor took his precious lock from his pocket and laid it on the table in front of the warden, saying: "I keep the key. Now the vorld cannot my lock open."

"It looks good," commented Handler. "If you care to wait I'll have it tested."

"I vait. I lofe to see the expert frown und smile und give it up. It is my joy."

As the inventor went out to await the test George Doyle, a detective credited with a long list of important captures, entered the office and saluted Handler.

"Isn't Bill Avery to be let loose today?" queried the newcomer.

"Don't know. Is he?" returned the warden indifferently.

Doyle gazed at the other significantly.

"Yes," he said. "I hear he's very friendly with Jimmy Valentine. The way Valentine's lawyer is going after a new trial makes things look dangerous."

"What about the man you had make friends with Valentine in order to get him to talk about himself—to give himself away?" the warden asked shrewdly.

Doyle shrugged.

"Nothing to it. Valentine wouldn't get confidential with him, but if I could get Avery on my staff to work for me and squeal on Valentine I'd get him. I'd be able to keep him from getting a new trial."

Thus did the detective describe in his conversation a small part of the system which his fellow man hunters find of utility in serving their particular ends, whatever they may be—the "stool pigeon" system, which consists of forcing or persuading released criminals to spy on their companions and to convey to the police the information they procure.

Sometimes the detective uses the knowledge so gained for the purpose of arresting a fugitive, again for securing a division of ill gotten spoils, again for the purpose of obtaining witnesses who will find it policy to commit perjury at a trial, and so the underworld grows suspicious of its neighbors and finds danger lurking where friendship's smile is sought.

The warden resumed the conversation.

"I don't know about Avery's release," he said. "Oh, Smith," turning to his assistant, "where's the list?"

"On your desk."

"Oh, yes. Avery here?"

"He's waiting outside."

"Let's have him."

"He's a tough old boy, this Avery," commented Doyle, "but he's my one best chance in trying to get the goods on Valentine."

The secretary brought in Bill Avery, whose gray hair, ashen face and stooping figure indicated that prison fare was not rejuvenating, although there was a strange sharpness in his eyes, in his glance, that a long career of furtive watchfulness had developed.

"You're finally out, eh?" greeted the prison master. "You've done nine?"

"Eight years ten months, sir."

"Treated pretty well, weren't you?"

Avery gazed intently at Smith, then he replied to his questioner:

"You've never heard me complain, have you?"

"No, and it wouldn't have got you much."

"I saw that the first day in."

"Well, now what? Going to turn square?" Handler sneered as he spoke.

The released convict looked the warden squarely in the eyes.

"You know I am, sir."

Handler laughed uproariously.

"I know; they all say so. Oh, here's an old friend of yours, Avery." The speaker pointed to Doyle.

"I don't remember him," replied the old man after a searching suspicious inspection of the detective.

"You don't remember me—eh, Bill?" Doyle laughed.

Avery suddenly exclaimed:

"I got you now. You're Doyle—still a copper?"

"Still a copper, Bill."

"You ain't got anything on me to hold over me when I get out."

"That's true, Bill. Anyway, this time I'm your friend," said the detective in earnest manner.

Avery threw his head back.

DETECTIVE GEORGE DOYLE ENTERED THE OFFICE.

"My friend?" he exclaimed in astonishment.

The warden could barely suppress a grin.

"Yes; I think I know where I can get you a pretty good job," went on Doyle easygoingly.

"Nobody wants me," said Avery despondently.

"I think I can arrange it."

"A job in a laundry, eh?" snapped the ex-prisoner. "I've been a washwoman here."

"There are lots of jobs where you don't have to know a trade. Can't Bill sit down, warden?"

"Why, certainly," responded Handler.

Avery, voicing his thanks, seated himself at the warden's table.

Doyle came close to the old man.

"There's one thing you want to do, Bill, above everything else—keep out of bad company," he warned.

Avery hesitated. He glanced from the detective across to the warden.

"I'm getting out of bad company today," he replied briefly.

Doyle started forward.

"Yes, and it's a good thing you are, for you're getting away from Valentine."

"Valentine?"

"Yes," insisted Doyle. "It doesn't do you any good to know a man like that. I suppose you know he killed Cotton so he wouldn't have to divide the swag with him." The other shook his head decisively.

"I don't know anything about it."

The detective now spoke sharply.

"And what's he got against you? He sent out word that"—the questioner suddenly shifted—"what message did he give you to take out to—to"—

Avery drew back involuntarily.

"He didn't give me any message," he cried out in positive tones.

Then both the officials noticed that the ex-convict's eyes slowly drooped and became directed to the floor.

"I could do you a good turn—if you trailed along with me," suggested the detective.

The released criminal brushed aside the invitation. He rose stiffly from his chair.

"I'm on to you, Doyle. If you're to be my friend I know that I've got to be a stool pigeon, eh? Well, I'm old, and I don't know where I'm goin' when I leave here. But I'll take the river out there." pointing over his shoulder with his thumb, "for mine before I play that game. I tell you"—the old man's voice rose to an indignant pitch—"it's only fly guys like you, Doyle, that's too lazy or too ignorant to do their work themselves that has to have stool pigeons on your staff to do your work for you. Why, you couldn't nab a twelve-year-old 'dip' if you didn't have some poor nerve broken sucker of a 'stool' to go out ahead and make the job easy for you."

Both Doyle and the warden, enraged at the old man, hinged viciously at him to wreak vengeance upon him for his denunciation.

Y., has added much to the impressiveness of the meetings.

NEW SEWERAGE RULE.

The board asks the cities and towns in the district to adopt such ordinances or by-laws as may be necessary to secure the enforcement of the regulation.

BOSTON LATIN DEFEATED

Quincy High Boys Show Them a Thing or Two

Quincy High defeated the Boston Latin school team by a score of 19 to 17 in the high school gymnasium Friday afternoon.

Manning and Harmon were missed from the Quincy lineup, but their places were well taken care of by Trask and Sutermeister. The Chapman brothers and Trask played the best, and Fish was the best man on the Boston team. The first half ended with the score 14 to 10 in favor of the visitors, but a basket by H. Chapman soon brought the home team up a peg. Trask got another basket near the end of the game and shot five fouls out of six chances during the second half. The Boston team was unable to shoot a basket during the second half, but Fish got 3 out of 6 tries at goals from fouls.

FASHION SHOW.

Spokane will have its first fashion and style show March 29 and 30. Merhants of the city, large and small, will be in the show, given in honor of the opening of the spring season. A fund of several thousand dollars is being generously subscribed to by those interested, for advertising purposes, and an effort will be made to reach every resident of the Inland Empire. Local advertising will probably be done by hand parades and many of the stores will have orchestras. The merchants will get together shortly to discuss the final plans. All of the stores of the main streets will be in gala attire to greet not only people of the city, but thousands of the residents of the Inland Empire who come to the city to shop. The object of the show is to have all of the merchants put on the spring openings simultaneously so visitors can purchase all of their needs at the same time. Friendly rivalry will be rampant among the merchants to see who can put on the best display. One of the largest buildings in the city will be used for lectures and displays.

ROBERTS—DONCASTER.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Davison, 118 Sagamore street, Atlantic, on Saturday evening when two of their young friends began a new life. The contracting parties were Mr. H. Daniel Roberts and Miss Letha B. Doncaster, both of Boston.

The bride was most becomingly gowned in white silk, made with the hobble effect so popular in wedding gowns now, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Her bridesmaid was Miss Marion B. Smith of East Braintree and Mr. Simon B. Rideout of Boston, a lifelong friend of the groom, was best man.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. L. Roberts of East Braintree, brother of the groom.

After luncheon and a most merry evening, the happy couple were escorted to the station amid showers of confetti, and expressions of good-will, where they took the train for Forest Hills their future home.

EAST BRAINTREE.

Parker E. Wynot of Commercial street has filled his ice house.

Miss Anna Shea of West Quincy has been visiting Mrs. Annie T. Scollans of Hobart street.

Mr. ad Mrs. Charles E. Dexter of Hanover, formerly of East Braintree are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son born the 26th.

Mrs. Fred B. Lawrence of Commercial street has been confined to her bed for the past few days with the grip.

Morris Bloom, proprietor of the Boston Cash Market is having an addition built on to his store on Commercial street.

A social was held in the Jonas Perkins school hall Friday evening, Jan. 20, in the form of a dance. The hall was very attractively decorated in green and white. The music was furnished by Baldwins orchestra. A very pleasant evening was spent and at eleven o'clock the party was ended.

MISS GERTRUDE B. ALLEN.

It is our sad duty to chronicle the death of one of Braintree's finest characters this week. Gertrude Bartlett Allen, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Allen of 10 Crescent avenue was born June 27, 1886 in New Bedford. When she was quite young her parents came to South Braintree to live and this town has been her home ever since. She was educated in the public schools and graduated from the Braintree high school in the class of 1904 having been assigned the class part of historian Immediately after her graduation she entered the office of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., at Quincy Point where she has since been employed. About two years ago she had a severe attack of rheumatic fever which necessitated her absence from business for some months. Although always a frail girl she has been active and interested in church and social events and went to her office duties regularly until about a week ago when she was stricken with a severe case of grippe. Since then although receiving every attention from nurse physicians and the devoted members of her family she failed daily and Friday morning at 7.40 o'clock she passed away.

Gertrude was interested in the various church societies connected with the South Congregational church and was a faithful Sunday school attendant, being a member of Mrs. F. Eugene Dyer's class. She was a member of a small sewing club the associates of which being her immediate friends but aside from that, she found her pleasure in her home with her mother. She has many friends who sincerely mourn the loss of her pure sincere friendship and who extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family. Besides her parents she is survived by two brothers, Frank Clinton Allen, who is employed as freight and claim agent in the South station and John Edward Allen who is with the Williams, Kneeland shoe company of this town. The funeral will be held from her late home, Monday at two o'clock and the Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern, pastor of the Park Congregational church Worcester will conduct the services.

SOUTH BRAINTREE.

At the High school last Tuesday evening, a lecture was given by Dr. O. P. Gifford of Brookline, under the auspices of the Teachers' Association of Braintree. Each member had the privilege of inviting five friends, and many of the townspeople showed their interest and appreciation by accepting the invitations extended to them. Dr. Gifford spoke on the subject "Is Life Worth Living." He certainly could not have chosen a better one as the question "Is Life Worth Living" is at the present time, being asked more than any other. The points made by Dr. Gifford were in brief: Life is worth living if we make it so. To make it so we must be masters of our civilization, not its slaves. To become masters of our civilization we must have sound minds in sound bodies, that we may be able to work, to accomplish something, and to serve; that is, to help others and to enjoy our periods of recreation, and not as he put it "have buffalo-bugs on our brains during our summer vacation, because we had a fine parlor carpet in our city home. It is much better to be without a carpet than to be it's slave.' His entire lecture was spiced with bright anecdotes and apt remarks.

SPORTING NOTES.

Tate, who played centre on the B. L. S. Independent second team yesterday was chosen as the other all-interscholastic end by the sporting editors of the Boston papers. The difference in size of the two ends on the All interscholastic team is certainly very great, but we would trust "Bill" to hold up his end of the line with any of them.

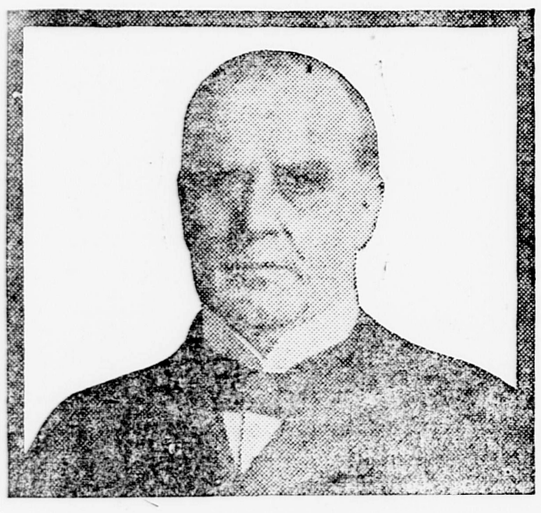
IN MEMORY OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY

Exercises Held on Anniversary Under Auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps

Addresses, Readings and Music at G. A. R. Hall



PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

Exercises appropriate to the memory of President William McKinley were held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Grand Army hall, in a most pleasing and able manner by Mrs. Anna J. Gould, patriotic instructor of Paul J. Revere, W. R. C., No. 103, assisted by her aids.

A large portrait of the late President was draped with the American flag, on the right of which was a vase containing 68 carnations representing his age. On the left was a vase containing ten carnations, one for each year since his untimely death.

The exercises opened with the reading of scriptures by acting chaplain Mrs. E. A. Penniman, which was followed by the reciting in unison of the Lord's Prayer, and a solo "Nearer my God to Thee" by Mrs. Belle Morton, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

An address followed by Thomas Ring, commander of Paul Revere Post, and a sketch of the life of McKinley by Mrs. E. E. Marnock, president of Paul J. Revere corps. Other short addresses were made by Past Commander George L. Phillips of Paul Revere Post, and W. F. Carman, commander of the United Spanish War Veterans. At the offertory one verse of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was sung. There were also readings by Mrs. Kate A. Blaisdell, past president of the corps, and Mrs. Mary E. Powers, and a solo "Lead kindly Light" by Mrs. Belle Morton.

Mrs. E. A. Penniman, past patriotic instructor, gave a beautiful tribute to the late President and the exercises closed with the singing of America.

The musical exercises were under the direction of Mrs. Alberta Hewson, chairman of the executive committee of the corps.

One or more meetings of the committee are being held each week, and a notable list of speakers has been secured, which is sure to make it an enthusiastic gathering. A general invitation is extended to the public, and it is hoped all parts of the city will be represented. The work of the Board of Trade is for the whole city, and a few men are giving freely of their time and means to advance Quincy. Those who would accomplish more should give them encouragement by attending this banquet and enrolling themselves as members. The Quincy Board of Trade should have 500 members, and with such a membership could secure many much needed improvements.

CALLS FOR TWO BATTLESHIPS

Private Shipyards Favored for Their Construction

The Navy bill as reported to the House on Saturday provides for two battleships of 27,000 tons each at $11,-825,408 each; two colliers at $1,000,-000 each; eight torpedo boat destroyers at $825,000, and four submarines at $500,000 each.

The bill increases the limit of cost of the battleship Florida, now being built at the New York navy yard, for hull and machinery, from $6,900,000 to $6,500,000. Because of the extra expense the bill repeals the provisions in last year's naval act, which authorized one battleship to be built in a navy yard.

The contract for the Florida's sister ship was let by contract well within the limit of cost, while the estimates for building the Florida, for all purposes the same ship, in the navy yard exceeded the limit of cost for hull and machinery by $1,500,000.

Both these ships are directed to be built under the eight-hour law restrictions. The committee recommends repeal of this requirement and also of the provision that not more than one of the battleships provided for in last year's naval act shall be built by the same contracting party.

The committee recommends that the collier authorized in the naval act of 1908, to be built in a Pacific coast navy yard, be constructed by private contract with a cost limit of $1,000,-000, against an estimated navy-yard cost of $1,800,000.

NEW AUTO CHEMICAL.

Last week Mayor Shea and Chief Williams went to Providence, R. I., to inspect the LaFrance auto combination fire wagons, and today they are inspecting some of the Knox machines that are in service about Boston. Mayor Shea says that he wants to give all bidders an opportunity to show up their apparatus, and that when the bid is awarded it will be for the piece of apparatus that will give the city the best for its money.

Y. M. C. A.

The mass meeting for older boys was held Sunday afternoon at 3.30. Rev. Edward A. Chase of Wollaston gave an inspiring address on the subject: "First things first." Illustrated songs were sung in unison by all the fellows.

YOUNG MAN ROBBED

Held Up Near His Home Saturday Night

One of the most daring hold-ups that has ever occurred in Quincy took place on High School avenue Saturday night, when Frank L. Miller was held up by two men and robbed of a diamond ring, $40 in money and a memorandum book.

It is thought that the hold up was done by two young men who had followed him from Boston, although he did not see the men until the robbery took place. The wind was howling and Mr. Miller was hurrying home having come from Boston on the 10.15 train. He had reached a point half way between the corner of Elm street and his home on High school avenue when two men suddenly came upon him. One of the men asked for a match, and before he had an opportunity to say a word the second man struck him a savage blow in the left eye, either with a black jack or sand bag.

The blow knocked him down and rendered him partially unconscious. A diamond ring was pulled from a finger on his left hand, at the same time one of the men with a knife ripped the side of his coat open, grabbed his money and ran.

The two men ran across Elm street and through Mechanic street. As they ran by the corner of Elm street a maid employed at Mr. Miller's home turned the corner into High School avenue. She saw the men and noticed that they were apparently young men, and that one wore a light overcoat and cap. She paid but little attention to the men, however, but kept on toward the house. On the opposite side of the street she saw Mr. Miller on his hands and knees trying to get onto his feet. She suposed that it was someone who had fallen down or a drunk, and paid no further attention to him. A few minutes later Mr. Miller crawled into the house with a big bunch over his eye. As soon as he had told what had happened, one of the family ran across the street to a neighbors and telephoned the police.

Sunday morning Officer Farrell found the memorandum book in Sheppards coal yard, which proved to be that taken from Mr. Miller. It is supposed that the two men got an inkling that he had money about him and followed him from Boston, and then followed him to the spot where he was held up. As stated above, the wind was blowing a gale, and Mr. Miller bent upon getting home was hurrying along and the wind prevented him from hearing anyone approaching from behind. It is believed that after robbing Mr. Miller the two men went back to the depot, and took the train for Boston. Mr. Miller is a salesman, unmarried and about 40 years of age.

This morning it was learned from Mr. Miller that he was playing pool in a pool room at the South end, Boston, Saturday night, and that he arrived in Quincy shortly after 9.30. He visited the Hancock market in City Square, and from there started to walk home via of Chestnut, Bigelow and Elm streets. It is thought that someone in the pool room must have seen his diamond ring and roll of money, and that they followed him to Quincy and then toward his home until the dark spot on High School avenue was reached, where he was struck down.

NEW TRACKS IN USE.

On Sunday the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. began to use the new elevated roadway between Neponset and Savin Hill a distance of two miles. By the change grade crossings have been abolished at Freeport street, Park street, Mill street, Freeport street again, one at Hamlin's crossing. The highest rise in the new grade is between 17 and 18 feet, the ascent from both ends being gradual. The new roadway on the Shawmut branch is not yet in use, but soon will be. When completed the main line will be a four-track road. Work has been going on steadily since August 1909.

WIFE GOES TO ASYLUM

Husband Also to be Treated at Sanitarium

The patrol auto was summoned to Wollaston Saturday night to take care of Dr. Carl Aursleff and his wife, both of whom had gone insane. It appears that Mrs. Aursleff has been in bad condition for some weeks and the doctor has been up night and day with her and had become thoroughly worn out so much so that he became slightly demented. Their condition became known to a Wollaston physician, who notified the police. The doctor was found sitting in a chair, his feet being held up in the air by his wife, who declared that something dire would happen if his feet touched the floor. When the officers entered the doctor ran out the rear door and made for the woods. He later came back however, and was taken care of.

Mrs. Aursleff was taken to the police station where she was kept until this morning, when she was examined and taken to an asylum. The physicians believe that the doctors trouble is due largely to overwrought nerves caused by the care of his wife, and that a good rest will bring him out all right. He will probably go to some sanitarium.

Dr. and Mrs. Aursleff have resided on the corner of Arlington street and Wilson avenue for a year or more. A year ago the doctor who was then a clerk, went to Europe where he completed his studies and received a diploma. He returned to Quincy last August, and put out a sign as a physician, and commenced practice. It is understood that the couple have no children.

—Another savings bank is proposed for Brockton. Perhaps with the idea that there can't be too much of a good thing for Massachusetts laws make all savings banks safer than a stocking as a place to deposit money. —Brockton Enterprise.

CLERK TO MAYOR SHEA

Miss Rita Lyons Selected as His Private Secretary

Mayor Shea, following out the idea of several other Massachusetts executives, that lady private secretaries are better than men, has appointed Miss Rita Lyons of West Quincy as executive clerk. Miss Lyons commenced her duties as such this morning.

NINETY-FIVE YEARS OLD.

Mrs. Ellen McGillicuddy one of the oldest women in Quincy passed away rather suddenly at her home 35 Sumner street Saturday, aged 95 years. Mrs. McGillicuddy was apparently as well as usual up to Friday night when she was taken ill. Her illness was not considered serious however until Saturday when it took a sudden turn for the worse.

Mrs. McGillicuddy was the widow of Bartholemew McGillicuddy and a native of county Kerry, Ireland. She came to America some sixty years ago and has resided in Quincy since that time. She leaves one son Eugene H. McGillicuddy who made his home with her.

Funeral services were held this morning at 9 o'clock from St. John's church and were largely attended. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, the Gregorian mass being sung by the regular church choir. The burial was at Randolph. The bearers were Patrick Kelliher, Dennis Ford, John Gearin and Michael Sullivan.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Lots of people believe in arbitration when other people's interests are at stake.

The Panama Canal either must be fortified or permitted to carry concealed weapons.

The Boston doctor who is breeding new animals would make a hit if he could breed a turkey all breastmeat.

Some institutions cause as much trouble as if they were the vermiform appendix of the financial system.

Senator Beveridge not only has some very decided convictions, but also the courage of them.

Mighty little difference between martial and marital troubles for a woman who marries a whole regiment.

Gov. elect Cruce, of Oklahoma, is as opposed to silk hats as he is to dress suits. We await with trepidation his verdict as to clean shirts.

The action of the United States in generously waiving the indemnity of $11,000,000 resulting from the Boxer uprising in China has borne good fruit. China has since regarded this country as her best friend, and has sought advice and guidance from us on matters affecting her international relations. At the present time the Chinese government is defraying the expenses of upwards of one hundred students every year in American universities. These students, as they graduate, return to China and are scattered among the different provinces of China for the purpose of gradually Americanizing the people and customs of that country.

MT. PLEASANT CAMP.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society acknowledges with thanks the sum of $83.20 received from the Knights of Columbus as the proceeds of the concert given by them for the benefit of camp Mt. Pleasant. The results of the sale of Red Cross Seals was very gratifying to the committee $252. being the amount realized. Over 10,000 seals were sold at the Quincy Post Office and the thanks of the society are due these women who gave of their time at this busiest season of the year and to all who bought and many who bought again for the sake of the cause.

In individual sales Dr. Maria Drew was most successful selling 3200 by her personal effort. Mrs. Faxon ordered 2000; Mrs. Charles A. Price came next with over 1100 to her credit. Mrs. Fenno, Mrs. Pinkham and Mrs. Murray had charge of the sales in Wollaston amounting to 6527 seals. Mrs. Whitcher in Atlantic disposed of another 1000, Mrs. Hunting through the banks and personally 1000. Mrs. Sheahan through stores 1296. Mrs. Dasha through stores and the post offices at the Point and Neck 916.Others assisting were Miss Gavin, Mrs. McLennan, Mrs. McCormick for Miss Gragg and Dr. Burke at City hall. The greatest appreciation is however expressed for the faithful work of Mrs. Abele who acted as chairman, sold seals, received returns each night for the P. O. and secured volunteer workers. Also to Miss Elizabeth Faxon who had charge of the supply station and gave time and attention to the distribution of the seals. Not only is the sum of money a great help to the camp but the co-operation of the people in recognizing the need, the willingness of business men in banks and stores to assist and the good feeling created by working together for a worthy object all these are really worth while.

Another evidence of good feeling toward Camp Mt. Pleasant was the gift of preserves to the camp at Christmas time by Mr. Charles Wilson.

YOUR SHARE.

There's a great deal of love on this earth.
Are you getting your share?
There are laughter and music and mirth
Are you getting your share?
There are joys here a-plenty
For three-score or twenty;
The world's full of blisses,
Like kind deeds and kisses,
And sunshine and roses to spare;
But tell me today,
As you travel your way,
Are you getting your share?

There are great deeds to do on this earth.
Are you doing your share?
There are tasks that your best are all worth.
Are you doing your share?
There are kind words to say,
Whether young man or gray;
And kind deeds to do,
O, the world looks to you
To lessen the burdens of care;
But tell me today,
As you travel your way,
Are you doing your share?

THE DRINK CALLED COFFEE.

Here Is the Way They Made It In the Seventeenth Century.

There are in existence in Great Britain a few copies of an ancient cookbook, published in 1662, that gives what is perhaps the first English recipe for coffee. The recipe reads:

"To make the drink that is now much used, called coffee.

"The coffee berries are to be bought at any Druggist, about seven shillings the pound. Take what quantity you please, and over a charcoal fire, in an old frying pan, keep them always stirring until they be quite black, and when you crack one with your teeth that it is black within as it is without, yet if you exceed, then do you waste the Oyl, and if less, then will it not deliver its Oyl, and if you should continue fire till it be white it will then make no coffee, but only give you its salt. Beat and force through a lawn sieve.

"Take clear water and boil one-third of it away, and it is fit for use. Take one quart of this prepared water, put in it one ounce of your prepared coffee and boil it gently one hour, and it is fit for your use; drink one-quarter of a pint as hot as you can sip it. It doth abate the fury and sharpness of the Acrimony, which is the gender of the Diseases called Cronical."

—Says the Journal-Transcript of Franklin, N. H.:"One thing is essential to good government, and that is support by the people. It is very easy to find fault and much more easy to see mistakes after they are committed than it is to foresee them. Too often we forget this and tell what we would have done in certain circumstances, when the truth is that we probably would not have done as well as did those whom we criticise. Doing for the public ought to be considered not only a duty, but a pleasure, but we are too apt to make it a burden by our complaining. Let us 'Forget it' in the future and give support to those who are willing to put in time and effort, and frequently money, for the good of the community."

WOOD FROM HISTORIC TREE

Elm Planted by Quincy President in White House Grounds

John Quincy Adams of Quincy, sixth President of the United States, is credited with planting an American elm in the White House grounds during his Presidency. A piece of one of the branches of this elm has been furnished to the executive committee of the Southern Commercial Congress by Col. Spencer Cosby, U. S. A., in charge of public buildings and grounds. From this fragment of an historic tree will be made the handle of the gavel to be used by the chairman of the Southern Commercial congress at its meeting in Atlanta, Mar. 8, 9 and 10.

The head of the gavel will be made up of sixteen pieces of wood, each piece representing the forest wealth of one of the sixteen Southern States, united in the work of the Southern Commercial Congress. These contributions of wood have come in every case from the Commissioner of Agriculture of each State, and are duly attested.

North Carolina made the first contribution, sending long leaf pine as her representative wood. Georgia, Texas and South Carolina have also contributed long leaf pine. Kentucky and West Virginia have sent oak; Maryland, chestnut, Alabama, persimmon; Mississippi, magnolia, etc. The contribution of wood from the White House is significant, for it will unite the Southern States, the Nation's Capital and the memory of the great New England President in a gavel whose raps are expected to lead to a new union of the South along business lines for the purpose of building a greater nation through a greater South.

PROTESTS FROM PEOPLE

Ecuador May Not Lease Galapagos Islands to United States

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 30.—The opposition of the people to the proposed lease of the Galapagos Islands to the United States has resulted in the most serious demonstrations of ill-feeling against everything American seen here in many years.

Yesterday an immense crowd, numbering not less than 10,000 persons, headed by Ignacio Robles, marched to the government palace for the purpose of protesting to President Alfaro.

Troops with loaded rifles prevented the crowds from approaching, and only Robles was received by the president, as the people's delegate.

After a lengthy interview, the president said that in view of the manifest opposition, the government would desist in its proposal to negotiate the lease.

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 30.—To prove to the shoe manufacturers of the country that shoes can be profitably manufactured under wages established by the unions, the executive board of the United Shoe Workers of America, at a meeting here, voted to establish a model factory.

This factory, to be operated by the national organization of the union, will probably be located in this city and will be complete in every detail and will manufacture shoes for the market from start to finish.

In addition to voting on the establishment of the model factory the board also took the first steps looking toward the adoption of a union stamp such as is in use by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

NO MORE STANDING ROOM

Theatregoers Must Sit In New York Playhouses Hereafter

New York, Jan. 30.—There will be no more standing room in New York theatres. Theatrical managers were notified by Fire Commissioner Waldo that the prevalent practice of allowing patrons to stand in the passageways back of the seats was as much a violation of the law as the prohibited standing in aisles.

Commissioner Waldo bases the ruling on a decision by the supreme court in the case of the fire commissioner against the Dewey theatre, which held it unlawful to permit patrons of the theatre to stand in any part of the house whatever during a performance.

M'CALL FATHER OF NEW BILL

Chosen by the President to Steer Reciprocity Measure

PAYNE BALKS AT PROPOSAL

Committee Expected to Make Early Report, to the Disappointment of Those Who Wish to Propose Modifications of Agreement With Canada—Taft's Determination to Secure Action May Lead to Extra Session

Washington, Jan. 30.—Representative McCall of Massachusetts has become the author of the administration bill in the house embodying the reciprocity agreement between this country and the Dominion of Canada. In his bill McCall incorporated the list of goods upon which the duty is reduced or removed.

In presenting his bill McCall assumes the position of defender of the reciprocity treaty. Upon him will fall largly the responsibility of steering this measure through the house.

Chairman Payne of the house ways and means committee, for some reason so far unexplained, refused to become the sponsor for the bill, and the president thereupon chose McCall to present the agreement to the house in form for action.

Mr. McCall said he doubted if the committee would give extended hearings upon the bill. He said the committee was prepared to make a report without this delay. This has chagrined some of the congressmen who wanted to propose modifications of the agreement.

Among them is Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, who has asked for a hearing to present argument in favor of protection for the Massachusetts fishing interests. Gardner says he has been unable to get such a hearing and he does not know whether or not he will appear before the committee.

William L. Glavin of Boston, representing the interests of the woolen importers of that city, is in Washington, sizing up the situation with regard to the effect of the reciprocity agreement.

President Taft indicates that he is not worrying about the fate of the agreement. In his opinion it is now up to the people of the United States to decide for themselves whether they want it or not. He declares he has advocated other measures which the people did not favor and he will bow to their will, whichever way they should decide. The president is anxiously watching the press of the country to ascertain the sentiment for or against the measure.

The impression has been strengthened that President Taft's determination to secure action upon the reciprocity measure at this session is such that he will resort to an extra session if it becomes necessary, to bring the matter to final consideration in both houses of congress.

If defeat meets the measure, it is expected in the senate. The Democrats in the house, after a fairly careful poll by the leading members of the minority, are apparently disposed to accept the treaty and to support it in debate and with their votes.

Mr. McCall has been the subject of some speculation because he comes from a state that has complained bitterly of the free fish provisions in the agreement.

The McCall bill, after indicating the duties that are to be levied upon Canadian products, provides that these shall become effective as soon as the president ascertains and issues a proclamation showing Canada is levying similar duties upon American products. The free importation of certain articles is to become operative as soon as the president becomes satisfied that Canada is making similar concessions to the United States.

COWBOYS OF SPAIN.

Splendid Horsemen, but They Use Their Spurs Without Mercy.

The perfection of Spanish horsemanship is to be seen among the vaqueros, ganaderos and garrochistas, by which various names the mounted herdsmen of the Andalusian plains are known—a brief, what we should call a cowboy. Every farm seems to maintain a large number of these, for each herd, flock or drove has its own herdsman, cattherd or swineherd, as the case may be. The vaqueros are a fine looking lot of men. Tall, thin, light and closely made, they look ideal horsemen, as, in point of fact, they are, though their mounts are poor.

The vaquero rides very high on a huge saddle, with a long stirrup and straight leg, using a single rein and a very heavy curb, but he has such beautiful hands that, although using this barbarous bit, he never cuts his horse's mouth about. It is different with the animal's sides, however, for he uses his spurs without mercy, and the white horses—of which there are a large number—all have ominous red stains behind the girths.

All the herdsmen who look after cattle carry a long lance, called a garrocha, of thick and heavy wood, which, except when standing still, they always carry "in rest" and not "at the carry," presumably on account of its great length and possibly its weight. With this weapon, in the use of which he acquires amazing dexterity, the garrochista is able to control the most unruly brutes in the herd, not excepting the savage fighting bull.—Wide World Magazine.

Rev. Dr. Hardy preached Sunday morning to a large congregation, his subject being "The secret of a happy life." To the unhappy he recommended that they make new highways in the mind; right thinking was the highway to Zion. It was an awful thing to make wrong highways. Every good thought is a challenge to a bad thought. The valleys of weeping he would make places with springs of new life. Make the desert a garden. From strength to strength.

LAUNCH OF THE SANTAKY

Steamer on New Lines to Run to Nantucket

The passenger and freight steamer "Sankaty," built for the New Bedford Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Steamboat Co., will be launched at the Fore River yards Thursday noon at 12.30. The launching will be a private one, the only guests outside of the naval officials at the yard, being a party of friends of the steamboat company, who will come from New Bedford on a special train.

The new vessel is named for the highest headland at the eastern end of the island of Nantucket, and her sponsor will be Miss Elizabeth Hathaway of New Bedford.

The "Sankaty" has been built to run between New Bedford, Wood's Hole, Oak Bluffs and Nantucket in conjunction with train service at the two first named places, and while the "Sankaty" will be in service all the year around she is being constructed principally to keep open, during the rough and boisterous winter months, communication between New Bedford and Nantucket, and for this reason special care has been taken in the design to obtain a form of boat suitable for the rough weather that will be encountered and yet be graceful in appearance and easily driven. The present fleet of the New Bedford Martha's Vineyard & Nantucket Steamboat Co., consists of four side-wheeler steamers, but in view of the winter service for which the Sankaty has been designed and the fact that the government has already deepened the channel at New Bedford it was considered advisable to design the new vessel for single screw propulsion.

The "Sankaty" is a single screw steamer built to the highest class of the American Bureau of Shipping Rules and is 195 ft. long overall, 31 ft. 6 in. beam at waterline, with the sides of vessel gracefully flaring out to a breadth of 38 ft. 2 in. over guards having a depth of 12ft. 6in. to main deck and when fully laden will not exceed 9ft. 6 in. draft. The machinery consists of a tripie expansion engine with cylinders 16in. by 25in. by 42in. by 27in. stroke turning an 8ft. 0in. diameter cast iron four bladed propeller at 150 revolutions per minute. Steam is supplied from four Almy boilers having a total grate surface of 161.5 sq. ft. and a total heating surface of 6212 sq. ft. which will give an estimated sea speed of between 14 and 15 statute miles per hour. Special precautions have been adopted in the design against loss of the vessel by collision or foundering and for the safety of passengers from fire etc., the boat being divided longitudinally into 7 watertight compartments.

The completion of this boat is now being rapidly pushed by the shipbuilders, and early delivery is expected so that the "Sankaty" may be on her station early next summer.

COLOR BLINDNESS.

The Incident That Opened John Dalton's Eyes to His Affliction.

John Dalton, the famous English chemist and natural philosopher, without whose discovery of the laws of chemical combination chemistry as an exact science could hardly exist, was wholly color blind. His knowledge of the fact came about by a happening of the sort which we call chance. On his mother's birthday, when he was a man of twenty-six, he took her a pair of stockings which he had seen in a shop window, labeled "Silk, the newest fashion."

"Thee has bought me a pair of grand hose, John," said the mother, "but what made thee fancy such a bright color? Why, I can never show myself at meeting in them."

John was much disconcerted, but he told her that he considered the stockings to be of a very proper go to meeting color, as they were a dark bluish drab.

"Why, they're as red as a cherry, John," was her astonished reply.

Neither he nor his brother Jonathan could see anything but drab in the stockings, and they rested in the belief that the good wife's eyes were out of order until she, having consulted various neighbors, returned with the verdict, "Varra fine stuff, but uncommon scarlety."

The consequence was that John Dalton became the first to direct the attention of the scientific world to the subject of color blindness.

Agriculture.

No other human occupation opens so wide a field for the profitable and agreeable combination of labor with cultivated thought as agriculture. Ere long the most valuable of all arts will be the art of deriving a comfortable subsistence from the smallest area of land.—Abraham Lincoln.

A CIVIC CONSCIENCE

Subject of Henry Sterling at Braintree Forum

Although the audience was somewhat smaller than last Sunday, there was a good attendance yesterday afternoon at Braintree People's Forum at All Souls' church. It was the last meeting of the series and was addressed by Henry Sterling who had for his theme, "A Civic Conscience."

His argument was that while our individual consciences may be keen, tender and awake to our shortcomings, our civic consciences may be dead or at least blind so that we cannot or will not see the wrong conditions existing in great corporations, unjust laws and the many problems incident to our modern social and industrial life.

Mr. Sterling is a good talker with a somewhat different style than the other speakers who have appeared at the forum. He is a trade unions leader and a man who has gained his knowledge of life at first hand. He spoke of the duty of all people who have an awakening of their civic consciences as being clear and plain, viz.: that they should acquaint themselves with great questions, harmful conditions or existing evils and lend their support to the study of such questions and the remedying of such evils. He spoke of the labor laws of the several states, the woes of the unemployed, the long hours of labor especially for women and children and the fight to pass a bill which would compensate laborers for injuries received.

That Mr. Sterling's hearers did not fully agree with some of his statements was evidenced by the many leading questions put to him by some of his audience, several of which queries he answered at considerable length. Rev. D. Roy Freeman read a statement of the finances of the various meetings and it was voted to devote the surplus towards a fund to defray the expenses of the series next season. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Freeman by the assemblage in acknowledgment of the energy and effort that he has expended to make these meetings attain the success and favorable mention that they have enjoyed.

CORPORATIONS.

The reason why neither the enactment of legislation nor its enforcement has been successful in exterminating the so called trusts or even to affect wages is because as an effective industrial agency to wield the energies of mankind the corporate form, beyond any other form, is the most effective yet discovered. The mistake is in the point of view. Approximately one-third of the wealth of the country is in corporate form. It is the wealth of the people. One way to view this domain, one that has achieved some popularity, is that it is the enemy's country and should be destroyed. The other—and, as I maintain, the just and reasonable—way is to view it as a rich field, a new field that should be opened to every citizen.—Judge Grosscup.

The wide projecting cornices with large brackets give an individuality to the house which is not possible in the old colonial design, and the expense is not any more than for the plain looking residence. There is a basement under the entire house. Size of house is thirty-five feet wide and twenty-seven feet six inches deep. First story nine feet six inches high and second nine feet. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $4,750.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 831 for $30.

MISSION WORK AT DEVIL'S LAKE

Rev. A. E. Clattenburg, formerly of Wollaston, finds Devil's lake a cold place. In a recent letter to Archdeacon Babcock he states that the temperature is frequently between 25 and 30 below zero. Contrasted with the heat of summer it would seem as though the climate would be trying, but he says: "The 30 degrees below zero is not as cold as one might imagine. With ears and face protected it is grand. One's lungs seem to rejoice. With the thermometer at 30 above zero it really seems like summer." Mr. Clattenburg has recently had two calls to return East but he has decided to remain in North Dakota at present. He sends regards to all his friends in the East. His work in Montana is meeting with success.

WHAT IS BEST.

It's wiser being good than bad;
It's safer being meek than fierce:
It's fitter being sane than mad.
My own hope is a sun will pierce
The thickest cloud earth ever stretched;
That after last returns the first,
Though a wide compass round be fetched;
That what began best can't end worst,
Not what God blessed once prove accurst.
—Robert Browning.

NED M'LEAN HAS FAMOUS JEWEL

Purchases the Hope Diamond For His Wife

COST HIM OVER $300,000

Wonderful Blue Stone, Which Has Always Had an Evil Quality Reputed to It, Will Be Strongly Guarded Day and Night—Was Among Crown Jewels of France Until Revolution in 1792

Washington, Jan. 30.—The famous Hope diamond was sold here to Ned McLean, son of John R. McLean, for over $300,000. The sale was negotiated at McLean's residence by Pierre Cartiere of New York, American representative of the firm of Cartiere Freres of Paris.

William Schindle, a former secret service man, has been engaged to guard the stone. He, in turn, will be guarded by Leo Costello and Simeon Blake, private detectives. The stone will be kept at the McLean mansion during the day, and each night will be deposited in a safe deposit vault.

In the event that Mrs. McLean wears the gem at balls and receptions, arrangements have been made to keep the safe deposit building open until after the function, that the stone may be safely stored away. A special automobile has been purchased to convey the guards to and from the house to the trust company's building.

The wife of the latest purchaser of the famous gem was formerly Evelyn Walsh. She is the daughter of John R. Walsh, millionaire Colorado mining man. Her young son has a gold cradle.

The diamond was brought to this country two months ago, the Cartieres having bought it from a syndicate. This syndicate had bought it from another syndicate that purchased the stone from Lord Francis Hope two years ago.

This is the jewel that Miss May Yohe wore when she was the wife of Lord Francis. It is a wonderful diamond, as large in its greatest periphery as a good-sized horse chestnut, and weighs 44½ carats. It is distinguished from all other diamonds, being exquisitely blue in color.

The diamond will be worn by Mrs. McLean as a head ornament arranged in a bandeau, the large stone being placed immediately in front, with other diamonds of lesser size studding the setting bands. It is cut in triangular form.

The Hope diamond was brought from India in the seventeenth century by the noted traveler, Tavernier, and sold to Louis XIV, King of France, who had it cut to suit his taste. It remained among the crown jewels of France until the revolution in 1792, then was sold to Hope, who was at that time the foremost banker of England, and it remained in the Hope family until sold by Lord Francis. It then become the property of Abdul Hamid, the deposed Sultan of Turkey, who is said to have paid $400,000 for it.

Marie Antoinette wore the Hope diamond, and there has always been an evil quality reputed to it by which sooner or later it brings ill luck to those who own or wear it.

Venerable Prelate Has Long Been Suffering From Heart Failure

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—Most Rev. Patrick J. Ryan, archbishop of Philadelphia, and one of the best known Roman Catholic prelates in the United States, is dying at his home in this city.

SENTENCED BY HIS WIFE

Woman Takes Judge's Place In Dealing With Drunken Husband

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Nathan Kirkwood sentenced her husband to one year in the house of correction. The woman appeared against her husband in the Manayhunk police court, which is presided over by Magistrate Grelis.

After hearing the testimony the magistrate called Mrs. Kirkwood to the bench and informed her that she would have to be the judge as to the length of time her husband would remain in jail.

"You go to the house of correction for one year," Mrs. Kirkwood snapped at her husband without a second's hesitation. Kirkwood pleaded with the magistrate, but the pleading only brought forth the answer that the sentence was just and would stand.

According to Mrs. Kirkwood, her husband imbibed too freely and sold all the shoes in the house in order to get money with which to purchase liquor.

MRS. SCHENK RELEASED

Husband Is to Seek Divorce and She Plans a Counter Suit

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, wife of John O. Schenk, whom she was charged with attempting to poison, was released on her own recognizance by Judge Jordan in the criminal court, the bail being left at $10,000.

A few minutes before she had been served with papers in a divorce action filed by her husband.

A counter suit for divorce is being prepared by Mrs. Schenk's counsel and the papers, it is said, will be served this week.

Since Schenk neglected to announce he would not be responsible for the debts contracted by his wife it is held that he will be called upon to pay the costs of the late trial, about $100,000.

KING GEORGE WILL PRESS LIBEL CHARGE

To End Rumors That He Once Had Morganatic Wife

London, Jan. 30.—The News of the World says King George's advisers have instituted criminal libel proceedings, with the object of ending once for all rumors which have been freely circulated for years that the king, when Prince of Wales, was morganatically married to a daughter of an admiral at Malta. The defendant in the case is Edward F. Mylius, who is said to be connected with The Liberator, published in Paris.

In the ordinary way the case would be tried in the central criminal court, but on application of the crown it will be brought up in the high courts Wednesday before Lord Chief Justice Alverstone and a special jury.

Practically all the London papers publish stories on the intention of the king's advisers to carry the case to the courts on the charge of criminal libel.

AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS

Irish Party Says Contributions Are More Than Ever Necessary

Dublin, Jan. 30.—The annual appeal of the trustees of the Irish party for campaign funds, which has just been issued, says that the recent elections and the fact that the party had to fight not only the powerful Unionist party, but also Irish factionists, strained its financial resources to the uttermost.

The election, it continues, were the most expensive for thirty years, and the cost was mainly defrayed by the ever generous kinsmen in America, and concludes: "Now that victory is within sight it is more than ever necessary for all the friends of Ireland to support the cause."

EXILED RULER LACKS FUNDS

Manuel Is Reduced to a Poverty Stricken Condition

PORTUGAL GRANTS A PENSION

Heeds British Government's Representation That Deposed King Has Means Insufficient For Personal Needs and Grants Pension of $3300 a Month—Settlement of Heavy Debts In Portugal Is Promised

Lisbon, Jan. 30.—The Diario de Noticias announces that the government has decided to pay a monthly pension of $3300 to the deposed King Manuel. A check for the months of October, November and December have already been sent to the former ruler of Portugal.

Manuel II, the exiled King of Portugal, is now living with the queen mother, Amelie, at Wood Norton, Faversham, Eng., where he was obliged to accept the hospitality of the Duke of Orleans.

He reached there last October from Gibraltar, where he had been obliged to seek British protection after being driven out of Portugal.

Since his arrival in England there have been many reports of the poverty stricken condition of the former sovereign, whose debts in Portugal alone are estimated at more than $300,000.

The importunities of creditors have been strong, and it was understood at one time that the new government of Portugal had determined to liquidate those legally incurred.

Concerning the property in Portugal owned personally by Manuel and others of the royal family, a decree issued a few months ago promised that a settlement would be made as soon as possible and that the legal rights of the exiles of the royal family would be respected.

Recently it has been said that the British government had intervened successfully with Portugal on behalf of the depleted purse of the deposed king. Representatives from the foreign office at London set forth that the exiled monarch was possessed of means insufficient for his personal needs.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine"

Novelized by FREDERICK R. TOOMBS From the Great Play by PAUL ARMSTRONG

JIMMY VALENTINE, WARDEN HANDLER AND ROSE LANE.

CHAPTER II.

With an agility surprisingly in contrast with his former decrepit attitude, the intended victim seized his chair and raised it threateningly over his head. The two officers balked. Doyle, regaining a calm demeanor, through the excellent self control which had become one of his valuable assets in his business, spoke easily.

"So you don't want a friend, old fellow?"

Avery lowered the chair.

"No," he snorted, "not any friends that are coppers. Thieves are bad enough."

The point of the reply did not escape Doyle.

"Well," he responded angrily, "you have got me for an enemy all the rest of your worthless life. You'd better come to see me once a month for fear I grab you by mistake—on suspicion."

"To —— with you!" snarled Avery, turning away and facing the warden. "I've got the regular state allowance for released prisoners comin' to me, ain't I?"

"Yes," answered Handler, "and you take it and get out of here, you crook! Here, sign this" (he showed him a paper), "if you can write. If you can't, why, make your mark." The warden handed over a bill.

The departing man scanned the greenback depreciatingly.

"Five dollars," he cried, "and this suit of clothes that a country constable could see the Sing Sing tag on in the night! Pretty good for eight years and ten months' work, eh? And you guys are my friends! For God's sake, let me get out of here, where there are men who don't live on the mistakes of some one else." He wheeled toward the door and disappeared.

"There's one more we've got to keep track of," commented Doyle.

"He'll be at work in a week," said Handler laconically.

"Yes, and I'll nail him and give him back to you."

"I don't want him," the warden put in hastily. "I just might make it tough for him if he was sent back. I thought he had come to his senses and would help you against Valentine, but he's just a plain fool."

MRS. WEBSTER AND MRS. MOORE OF THE GATE OF HOPE SOCIETY.

"And all alike—all blaming us for their fall." The detective seated himself as he spoke. "He can't work now; he's too old. The game as he knew it was the yegg game."

Handler also had resumed his seat, and he leaned over his desk and said significantly: "So you're afraid Valentine will get a new trial, eh? There's some class to Valentine. Have a smoke." The prison master held out a box of perfectos, from which Doyle gratefully extracted a weed.

"Thanks," mumbled the detective. "This Valentine is the only high class crook I ever knew that I couldn't reach and put away for keeps. There's something of a mystery about him. He'd get away with the Raffles game in high society in a walk. The swell dames would go daffy over his good looks and his today manners and his pleasing voice. Yet he has trailed along with the toughest gang in the business." Doyle paused, then said, "And yet he says he is innocent, I suppose."

"Yes," put in Handler, leaning comfortably in his chair. "Said so last time I talked with him. This prison is killing him. He doesn't like it. He can't stand it. His nerves will stick out through his skin if they jump much more."

"He's the one fellow I think this life would cure. He's a wonder."

"At safes, you mean," was Handler's sarcastic rejoinder.

Little did the warden and the detective realize as they sat and schemed to bring about the further and complete ruin of Jimmy Valentine that "there's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will," and this influence is not denied to those who languish forlorn and hopeless in prison cells.

Little did they know that it might be Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, who was to teach them that the soul of a man is an unquenchable spark that not even years of oppression and degradation can lastingly dim when the spirit wills that they shall not.

And just now there came a knocking at the warden's door that portended much for No. 1289.

The warden's secretary went to the door opening from the office into a waiting room where visitors were received. He returned to announce, "Some members of the Gate of Hope society, and they have the lieutenant governor and his niece with them."

"The lieutenant governor?" ejaculated Handler. "Fay."

"Yes."

"What's the Gate of Hope?" asked Doyle.

"A gang of women tryin' to release from prison convicts they believe are innocent," said the warden.

The detective smiled.

At Handler's order Smith summoned the callers, Doyle making his exit.

"The lieutenant governor," pondered Handler. "I wonder if there's any leak about those contracts for supplies."

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster of the society, middle aged women of pleasing appearance, came in, followed by Rose Lane, the lieutenant governor's niece, and that official himself. Miss Lane, a young girl of unmistakable charm and beauty, held close to her uncle's side.

"Mr. Handler," spoke Mrs. Webster, "we come today with a famous humanitarian. Lieutenant Governor Fay," she pronounced, inclining toward that official.

"Governor," said the warden, bowing. The lieutenant governor shook Handler's hand and presented his niece. The party seated themselves, facing the warden.

"We have come here today," said Mrs. Moore, "to again ask that men be not forced to make confessions while imprisoned here that may be used against them when they leave here. We understand that through the pressure that can be brought to bear on the inmates in these institutions they can be made willing to confess to crimes they never committed."

"What do you mean?" queried Handler.

"Oh, we understand that by depriving prisoners of their proper allowance of food and of small privileges they are allowed, and by bullying conduct on the part of the men in charge of them the inmates can be led to make false confessions involving themselves or others. This information is used against the men after they are released as well as against men who are at large whom the police desire to incriminate."

"No one is ever forced to confess anything here, madam," protested Handler.

"But I know"—

"Pardon me, Mrs. Moore," interrupted the lieutenant governor, rising. "I do not think that in your zeal you realize what you are saying." He addressed the warden. "It seems, however, that these well meaning ladies have evidence that a certain man here did confess some offense to a—a"—

"To a stool," commented Handler. "Am I responsible for the detectives who have men working inside the prison for them?"

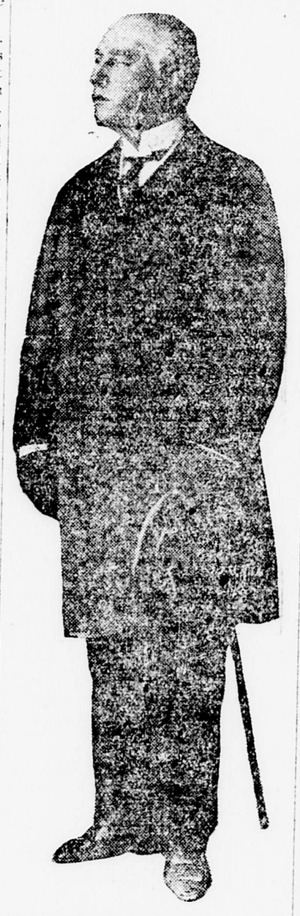
"By a 'stool' you mean"—

"A stool pigeon, a decoy. They win the confidence of prisoners and tell what they learn to the detectives."

Mrs. Moore here went on to state that in Sing Sing and in all prisons were confined many innocent men and that in any event released men should be encouraged to live honestly, should be given a chance. They ought not to be pursued and hounded into being spies by detectives anxious to make a record for securing convictions regardless of the truth of the testimony. One reason the woman advanced for her stand was that a man who became a spy or decoy must associate continually with men and women of questionable character, thus rendering it impossible to secure or much less remain in honest employment.

"Bosh!" exclaimed Handler as she ceased. "These folks we get don't want to live straight, won't live straight, can't live straight when they get on the outside. First, they're all lazy; second, most of them are insane.

"What would you call a man," continued the warden, "who does something the law forbids, does it whenever the opportunity offers without a chance of gain? What do you call a man who does a thing for the love of it?"



LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR FAY WAS ANNOUNCED.

"An artist," answered Mrs. Webster.

"Artist! Then I've got a lot of them," laughed Handler sarcastically. "Well, to me they are insane."

To Rose Lane the adventure was extremely interesting. Finally succeeding in gaining her uncle's consent to her accompanying him on a visit to the great prison, she was now seeing a little section of the darker side of life which appealed strongly to her imaginative nature. Her cheeks flushed with the excitement of the occasion, this voyage into this famous tomb of living dead men.

As the warden finished she exclaimed, "I once had an experience with a burglar, and"—

"Did he take your jewels?" asked Mrs. Moore sympathetically.

"No. I was in the parlor car in daylight. I was the only person in the car, and this man walked up and accosted me. I reached for the bell for the porter. He struck my wrist. Then he sat on the arm of my chair. He wanted to talk to me, he said. I scarcely knew what to do when a younger man, evidently a gentleman, walked in from the smoking compartment and, taking the man by the arm, led him away."

"How do you know the man was a burglar?" asked the lieutenant governor.

"Listen. I had no more than got my breath when the man came back. He threw his arms about my shoulders and again sat on the chair arm. When I reached for the bell he struck my arm. I screamed. The gentleman who had taken him away before ran into the car, and they fought. I was petrified with fright. The gentleman was much the smaller, and it seemed he would surely be killed when suddenly by some trick he sent the man crashing through the Pullman window. I read in the paper the next day that a famous burglar was found with his skull fractured near the tracks."

"HE WAS TALL AND HAD BLOND HAIR."

A strange light came into Handler's eyes. Was it possible, he thought, that so strange a coincidence—

"Did that occur in this state?" he asked quickly.

"Yes," between Buffalo and Rochester two years ago in June."

The warden compressed his lips firmly.

"Was the dead burglar's name Cotton?" he interrogated earnestly.

"Yes; ,that's what the papers said. Did you know him?"

"Had him here for five years once. Odd, but we heard he was killed trying to get on a moving train. And, by the way, his particular pal is now in this prison doing ten—safe breaking. His name is Valentine. The story you tell is a brand new one on us."

"And you never saw again the gentleman who rescued you?" queried Mrs. Moore of Miss Lane.

"Never." Into the young girl's face came an expression of mingled sweetness and regret. The woman's question semed to revive in her the memories of a voice and face and a manner and a personality which somehow she had never been quite able to forget.

"We sat and talked for a few minutes," she finally went on. "He told me that there were reasons why he could not let me know who he was and that he could never see me again, though I wanted him to meet my family to receive their thanks for what he had done. He was very nervous, but he had amazing strength for one of his build, as his handling of that ruffian showed. When he shook hands with me I noticed that his hands were very white and smooth and sensitive."

The warden was now leaning over his desk, intent on the girl's words.

"I noticed that he had the habit of frequently pressing one hand nervously into the other, and"—

"He was tall, and he had blond hair," interjected the warden.

The girl gazed at Handler in open mouthed astonishment.

"TINDER BOX" PROBE BOARD

It Will Take Charge of Measure Before Massachusetts Legislature

Boston, Jan. 30.—Mayor Fitzgerald, realizing the importance of a bill now before the general court which has for its object the prevention of tinder box construction in this city, has decided that a special commission of seven members shall take charge of the measure, amend the bill where it requires amendment, and see that it meets the requirements of the very important matter.

Six of the seven members have been appointed. The seventh is to be designated by the president of the Boston board of fire underwriters.

The original bill was hurriedly drawn, in order to get it before the legislature before the time limit for new legislation had expired. Now it will be possible to perfect it, and the commission is expected to organize as soon as it is completed.

COURT POSTPONES JORDAN EXECUTION

Writ of Error Takes Case to United States Supreme Court

Boston, Jan. 30.—Chester Jordan will not pay the penalty of death in the electric chair on March 12 for the murder of his wife, Chief Justice Aiken of the superior court having issued a writ of error sending the case to the United States supreme court. There his counsel will make one of the bitterest legal battles of recent years in hopes of securing another trial for their client.

With the writ of error Aiken issued an accompanying order to the effect that the writ operates as a supersedas, which will stay the execution of sentence of Jordan until final adjudication of the case before the highest court in the land.

The writ of error in the case raises the questions of whether the superior court erred in refusing to grant a new trial and in ruling that, by a fair preponderance of evidence, Juror Willis A. White was sane when he sat on the jury at the trial of the case.

SAVE EIGHTEEN LIVES

Two Men Show Great Personal Bravery and Skilful Seamanship

Woods Hole, Mass., Jan. 30.—Eighteen men, including the crew of the New York barkentine Stephen G. Hart, wrecked on Cuttyhunk island, and the Cuttyhung life savers, owe their lives to the bravery of two sturdy Cuttyhunk natives, who rescued them at great peril when the life savers' surfboat capsized during a squall, throwing all into the boiling waters.

It was Captain Sam Jackson in a power dory and Frank Veeder in a yawl who saved all eighteen lives. This was possible only through their great personal bravery and skilful seamanship.

SCHOOL ARMY INCREASED.

Quite an army of children who have reached the age of six years went trudging to school for the first time today. Last year the rules of the School Committee raising the entrance age from five to six years went into effect. Under the old rules children were admitted but once a year. That is at the opening of the fall term in September. When the school age was raised however the rules were also changed so that new pupils might enter at the opening of schools in September and also Jan. 30. All those who have reached the age of six years since September were admitted today.

Supt. Barbour said this noon that he could not tell at that time how many were in the entering classes, and would not know until they were reported by the masters.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Houghs Neck chapel has elected these officers: President Mrs. Edward E. Goode; vice president, Mrs. Enoch Dill; Secretary Miss Doris Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Hiram Darrow. The retiring president, Mrs. Waldo Hutchins, was presented with a handbag and a purse containing several gold pieces. A supper followed the installation and Capt. Oliver G. Fosdick was toastmaster. Addresses were made by James E. Wall, president of the Houghs Neck associates; Waldo Hutchins, J. E. Johnson and Rev. William McMeeken pastor of the church.

WATER PAYS TAX.

No taxes will be levied in Farmington village, Maine, next year says the Record. The expenses of the municipality will be met by the surplus earnings of the water works system, which the village corporation owns. The water works system earns more than $5,000 a year. The assessors recommended that the rates of water be reduced 30 per cent., but the meeting decided to use the surplus for running expenses and let the rates remain.

PORKERS ARE FASTIDIOUS.

Goats, on the Contrary, Eat Almost Everything.

An apology is due to the farmyard pig, who has been grossly maligned in regard to his food. Instead of being ready to eat anything he has just proved himself the most fastidious of animals. Experiments recently carried on in France and Sweden show this to be the case.

In Sweden the record tells that out of 575 plants the goat eats 449 and refuses 126, the sheep, out of 494 plants, eats 387 and refuses 141; out of 528 plants the cow eats 276 and refuses 218, out of 474 plants the horse eats 262 and refuses 212, and the pig, out of 243 plants, eats only 72 and refuses the other 171.

CITIES' GROWTH PUZZLES WORLD

Capital Everywhere Exploiting the Municipalities.

FEAR PERMANENT HIGH PRICES

North American Urban Rush Being Duplicated In Old World, Even Reaching India, China and Japan and Sweeping Over South America as Well.

A worldwide change in human conditions, political as well as economic, is indicated by the latest figures as to the growth of cities. The figures now being gathered show the phenomenon is not confined to America, but is sweeping over Europe and Asia and Africa and the Australian continent. In the Polish district of Russia, for example, there has been in the last year an increase of 14,000 workmen in Moscow and 11,000 in Warsaw. This means 100,000 more mouths to feed in these two places.

The problem is of the greatest importance to those who live in American cities, for until the reaction, the "back to the soil" movement, comes, perhaps twenty to twenty-five years hence, this enormous growth of municipalities is taken by European economists to mean permanently higher prices for food.

It is the opinion abroad that the United States will be the source of supplies, inasmuch as the European countries, which are more densely populated, must continually cry to other continents for food and the materials for clothing. Thus the American planters and farmers will be able at all times to find a first class foreign market for cereals, cattle, cotton, wool and other raw materials. This inevitably means higher prices for those articles in the American market under the inexorable law of supply and demand. This growth of cities at the expense of rural communities has reached India, China and Japan, and it is sweeping over South Africa.

Capitalists Exploiting Cities.

Capital all over the world is now chiefly engaged in exploiting the cities against the country. It is calculated that for every dollar invested in grazing or planting a thousand dollars goes into municipal and industrial development, and so when such a tendency assumes, as it now has assumed, worldwide proportions the outlook for cheaper food and clothing in America and elsewhere is regarded as remote indeed.

A recent Russian loan bank report shows the average number of dwellers in a house has increased to forty eight in Vienna, fifty in Berlin and fifty-two in Moscow and St. Petersburg. In London the average is only eight to a house. The average yearly rent of a two room flat is $90 in Berlin and $128 in Moscow and St. Petersburg.

Since 1882 the number of working people in the German empire has increased from 17,600,000 to 26,800,000, which is an increase in percentage from 39 to 43.46. In the same period the foreign workers in Germany have increased from 325,000 to more than 1,250,000, of whom 526,000 are Austrians. Germany now has as many foreigners as any other country in Europe except France, which only slightly exceeds her. There are in Great Britain only about 300,000 foreigners.

The Prussian city of Frankfort-on-the-Main, which now has a population of 409,000, is growing as fast as any of the western cities in America. More than $1,500,000 is to be spent in an addition to the $10,000,000 railway station, which handles 500 trains a day. The hotels take care annually of 600,000 strangers.

Turks Improve Cities.

The Young Turks are preparing their ancient country for western civilization and luxuries. The city of Aleppo, with 200,000 inhabitants, is to undergo a complete transformation. Gas, electric light and water are to be introduced, and there is to be a fire department. Constantinople is beginning to grow, her accessions coming mostly from Asia Minor and the Turkish suburban provinces.

In Spain the growth of population and industries in the chief cities has been such that the number of savings bank depositors has increased from 460,000 to 600,000 in the last two years. It is scarcely realized in America that the large fruit and vegetable growers in Spain are among the wealthiest class in Europe. Their land sells for as high as $3,000 an acre.

In Sweden the private fortunes of the people now aggregate $2,197,000,000, divided among 1,238,000 estates. In the city of Stockholm the private estates aggregate $482,000,000, an average of $1,245 for each citizen. There are now 1,500,000 savings bank depositors in Sweden, and they have $204,600,000 to their credit, an increase of $12,550,000 in the last year.

As bearing on the meat problem the government count made on Oct. 10 last shows that in Bavaria, where the population is largely interested in German cattle raising, there has been in one year a decrease of 240,000 cattle and 97,000 sheep. Bavaria, Saxony and Alsace-Lorraine have authorized the importation of French, Danish and other foreign meat.

Colombia Drops Export Duties.

Colombia has abolished its export duties on cattle and india rubber.

EASY FOR MAKARIA.

Makaria outlayed the Mystery club of Hingham on Saturday evening at Clapp Memorial gym, by the score of 64 to 4. Mystery club got only one basket from the floor, while Makaria shot 30 baskets. The all around team work of Makaria was noticeable. Glover, McKenzie and Tupper starred for Makaria, showing great accuracy in shooting baskets, getting 11, 8 and 7 respectively. The defensive work of Mundie, Marden, Melville and Finlay was good, covering the Mystery club forwards when they did get the ball, in great shape.

Canton High 28; Thayer Academy 26.

Silent Five of Milton 24; Braintree 23.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. was represented in the Boys' meet on Saturday at Lynn. Sturgis Hunt took second place in grade one in the 20 yard dash, the potato race, and the running broad jump.

A record breaking score was made in the basketball game on Saturday at Braintree between the girls of Thayer Academy and the Clapp Memorial, the former winning 107 to 7. Edith Kimball made 25 goals from the floor, Ruth Harding 15 and Caroline Kimball 13.

Zbyszko, the Polish champion won from Dr. Ben Roller on Saturday in the great wrestling match at the Mechanics Building. The first fall took 70 minutes, and the latter less than 11 minutes. Bob Somerville won his match with Billy Shenblay of Canada.

Makaria is certainly playing a great game and will be in great shape Feb. 11, when they line up gainst the local Y. M. C. A. in the second game of the series for the championship of Quincy.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. will have a dual meet with Cambridge at the Cambridge gymnasium on Wednesday Feb. 1. The following entries have been forwarded from Quincy:

20 yds. dash—Phelan, Avery, Wilson, Cranshaw, Prout.

Potato Race—McInnes, Trask, Wilson.

12 pound shot—Claflin, McArdle.

Running High Jump—Estey, Wood, White, McArdle.

Three Broad Jumps—McArdle, Wilson, Claflin.

440 yds. dash—Estey, Wood, Johnson, Sutermeister, Dineen.

Relay Race—Prout, Phelan, McArdle, Cranshaw.

The second team of the Y. M. C. A. defeated Clapp Memorial at Weymouth Saturday evening by a score of 25 to 21. The game was fast and hard fought, and the Quincy team deserved great commendation for its splendid exhibition. The lineup for Quincy was Childs and Newcomb, forwards; Miller, centre; Holmes and Dineen, backs.

History Made Palatable.

Joseph Salvador, the French historian, and Jules Sandeau, a novelist, made their meeting at a public reception the occasion for a dispute as to the respective places which they occupied in the world of letters.

"The reading of history is like a pill—it needs the sugar coating to make it palatable," argued the novelist.

"Ah, but it is the ingredient which cures, not the coating," remarked the historian.

"Then let us divide honors," said Sandeau, "for if it were not for my sugar coating your historical facts would dry on the shelves."

CHAMPION GOTCH ON MAT AGAIN

Title Holder to Meet Ordeman In Chicago, Feb. 8.

WILL TAKE ON "HACK" LATER.

Humboldt Man, Who Has Been Idle For Some Time, Anxious to Try Himself Out Before He Meets "Russian Lion." Pair May Clash In March.

By TOMMY CLARK.

Who was it said that Frank Gotch has retired? Didn't we tell you all along that this business was only guff? And then as good a wrestler as the Humboldt farmer is has no business to retire, especially when he is in his prime. Of course he'll wrestle Hackenschmidt, not right away, but later in the season. Gotch needs a little practice, for he has been idle for some time. He will take on a few of the American wrestlers, throw them, too, and then he will be ready for the "Russian Lion." As a starter he will take on Henry Ordeman in a finish match Feb. 8 in Chicago. The latter is one of the best mat artists in this country and will give the champion a good tryout. After this contest the champion will take on Roller, Westergard and several other grapplers, and then, around the latter part of March, will come Hack's turn.

With articles signed and the battleground settled upon, this contest will attract as much attention as the Jeffries-Johnson bout. The promoters know that another match between Gotch and the Russian will be the biggest wrestling event ever pulled off in this or any other country. With the boosting properly conducted the public will fill any inclosure in the country to see the two big fellows hug each other for a couple of hours. No wrestling bout in the history of the game can be compared with the coming contest, and the attraction will easily be worth $50,000.

Picking the winner of the battle will be a hard task, for Gotch and Hackenschmidt are two of the greatest wrestlers that ever lived. Ninety-nine out of every hundred men in this country firmly believe that Gotch can beat any man in the world at the catch-as-catch-can game. But once in awhile ninety-nine men out of every hundred are mistaken, and it's a good policy not to be too free with predictions. Remember John L. Sullivan, Jim Corbett and that "terrible bear," Jimmy Jeffries.

The dope we have to go by is the match between the pair three years ago in Chicago, in which Hack quit after wrestling for over two hours. The "Russian Lion" claimed that Gotch was continually fouling him and gave as an excuse for giving up that he was not accustomed to the rough tactics that prevail in catch-as-catch-can wrestling in this country. Another thing, he underestimated Gotch.

This time he will be fit—at least he says so—and that should give him a better chance. But to throw Gotch will be no easy matter. No man is better versed in the wrestling art than the Humboldt farmer, and, while not a giant in figure, he is remarkably strong and agile, which count for much. In everything that pertains to the science of wrestling Gotch is his master. What part Hack's mere strength may be expected to play the story of their first match sufficiently tells.

If the bout is on the level—and there is no reason for thinking that it will not be—it should result in one of the greatest struggles ever held on the mat. Still, there is no sport on the calendar in which the people can be so easily fooled as in the mat game. In fact, shady bouts generally appear better than the real article. Now, supposing Gotch wanted to fake in his bout with Hack, the champion could clean up a fortune that would leave him rich for the rest of his life.

Gotch would be a 10 to 7 favorite in the betting. He could easily place $70,000 on Hack to win, not in one city, of course, for the public would become suspicious, but scatter it around the country. The gamblers would all back the American. Hack would not need to be a party to the deal. Then Gotch could wrestle with the "Lion" for an hour and a half, working hard all the time, but careful not to throw him, then slip up in some hold and allow the Russian to down him.

After losing his world's title he could travel around the country as the American champion, explaining his defeat and meeting all comers, and during his spare moments collect the money he had won. The public would be none the wiser. The writer does not for an instant question the honesty of the bout, but is just showing how a fortune could be made. Of course this does not mean that Gotch is a sure thing in the coming contest. He will have a terrible struggle in trying to gain a fall, for Hackenschmidt has never been thrown.

Walker May Go to Yale.

Jim Walker, the Minnesota tackle, who was awarded a place on the mythical all-American team last season, may enter Yale next fall. After a lapse of a year he may possibly be seen in an Eli uniform. Walker is a law student in Minnesota, but may decide to take a regular course at Yale.

LAWYER PRIZE PICKER OF BEAUTIFUL ENGLISH WORDS

Melody, Radiance, Liberty and Adoration Prominent In List.

A prize offered by Grenville Kleiser of New York to pupils of the Public Speaking Club of America for a list of the twenty-five most beautiful words in the English language was won by James Shea, a lawyer.

Words were judged according to their beauty of sound and beauty of meaning, and out of twenty-five submitted by Shea twenty-one were accepted. Grace, justice and truth were rejected. The harshness of g in grace and j in justice disqualified them, and truth was turned down because of its metallic sound. The words accepted as the most beautiful in the language are:

Nobility,	Splendor,
Sympathy,	Adoration,
Heaven,	Eloquence,
Love,	Virtue,
Divine,	Innocence,
Hope,	Modesty,
Harmony,	Faith,
Happiness,	Joy,
Purity,	Honor,
Liberty,	Radiance,
Melody,

Sixty-five persons submitted lists. Mr. Kleiser prepared a list and found afterward that only one of his words had been submitted in the other sixty-five offered and that just one person used that.

An amusing feature of the contest was that Shea made a speech accepting the prize in which he did not once use any of the words he had submitted.

LEFT MONEY TO AGED HORSES

Eccentric Hungarian's Will Being Contested by Relatives.

The highly original will of a bachelor, Emil von Bizony, is published in the Hungarian papers. Mr. von Bizony, the brother of a well known Hungarian deputy, was sixty-five, detested women and was on bad terms with all his relatives. Although the owner of a great deal of land, he lived so frugally that he did not spend the tenth part of his income.

In his will he bequeathed all his real and personal property to his twelve draft horses. As executors of the will he named the Society For the Protection of Animals at Budapest, stipulating that the interest on his property should be devoted to the care of these twelve animals and that upon the death of one of them another aged horse was to be taken in and cared for so that the number of twelve might always be maintained.

Herr von Bizony's relatives naturally did not like the will, and the deputy will dispute it. Negotiations have been begun with the above mentioned society, and $20,000 was offered it as a compromise, but was refused. The property is worth about $200,000.

HOLDS BABES IN WOOD LANDS

English Peer Declines to Sell Historic Bit of Ground.

Lord Walsingham has joined the great procession of peers who are selling their estates as the outgrowth of the English government's agitation against large landholding; but, though he is parting with Aldwark Manor, near York, he has decided to retain Merton Hall, in Norfolk. This is the scene of a crime which gave rise to one of the most widely read legends in the world—"The Babes In the Wood."

The originals of "The Babes In the Wood" were the children of Sir Roger de Grey, whose mother was the owner of Merton Hall. For years after the wicked uncle had done the poor little babes to death the wood in which they perished and the house in which they had lived were haunted, so it was everywhere believed, by the ghosts of the babes walking hand in hand.

THE OLD COLONY BOULEVARD HIGHWAY

Joint Board on Municipal Improvements Recommend It in Report to Legislature

To Connect Quincy Parkway with South Station, Boston

Quincy received important consideration in the report of the joint board on Metropolitan Improvements submitted to the Legislature on Monday. In brief:

Recommends the construction of a tunnel between the North and South stations to be built by the railroad companies with a provision that the state may acquire said tunnel in the future.

Advises against the compulsory electrification of railroads in the metropolitan district, but submits a bill providing for such an electrification before 1923. There are two dissenting reports on electrification.

Approves a boulevard from Columbia road over a part of Dorchester avenue to connect with the Quincy shore reservation.

Reports against the building of a dry dock by the state on Commonwealth property.

Suggests construction of a boulevard between Cambridge and Somerville.

Favors development of East Boston's waterfront by the state and construction of walls and docks on that side of the harbor.

Suggests no improvements in Dorchester bay.

Favors widening of Arlington street and its extension through to Columbus avenue.

Reports the feasibility of building an island in Charles River basin for recreation purposes.

Discusses pending constitutional amendment for excessive condemnation for land and favors the same in connection with construction of the prposed tunnel.

QUINCY BOULEVARD.

The route of the Old Colony boulevard is wholly on the water side of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. from Columbia road at Calf pasture to the Pope's Hill station. Then it goes under the railroad and continues along the westerly side for awhile, and then intersects Dorchester avenue on the Boston side of the Neponset river.

In recommending the construction of the proposed Old Colony Boulevard highway the board says:

"From the South station in Boston a highway extends to Columbia road over a part of Dorchester avenue and over the old location of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, which, with slight improvement by the city, may be made the beginning of one of the best radial highways out of Boston. At Columbia road this highway now comes to an abrupt ending.

"Beyond Columbia road on the easterly side of the railroad are large tracts of unoccupied land and intervening residential sections of Savin Hill, Harrison Square and Neponset, all in Boston; and beyond Neponset Bridge the land is open, with the exception of a few dwellings and other buildings of moderate value to the point where the Metropolitan Parkway to Quincy Shore begins.

"So much of this region as lies east of the railroad in Boston has no direct highway and electric car connection with the central part of Boston, and only inconvenient and indirect approach by the main already overcrowded highways west of the railroad. It needs only an excellent highway and electric line on the east of the railroad to make these open lands available and excellent locations for dwellings, large manufacturing and incidental commercial enterprises.

"Furthermore, on the entire south side of Boston there is no good road which furnishes direct line for rapidly moving vehicles all the way from the business centre of Boston to southern parts of the district and state except the Fenway, which is indirect and on the extreme westerly side of the city.

"The opportunity is still open to make direct highway communication from the business part of the city with the unoccupied lands and the residential section beyond Columbia road and east of the railroad, and at same time to provide a roadway for rapidly moving vehicles to this portion of the city and to all southern portions of the district and of the state beyond Neponset bridge.

"Few buildings will have to be removed, the total assessed value of the real estate required will be less than $400,000, and present facilities for railroad and harbor communication will be preserved for the remaining land, as clearly they ought to be preserved upon any plan which may be adopted. It is a fortunate and remarkable opportunity which, if not now availed of, may soon be lost forever. Construction, estimated for both roadways to cost approximately

DR. ALLEN IN AFRICA

Tells of His Expedition to Get Specimens

One of the most interesting lectures of the season was delivered in Unitarian chapel Monday evening by Dr. Glover M. Allen of Boston, under the auspices of the Junior Laymen. The subject of the address was "Africa."

Dr. Allen with two companions went on this expedition representing Harvard University. The territory explored was a portion of British East Africa, close to the equator. British East Africa is east of Congo Free state and north of the German possessions, of which Zanzibar is capital. The three white men with 75 native porters, hunters, etc., struck inland for a circuit about 200 miles in engtn. The land in that part of Africa is high and mountainous, so that although the days are hot, the nights are cool and comfortable, thus making the climate endurable. After leaving the coast, the party headed for the great forests and Mount Kenia. The object of the expedition was to get specimens of African birds and the smaller animals.

Dr. Allen learned early in the journey that the different animals lived in different kinds of country. The giraffes were to be found on the flat lands covered with thorn bushes. Elephants of course frequent the jungles; rhinoceroses, the banks of muddy streams; and so on.

The traits of the different animals proved to be of great interest. The hyena, although a powerful beast, is naturally a coward, and can be very easily frightened way by a noise or a movement. The rhinoceros is a very uncertain animal, for one cannot tell whether he will go for you or away from you. When he gets under way he gives two "whoofs," like a trolley car signal to let one know he is coming. Lions are not as warlike as they are oftentimes pictured. Unless a lion s on the hunt, he is peaceable, and will let a man pass without harming him. Elephants inhabit the great jungles through which they glide almost unnoticed unless frightened. Then they set up such a shrieking that one would think the forest was coming down on top of him.

The natives in the party were of three tribes, Masai, Wakamba and Somali. The first two were the porters, and the last the hunters. The Somali people believe they are the chosen race, and it is a fact that they are of a higher type than the other natives. Dr. Allen thought that probably their ancestors came over from Arabia. The Masai were the largest men, heavy and muscular. The Wakamba tribes were smaller with flatter heads and many original ideas. The men file their teeth down to points so as to make themselves attractive in the eyes of the women. The ornaments in their ears vary between blocks of wood, padlocks, cigarette boxes, etc. The man who snapped the iron padlock in his ear inflicted himself with a life sentence since there was no key to unlock it.

Dr. Allen found the natives more polite than most of the people in the so-called civilized countries. "There was some difference," he said, "between the howling mob that met the boat at Naples, demanding money of the passengers, and the tribe of Africans who came bearing gifts. "Their brains are not over-developed, however, and they cannot appreciate the superiority of the white man. Dr. Allen said that most of them looked upon their visitors as fools.

The trails which were followed went through all the different kinds of country, prairie, jungle, mountain ridges, valleys, and so on. The expedition was very successful in their hunting and brought home 400 birds and 200 small animals. Several larger ones were shot, among them an elephant, but it was impossible to get more than souvenirs from the enormous beast to take home. Dr. Allen tried a small piece of elephant trunk for a noon-day meal, but it was too tough for him. The natives eat it with ease, either raw or cooked, in fact all kinds of meat are devoured by them in animal fashion. Generally they eat but one meal a day late in the afternoon. Their clothing is light consisting chiefly of a toga like garment made of coarse drown cloth. The old coats and other garments cast off by visitors are seized upon with great delight. One of the party wore a heavy winter overcoat day and night throughout the expedition, although the thermometer went as high as 120 degrees very frequently.

As the party returned to the coast they came upon an agricultural section of the country. Indian corn, peas, beans and other staple vegetables flourish in that part of the country, and there are no famines in the country.

Dr. Allen said that the thing which surprised him most was the nature of the people. Most of them are just as good as we are, and there was a very agreeable lack of avarice and trickery which is so prevalent among the so-called civilized races. All the specimens of birds and beasts procured on the trip will be placed in Agassiz museum at Harvard as soon as they are properly stuffed and marked.

MAINTENANCE OF BRIDGE

South Shore Towns File Petition in Legislature

The towns of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Marshfield filed a petition with the legislature on Monday, asking for the enactment of a bill that would place the cost of repair and maintenance of the Fore River bridge at Quincy Point on the counties of Plymouth and Norfolk, the City of Quincy, and the public service corporations using the bridge. The bill was referred to the House committee on rules who gave a hearing this afternoon on the question of admitting the petition.

At the present time each of the towns mentioned above have to contribute toward the expense of repair and maintenance of the bridge and they wish to be relieved of the burden.

The admittance of the petition was opposed by City Solicitor McAnarney, who claims that should a law be enacted, as petitioned, Quincy would have a double assessment. That is, it would be assessed as a city and again through the county.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The alarm from box 175, shortly after 6 o'clock this morning, was for a chimney fire in a double house on Quincy avenue, owned by Parker Hayward and occupied by two Italian families. The chimney was filled with soot and when a rousing hot fire was built the soot took fire. It was bitter cold at that hour and doubtless an unusual hot fire was built. The fire was extinguished with the aid of a chemical stream. There was practically no loss.

35 PERMITS ISSUED

For Houses and other Buildings to Cost $71,575

Quincy has started in the new year with a phenominal building boom, for during the month of January the inspector of buildings issued 35 permits, the larger part of which were for dwellings and cottages. The estimated cost of the work contemplated under these permits amounts to $71,575. Among the recent permits issued are the following:

A. W. Erickson, dwelling Glendale road.

Joseph Mier, manufacturing building, Liberty street.

J. B. Sutherland, dwelling, Independence avenue.

W. A. Dunham, cottage, Palmer street.

W. A. Dunham, cottage Rhoda street

John P. Nelson, cottage, Spring street.

W. H. O'Brien, cottage, Darrow street.

C. W. Andrews, cottage, Littlefield street.

Julia Swanson, dwelling, Franklin street.

NEW PUPILS.

According to Superintendent Barbour, about 125 children entered the public schools for the first time on Monday. The exact number by schools, however, has not as yet been reported. Supt. Barbour said this morning that new pupils had all this week in which to enter, and that he expected the number given above would be greatly increased. He looks for the largest increase at the new Houghs Neck school building.

LOWER WATER RATES.

The chairman of the water commission of Revere recommends a reduction of $1 for each tub and closet for house service, and would place the minimum meter charge at $12 instead of $15.

There has been some change in the numbers of the telephones at City Hall, and it would not be a bad idea to put this list near your telephone where it will be handy. The following is the correct list to date:

NOT TAKING ADVANTAGE OF OUR CHANCES

That's What Quincy's Rival in the Granite Industry Says Relative to Water Front

Has Regretted Often That It Is So Far Inland

The Barre Daily Times says editorially that "Quincy apparently has not been taking full advantage of its chances." The following comments were made on Saturday:

"The granite quarry owners and manufacturers at Quincy, Mass., are bestirring themselves over what they consider their poor shipping facilities, and J. L. Miller and J. S. Swingle have presented their complaints in the columns of the Quincy Ledger, declaring that Quincy has splendid opportunities for shipping granite to Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other places by water route, only that the city lacks a municipal dock for such transportation.

"If Quincy were to utilize its water transportation opportunities as much as the Maine granite centres do, it would probably find the system greatly to its advantage. Barre, for this one reason, has wished a great many times that its two mountains of granite were located within easy approach to a water front. Quincy apparently has not been taking full advantage of its chances."

These comments should further stimulate Quincy to action. Messrs. Miller and Swingle are not the only ones who have brought this need into prominence. The Board of Trade and Mayor Shea have done much to focus opinion on the development of our water front and the establishment of municipal docks.

There are so many good locations for a municipal dock that there is a difference of opinion just which is the best. If it was established on Hayward's creek, near Quincy avenue and East Howard street, it would not require the building of many feet of street railway, but there should be a double track through Water street from Franklin street to Quincy avenue and possibly another track on Quincy avenue to the dock for a double track route.

The recent suggestion of the Daily Ledger, that the dock be established at the foot of Edison street or River street, is also receiving some consideration. It needs only the assurance of the Old Colony Street Railway Company that it would open up a direct double track route from Quincy Adams via Water street, Quincy avenue, Scammell street, Sumner street and Edison street to connect the granite section with the water front.

There are those, however, who advocate Brackett's wharf, or the old canal, because it is in close proximity to City Hall, but they probably contemplate teaming the granite and freight over our streets.

The transportation of granite by street railway would greatly reduce the cost of maintenance of streets, and the Quincy avenue or Sumner street routes are not through the congested streets of the city. The movement for a municipal dock should be brought to a head this year. Wherever it is located, it will help the granite industry.

A PROMOTION.

Lieut. Walter C. Jones of this city, in the service of Uncle Sam in the 15th U. S. infantry, has been transfererd to Fort Wood, N. Y., to fill the vacancy in the signal corps to take effect March 15, 1911.

It is at Fort Wood that all supplies for the signal corps are purchased and a part of Lieut. Jones' duties will be the inspection of all government supplies purchased for the signal corps. Lieut. Jones' specialties are signal work, clerical work and aeronautics, and his new station will involve a large amount of detail work.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Col. Bryan is not a candidate for nomination. The Commoner says so, and it's in a position to know.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon thinks there are Congressmen enough, and some of us think there are entirely too many.

It is quite evident that Senator Lorimer is going to stand by the Illinois legislature to the very end.

There is at present a disposition among arctic explorers to go ahead and write their articles without trying to interfere with one another.

Now that Mayor Shea has installed a Lyons at his office at City Hall office seekers should beware. Don't let the mayor of Boston hear that the new assistant is a young lady or he may make new predictions.

The good works of the Quincy Presidents endure in many ways. It is very appropriate that a gavel should be made from an elm planted on the White House grounds by President John Quincy Adams.

The launching of the steamer Sankaty this week inaugurates another big year for launchings at the Quincy shipyard, which will include the battleship Rivadavia for Argentina, the mightiest in the world.

The attention of the families having superfluous children around the house is called to a Washington advertisement for board of a chimpanzee, which reads: "Will eat anything, very fond of children."

Congratulations to Editor Moseley of Hyde Park upon his appointment for a fifth term as postmaster of his big town, large enough to be a city. He has filled the position very acceptably since 1890, introducing many improvements.

Over four columns of church news were printed in the Daily Ledger of Monday, representing eighteen churches, and over 100 different meetings of churches, Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues, Christian Endeavor societies, men's club, ladies societies and other organizations of the churches. Church news is a regular feature of the Monday Ledger each week.

There are now 92,000,000 of us where there were but 103 in 1620. Out of the virgin soil of the wilderness that once stretched westward from Cape Cod to the Pacific seaboard have sprung this year agricultural products worth $8,000,000,000 a record never before attained by any single nation in the world in any one year.

Our national wealth has grown from 750,000,000 in 1791 to the prodigious sum of $125,000,000,000 on January 1st last—twice that of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, Scotland, Ireland and three times that of either France or Germany, our three closest competitors. Despite our enormous growth in population we now have a per capita capital of $1,859 where we had but $183 in 1791. We are the world's greatest manufacturers as well as its most extensive and richest agriculturalists. We mine more coal and extract more gold, silver, copper, and iron out of the ground than any two countries in the universe.

We are prosperous beyond the most extravagant picture ever painted in fancy by fertile human imagination. Unable to profitably employ all our own capital at home, we use our surplus millions to finance tobacco plantations in Porto Rico and the Phillipines, sugar plantations in Cuba, coffee plantations in Brazil and rubber plantations in British Guiana and thus add to our rapidly accumulating revenues.

Favored by nature, blessed by Providence, admired by the world, everybody's friend and nobody's avowed enemy, endowed with marvelous physical vigor, animated by such enterprise as no other nation has ever shown, flattered and toasted the earth over, we should be supremely happy, We can if we will.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY.

It is probable that if the people of the United States could walk up to the ballot boxes and mark a cross for or against the proposed Canadian treaty, that the "Yes" voters would have a very large majority. Many persons to whom a speech on the tariff and a page out of Homer's Iliad are alike unintelligible, appreciate the significance of a fish or grocery or lumber bill much more keenly than a college president.

And your own sufferings from the inconvenient opinions of the grocer about prices, seem a great deal more painful than any losses of Gloucester, or the Minnesota farmers, from the reprehensible tendency of the Canadians to sell at old fashioned prices.

But Congress and the voters of the United States are two very different propositions. Congress knows perfectly well that the caucus is the place where the real business of the country is done. The caucus comes in the base ball season.

Of course the tendency of the voters of late to act in a manner contrary to all the principles of the political kindergarten has caused some alarm. But up to date the caucus machinery is running along pretty well. It may be a bit old fashioned, but it delivers the goods. A comparatively small body of men with axes to grind, offices to seek, favors to gain, can operate it, when they would be swamped in November.

Congress is far more afraid of the small group of men who direct the caucus machine, than it is of the great big sleepy public, which wakes up at election time after the goods are bought and paid for and all but delivered.

Consequently, while the new treaty will be a good campaign document for Mr. Taft, one can already see it tucked away in its long and silent sleep, with its brothers and sisters that have gone before. But still, there is another Congress coming.

BOULEVARD

$800,000, may wait; but delay in securing the necessary land will be most unfortunate."

METROPOLITAN PROJECTS.

"The Old Colony and Cambridge-Somerville boulevard highways are clearly metropolitan projects, which will provide new radial highways, with parkway features and usefulness, from the very heart of Boston to connection with the metropolitan park system north and south.

"They would be avenues for all classes of travel from many cities and towns of the district in and out of Boston, as well as connections between portions of the park system which are now difficult of access from Boston. They are clearly extensions of and connecting links in metropolitan work already entered upon.

"They are recommended as additions to the metropolitan park system to be provided for by appropriations in addition to the metropolitan park, loans, series 2; and bills to that effect are submitted herewith."

Just as Washington was distinguished by the serving of ice cream for the first time in this country at a White House reception in Dolly Madison's time, the city was recently honored by the first presentation in the United States of a new dish made of the dasheen, a plant recently imported from the Pacific islands.

This delicacy resembles the potato being somewhat more piquant in flavor, and it formed a part of the menu at the banquet of the National Geographic society, at which 600 members and guests sat down.

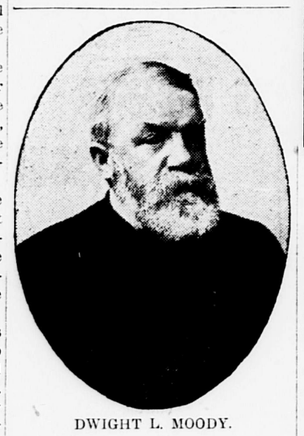
TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

Of the Moody Bible Institute to be Observed in Chicago Week of Feb. 5-12.

Someone has said that a boy without a fortune is a fortunate boy. However this may be, it is certainly fortunate for many young people that Dwight L. Moody was born poor, for it led him to sympathize heartily with every other young man who like himself had small means and large aspirations.



DWIGHT L. MOODY.

He early recognized that a considerable part of our religious work must be done by lay workers. He also saw that there were thousands of young men and young women to whom a college education was impossible but who with a year or two of training in the English Bible, personal work and music might be able to fill many positions of usefulness which their gifts and calling might indicate.

This led him to found The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, which affords perhaps the most remarkable combination of study and practical work that the world has ever seen. It is in no sense a theological seminary or rival of the seminaries. It does not teach Hebrew or Greek, but it has five different methods of teaching the English Bible. The training is so practical, and the religious atmosphere so inspiring, that hundreds of ministers and theological students come here to supplement their seminary course. Some missionary Boards also advise all their candidates for the foreign field to spend at least a few months at the Institute.

The method is to combine practical training with lectures and study. Mr. Moody, pre-eminently a man of one book and having achieved his marvelous success with that alone, naturally felt that the English Bible ought to occupy the first place in the training of men for Christian work. Accordingly, students are required to study the Bible as a whole, and each of its parts in particular. They are taught to analyze the books, and to dissect each chapter so as to discover the principal subject and leading lesson.

Furthermore they are shown how to use the Bible in leading men to Christ, and in meeting the various excuses which arise in Christian work. Each student has from three to five assignments a week for personal work in jails, missions, Gospel wagon or other services, and they are examined on their personal work as well as on their studies. In this way they get an all-round experience which the classroom alone could never give.

The Institute has often been called the "West Point" of Christian work. Certainly many Christian warriors have received their training here and have gone out to fight valiantly in the army of the Lord.

The number of students is constantly increasing, and there never were so many applications as at present. All over the world God is calling men from the farm and factory, the office and store, and in some cases from the legal and medical professions, and is filling them with such a passion for souls that secular work no longer satisfies them. Many of our students have made great sacrifices to come here. One student walked eighty miles to reach the Institute and arrived here with fifty cents in his pocket. He graduated as president of his class. A young girl came all alone from Bulgaria, worked her way through Oberlin College, and then came here for training in the English Bible and Music. While here she worked up an interest among the Bulgarians of this city so that she had an attendance of over two hundred men each Sunday.

Last year the enrolment was six hundred and fifty-one, of whom about four hundred were men and two hundred and fifty were women. These came from twenty-two foreign countries, represented forty denominations and we could send out men to conduct services in seventeen different languages. Ninety-two of our men had received college or theological training.

At this Anniversary a new women's dormitory costing $200,000 will be opened. A men's dormitory was erected last year. Invitations have been sent out to over six thousand former students and a large attendance is expected.

NEW WOMEN'S DORMITORY.

Among the speakers will be R. A. Torrey, D. D., Bishop John H. Vincent, Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, Dr. John Willis Baer, Mr. A. P. Fitt, Rev. Charles Stelzle, Charles M. Alexander, L. D. Wishard, E. K. Warren, Fleming H. Revell and W. B. Jacobs.

The object of this anniversary week is not simply to mark off another milestone of the history of the Institute, but also to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for awakening interest in Bible study and in individual effort to win men to Christ among Christians generally.

It is also hoped that thousands of young men inspired by the example of the great founder of the Institute, D. L. Moody, and encouraged by the success which God bestowed upon a humble, consecrated layman, may be led to devote their lives to some form of Christian service.—Howard W. Pope.

QUEEN MARY MOVED IN KING'S LIBEL SUIT

Husband May Take Stand When Mylius' Trial Is Begun

London, Jan. 31.—Queen Mary is chiefly responsible for the prosecution of Edward F. Mylius of the Paris Liberator on the charge of seditious libel in reviving the story that King George married morganatically an admiral's daughter while he was Duke of York and serving in the British navy. She considers that the persistence of this oft-repeated, oft-denied rumor reflects upon herself and her children.

King George is said to have expressed willingness to go on the witness stand—though the constitution does not permit him to be summoned—when the trial of Mylius is to begin, and deny the report under oath.

House Vote on Tariff Board Measure Is 186 to 93

CALLS FOR $7000 SALARIES

Principal Office of Board Will Be In Washington, but It May Sit Wherever It Considers It Necessary—Democratic Efforts to Limit Expnditures and Make Other Amendments Meet With Defeat

Washington, Jan. 31.—The house passed the tariff board bill unamended at 11:40 o'clock last night by a vote of 186 to 93.

The bill creates a permanent tariff board in lieu of the present board, which is a creature of a provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill, and will expire by its own limitation on the 30th of June next.

The board is to consist of five members, not more than three of whom shall be of the same political party.

The term of office shall be six years each, and those first appointed shall serve two, three, four, five and six years respectively, as shall be designated by the president. The president is also to designate one of the members to be chairman. The salaries of the members are to be $7500 annually for the chairman, and $7000 each for the other members. The board is to have its principal office in Washington, and is to be empowered to sit in any other place in the United States, or in foreign countries.

The first amendment offered by the Democrats was by Mr. James of Kentucky. It provided for the appointment of three members of the board by the president and the election of the two minority members by the minority party in the senate and house of representatives. James did not think a Republican president was qualified to select Democratic members for a bipartisan board. The amendment was lost on a yea and nay vote, 127 to 142.

Mr. Barnhart of Indiana offered an amendment, allowing the president to appoint one member, the presiding officer of the senate and the speaker two. The amendment was lost, 130 to 119.

Representative Cox of Indiana sought to have the appointees on the board made subject to confirmation by the senate. This also was lost.

The Democrats then sought to limit the expenditures of the board, first to $250,000 a year and then to $500,000 a year. Both amendments were lost.

Various other amendments offered by the Democrats were voted down.

Boston, Jan. 31.—The house gave Governor Foss sweeping authority to probe the state departments and institutions yesterday afternoon, but not until after a debate of intense bitterness in which Speaker Walker surrendered the gavel and went down on the floor of the house to support the governor's resolve.

The man who led the fight was Walker's colleague, Norman White of Brookline, who declared when the fight was finished that the passage of the resolve sounded the death knell of Walker's ambitions to become governor.

BIRTH OF A WING.

Evolution of the Aquatic Pupa Into the Dragon Fly.

Says a writer in the Scientific American: "A wonderful spectacle is presented by the sudden apparition of an insect's wing at the completion of its metamorphosis. The transformation of the grub into the butterfly, though familiar, is none the less amazing, but the evolution of the active and gossamer winged dragon fly from its ugly and sluggish aquatic pupa is still more impressive. Early on a May morning the pupa emerges from its cocoon at the bottom of a ditch, swims on its back by paddling with its long haired paws to the stem of an aquatic plant and climbs up out of the water. Then, after a momentary pause, the skin suddenly bursts open and the perfect insect appears, with closely folded wings, which soon unfold and assume their final form.

"The older naturalists thought that the insect 'swallowed air,' with which the wings were inflated. In reality the air is absorbed in the digestitve organs, causing an increased blood pressure, which mechanically expands the wings. The presence of dew is also necessary; hence the first flight is always made at dawn.

"This spectacle of the birth of a wing may be observed in dragon flies reared in an aquarium, the atmosphere of which should be moistened with an atomizer when the pupa rises to the surface."

HOW TO LIVE.

So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

$56,200 NEEDED TO STOCK HUGE LINER FOR ONE TRIP

Experts Figure on Necessaries For Olympic and Titanic.

Some $60,000 worth of American food and drink will be loaded aboard the new ocean steamers Olympic and Titanic each time one of these big boats docks in New York, according to the commissary officers who are victualing such ships.

Should the government make their landing here possible by lengthening two piers these two ocean liners can bring and take away 2,700 passengers on each voyage in addition to a crew of 800. If both boats are able to begin their regular trips here next spring piers adapted to their bulk $1,500,000 will be spent in New York in a year simply to stock up their capacious larders.

For meats alone $15,000 is to be paid each time either of the big sister ships comes into port. Large quantities of beef, lamb, pork, veal and mutton will be brought from all over the country and stacked away in refrigerators that must hold enough to feed 3,500 people on a transatlantic voyage. Wagon loads of poultry costing $5,400 are to be added to this array, with piles of fish worth $2,000. For shellfish the orders of the ship's cooks will amount to $1,200 in addition.

Farmers from all about the neighboring country will be called upon to send $4,600 worth of butter, cream and milk to be used on each trip of these big boats, while $1,800 is also to be spent solely for eggs and $3,200 for vegetables. Fruits worth $3,500 are to be added to the ship's stores, while its bakery will lay in flour to the extent of $2,300 on each voyage. The biggest bill next to that for meats will be $5,500 for all sorts of groceries.

Far away in the frigid depths of the new liners' cold storage compartments $1,200 worth of ice cream is to be stored, and for cigars $2,000 will be spent. Wines and spirits costing $5,000 are set down as necessary for each shipload of passengers, together with some $3,000 worth of beer and mineral waters. Altogether the lowest cost of victualing such boats as the Olympic and Titanic is set down as $56,200.

COLORADO LOSES LANDMARK

Last of Taverns on Denver-Leadville Trail Is Destroyed.

To enable Sterling Jones, owner of the property, to erect a brick dwelling on the site workmen are now tearing down the old stage road house outside Salida, Colo., that has been standing since 1865 and occupied as a ranch dwelling and storehouse for several years.

The stage house was a large, long affair built in the old fashioned style with a long porch and was visible from the Rio Grande railroad track east of Salida. It had become very much dilapidated.

One end of the building was fitted up for living purposes until Mr. Jones should decide to build a residence, and the rest of the building was left vacant. It was the last stage house on the route between Denver and Leadville to be torn down, and it was looked upon as a relic of the time when Indians roamed through the Arkansas valley.

While the workmen were excavating they uncovered some human bones. In the dump also were the remains of some tomahawks, flintlocks and other curios, supposed to have been left by Indians.

SPIDER KILLS MINNOW.

Remarkable Fish Story Comes Forth From Missouri.

While at the ice pond fishing recently W. R. Sweeney of Keytesville, Mo., noticed a large spider on a leaf at the edge of the water that seemed to be fishing also. The spider would put one leg in the water, shake it a little bit and then wait. By and by a minnow came to the top and grabbed the spider's foot.

This seemed to be what it was waiting for, and without a minute's hesitation it sprung on to the minnow, being carried under the water several times, but never releasing its hold on the fish until it ceased to struggle and was dead, when the spider hauled its prey ashore to be devoured at leisure.

In trying to land the struggling minnow the spider would lay hold of a leaf with a deathlike grip and at last landed his catch in that way.

USE WHEELS IN ASTRONOMY.

Scientists Take Bicycle Kind to Figure Meteors' Velocity.

An interesting use has been found in astronomy for the bicycle wheel. By fitting such a wheel with a series of opaque screens placed at regular intervals and then rotating it with the aid of a small motor at the rate of from thirty to fifty turns in a minute before the cameras used to photograph meteors one investigator has succeeded in measuring the velocity of the meteor's flight.

The principle depends upon the interruptions produced by the screens in the trails of light made upon the photographic plates by the flying meteor. The velocity of the wheel is known at every instant by means of a chronographic record, and the length of the interruptions indicates the speed of the meteor.

HAVE CHAMBER OF HORRORS.

Meeting Place Decorated With Ropes, Poison Bottles and Pistols—Trenton Club Is Antithesis of Robert Louis Stevenson's Famous Band Who Sought to Slay Selves.

Walter Hannison of Trenton, N. J., has carried one of Robert Louis Stevenson's best known fancies a step further.

The novelist made famous the Suicide club; Hannison seeks notoriety for a near suicide club. He doesn't call it that, finding the Society For the Uplift of Despondent Fellow Men more to his liking, but only those who have tried to end their lives are eligible to membership. So far he has gathered forty kindred spirits about him, and he hopes to have 100 soon.

Uplifting takes place once a week. Each member of the society is compelled to take an oath upon election that he will tell when, where and why he tried to kill himself, how he felt at that time, how he felt immediately afterward and how he feels at the time of giving his testimony. Only one story a night is told, it is said, but only the members know, and part of their oath is that they will not talk outside the meeting room.

This meeting room is decorated appropriately. Knives, pistols, ropes and empty poison bottles, each with a history, are hung upon the walls. If possible this history must pertain to the member giving the memento. At any rate, every member must give something. The most striking thing in the room is the motto that hangs over President Hannison's chair. It reads:

NEVER AGAIN.

Hannison is in earnest in his plans for the society. Curious specimens are included among its members, and their efforts to help each other, it is said, have resulted already in positive good.

CURIOUS EFFECT OF HENBANE

Household Thrown Into Temporary Insanity by Poisonous Root.

Dr. Philippi, a German physician, describes in an article published in a Munich medical journal the curious effects of henbane poisoning on the brain. He tells how twenty-five visitors and some employees at a boarding establishment at Davos ate horseradish in which a quantity of henbane root had been accidentally mixed. All the persons who had eaten the mixture were poisoned, the women being the greater sufferers.

A Russian lady who spoke German fluently forgot that language completely; an Englishwoman wanted to teach everybody her native tongue; one woman thought herself a living statue and would not move from one position; another insisted on crawling about the floor in search of a valuable object she believed she had lost; several women could not stop laughing; a servant placed twenty-five hot water bottles in her own bed instead of in those of the visitors.

When the physician was called in haste one of the women guests greeted him as an old friend and would not leave him. A man busied himself in counting imaginary banknotes which he snatched from out of the air, while another man set out to find a chemist, lost his memory and proceeded to buy a lot of useless articles from various shops. The proprietor of the establishment carried a tureen of soup to his bedroom and emptied the liquid on the pillows.

Antidotes were speedily administered, and in the course of a few hours all the sufferers had regained their normal senses.

PLAYING ENDLESS CRIBBAGE.

Iowa Quartet, Totaling 270 Years, Can't Get Twenty-nine Hand.

Four men, whose combined ages cover more than 270 years, are playing a game of cribbage for a million points in Des Moines, Ia. The players, all prominent men, are Milo Ward, Sam Neidig, Colonel J. C. Loper and W. N. Heaton. They meet once a week at the home of one of the players and play their unique game.

Though they have played for eight years and run up a score of 800,000, none of the players has ever yet held the possible "twenty-nine hand," though several "twenty-eight hands" have materialized. The players have ascertained that at their rate of playing the "twenty-nine hand" has a mathematical chance of appearing once in 100 years. They have almost abandoned hope of seeing it played before their million points is finished.

In the novel contest Ward and Heaton are playing Neidig and Loper. There is a stake at the end of the game, but it is a sworn secret.

LIFE IN ICELAND.

Farmhouses Are Built of Turf and Often Have Earthen Floors.

The guest room in the Iceland farmhouse contained a narrow bed, a big round table and an organ made in Brattleboro, Vt. Our host produced the usual box of snuff and with it a box of good cigars.

The host and hostess then showed us all over the house. It is a turf structure and is typical of the older farmhouses, with narrow, dark, windowless corridors winding in labyrinthian maze from room to room. One passageway leads to a large open mound where a fire is made to smoke meat and fish and incidentally the whole house and everything in it. Another passage leads to another kitchen with a modern stove. The walls are all of turf, as is the roof, with just enough driftwood in the roof to make a framework to hold it in place. Very steep stairs lead up to the badstofa, or sleeping apartment. The badstofa frequently forms the sitting and common workroom of the family, especially in winter, as well as the sleeping room of the entire household.

Bunks built into the wall extend around the room and are often filled with seaweed or feathers, over which is thrown a fold or two of wadmal and a thick coverlet of eiderdown. The floors are sometimes covered with boards, but more often consist of damp earth. From the ceiling are suspended numerous articles of domestic economy, while large chests containing clothing and valuables are scattered throughout the house.—Springfield Republican.

STORY OF A LOAN.

A Case Where the Statute of Limitations Was Not Considered.

A well known Kansas banker told a story the other day about the statute of limitations. There is a simile in it, plus some good philosophy.

One day an old southerner walked into this banker's office. The southerner was a typical gentleman of the old school, suave, courteous to the point of punctiliousness and honorable to a degree of martyrdom.

"What can I do for you?" asked the banker.

"Well," replied the southerner, "about thirty-five years ago I loaned a man down south some money—not a very big sum. I told him that whenever I should need it I would let him know and he could pay me the money. I need some money now, so I shall let him know, and I would like to have you transact the business for me."

"My good friend," replied the banker, "you have no claim on that money. You can't hold that man to that loan. You say it has been thirty-five years since you loaned it to him? The statute of limitations has run against that loan years and years ago."

"Sir," replied the southerner, "the man to whom I loaned that money is a gentleman. The statute of limitations never runs against a gentleman."

So the banker sent for the money, and within a reasonable time thereafter the money came. There was a courtly gentleman at the other end of the transaction also. — Kansas City Journal.

Trees and Wind.

The effect of wind upon trees is powerful. Even the presence or absence of forests may be determined by the character of the prevailing wind or the conditions that modify it. The wind acts as a drying agent, giving a special aspect to many plants. When it is almost always from the same quarter the plants show greater development upon one side. Trees are smaller on the windward edges of forests, and trunks and branches are bent to leeward. The deformations are most marked near the sea or in flat regions. The cherry, plum, walnut, black poplar, ash and certain pines are very sensitive to the wind, but mountain pines and certain firs offer great powers of resistance, and these are recommended for reforesting wind swept lands.

His Way of Getting Even.

"You know that fellow, Jim McGroarty, the lad that's always comin' up an' thumpin' ye on th' chest and yellin' 'How aer ye?'."

"I know him."

"I'll bet he's smashed twinty cigars for me—some o' thim clear Havannys—but I'll get even with him now."

"How will ye do it?"

"I'll tell ye. Jim always hits me over the vest pocket where I carry me cigars. He'll hit me there just once more. There's no cigar in me vest pocket this mornin'. Instead of it there's a stick of dynamite, d'ye mind!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Matter of Business.

"I cannot understand, sir, why you permti your daughter to sue me for breach of promise. You remember that you were bitterly opposed to our engagement because I wasn't good enough for her and would disgrace the family."

"Young man, that was sentiment; this is business."

Afflictions.

Before an affliction is digested consolation comes too soon, and after it is digested it comes too late, but there is a mark between these two as fine almost as a hair for a comforter to take aim at.—Sterne.

ANNEXATION TO BOSTON

Favored by Gov. Foss at Chamber of Commerce Banquet

Gov. Foss has come out squarely for a greater Boston by annexation. At the Boston Chamber of Commerce banquet on Monday he is quoted in part as follows:

But first of all, to my mind, before we can hope to realize in the fullest degree the advantages of a great city and of better commercial relations, we must have the Greater Boston.

These suburban communities within a radius of at least 10 miles of the State house should be confederated into a single unit, not simply a commercial one but a political one as well.

It is not reasonable to expect that any confederation which does not embody a central government can accomplish and maintain the end desired. For no group of separate communities can act with that accord, or possess that power and momentum, which belongs only to great, centralized cities. And they cannot become known to the world or rated in the markets of the world—or reckoned with as an industrial and commercial force. They are scattered, ineffective, and—if they progress—they do so in spite of (and not because of) their separation.

We are essentially disloyal if we deny to our home towns this commercial federation under one central government, for if we regard the industrial area of these metropolitan communities as a unit we find that they are already growing industrially in 9 percent faster ratio than Chicago itself, whereas this rate would be vastly increased under a commercial union.

Now, gentlemen, what stands in the way of the realization of this goal? Nothing but a mistaken conservatism —yes, provincialism, which we have outgrown, and ought to cast off.

For this confederation can be brought about by a union on the borough plan, which will preserve to these suburban cities and towns their individuality and even their home rule in matters of local concern, but which will at the same time enable them to step up and take the place they are entitled to among the foremost cities of the earth.

"Clara Jane," said the returned soldier, whose heart was beating tumultuously, "you must pardon me if in my confusion I give you the military salute when I come in."

"But you didn't Oscar," shyly replied the maiden, who had formed a crude idea of the military salute from what she had read about Hobson.—The Chicago Tribune.

It will wash woolens and flannels without shrinking, and colored goods without fading. It works in any kind of water—hot, cold, hard or soft—and contains a marvelous dirt-starter, which saves fully half the time consumed by rubbing.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, TUESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1911

Teach the Children To Use Sirolin.

For Coughs and Colds

Sound lungs are more than half the battle in the building up of a healthy body.

That's why parents should take great care to see that their children's lungs are properly developed; that they are kept sound in tissue; and with an expansive power in proportion to the weight and height of the body.

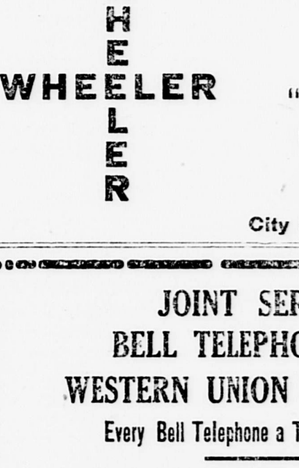
This can best be done by—

1st. Vigorous physical exercises, with stress laid on the setting-up exercises which develop the upper part of the body.

2nd. The right kind of food, and plenty of it.

3rd. Fresh air.

4th. The prevention of colds, and their prompt cure if they are contracted. This can be accomplished by the regular use of Sirolin.



Sirolin is something more than a remedy for coughs and colds. It is a builder of healthy tissues. Its action upon the lungs and bronchial passages is reconstructive and invigorating. Upon the whole system it acts as a tonic.

Sirolin contains no narcotics, or other harmful drugs.

Children like it, for it has a pleasant, slightly sweet, syrupy taste.

Sirolin is the world's best remedy for coughs, colds, grippe, influenza, whooping-cough and all affections of the pulmonary organs.

THERE was a bottle of Sirolin on the teacher's desk in the primary school, and when the visitor had his attention attracted by it, the teacher said:

"I keep it there for daily use. You know how children come to school continually with colds and coughs. These coughs point to the fact that the outcome may be consumption, and although I urge on parents to have the little ones provided with Sirolin at home, I know that domestic circumstances often forbid, and I make it a practice to administer it here in the school-room. It may save them from contracting consumption."

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug.

BRIEFS

Have you secured tickets for the Board of Trade banquet?

Mrs. H. M. Marble is confined to the house with the grip.

Another touch of cold weather; about 10 above zero at sunrise.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Arthur of Montclair are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Some of the telephone poles received a bad raking by the high wind last night, but none fell as far as known.

It is thought that the Mayors and Treasurers budget for 1911 will be forwarded to the City Council at its next meeting.

Mrs. Woodward of Atlantic is very ill. She has suffered for several years but is much worse now. She is ex-councilman Washington Woodward's mother.

At the Saturday evening whist party held in Clan McGregor hall the souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. D. McLennan, Wm. McIntosh, Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Lillie, Mrs. Starr and D. McLennan. The consolation souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. C. McDonald and Robert Mitchell.

Miss Eldeine Marguerite Young of Prospect street, Atlantic and Miss Agnes Nelson of Billings road, Norfolk Downs assisted their piano teacher Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook, Monday evening in a concert which she gave in the Weston School for Girls in Roxbury. Miss Nelson shows great promise as an accompanist. Miss Young has been before the public before and her playing speaks for itself.

Burglar is Released After Being Caught In a Drug Store

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 31.—Dr. George B. Tibbins of this city caught a burglar, gave him a severe lecture and then, upon his promising to lead a better life, released him. He got the burglar as he climbed over the transom into his drug store.

"I will lead a better life," said the man when the doctor finished, "and I'm much obliged to you."

Rear Admiral Matthews Dead

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 31.—Rear Admiral Edmund O. Matthews of the United States navy, retired, died at his home in this city after a few months' illness with apoplexy, at the age of 75. He had been a resident of Cambridge for some years.

Want Pink Cheeks - Red Lips?

Some unfortunate men and women are prone to wonder why some of their friends are blessed with an abundance of color—pink cheeks and red lips—while theirs are always colorless. The reason for this last named condition is—there is not enough red blood corpuscles in the blood—under a microscope the blood is thin and watery. The flesh is flabby too. Well known physicians assert that the regular administration for several months, of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets will greatly improve the color, add to the weight make the cheeks pink and the lips red, and in general be very beneficial. For self-administration, obtain from any of the best apothecary shops.

NO TOBACCO--NO CHURCHES

How Zion City Will Be Conducted If Voliva Is Again Chosen Head

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Wolbur G. Voliva, overseer and successor to the late John A. Dowie, is confident that he will be successful at the polls in the April election and regain the power wrested from him by the "Independents" a year ago. Voliva and his followers outlined the plan of the administration he would effect after the election. He would appoint a vigilance committee of prominent citizens to horsewhip on sight any user of tobacco. Other steps Voliva declares he will take are:

Drive out all independents, take over all industries on a co-operative basis, have all employes receive wages and also share in the profits, refuse to admit any industries unless it is positively guaranteed that no users of tobacco be hired and drive the churches from the city.

DECISION IS RESERVED

Union Leaders' "Contempt Case" Finished In Supreme Court

Washington, Jan. 31.—Concluding arguments in the "contempt cases" against President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, were made in the supreme court of the United States. The court took under consideration the question of affirming the decision of the courts of the District of Columbia, which sentenced the accused to jail.

Just before the court adjourned last week the original "boycott" contest between the company and the federation had come to a close. Although the manufacturer had brought the contempt proceedings for an alleged violation of the injunction to the attention of the lower courts, the manufacturer was not permitted to drop it.

ONE LIFE LOST AND PROPERTY DAMAGED

Fierce Gale Creates Havoc In Boston and Vicinity

Boston, Jan. 31.—A gale of wind from the east howled through Boston's streets yesterday, damaging property and endangering lives. One terrific gust blustered through Beacon street, catching an unsupported wall that projected above the roof of a house at the corner of Brimmer street. It wrenched clear the mass of brick, hurling it down forty feet, burying in the debris workmen building a house on the adjoining corner.

Frederick A. Chandler was killed, buried under the debris. Four of his fellow workmen were injured, two so seriously that they are not expected to live.

The gale whirled and howled, blowing all the afternoon at a mean velocity of forty-six miles an hour, but in the sudden, heavy gusts reaching above the sixty-mile notch.

Everywhere billboards, chimneys and windows were tossed about, the playthings of the terrific gusts. People in some places about Boston were actually blown off their feet. At times progress in the teeth of the wind was almost impossible.

SUPREME COURT RECESS

Justices Will Utilize Their Time In Preparing Decisions

Washington, Jan. 31.—The supreme court of the United States yesterday took a recess until Feb. 20. The purpose of the recess is to enable the justices to devote their time exclusively to the preparation of decisions in cases already argued.

It is believed that the opinion of the court in one or more of the big corporation cases, including the dissolution suits against the Standard Oil company and the American Tobacco organization and the corporation tax cases, may be announced when the court reconvenes.

WITHIN TEN MILES OF GOAL

McCurdy and His Aeroplane Come Down In the Ocean

NONE THE WORSE FOR MISHAP

Covers About a Hundred Miles In Flight From Key West to Havana When Compelled to Descend Because Supply of Lubricating Oil Gives Out—Picked Up by Destroyer After Great Sendoff In Florida

Havana, Jan. 31.—J. A. D. McCurdy's attempt at al all-record-breaking flight over the sea from Key West, Fla., to Havana ended ten miles off the coast after the aviator had completed 100 miles of the remarkable journey, he having run out of lubricating oil.

When he saw that he could not quite reach this port, McCurdy alighted safely on the water and the pontoons with which it was equipped floated the aeroplane until the destroyer Paulding, splashing along in its wake, had overtaken the aerial craft. McCurdy and his biplane were taken on board, neither the worse for the mishap.

At first it was thought that the aviator could make a new start from the deck of the destroyer, but this proved impracticable, and after considerable delay the Paulding brought the whole outfit into the harbor. The other boats that marked the course across the strait had, in the meantime, joined the Paulding and the fleet came in together.

McCurdy's start from Key West, upon his record-breaking 110-mile over-sea aeroplane flight to Havana, was made under the most favorable weather conditions. A nine-mile breeze rippled the American flag which was flying from the machine, but it did not hinder the birdman's progress.

A great crowd roared a vociferous good-bye to the aviator as the Curtiss biplane left earth on its flight.

"I hope to be in Havana within two hours," declared the aviator just as he started. The early part of the flight was most spectacular, McCurdy flying over the city before launching outward upon the course proper for Cuba.

With the speed of a swallow the machine sped southward over the roofs of the city. The roofs and balconies of the buildings were black with people.

The prospects for fair weather were responsible for a great crowd which began to assemble an hour before the start. Many of them carried American flags which they waved while they cheered the aviator. The revenue cutter Forward, the lighthouse tender Mangrove and two torpedo boats left for their stations.

McCurdy joked with his mechanics while they tinkered over the machinery preparatory to a start. His biplane was in excellent condition, with all the parts working without a hitch. The machine, which weighs 750 pounds, was equipped with two sixty-horsepower motors and a big brass tank of a size sufficient to hold enough fuel to make the trip. Two long pontoons were attached to the machine underneath to float it in the event of its falling into the watetr.

Kay West had not been thrilled since the Spanish war days as it was while McCurdy sped over the crowded housetops.

Thousands watched breathlessly as the great birdlike machine gracefully winged its way. McCurdy did not try any fancy work, but was content to make speed with safety and hold to his course.

The torpedo boat Paulding, the flagship of the fleet, was given the post of honor nearest Cuban soil. Next to her, at ten-mile intervals, were the Drayton, Terry and Roe. The oil ship Arethusa was stationed ten miles off Sand Key lighthouse. All the torpedo boats took up their positions broadside to the line of flight and were prepared to start at full speed—twenty-five miles an hour—towards Havana as soon as McCurdy passed. Thus they raced towards shore, but were easily outdistanced by the speedy air craft.

Although McCurdy failed to meet the requirements of the competition he accomplished a feat unprecedented in cross-sea flying. But for a slip in the matter of supplies it is not to be doubted that the trip would have been successful.

Old Age Pension Refused

Boston, Jan. 31.—The city council killed the old age pension act passed by the legislature, which provided for the pensioning of all old city employes. In order for the act to have become a law, it was necessary for the council to pass it and then for the people of Boston to accept it through a referendum to be voted upon at a city election.

Coal Trestle Blown Up

Erie, Pa., Jan. 31.—A coal trestle, with machinery designed to load and unload vessels at the rate of a car a minute, was blown up by nitro-glycerine and a huge hole was torn in the side of a steel ore boat anchored 150 feet away.

300 LIVES LOST IN GREAT TIDAL WAVE

Serious Results of Taal Eruption In the Philippines

Manila, Jan. 31.—Three hundred natives were drowned in the tidal wave that accompanied the volcanic outbreak of Mount Taal, and several villages were destroyed. All of the towns within a radius of twenty miles were more or less damaged by the shower of mud and stones.

The natives have abandoned their village homes in the vicinity of Lake Taal and sought refuge in the surrounding hills. Mount Taal rises in the centre of Lake Taal, a body of water not more than fifteen miles in circumference. It is thirty-four miles from this city, from which dense clouds of smoke rising from the crater are plainly visible.

Investigators of the bureau of science report that with the first violent eruption of Taal the volcanic island appeared to sink five feet and the waters of the lake rising swept the shores a mile inland, carrying away the bamboo shacks and catching a score of natives. Others living in the vicinity had taken warning and fled at the first rumblings of the volcano.

LAKES TO BE DRAGGED

Minute Search For Miss Arnold to Be Made in New York Parks

New York, Jan. 31.—Rumors continue to surround the disappearance of Dorothy Arnold, now missing from her New York home for nearly fifty days. The case, to all intents, is where it was when counsel for the family first sought aid through publicity.

In sheer desperation the family has invoked the aid of the police to go over the confines of Central and Bronx parks foot by foot and to drag the park lakes and ponds. This probably will be begun today, although there is a report that Miss Arnold was not at a store in the vicinity of the park on the day of her disappearance, but at a steamship agency procuring literature relative to a cruise in the West Indies.

SETS LIFE SENTENCE

Punishment of Earl Jacques For Murder of Mary Eddy

Providence, Jan. 31.—The final chapter in the history of the murder of Mary F. Eddy in Greenville on Jan. 3, 1908, was closed when Earl V. Jacques, convicted of the crime in April of the same year, was sentenced to serve the remainder of his life in the state prison.

Jacques was less than 18 years old when, in order to obtain money to go to a dance, he struck down and killed Mary Eddy as she was leaving the Greenville mill with her week's pay, $13.13.

MRS. NATION NEAR DEATH

Noted Saloon Smasher Has Suffered Serious Nervous Collapse

Eureka Springs, Ark., Jan. 31.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, who became known throughout the country several years ago by reason of her fondness for smashing saloons, is reported to be sinking rapidly and her death is said to be imminent.

Mrs. Nation suffered a nervous collapse here a fortnight ago and recently was taken to a private sanitarium near Leavenworth, Kan.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The senate committee on judiciary voted to report favorably the nomination of Judge William H. Hunt of Montana to be an additional United States circuit judge to serve on the commerce court. Three senators voted against Hunt.

Death of Adele Rafter

"IN SORT OF TRANCE"

Live Woman Barely Escapes Being Embalmed by Undertaker

Dalton, Ga., Jan. 31.—The twitching of an eyelid saved Mrs. Chloe Thaxter, an aged woman, from being embalmed and interred. Mrs. Thaxter, who lived alone, was found apparently dead by a neighbor and an undertaker was notified, who sent an assistant to prepare the body for burial.

As he began work on the body the eyes of the supposed corpse twitched. The assistant flew in horror to the undertaker. The latter went to Mrs. Thaxter's home and found the woman apparently dead, but soon discovered signs of life.

A physician was called and Mrs. Thaxter was restored to consciousness. She says she fell into a sort of trance and knew the undertaker was preparing to embalm her, but was unable to speak.

WOULD BE TOO EXPENSIVE

"Big Four" Hits Electrification of Railroads Entering Boston

Boston, Jan. 31.—In a report filed with the legislature the joint board of metropolitan improvements, known as the "Big Four," aims a severe blow at the proposed electrification of railroads entering Boston. The majority of the board says that it would be too expensive, in the present stage of development of electric traction, and the railroads should not be forced by legislation to assume the expense now.

There are two minority reports on this subject. One says that there is a public demand for eectrification and the railroads can well afford to undertake it, as they are under obligation to do. The legislature should set a time, it says, when the work should begin. The second minority report declares that the majority "unduly discourages and postpones" the work, and it urges further study.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine"

Novelized by FREDERICK R. TOOMBS From the Great Play by PAUL ARMSTRONG

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

JIMMY VALENTINE, WARDEN HANDLER AND ROSE LANE.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train and he is amazed at a coincidence.

CHAPTER III.

WARDEN HANDLER, regretting that he had given his visitors an indication that he believed he had recognized Rose Lane's deliverer, answered the questions of the girl and the lieutenant governor by stating: "The man is as bad as the burglar he threw out of the car window—even worse. He's in this prison at this moment, I firmly believe, according to the description we've just heard."

"Oh, impossible!" exclaimed Miss Lane, her face coloring. "He was a gentleman, a thorough gentleman, and too young to be a hardened criminal." Her face became shadowed with concern.

The warden was vastly amused at this remark, which the young girl rendered with the finality of unquestioned authority.

"Too young!" he laughed. "Age doesn't cut any figure in crime the way you mean. It's some of these young fellows that will take a chance at anything. You see, they're ambitious. They're anxious to rise in their business."

The warden paused and glanced from the girl to the observing lieutenant governor, then to the two members of the Gate of Hope. He commented on the fact that his visitors had disagreed with him on various points and informed them that he had determined to offer them a few object lessons, lessons with living models. "I'll show you," he said, "that these crooks we've got here will ply their trade at all times, whether they profit or not; that, in short, criminality is a mania with them and that there's no use in trying to better them." His first exhibit, brought in by the secretary, was the celebrated forger "Blinkey" Davis. At the warden's request Lieutenant Governor Fay drew a check for $5 and handed it to Blinkey. To oblige the warden Blinkey, aided by a knife and pen and ink, in five minutes had "raised" it to the amount of $50,000. The lieutenant governor pronounced it perfect. "I know where I could pass it, too," laughed Blinkey as he was led away.

"I had him on the books once, and he couldn't resist raising the prison checks," chuckled Handler. "I could bring in fellows like that all day." He picked up an object from his desk. "Do you see this lock? A German inventor waiting outside has spent fourteen years in perfecting that. He claims it cannot be opened without the key. The prison board has accepted it for use here if the claims made for it are true. We have a man here paralyzed on one side, a sneak thief. I have sent for him. He may not open it, but he will try, for he cannot resist the criminal mania that controls him. Smith," to his secretary, "get the Dutchman; also the gentleman known as 'Dick the Rat.'"

When the decrepit form of "Dick the Rat" was brought in, together with the patient inventor Blickendolfenbach, he was given the lock, three minutes and a hairpin. Ten seconds before his allotted time expired he threw the lock, opened, on the warden's desk, and with his repulsive, seamy face contorted into what he considered was a smile he inclined his head to one side. From his throat came inarticulate squeals of glee—exactly the squeals of a rat.

Only the watchfulness of Smith saved the "Rat" from the violent, despairing onslaught of the German, who screamed: "I'll kill him! He ruin me! Und mit a hairpin, mein Gott!"

"You're not the first man to be ruined by a hairpin," laughed the warden. "Don't tell your wife."

Smith sent the inventor to the railroad station in charge of a guard and consigned the grinning Blinkey to the cell that had long been his home. On returning to the office the secretary said: "I've brought Valentine along too. I thought you might want him to open the safe."

A disturbed expression came into the prison master's face. He glanced quickly at Fay and his niece, then talked in an undertone with his aid. He was interrupted by Mrs. Webster.

"The two you have shown us do not entirely prove your argument, Mr. Warden," she said doubtingly. "They are the very lowest types in the prison. You argue a general premise from two individual cases. We do not maintain that such apparent criminals as we have seen should be liberated, but"—she turned to Fay—"there are gentlemen here, governor, men of quite a different type than these, whom one never sees."

"Warden," said the lieutenant governor, "I fear the ladies have more interest in the more romantic types of criminals—poets, for instance."

Mrs. Moore rose indignantly. "I shall make note of that frivolous speech in my report," she snapped.

Handler thought of Valentine, who was being detained outside. He would give his visitors their wish, as Fay seemed greatly interested. He would show them his prize exhibit. In spite of a belief that was taking a strong hold on his brain he would take a chance on displaying the unique abilities of No. 1289.

He well knew what to do should complications ensue. There were dark cells in Sing Sing for convicts the warden could decide to be unruly. These were damp, dark cells below the level of the rushing river, relics of years when the state had little money and little thought for those held to have broken its laws. There were cells with "straitjackets," where a man could be trussed up with straps fixed to the walls, like a suckling pig in a market window, only his toes touching the floor. Anyway No. 1,289 was already discredited.

"Get Valentine!" he gruffly said to Smith. "Well, governor," he continued in a more amiable tone, "I'll give you and the ladies a romantic type. He's not a poet, but he is doing ten years here for opening a bank safe without tools or the combination, simply by sense of touch. There is some poetry in that."

"Impossible!" commented Fay.

"Well, the bank safe was opened and the money stolen, and his pal peached."

The door at the right of the office leading in from the corridors of cells opened. In came Smith, followed by a young man whose convict's garb could not overshadow the intelligence that showed in his ashen face. Clearly the prison air was working its baneful penalty on him with more success than usual in the case of men who entered the institution in good health. Vaguely conscious that there were visitors present, No. 1289 stood before the warden with his eyes directed toward the floor. His shoulders were square, he was of good height, with a figure which yet bore indications that he had been athletic in his free days. When he had entered the room the lieutenant governor had noticed that the convict walked with a free, manly stride, having no semblance to the shuffling prison slouch of his fellow inmates.

"Permit me," Handler addressed his visitors, with an elaborate gesture,

"DICK THE RAT."

"to present Mr. Jimmy Valentine. He's put more time locks on the retired list than any three men in the whole place, and when it comes to the fancy 'getaway' only a crosseyed copper can keep tabs on him."

The warden's picturesque introduction was lost on Rose Lane. She caught a glimpse of the face of the man in felon's stripes. She leaned to one side to make certain. Yes! now she could not possibly be mistaken. She extended her hand spasmodically and clutched the lieutenant governor's arm.

"Uncle, uncle," she said chokingly, "It is he!"

"What's the matter, child?" was Fay's anxious response.

"That is the man who saved me!" the excited young girl gasped. "That is the man who threw the burglar through the express train window!"

The warden's shifting eye caught the agitated movement of Rose Lane as Jimmy Valentine was brought in, and he quickly resolved on a course of procedure that would place the young prisoner in as bad a light as possible. As for the lieutenant governor, he was almost as astonished as Rose at the unexpected denouement, and he quietly insisted that she say nothing more about the subject and calm herself. So far as outward manifestations were concerned, the girl followed this advice fairly well, but her heart pounded uncontrolledly, her pulse throbbed correspondingly, and a wave of deepest pity surged over her as she realized the horrible lot to which had been condemned the hero of the one great adventure of her life, the gallant Prince Charming of the only real romance in which she had ever played a part.

The lieutenant governor addressed the prisoner:

"How do you do, sir?"

Valentine swung around and faced the speaker. He realized that he could no longer conceal his features from the spectator. He pressed his hands nervously together and looked his questioner squarely in the eyes.

"How do you do, sir?" he said in a low voice.

Handler was watching the exchange of greetings with keen interest.

"Met before, governor, have you?" he asked ingenuously.

"No," responded Fay. "But I'm glad to see you have some types here different than 'Dick the Rat' and"—

"Yes," broke in the warden. "Here, Jimmy, there's something gone wrong with the office safe. Open it for me, will you?"

Fay fastened a pentrating gaze on Valentine.

The prisoner turned his face away and toward the warden.

"I'll do so very gladly if I can. What is the combination?"

"Combination!" exploded the warden, staring at the prisoner.

Valentine was as cool and as insistent as though he were an employer talking with one of his clerks.

"Yes, the combination. How can you expect me to open the safe without it? Why, Mr. Warden, you must be joking with me."

REPUBLICAN STAMP WANTED

Reciprocity Measure Will Be Forced Through House

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN IS BEGUN

President Feels That Republican Senate Cannot Afford to Turn Down Agreement If It Is Adopted at This Session—Realizes That He Has Hard Fight Before Him, but Is Confident of Winning

Washington, Jan. 31.—President Taft is determined that the house of representatives shall ratify the Canadian reciprocity agreement at this session. He does not expect the senate to act until the next session. He has intimated to more than one caller that if he can get the agreement through a Republican house, he will not hesitate to call an extra session of congress either this spring or early next fall.

The president feels that ratification by a Republican house would give the agreement the stamp of a Republican accomplishment. It is pretty well understood that he believes he will have no trouble to get a ratification from the Democratic house, and his callers understand his view to be that after a Republican house and a Democratic house had acted favorably on the agreement, the Republican senate could not afford to turn it down.

The president yesterday began an active campaign for action in the house. He summoned to the White House several of the Republican members of the ways and means committee, and he let it be known that he would see all of them within the next day or two.

Representative Crumpacker of Indiana was the first member of the committee to call. The president did not ask him in because he had any doubt as to where he stood, for Crumpacker had said to him some days ago that he was willing to go as far as the president could possibly go in favoring reciprocity with the Dominion. What he said to Crumpacker was that he desired him to make an open, aggressive fight for the agreement.

Representative McCall of Massachusetts, to whom the president sent the tariff resolution for introduction in the house late Saturday afternoon, was another of the ways and means committee to call at the White House. McCall, however, will need no urging to induce him to work his hardest for ratification. He cordially favors the agreement, regarding it as essentially an administration policy, and his introduction of the resolution will give him a practical floor leadership in behalf of the measure when it comes up for action.

The president realizes that he has a hard fight before him to get the agreement ratified by the house, to say nothing of the senate. The standpat members of the ways and means committee are openly opposed to the agreement. If they vote to report it favorably, it will be simply because the president is insisting that the house shall have an opportunity to consider it.

There is a good deal of talk about congress to the effect that the general mix-up over the reciprocity agreement will result in the defeat of tariff commission legislation. The high tariff people are in bad humor, and several senators and representatives who had promised to vote for a tariff commission to please the president are now saying that they will recall that promise.

OFF FOR WASHINGTON

Gloucester Men to Protest Against Free Admission of Fish

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 31.—A committee representing the fisheries industry of this city left for Washington last night to appear as protestants at a hearing at the Capitol on the free fish clause of the proposed reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada.

The leaders of the fisheries industry here are strongly opposed to the free admission of packed fish from Canada, claiming that such a provision would ruin the fishing business of this city.

A Competition in Excellence

THERE is a kind of competition that has materially improved manufacturing conditions, raised the wages of American workmen, made more cheerful and convenient the American home, increased the demand for merchandise of real worth, and created a higher standard of business ethics.

A competition in excellence—that is what American manufacturing is rapidly becoming! For nowadays no manufacturer can be certain of success whose product in its character and purpose fails to minister to some genuine desire or need of its users.

The deeper we delve into the methods of successful industries the more certain are we to discover that they are builded on the basic ideal of an excellence maintained at any cost. Such methods had their rise in the days of the Pilgrims. "New England Made" thus early became a synonym for materials that were not skimped, inspection that was thorough, and methods of making that were conscientiously exact—and these ideals of quality have dominated the mighty developments which followed the success of those early efforts.

Nearly three centuries have come and gone since American manufacturing was established on the only lasting foundation—quality. Many new industries have come, and some have gone—perhaps because their product did not measure up to these standards of excellence. But dotted all over this great section stand the growing plants of sturdy old New England industries, where grandsons and great-grandsons still uphold the policy of excellence set by the founders—where a just pride in the product animates every member of the great organization, from the president to the unskilled workman—and that is why in the face of the ever-present competition of new recruits in the same field of manufacture, these goods have triumphed in every conflict and weathered every storm.

Such cases afford abundant proof that the only way you can long compete with a good article is to make a still better one—and it is the recognition of this necessity which is creating a new and higher competition—a competition in excellence.

The residence of Charles A. Boyce on Lowell street, Braintree, was gutted by fire about 11 A. M. today. It caught on the roof from an overheated furnace. Most of the furniture was removed.

SHIPBUILDER DEAD.

The death of Calvin B. Orcutt is reported. Mr. Orcutt was president of the Newport News shipbuilding and drydock company, of the Chesapeake & Ohio coal agency company, of the First national bank of Newport News and other concerns. He was born at Wyoming, N. Y., Sept. 5, 1847. Mr. Orcutt always maintained a residence in Elizabeth, N. J., where he was active in church and Y. M. C. A. work. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

HE WON THE HOUSE.

Ned Harrigan's Plea at a Critical Point In a Play.

Edward Harrigan once said that the most trying moment in his theatrical career occurred in New Orleans soon after the civil war. He had gone south with his company and, yielding somewhat to popular request, put on "The Blue and the Gray." The play had been a success up north, but down south, with the air still full of the bitterness of the war, it was a dangerous experiment. Tony Hart was to represent the Confederate gray, so he hunted up a uniform of the Louisiana Tigers, and when he came marching on, young, stalwart, handsome, the typical soldier boy in the beloved uniform, the house, men and women, cheered and shouted and cried for all their heroes embodied in this boy. Harrigan, standing in the wings in his northern blue, waiting to go on, had just one thought —"They'll kill me!" Then he stepped out, the embodiment of the enemy, and a cold, dead silence fell upon the house. Not a hand moved for him. The audience was tense with emotion, and there was only an instant to act if the play was to be saved. Harrigan, big, kindly, good looking, came swiftly down to the front and stepped over the footlight gutter, leaning down to them. "For the love of heaven, won't you give the Yankee a hand?" he exclaimed. At once the house was caught and all the pentup feeling turned the right way. There was a yell of applause.

Dear Talk.

"Talk is cheap," quoted the wise guy.

"Not always," replied the simple mug. "Sometimes it costs a man his reputation."—Philadelphia Record.

The average person wastes lots of time telling other people things they do not care to hear.

—The home of the unfortunates at Bridgewater State farm now contains close to 2700 inmates, which is a record. This doesn't necessarily indicate that hard times are much harder than they have been, if any. The State and the country are growing all the time, and in that growth are of course some derelicts and unfortunates added to the sum total of those in the country and State before. Also, it has been rather a bitter winter of late, and it takes but a few days and nights of chill and gale to discourage the drifters about the roads and streets and send them where they know the judge will file them away till pleasanter conditions prevail again. At that 2700 is quite an army —quite a crowd of humans to be either insane, or otherwise so broken down that they have lost confidence, hope, and such skill as they may once have possessed, and to be willing to live the lives of well cared for animals.—Brockton Enterprise.

EASY VICTORY FOR YALE

But Harvard Did Get One String by a Good Margin

Yale took three points out of four from Harvard in the Granite league on Monday evening. The first string was their best, and Yale was 34 lengths behind. On the second spurt Harvard led by 20 lengths. Then Harvard weakened and the rubber was not at all close, as Yale won 400 to 369. On totals the score was 1209 to 1164 in favor of Yale.

Wentworth of Harvard was high man both on singles and totals. The summary:

ATHLETES VS. RED SOX.

In the Makaria bowling league, the Athletics and Red Sox, rolled off a match Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. alleys which resulted in an even distribution of the points. In the first string, Nicoll of the Athletics had a pin fall of 198, which is the Makaria bottle pin record. The Athletics won that string by 71 pins. In the other two the Red Sox took down the lead a little, winning by 6 and 21 pins respectively, but their opponents still had a good margin on the totals. Lee Brooks was high man on three strings with a score of 461.

Japan's Railway Improvements.

It will cost $115,000,000 to widen the gauge of the railway from Tokyo to Shimonoseki, a distance of 704 miles. With this work completed Japan's end of what may be called the international railways, viz—those extending from Calais to Tokyo—will approximate 1,600 miles, inclusive of the sea trip across the strait from Shimonoseki to Fusan, for which large steamers are now being built.

Cuban Paper Duties Higher.

Cuba purposes to increase its import duties on various kinds of paper.

Wireless Stations Expensive.

The wireless stations necessary to connect the British possessions are only twenty in all. They would cost $5,000,000 to build and about $1,000,000 a year to operate.

Managers of the various pennant chasing clubs are giving nearly all their attention to plans for the spring training of their teams. With the exception of the Boston Red Sox long training trips have been abandoned.

It has often, though not invariably, been the case that a good training trip meant a great deal to a team. The Chicago Cubs, for instance, won four championships in five years and trained each spring at a different place. In 1906 they did practically no training at all. President Charley Murphy had the idea that Champaign, Ill., would be the proper place.

Snow drove the team out of the college town after a week of idleness. They hurried to Vicksburg, where rain allowed only a day or so of work. They went to Atlanta and again were prevented from working by rain. All the real work the team got was in exhibition games north of the Ohio river. Yet they won the pennant hands down.

Within a few weeks reports will come from the training camps lauding the youngsters being tried out. Few players get regular jobs on the strength of the work done in the training season. They must make good in a real ball game before they can lay any claim to having upheld their end.

Long Trip For Red Sox.

President John I. Taylor of the Boston Red Sox has mapped out the longest trip ever taken by any baseball club. The players will leave on Feb. 18 and go to California by way of Chicago. The team's training will be done at Redondo, just outside of Los Angeles. The club will use two special trains and live on them. The itinerary will cover about 8,500 miles.

With a perfect baseball diamond and well prepared playing field awaiting them, the Giants will again do their training at Marlin Springs, Tex. They will begin practice under McGraw's eye Feb. 20.

Manager Hal Chase of the New York Americans expects to have twenty men or more at work at Athens, Ga., by March 15. On March 1 he will have the older members of the team report to him at Hot Springs for a two weeks' stay, when they will leave to join the recruits at Athens.

Early Start For Dodgers.

Manager Bill Dahlen of the Brooklyns will have his men at Hot Springs by Feb. 10. They will remain there until March 17, after which the team will divide into two squads and work their way north.

Fred Clarke of the Pittsburgs will have the Pirates at West Baden on March 7. They will remain there until March 17 and go to Hot Springs, where the club has trained for several years. They will remain there until April 3.

The Philadelphia club will start for its training grounds at Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 28, in charge of Charley Dooin. Three weeks will be spent in Birmingham, when the club will split into two teams and work north.

Clark Griffith of the Cincinnati Reds will send his pitchers and catchers to Hot Springs, Ark., on March 1. Two weeks later the other members of the team will go south.

Cubs For New Orleans.

President Murphy of the Chicago Cubs has once more made arrangements for his team to train at New Orleans. The players will report there the first week in March. They will begin regular games at once, as Charley Frank, manager of the New Orleans club, has ordered his players to report by March 10. The Cubs will also play a series of games with several American league teams.

Roger Bresnahan's St. Louis Cardinals will report at West Baden about March 15. After a ten day stay the team will return to St. Louis.

Fred Tenney's Boston rustlers will do their training at Augusta, Ga., leaving for that town on March 15.

Hughey Jennings of the Detroit Tigers made an extended tour of the south before he finally selected Monroe, La., as the training place of the 1911 Tigers. Some veterans, including the pitchers, will train at Hot Springs. By March 1 the entire team will report at Monroe.

DAYS OF FANCY SALARY PASSING

Epidemic of Reductions Strikes American Financial World.

STEEL COMBINE SETS PACE.

Farrell Given $50,000 as President as Against $100,000 Received by Corey. Equitable Life to Shave Morton's $80,000 to Prevailing Insurance Stipend of $50,000.

There appears to be an epidemic of lowering the big salaries of the industrial and financial world these days. The steel trust showed its symptoms, and now comes further evidence in the Equitable Life Assurance society's intention to pay its president $50,000 instead of $80,000.

The death of Paul Morton, president of the Equitable, has furnished opportunity for the reduction. It was said the trustees probably will insist on the lower salary when electing his successor on the theory that $50,000 would be sufficient to command the services of the ablest man in the life insurance business. Those who took this view pointed to the fact that Charles A. Peabody, president of the Mutual Life Insurance company, was drawing only $50,000 a year.

Corey's Pay Cut In Half.

This followed the news that the salary of James A. Farrell, new president of the United States Steel corporation, would be $50,000 a year instead of $100,000, which had been paid to W. E. Corey, the retiring president. Those who know say that $50,000 hereafter will be about the maximum pay of corporation officers in the United States.

When Morton assumed the presidency of the Equitable in 1905 the salary of the president was $100,000 a year. That amount had been paid for years to James W. Alexander, and it was supposed that Morton would receive the same amount. Because of the public agitation respecting the high cost of insurance management in the United States and the unpleasant disclosures attending the Armstrong investigation in 1905, however, he asked that his salary be cut 20 per cent. In order that he might ask other officers in the Equitable to accept similar reductions.

With the possible exception of the presidents of one or two banks and trust companies, there is not a financial institution in Wall street which reimburses its president at a higher salary than $50,000 a year. One trust company, in addition to paying a $50,000 salary, gives the president a handsome bonus at the year end.

Investigation Shaved Salaries.

There has been an extraordinary change in corporation management since the days of the insurance investigation in 1905, when Richard A. McCurdy, testifying before the Armstrong committee, told how he had been pleasantly surprised one day on hearing that the salaries committee of the Mutual Life had, without any suggestion from him, raised his salary from $100,000 a year to $150,000. McCurdy admitted that he was pleased at this action, but that he had received the information as a matter of course and only felt honored because he would receive the highest salary paid to the president of any life insurance company in the United States.

The salary of McCurdy probably will stand out for all time as the maximum paid to any insurance president in the world.

Outside of New York city a $50,000 salary, in the words of a Wall street man discussing the subject, "looks as big as a house." With the exception of one or two bank presidents in Chicago, no bank officer in the west receives more than $35,000 a year.

FISHING DANGEROUS CALLING

Outranks All Others For Last Year, Say Insurance Men.

Insurance agents have figured out the most dangerous occupation for the year just passed. It isn't working in a powder mill or dynamite factory, as many suppose, or railroading. It is shown that the highest percentage of fatality is found among the fishermen along the New England coast, where 12 per cent of the total number employed go to their death every year.

The mortality among railway workers is about 8 per cent. The number of deaths due to accidents of occupation among all wage earners is between 30,000 and 35,000. The non-fatal accidents exceed 2,000,000.

PARIS WAITERS ARE WESTONS

Pedometers Prove They Cover Fifty Miles Daily In Cafes.

Waiters in Paris cafes have to be capable walkers. The proprietor of a boulevard cafe gave some of his waiters pedometers, and he found that those who had tables on the terrasse outside ran between forty and fifty miles a day carrying customers' orders. This proprietor alleges that he had tried English and German waiters, but none of them had the necessary endurance, Frenchmen alone being equal to the task.

LOVE.

A mighty pain to love it is,
And 'tis a pain that pain to miss,
But of all pains the greatest pain
It is to love, but love in vain.
—Cowley.

He that hath wife and children hath given hostages to fortune, for they are impediments to great enterprises, either of virtue or mischief.—Bacon.

A mortal woman needs mortal love, and she will seek it in one form or another, if she is at liberty, as surely as a homing pigeon seeks her dovecot or a perishing deer seeks the water. —Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Beat the Bank's System.

The boy entered the Cleveland bank and laid a half dollar with his bank book on the receiving teller's window. "We don't receive deposits of less than a dollar," said the teller. The boy yielded reluctantly to the system and drew back. But he did not leave the bank. He crossed the corridor and seated himself on a settee. The teller noticed him sitting there and also noticed the reflective look on his face. The boy waited for some time, thinking it over. Finally he arose and went to the paying teller's window. A moment later he confronted the receiving teller. "I want to deposit this dollar and a half," he said. The teller grinned. The boy had just drawn a dollar from his little balance and was using it as an entering wedge for the rejected half dollar. And so the system was beaten by the boy, and a considerable accession of bookkeeping labor was the price of defeat.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Men With Green Hair.

"Copper is scarce," said a broker, "but there is still enough of it left to turn the copper worker's hair green."

"His hair green?"

"Precisely. In those copper districts where the ore is of a low grade it is roasted in open furnaces to refine it and make it more marketable. A gas emanates from the furnaces that turns the firemen's hair a bright green, this arsenic green that the firemen's hair takes on.

"So if you ever see a man with green hair you can say, a la Sherlock Holmes:

"'There, my dear Watson, is a copper furnace tender.'"

A Request.

"I shall never forget," says the eminent man of wealth during the course of his little speech on "How to Become as I Am," "I shall never forget how I saved my first hundred dollars."

At this juncture a weary individual in the audience, who has heard this story many times and has read it many times more, interrupts:

"Well, if you can't forget it, for heaven's sake give the rest of us a chance to."—Chicago Post.

A Friendly Tip.

Sapleigh—Would you—er—advise me to—er—marry a beautiful girl or a sensible girl? Hammersley—I'm afraid you'll never be able to marry either, old man. Sapleigh—Why not? Hammersley—Well, a beautiful girl could do better and a sensible girl would know better.—Exchange.

All They Could Find.

"What's all that noise in the next room?"

"My wife and three of her girl friends are trying to play whist with only forty-seven cards in the pack."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Individuality.

To each intellect belongs a special power. We belong to ourselves, and we lose control of our own when we try to be some one else. The original mind is a magnetic center for the attraction of other minds. But the lodestone loses nothing by attracion; it remains the same. — London New Age.
